and hunting Indians was the order of the day, or rather night.

When the Feeks learned that she was married, they were highly indignant with their daughter. After some time the mother became anxious to effect a reconciliation with her and have her come home, but she could not think of admitting her Irish husband with her.

"Never," said the daughter, "as much as I love home and parents, never will I enter your house until my husband enters it with me." Her parents tried her hard, sending repeated messages. Her answer was always the same.

One pompous cousin volunteered to mediate. He came to prompt cry. He told her how much her father loved her.

"Yes," said she, "when at home I had two striped linen petticoats and a calico

frack; now see how I'm dressed!" she said, flouncing the skirt of a rich silk gown, "this shows who cares the most for me."

As old Feek was rich and young

Murphy was poor, this argument sent

Cousin Cornelius home quickly.

By-and-by the old people heard that

Murphy was going to take his wife to Pennsylvania. This ended the opposition. A family treaty was formed, and escorted by about thirty citizens and soldiers, and a party of citizens, martial

music playing, the happy couple marched to the home. As they drew near, old Mr. Feek ran forward, opened the gate and extended a hand

to Murphy and his wife, saying, "You have my daughter, but you shall not take her to Pennsylvania; I have enough to support us all."

Murphy gave the old man's hand a pinch which he long remembered, and said in his usual loud tone: "She's no longer yours, Master Feek; she's my wife. I didn't marry her to get your property; I can take care of her myself."

Both parents wept for joy. It is not known whether there was a dry eye in the party; but there was certainly not a dry tear, for if I dare tell it in temperance terms, they drank up ten gallons of wine that night.

This reconciliation took place about a month after the marriage, from which time the couple made their home at Mr.

Feek's. On the death of her parents,

Margaret inherited their valuable estate, and I believe her descendant still lives on the paternal farm.

Mrs. Murphy lived 27 years, and died at the age of 44, in 1807, so she was 17 years old when she ran away, and Murphy was 29.

At the war's end Murphy became a farmer. It was characteristic of this man to live for others, and he died from disease contracted in saving the children of a neighbor from a winter's food.

When peace was declared and our independence acknowledged, many of the Scholarship Indians had the assurance to return and settle among a people whose houses and barns they had burned, whose friends and relatives they had killed. There was one Indian named

Seth Henry, who had killed more Schol-arhar people than any other man. He would sometimes leave a war club upon the dead body of a victim, with a horrid

row of notches thereon, each notch

standing for a scalp taken. An energetic savage, he once led a party from Fort Niagara, in the winter, to capture certain Scholharhar patriots, and he succeeded, traveling six hundred miles through the snow to do so. He, too, had the audacity to come back, but he was too much upon his guard. One day he started from one house to go to another. Timothy Murphy was observed to go in the same direction, and afterward, and it is a curious coincidence that, as far as can be ascertained,

Seth Henry never reached any place in this world.

After this there began to be mysterious disappearances of Tories and Indians, and it was to be noted that coincidence with a disappearance would be a brush-heap fire in the vicinity

in which the missing person was last seen. It is to be supposed that caligned human bones might have been found in the ashes of these brush fires.

The remaining renegades and savages

took the hint and departed that land before they departed this life, so the country was cleared of this vermin.

Timothy Murphy was a capital stump

speaker, and was a political power in Scholarhar county. He brought Wm. C.

Bonk into public life, which brought him into the gubernatorial chair of the Empire State.

He died in 1818, full of years and of honor.

A fine old Irish gentleman.

Written for the Chelsea Herald.
Welcome to Spring.

BY W. B. GILDART.

All hail to the spring,
Dear, bright, joyous spring,
A glad welcome we'll give unto thee!
Thou art come from the south,
With glad songs in thy mouth,
To waken the woods and the sea.

Thou'lt unfetter the lake,
Search the sylvan and brake,
And make the earth vocal with praise!
To that heaven above,
With worship and love,
Earth's myriads their voices will raise.

