CHelsea, JAN. 30, 1873.

Origin of the Rose.

The rose has many fabulous origins. Some state it to have sprung from the blood of Venus. The Mohammedans say that the sweat of their prophet was the source from which it grew; while the Ghebers believe that when Abraham, the great prophet, was thrown into the fire by order of Nimrod, the flame turned into a bed of roses, upon which the child sweetly reposed. The Christian legend on the same subject is given by Sir John Maun-deville. It is to the effect that a fair maiden of Bethlehem was slandered, and condemned to be burnt; but when the fire began to burn around her, she prayed to our Lord that, as she was not guilty of that sin, He would help her, and make her innocence manifest to men. Then was the fire quenched, and the burning brands became red rose-trees full of roses, while those that were not kindled became white rose-trees full of roses. "And these were the first roses, and roses, both white and red, ever soughed." Roses have always figured largely in Christian tradition, from the time they were found in the tomb of the Blessed Virgin until the institution of the rosary by St. Dominic, in the thirteenth century—the beads on the rosaries now in use having been symbolized by red and white roses. Of their connection with the "Wars of the Roses" it is unnecessary to speak; but it may be mentioned that at Towton, in Yorkshire, where one of the most disastrous battles of that time was fought, there are groups of rose-bushes in the "bloody meadow" which are said to mark the graves of the slain; and local tradition states that these roses will only grow in that field, and that it is impossible to make them grow if removed thence. It is stated, however, that a gardener at Tadcaster has had one growing in his garden for four or five years; so that the latter part of this tradition is scarcely "founded on fact."

Economical Habits

With certain limitations, it is true that a man who cannot save a margin from a small income, will never save anything from a large one. Wants are always more plentiful than dollars. The habit of self-denial is rather more easily cultivated, when the means of supplying them are limited, than when more ample means have created new tastes and desires. Therefore, if you would grow rich, you must begin to save when you begin to acquire. A single dollar saved is often a larger proportion of surplus income, after the supply of actual necessities, than the thousands your rich neighbor places in bank. Early savings have the longest time to grow. A dollar saved at twenty will count as much as sixteen saved at sixty. Many young men spend in cigars alone, between the ages of fifteen and twenty-five, sums of money which, if properly invested, would accumulate to an amount, by the time they reach fifty years, sufficient to meet the necessities of age, and render them independent for the remainder of their lives.

THE LANGUAGE OF THE EYES.—It has often been said that a woman with a hazel eye never elopes from her husband, never chafes scandal, never sacrifices her husband's comfort for her own, never finds fault, never talks too much or too little, and is always an entertaining, agreeable and lovely companion. "We never knew," says a brother quill-driver, "but one uninteresting and unamiable woman with a hazel eye, and she had a nose which looked, as the Yankee says, like the little end of nothing whittled down to a point." The grey eye is the sign of shrewdness and talent. In woman it indicates a better head than heart. The dark hazel eye is noble in significance as it is in beauty. The blue eye is admirable, but may be feeble. The black eye—take care! Look out for the wife with a black eye! Such can be seen almost daily at the police office, generally with a complaint against the husband for assault and battery.

Business

The times change and we change with them. It may have been once the case in this country that a man could sit down and business would hunt him up. The reverse is exactly the case now. Men who want business must hunt it up. There are too many men now making competition in every branch of business, whose very existence depends upon their trade, for any one, no matter how long, well and favorably known, to retain his customers without an effort. There are too many earnest thinkers and new applications of science and art to the development of new methods of manufacture for the old processes to be retained with profit. There are too many energetic and determined young men coming on the stage of action, filling our business marts, traversing the continent, penetrating every nook and corner of the land, hunting the game everywhere, for the old hunters to sit quietly in their back offices and expect that the birds will somehow or other find their way into their nets. Once it was the case that one soap was as good as another, and when a customer wanted soap he never questioned who made it. Now, however, men have learned how to connect their own or some other name with soap, and the consumer must have such or such a soap, and the man who makes his soap most widely known is the most successful soap man. Once there was but one kind of yeast powders known in all the country. Now that name is scarcely mentioned, while a few more energetic men are filling the land with their names. Not many years ago the name of but one sugar refiner was familiar to the trade of this country. Now twenty are becoming so. But why enumerate. Run over the entire list and you will find the fact wonderfully illustrated that the law of progress grows out of the very nature of things, and its healthy development is conducive to the best interest of communities. The lesson to be learned from all this is—keep moving. If you stand still you stagnate and die. Do not rely upon your present reputation for retaining trade but keep your name familiar to the public by persistent advertising. Use all the best means at your command for keeping what trade you have and getting more.

Rasping Horses' Feet.

