The Last of the Suicide—Who is Guilty?

SERMON BY THE REV. MR. HUNT.

[From the Jackson Citizen, March 28.]

The last sad rites of earth were solemnized yesterday afternoon over the remains of C. B. Aylworth, the suicide, the Second Congregational Church being crowded upon the occasion. Rev. Mr. Hunt having been invited by the Typographical Union, who took charge of the funeral, to give a brief discourse upon the unhappy subject, fulfilled his trust in the most effective and affecting manner. He chose his text from Job, chapter x, verse 1:

"My soul is weary with my life; I will leave my complaint upon myself; I will speak in the bitterness of my soul."

Some months since a pleasant-looking man entered the Sabbath School connected with this church, bearing in his arms a sweet-looking little girl, perhaps three years of age, and seating himself near the door, listened with marked attention to the singing of the children. Now and then a tear gathered in his eye, which was hastily brushed away with one hand, while the other seemed to clasp the little one whom he loved, more closely to his heart. When approached by the pastor, he said, "Oh, sir, I came in to let my little daughter hear the singing—and, sir, I must confess that my heart has been touched." He came again and again, each time bringing the little girl with him.

At the close of an evening meeting, when an appeal had been made to Christian people to go out and find those who were waiting for the troubling of the waters, but had no hand to bring them to the living waters, he seized the hand of the pastor, oh, so frantically, while his eyes bespoke the feelings of his soul, and exclaimed, "I am that man; no one to take me to Jesus, and I cannot go alone. Will you help me? Sir, I have an appetite which I cannot control, and unless Christ helps me I must perish!"

Such help as this church could render was given him. He stopped drinking, and the proprietor of the Citizen restored him to his position in the office. He looked happy, prayed earnestly, and spoke with an ease and grace which showed him to be a man of thought, yea, of culture. The wife put on a cheerful countenance, rocked the new-born babe, and talked of comfort and better days to come.

He was a printer by profession—a fine workman, a good scholar—kind-hearted, and generous to a fault. A good husband, a loving father, and a peaceable citizen. But, alas! his body lies cold in death before us today—his once happy wife a widow with anguish too deep for utterance—his little girl (God pity her) fatherless—and his babe the offspring of a suicide!

In the army he had acquired an appetite for strong drink, and it had become so strong that it seemed impossible for him to control it, when the temptation was continually placed before him. He tried but failed; tried and failed again; till at length, weary of life, he exclaimed, "I will leave my complaint upon myself; I will speak in the bitterness of my soul."

Oh! how weary must that soul be—how tired and sick of life to calmly and deliberately plan his own destruction, and then, surmounting every obstacle, carry out his design. The orphan girl of sixteen—away from friends and home, hunted by fiends and chased by demons, who walk our streets to-day with the mark of Cain upon them, might say, "I am like a pelican of the wilderness; I am like an owl of the desert;" and lie down and die; but how a father who loved his children so fondly, that even when under the influence of liquor seldom failed to bring some token of affection to them, and whose wife ever treated him with kindness and consideration—how he could bring such sorrow and misery upon them, can only be solved upon the ground of mental derangement.

Yes, our friend was deranged, mad, frantic, discouraged with his oft-repeated failures, bewildered by the poison which he had in his brain; and in this state of bewilderment cried, "my soul is weary of my life, I will leave my complaint upon myself, I will speak in the bitterness of my soul." We are startled with this event, as though it was a rare, an isolated case, when the figures show that 450 commit suicide every year in the United States from the effects of liquor.

Much as I respect the feelings of this bereaved wife, and these relatives, truth compels me to assert that murder, foul murder has been committed. Charles Aylworth is dead, and he either took his own life unaided and is wholly responsible for it, or he had accomplices who aided him in the act and are more or less guilty. And whoever is guilty of this murder, upon him or them the judgment of Heaven will fall.

And now let us look at this matter and see if we can place the blame where it belongs. He was an intelligent moral agent. He knew the evils of intemperance. He knew the ruin which it wrought, and with his eyes open to all its fearful effects, commenced and laid the foundation of the gallows upon which his lifeless body hung but yesterday. For this he was responsible.

Time passed on. The appetite grew stronger and stronger, until it got the mastery of him and led him captive at its will. He had not the power to control it. A physician who has attended the inebriate in the asylum on Randall's Island, says that the brain is composed of an innumerable amount of little cells, which can be fed and satisfied with stimulents. But after having been fed with stimulents that come from alcoholic drinks—until they are degraded and inflamed—the food must be given them or they become frantic. And when the food is taken away, these 10,000 little mouths open wide—and like demons cry—drink, drink, drink. And no man can withstand the cry, providing the temptation is placed before him.