Though tardy thy advent,
We will yet give glad vent,
To our feelings, as welcome we sing!
Then stay with us now,
Chase winter and snow,
To their lairs at the northwest, oh! spring—

Ethan Allen.

[CONCLUSION.]

Col. Allen.—Oh, Elder, as for that, you had better not pray at all, for my God will not think the better of you for so doing. As for myself, take my word for it, I shall never be unsettled down of meanness and misanthropy by any power on earth or anywhere else. I fought for liberty and equality as to the rights of my whole countrymen, not a part. God's rain descends upon all, and his mercies are over all his works, not a part—no monopolies or special privileges. He that will does, well is; and God's parental goodness extends to all his children.

Elder R.—Well, Colonel, in one sense you are right. It seems you believe in a God. Many of the Christian world have supposed you to be an Atheist.

Col. A.—Yes, probably they have supposed so, and that without knowledge. I believe in a God, and have no doubt but that he was with me when I took old Ti, and Crown Point. Have you, Elder?

Elder R.—Why, we read in the bible, Colonel, that he is a man of peace and not of war?

Col. A.—So am I a man of peace, in time of peace, but not of war. He drove Satan out of Heaven, after a hard battle, which closed the rebellion, and if it was not for the ministers, or in other words the half and whole pay officers in the army of Saints, I should wish the Lord had served the old rebel Beelzebub, as Washington would have done Arnold could he have caught him. I have a poor opinion of those peace folks in war and war folks in peace.

Elder R.—Shall I understand you to say that on account of the ministers, you are willing that the Prince of Darkness should remain undestroyed?

Col. A.—Most certainly, Elder; if the Devil was dead, and all of the enemy destroyed, what use to be at the expense of keeping a standing army? There would be nothing for them to do, nobody for them to fight, and the whole host in one general order would be disbanded and turned out of pay and rations, from the commander-in-chief, the Pope, down to the deacons or corporals. I suppose, Elder, your rank in that grand army, at present, is something like Captain; perhaps when you get into your new fortress, or meeting-house, you'll be Major by brevet.

Elder R.—Colonel, I must say this don't seem profitable conversation; let us leave temporal things and talk about a hereafter.

Col. A.—Very well Elder, I am as willing to talk of things which neither of us know anything about, as any other matters, if it will suit better.

Elder R.—Col. Allen, do you believe in the existence of the soul in the future state?

Col. A.—Yes, I wish to believe it; it is very unpleasant for a man who has done some service to his country, and good to his fellow men, to be obliged to go into an everlasting sleep and thereby be deprived of the consciousness of it.

Elder R.—What idea have you of Heaven, and the course best calculated to realize the hope of at last arriving and passing the gate into it? Col. A.—Why as to that, I'll tell you Elder. In the first place, in my opinion Heaven is, as represented, a place of great felicity and peace and that none but brave, honest, benevolent patriots go there. I have no idea that cowards, hypocrites, or Tories are suffered to enter the gates at all, or even to look over the wall. What will become of these creatures, the Lord only knows; perhaps there is a spiritual Halifax in the next world where they send them as the British did the Tories from Boston.

Elder R.—Have you an idea that the creature is accountable for the deeds done in the body Colonel?

Col. A.—Yes, Elder, and out of it too. They no doubt keep a true account of our doings here, and if they find we are brave, generous clever fellows, they enter our name upon the muster roll of the grand army above I have no idea, however, that we shall have all the same station assigned us. Our notions and actions here about matters and things must have some influence upon the destinies hereafter.

Elder R.—It does seem to me that you are original in everything, Colonel, I wish you would give me more particularly your views of Heaven, our arrival at its gate, reception and the final disposition you fancy they make of us?