A correspondent of the Canada Farmer, speaking of this practice, says: "Rasping down the feet nicely, as they call it, is quite a passion with some people. I have often rasped the hoof, and the owner of the horse standing by to tell when it would suit him. This rasping on the hoof that happens to be a little ill-shaped, until it will spring under your finger, is far too dangerous a plan for making things look well. I have often commenced on hoofs that had a beautiful gloss all over, and given them a thorough rasping; not that I could make them any better, for that was beyond the power of human hands, but they had to be rasped merely because the owner's mind was a slave to fashion or fancy. This rasping takes the strong surface off the hoof, and nature, trying all she can to make up for the evil done by injudicious hands, forms a hard, glossy surface to protect the foot. This glossy surface takes the place of the previous tough horn, and at the next shoeing of the foot will probably split a little at the nails, and not unfrequently the nail punches a piece out before it."

POSITION OF A RESIDENCE.—Houses on streets running nearly north and south are far preferable to those located on those going east and west in a sanitary estimate. In the first, here at the north of the equator, the sun shines brilliantly in the forenoon on the front, and with nearly equal force in the afternoon on the rear. Thus dampness is expelled and the whole edifice is dry and the air purer for its solar exposure. If a house is on an east and west street, those fronting north are decidedly the best for a residence, because the sun's action on the yard, the kitchen, and usual regions of neglected accumulations, purifies and modifies the humid atmosphere that is sure to predominate in yards and the back side of houses whose rear is north of the front. Thus circumstanced, the back rooms are never so pleasant, cheerful or economically warmed in winter or ventilated in summer, as when on the south side. Opening on the street, the frame of each gets both light and airy by reason of the frequent swing of the front door. Here is a law of health in a nutshell.

Our Wheelbarrow.

Painful suspense—Hanging. A stock-in-trade—Hosiery. Cholera is prevailing in Egypt. They have white coal in Australia. Hear men's words and observe their conduct. A suspension bridge has been swung in Japan. Marriage at Salt Lake is called Utah-lising the female sex. No man is rich who expends more than his means and income allow. The negro population of the country is 4,835,108. Black spots on the sun. Fifty-six millions of gallons of coal-oil were shipped from Philadelphia in 1872. A Maine breach-of-promise suit, 14 years old was recently terminated by the death of both parties. Duluth has a phantom "Flying Dutchman" sliding around over the icy fastnesses of her harbor. A newspaper is published in the diamond district of South Africa at the low price of sixty dollars a year. What is the difference between a tortoise-shell tom and a burnt child?—One is a brindle cat, the other a kindled brat. A congregation recently dismissed its pastor because he was not sound; and rejected the next candidate because he was all sound. A baby was born in Cincinnati some time ago whose mother was sixty-nine years old and its father seventy-four. A guileless Danbury man saw a beautiful chromo advertised "for fifty cents," and sent on the money, and received the jack of clubs. "This is the 30th," remarked the minister as he was dating the certificate of marriage. "The thirtieth!" cried the indignant mother; "it's only the eleventh."

A colored citizen of Carlisle, Kentucky, caught twenty-five skunks in one day. He was treated with the profoundest respect when he promenade the streets next day. A lady of fortune advertised for an agent. The printer placed a space between the syllables so that the card read "A gent wanted." A single man without family preferred. A French girl shot herself recently because her lover told her that one of her legs was shorter than the other. How he found out is a mystery it might not be pleasant to explain.

A man out West sat down in a barber's shop to be shaved. Observing the barber shaking his brush and stamping on the latter as it fell, he asked the reason. "There were little snakes crawling up the brush," the barber explained. The man went out to purchase a newspaper.

"That bed is not long enough for me," said a very tall, gruff Englishman, on being ushered into his bedroom by an Irish waiter at one of our hotels. "Faith, an' you'll find it plenty long, sir, when you get into it," was the reply; "for then there will be two feet more added to it."

An "old subscriber" of a St. Louis paper sends it the following account of an accident: "A collision with a street car and a omnibus being on Jefferson and Fifth street last night a few moments before 12 o'clock; the horse of omnibus was turned the street car down Jefferson about completely around about eight feet. M. Leaseninjured."

"My dear, you should keep those beautiful, new slippers in your drawers when you leave the desk, to go out, so they will not be covered with dust when Mary sweeps," said a neat wife to her husband. "Couldn't think of it my dear. The weather is so cold I prefer to keep my legs in drawers when I go out" was the heathenish reply.

A wag entered a store in London, some years ago, which had for its sign "The Two Baboons," and addressing himself to the proprietor, he said: "I wish to see your partner." "I have no partner, sir." "I beg your pardon, sir, and hope you will excuse the mistake." "Oh, there's no harm done; but what made you think there were two of us?" "Your sign—The Two Baboons."