Col. A.—Well Elder, I'll try to give you a fancy sketch in my own way. In the first place, then, there is the Rev. Mr. B., of the Congregational church, and yourself and myself. I take for an example of the whole and for brevity sake, the Orthodox and Methodist ministers, and send them out of the world together. They arrive at Heaven's gate, nobody knows how and rap. A voice from within cries: 'Who's there?' The two Christian ministers after a little dispute who should have precedence, agree that the Presbyterian should go ahead, and he answers: 'The Rev. Mr. B., pastor of the Congregational church in ———, awaits your pleasure.' 'Look and see if you can find his name,' is heard. Answer: 'Yes, the charge against him for hypocrisy and selfishness, is balanced by a long painful fever, and repentance before he died.' 'Let him enter.' The impatient Methodist next exclaims: 'Elder C. of the Methodist Episcopal church of ———, wishes entrance.' 'Look and see if you can find his name.' 'Yes, it is here, the account against nameless improprieties while on the circuits, is balanced by matrimony, and sincere repentance soon after he was located.' Let him also enter, and direct both where to go. Now I'll suppose you march up next, and rap. 'Who comes there?' Elder Amindab Robinson, pastor of the A. M. Calvinist Baptist church of Christ, in ———. A voice from within is heard: 'See if his name is there.' 'Yes it is written also that a meeting-house was built about ten years ago, by old Ethan Allen the American patriot, whom they improperly called an infidel. He has left a numerous church and large estate. Open the gate and let him enter.' You walk in, and there behold in glory the representative of the majesty of Heaven seated in a golden chair a little back of a table, upon which are numerous large folio books, with leaves of gold and silver; and in front of the table the first book keeper, or recorder of the deeds of those who came from one of his small planets, by us called Earth. Thus standing and looking you will next see the Deputy Grand Master rise and speak as follows: 'Ariel, take down that key and conduct Elder Amindab Robinson to his people—they are endorsed at the north-west corner and locked up together; for they held close communion on earth, so they must in Heaven. If they were honest there they will be happy here. After you let the Elder in among his faith, lock the door and bring the key.' Thus you'll get among your Calvinist Baptist brethren Elder, and be likely to remain with them in close communion through all eternity for all I can see.

The good Elder, not quite liking the final disposition which the old hero had made of him and the people of his faith, with some spirit and a little Christian pugnacity proceeded: Elder R.—Well Col. Allen, you have described the final disposition of three professors of religion and Ministers of the Gospel; will you now inform me how you expect to get to Heaven not being a professor of religion or belonging to any church society on earth?

Col. A.—Yes, that I can do very quick. When my body and soul settle up and dissolve their temporal partnership, the soul leaving its former partner to descend to its parent earth, will start upon its own hook, to ascend from whence it came. My soul will carry no church certificate or commission, any more than when I took Ti. Perhaps I may have the company of some one or more of the brave fellows who went there with me. Not a minister or a deacon will accompany me; they will strive to accompany my wife. When I and my old comrades arrive at the gate, I shall rap stoutly, for I believe my right to enter as good as the best of you. A voice from within will say: 'Who's there?' Perhaps my old fellow soldier, wishing to aid the Col., may quickly reply: 'Colonel Ethan Allen of Colchester, Vermont.' I shall then say to him, 'Away with your nonsense,' and scream out as loud as I did to De la Place: 'No! it is old Ethan Allen that took Tye and Crown Point and the armed vessel upon the Lake, without any orders but yours, in one day!' A voice will be heard from within saying: 'Ah, yes, you need not look in the books for the brave Allen has credit upon every page of them; open the gate to him and all his comrades, for he never would be seen in bad company!'

So in we go, and the Deputy Grand Master, with countenance beaming with love and good will, will rise and say: 'Col. Allen, in the name of the Majesty of Heaven, I bid you and your friend there, welcome to Paradise. In imitation of Him, you have contributed as far as you could to the happiness, indiscriminately, of all his creatures; and as you were kind to all, and identified yourself with no one sect on earth, so you have no bounds set for you in Heaven. All will be happy to see and welcome you. Go where you will, except, should you wish to see your old friend, Amindab Robinson, call upon Ariel, who will at any time take the key and let you in among the Calvinists, and out when you are pleased to go, and lock the door after you?' (The dialogue here ends.)

Christians and Patriots! Lovers of God and His master-works! You only see in Ethan Allen a bold, fearless patriot in politics, and an example in point of kindness and love to God and man in religion.—N. H. Patriot.

State News.

Along the shore of Lake Michigan, near St. Joseph, the snow is still lying on the ground, quite deep, and the lake outside is covered with thick ice.

Robert White, of Romeo, had a horse die recently that he had owned 26 years, and if it had lived two weeks longer it would have been 49 years old.

Two prosecutions were recently commenced at Eaton Rapids by sons against their fathers for assault and battery, and the old gentlemen were fined in both cases.

George W. Reed has been arrested at Grand Rapids, charged with attempting to influence the jury in the case of Pickle, recently convicted of adultery in that city. He has been committed to jail in default of bail.

A correspondent at Tipton, Lenawee county, informs us that on Thursday night, an old man of 50 or 60 years, named Ethan Allen, hung himself in the barn of Mr. White, in Tecumseh. He was worth some $3,000 or $4,000. A periodical fit of insanity supposed cause of suicide.

A little son of Mr. Stickney, living at Black River, near Hartford, met his death a few days since by falling through a lot of saw dust which was on fire beneath. His father was working at a mill near by, but did not get to him until too late to give him any assistance.

On Friday, the body of Mrs. Philip Goodrich, an old lady 60 years of age, was found hanging to the banister of the stairway in her dwelling house, in Grand Rapids. She had not been bed during the night, having evidently been watching for an opportunity to commit suicide.

The Grand Rapids Times says that in the northern part of that city, not a great distance from the 'Camp Ground,' live two girls, 12 and 14 years of age, sisters, who are miracles of smartness. Their father died some months ago, and since his death they have taken the entire care of a horse, two cows, and a great flock of hens, have done any quantity of odd chores, attended the public school, and taken a high rank as artists in their leisure moments by taking lessons on the piano.

Miller Ruggles, a druggist of Whitehall, was severely stabbed in several places about the face and hands, recently, by his brother William, a photographer. They were both at a calico hop, as was also William's wife, from whom he has been, for several months, separated; and Miller attempting to escort the woman home, William interfered, bidding him leave her to him, her rightful escort. But she refused to go with her husband, and Miller persisting in going with her, the brothers were soon struggling together in mortal combat. William was badly bruised in the encounter, and has since been arrested.

News in a Nutshell.

It is reported that ten buildings were burned at the village of Centerville, Ohio, recently.

The office of the sheriff at Corinth, Miss., was robbed of $7,000, Tuesday night, by burglars, who blew open the safe.

Developments in the Falls City Tobacco Bank robbery at Louisville, Ky., continue to increase the losses, which are now estimated at over $300,000.

Wagner, the Isle of Shoals murderer, was taken from Saco to South Berwick, Me., recently, and was indicted, and held for trial at Alfred in May. He had no counsel.

French troops have been sent to the Spanish frontier to assist the local authorities in the execution of the order requiring that all Carlists crossing into France be 'interned.'

At Charlotte, Iowa, on Tuesday, a man attempted to cross a creek with a team and wagon containing five persons. They were swept away by the current, and all but one man drowned.

The cashier of the Lamberton Bank at Franklin, Penn., after robbing the bank of its funds to a great extent, burned the books and papers, then shot himself to death. Forty lawyers cannot straighten the affairs in a year.

The Roman Catholic Church and eleven buildings at Norristown, Pa., were entirely destroyed by fire, recently. Loss, $30,000. All the property destroyed, except the church, was owned by Wm. Simpson & Sons, of Philadelphia, whose loss is about $20,000. Insurance unknown.

W. P. Brunner, a seaman of the schooner Horace Alder, from Philadelphia for Charleston, reports that the vessel touched on the Hen and Chickens, Saturday morning, while going to sea. At 8 o'clock in the evening of the same day, about thirty miles off Chincoteague, they abandoned the vessel in a sinking condition, taking to the yawl. The boat was upset in the breakers, and Captain Edgar Jones, the mate, the cook, and one seaman were lost.