A man bought some things at a Moriden drug store, the cost of which was thirty cents, paying therefor with a twenty-five cent stamp and a five-cent nickel. After the customer had left the clerk ascertained that the stamp was counterfeit and was orally expressing his disgust, when the proprietor asked him what was the matter. He stated that the scrip was counterfeit. "Was the nickel good?" "Yes, sir." "O, well, never mind, we made two and a half cents profit anyhow."

A negro belonging to a gentleman in Alabama, misbehaved and was sent by his master with a letter to a certain constable. "He will give you a grubbing hoe," said the master. But Jake was not the thing wanted at that season of the year; so meeting a rollicking negro boy he gave him twenty-five cents to carry the letter for him. The boy received thirty-nine lashes. That night the master called Jake up: "Jake, did you get that grubbing hoe?" "No, massa," was the reply, "I gave a boy a quarter to fetch that note to Massa G., and I spec he got dat hoe."

State News.

The President has nominated H. M. Hamilton as postmaster at Eaton Rapids. More than 300,000 pounds of pork were marketed at Kalamazoo last week. Henry C. Sessions, of Ionia, has been appointed clerk of the Railroad Committee in the House of Representatives at Lansing. T. G. Green, a brakeman on the D. L. & L. M. Railroad, had two ribs broken a few days since while coupling cars at Ionia. A female darkey, 102 years of age who claimed to have been a servant of Gen. Washington, died at Ypsilanti a few days since. In Cambria, in Hillsdale county, recently, a girl backed square out of her marriage engagement at the hour for the nuptials, when her sister jumped up and took her place, and all went just as merrily. The wife of Mr. John Shea, of Red Jacket, Houghton county, has presented her husband with triplets, two of whom are living and doing well. A year ago she gave birth to twins. The Lighthouse Board gives notice that on and after the opening of navigation in the spring a light will be exhibited from the brick tower recently erected in the village of Gibraltar, on the western side, near the mouth of Detroit River. The McGraw mill, to be rebuilt at Bay City next season, will be the largest in the Saginaw valley, if not in the United States. It will run two circular and three gang saws, and will be able to cut 35,000,000 feet, running only in the day time. Rev. R. C. Crawford, long well known as the chaplain of the State Prison, was badly bruised by an accident on the C. & M. L. S. R. R., on the 17th, when a passenger coach was thrown down an embankment of 30 feet and overturned. Several others were more or less injured. At Niles, one day last week, eleven little jokers were arrested for besmearing with printers' ink the door-knob of a building in which a religious meeting was being held, to the destruction of a number of the worshippers' kid gloves. Their fun cost them (or their parents) $25. In 1866 a couple were divorced in Gratiot county, who had been married 17 years, for the sole reason that they no longer desired to live together. A year after the separation the divorced husband married again, and soon his brother married his divorced wife. They all live now in entire harmony, and recently held a sort of family reunion. A new village, to be known as Breckinridge, has been platted in the township of Wheeler, Gratiot county, on the line of the Saginaw Valley & Lansing Railroad. There are already a couple of stores, a blacksmith shop, a saw mill, and a number of residences, and arrangements are already made for the erection of a number of business buildings early in the spring.

George W. Eldridge has secured the arrest, at Jackson, of his wife for bigamy, alleging that he married her in July, 1869, at Lansing, and that she, on December 31st last, was married at Jonesville to one Oscar Hervey. Since then the parties have been living in Jackson. She denies the marriage, but admits having lived with him a long time, and to have born two or three children that "looked like him."

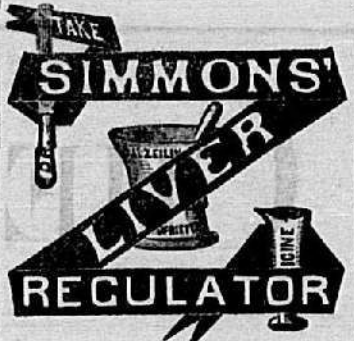

Several days ago the body of a man was found lying in the ditch by the side of the Grand River road, near Detroit. The body was lying on its side, one leg being frozen in the ice, and everything indicating that the man had perished of the severe cold. The body was taken to the Four Mile House and there identified as that of a man named Brown, who lived on Dr. Russell's farm a few miles from the city, on the Grand River road. He had been in Detroit the day before, and after transacting his business visited several saloons and drank heavily, starting to walk home early in the evening. He is supposed to have fallen into the ditch while inebriated, and being unable to rise again, perished. Brown was a man about 45 years of age, of intemperate habits, and leaves a wife and several children in humble circumstances.

A special invitation is given to all his old customers to call upon him and examine his stock. At the same time heavy customers will receive an equally hearty welcome. STORE: Three doors south of R. Kemp's Hardware store, CHelsea, - - MICH. v1-47