A COMPACT WITH THE EVIL ONE.

Strange Superstition of an Old Californian.

In a pretentious mansion, located in a fashionable quarter of Sutter street, resides a venerable gentleman and an old citizen of San Francisco, possessed of a remarkable superstition, which has placed him under a horrible ban of suspense, and rendered his life a continuous watch against the powers of darkness for many years. Surrounded by wealth, and unlimited facility of ease and happiness, every hope or pleasure of his existence is dissipated in the great terror he experiences of being left alone for a single instant. During the hours of daylight he goes abroad, among the busy throng, attends to his extensive business affairs at his counting-room, and apparently feels a sense of security and enjoys comparative tranquility of mind. But at nightfall, when he retires to the privacy of his residence, he remains in constant fear that by some mishap he should be neglected by his faithful attendant for the least period of time. A servant, who has grown old in the service of his master, has the sole duty of remaining constantly by his side during the night, and guarding his slumbers with sleepless fidelity. As a further precaution against the intrusion of the evil one, an open Bible is invariably placed in proximity to his head ere he composes himself to rest.

The gentleman subject to such uncomfortable apprehension is the descendant of an old French family, with the history of which a curious tradition is associated. It is related that some generations back the head of the house entered into a compact with Mephistopheles, or some other minister of the infernal court, wherein the first-born of the family was to be the forfeit, and this arrangement is supposed to run indefinitely through succeeding generations. The present subject of the contract declares that both his father and father's father died suddenly and mysteriously, while nobody was by to observe the cause or manner of their demise, but in both instances the evidences were plain of death from strangulation. This horrible bond upon the family has prevented the gentleman from contracting a marriage and thereby perpetuating it, and with his own death, whenever it shall occur, the compact will end. His great anxiety is to meet a natural death under the solemn ministrations of his church, and much of his time is given to pious devotion.

BRIEF MENTION.

Remember that the 7th day of April next will be town meeting day.

Washenaw county is to have a new Court House at a cost of $100,000.

Election tickets printed neatly, cheaply and expeditiously, at this office. Bring on your orders.

NEW PAPER.—We have on our table the first number of a new paper lately started in Saline, in this county, called the Saline Review. It is a neat printed thirty-two column sheet, and has a fine typographical appearance, which reflects much credit on the publisher, and its inhabitants. We wish our brother success.

A WORD TO THE WISE.—All those indebted to the firm of L. Babcock & Co., are requested to call immediately and settle the same. By so doing they will save trouble and expense. The books are kept at Wood Bro's & Co's store, in Masonic building.

Chester, March 20, 1873.

On Sunday of last week, Edson Benham, son of Sidney Benham, living on the north side river road, near city limits, attempted to jump on to the forward end of the caboose of a westward bound freight train, was thrown under the wheels, had a leg cut off, and received such other injuries as to cause his death, which occurred on Monday morning. He was about 16 years old. The large number of lads in the habit of jumping on to moving trains at and near the depot should take warning.—Ann Arbor Argus.

The celebrated actor, John Palmer, whose father was a bill sticker, and who occasionally followed the same humble occupation himself, while strutting one evening in the green room in a pair of glittering buckles, a bystander remarked that they really resembled diamonds. "Sir," said Palmer with some warmth, "I would have you know I never wear anything but diamonds." "I ask your pardon," replied the other; "I remember the time when you were nothing but paste!" The laugh was much heightened by Bannister exclaiming, "Jack, why don't you stick him against the wall?"

Chelsea Union School.

On Thursday of last week the Union School concluded the winter term. The last two or three days were generally devoted to examinations of the classes in the several departments, as this is the period at which promotions take place. We understand the pupils, for the most part, passed a very creditable examination. On Thursday afternoon, the four lower departments had some very good rhetorical exercises, which were attended by several of the patrons of the school, who cheered teachers and pupils by their presence and words.

We present below the last monthly report of the school.

School report for the month ending, March 27, 1873.

North-western Farmers' Club

The club met at the School House, Chelsea, on March 20th, 1873. Mr. Baldwin in the chair.

The subject was brought forward by article from an old issue of the Michigan Farmer, read by T. Jewett. From the allusions thereto contained in the record, the discussion turned largely on application of plaster to clover and wheat.

Mr. Jewett gave a very interesting account of an experiment tried by him in applying plaster in alternate strips or lands, across a field of wheat at different times.

The first application was made the first of April, by sowing several strips, with intervening lands on which no plaster was applied. The first of May an adjoining section was treated in the same way, and on the first of June the remainder of the field was similarly treated, making an application of plaster on each alternate land across the entire field. At harvest time Mr. J. could distinguish no benefit whatever from the first application; but on the strips sown with plaster on the first of May, could see a marked improvement. Both in size of straw and in amount of grain, which he was confident was fully double in amount where plaster had been sown. On the remaining section where plaster was sown the first of June, the straw was increased probably one foot in height, was rank and green, and consequently the grain was much shrunken.

In speaking of the effects of plaster on grass, Mr. Cushman said he never used it when he thought he could see no benefit therefrom. He had nearly doubled the amount of hay on a section of his meadow, by having sown plaster on it during the previous February.

In answer to a query from Mr. Downer, in regard to rolling wheat after harrowing, Mr. T. Baldwin said he had good success on light land by rolling spring wheat after sowing clover seed, but with a similar trial on heavy land, had injured his wheat very much by so doing, without any benefit to the clover.

Mr. Riggs said he had best success in seedling to clover by sowing as soon as the ground settled, and harrowing either before or after sowing the seed. He always sows plaster on wheat and clover with good results.

Mr. Jewett would harrow his wheat before sowing grass seed. Mr. J. also remarked that he should not sow plaster if he knew the season would be wet, for he had observed that dew was always heavier on grass where plaster had been applied.

Mr. Doyd had clover die after coming up very early on sandy land. Did not know the reason, but imputed it to frosts and cold weather.

Mr. T. Baldwin had found early sown clover to do well on sandy land, but not as well on clay as when sown later.

Mr. Clark had had poor success in seedling to clover with wheat that had been sown on sod, which had been but once plowed.

Mr. Easton was in favor of the old Pennsylvania dutchman's plan of sowing plaster when the sign is in the "crab," or after the roots were well spread. Thought plaster had a tendency to draw or absorb heat, as evidenced by the higher temperature, noticed on the outside of a bag of plaster, than on that of the inside. Mr. Easton and Mr. Jewett had each seen the good effects of plaster on grass for three years after sowing, by its having been applied unevenly, the strips that got no plaster being yellow, and so small as to be readily distinguished the third season after the plaster was sown.

Subject for consideration at next meeting Plowing, Harrowing, and Cultivating. M. Baldwin, essayist. Meeting adjourned for two weeks, to meet at the School House, in Chelsea, at 2 o'clock P. M.

H. B. JONES, Sec'y.

D. 1869, in liber 26, of mortgages on page 315, and duly assigned by said Benjamin F. Wymouth to William H. Clark, by assignment bearing date the 14th day of October, A. D. 1872, and recorded in the office of the said Register of Deeds for Washenaw County, on the 24 day of January, A. D. 1873, in liber 3, of assignment of mortgages on page 580, by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at this date the sum of eight hundred and six dollars and 25 cents, including principal and interest, and no proceeding at law, or in chancery having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof. Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed on Saturday, the twelfth day of April, next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at the south door of the Court House, in the city of Ann Arbor, in said county of Washenaw, (said Court House being the place of holding the Circuit Court for said county of Washenaw), by sale at public auction to the highest bidder, of the premises described in said mortgage, which said mortgage proceeds are described in said mortgage as follows, viz: All that certain piece or parcel of land, lying and being in the town of Sylvan, in the county of Washenaw, in the State of Michigan, being the east half of the north-west quarter of section number twenty-seven, in township number two, south of Range number three, containing eighty acres of land, being the land patented to James H. Woods, by the United States Land Office.