Now this is the condition in which we find this unfortunate man in the city of Jackson—unable to withstand temptation—and a hundred temptations placed before him daily. Yes, one hundred places, some rich and inviting, others dark and dismal, all crying to the struggling man, come; here is the panacea, here is the beverage that will deaden that fever, and quiet the cryings of that starving brain. Here, here, here, a hundred voices cry at once, here is the place to buy unlabeled poisons, come and buy; I know your wife needs clothing, and your babes need food, but come buy my poison, buy. My wife must dress in silks, and my daughters wear jewels, though your wife go in rags, your children cry for food, and you lie cold and stiff in the tomb alone.

He stood up and did his best, and cried, "let me alone, let me alone—close your doors, hide those decanters, tempt me not!" But no; the decanters were so arranged in front of mirrors that they showed a double set, extra lights were thrown on the organs, sounded, pictures, paintings, everything that could make a house of death look brilliant, cried, "come, buy our poison, come!"

Dispatches from all parts of Virginia report extensive fires in the woods, causing considerable damage to fences and railroad property, and in many places destroying houses and barns. The largest of these fires occurred along the line of the Richmond and Danville Railroad, and in Orange, Hanover, Caroline, Charlotte and Appomattox counties. One fire in Charlotte county swept through a space of country three miles wide and twelve miles long with great force, destroying all the fences, tobacco, barns, out-houses and other property in its track. Two men in Appomattox county were burned to death.

Mary McDermott, aged 30, was murdered most brutally by her husband, John McDermott, aged 36, an Irish laborer, on Sunday, in their apartments, on the second floor of the two-story brick tenement-house, No. 425 West Fifty-second street, New York City. McDermott was jealous of his own cousin, Patrick Ryan, who had boarded with them at intervals for five years, but who left the house a week previous to the murder. When she was preparing breakfast on Sunday morning, McDermott seized a heavy, long-handled, stone-breakers hammer, with which he dealt his wife a terrible blow on the forehead, crushing her skull and killing her instantly. A woman who occupied adjoining apartments notified the police, who arrested the murderer when he was about to take his departure. He admitted his guilt, and endeavored to commit suicide by dashing his head against the walls of his cell, but was prevented.

BRIEF MENTION.

☞ We call attention to the advertisement of L. C. Hildon, on second page.

☞ TRANSFER.—Mr. Ira Wood sold his property in Chelsea, to Mr. A. Burkhardt, for $1,600.

☞ PERSONAL.—Dr. Shaw left Chelsea last Thursday for Canada, on a visit to his friends, where he intends to spend a few days.

☞ REMOVAL.—Isra Vogel has moved to the Blacksmith shop formerly occupied by J. M. McDonald, corner of North and Main streets. See card on second page.

☞ Next Sabbath evening, the pastor of the M. E. Church, of Chelsea, will preach a sermon in the church upon the subject of Temperance.

☞ STREAK OF LUCK.—H. A. Smith, our late postmaster, was one of the lucky ones, in getting a prize of a silver castor, worth twenty-five dollars, at the Detroit Commercial Advertiser gift enterprise, that came off on April 26th, 1873.

☞ THERE, NOW!—Don't say anything again about ladies looking in the looking glass. A woman in Ann Arbor looked into a mirror, the other night, and saw a burglar, or rather the image of one, and thereby saved all her silver-ware, jewelry, etc., etc.

☞ Mr. — of Chelsea, who was so fond of reading books in his neighbor's house, that when he came home one evening his wife exclaimed:
"I wish I were a book that I might always be in your society."
"I wish you were an almanac, so I could change you every year," replied he.

☞ A COMICAL TRICK.—The following "trick" is good enough to play at any time of the year, and will bear repeating. Taken sheet of note paper, fold carefully and enclose $1.50 to pay for the HERALD a year in advance. And what adds immense to the feat is to send the name of a new subscriber "with cash to balance." Keep your eye on the printer, and if you can detect a smile, the trick is a success. Try it.

☞ RUNAWAY.—On Saturday last, while George Runciman was loading up plaster at the depot, his horses got frightened by a passing freight train, and run up Main street at a fearful speed, making the mud fly in clouds. When they got to Fred Girbach's store, they made a circuit and one of the horses jumped into the wagon of Jacob Hlast, and breaking the axle tree no further damage was done.

☞ CLEANING HARNESS.—A friend sends us the following recipe for cleaning harness, which we lay before our readers: "First, wash the harness clean with soap and water. Let it get nearly dry; then take a handful of bay, pour castor oil thickly over the hay and burn it in a pan. On applying plenty of the mixture it will be found to dry instantly and look well. The experiment is worthy of a trial.

☞ CLEAN UP.—Now is the time to clean up and carry off the rubbish accumulated during the winter months. Do not allow things to "lay around loose" and rot, and thereby engender miasmatic diseases. Cart off the old ashes and cinders, the rotten apples and potatoes, and if a dead cat or a rat lies in the lot, take your spade and make a little funeral, not for the benefit of the cat or rat, but for your own health. Remember, that "cleanliness is next to godliness."

☞ CARRIAGE REPOSITORY.—We had the pleasure on Saturday last, of visiting the well-known establishment of Hovey & Son. The above firm has rented the old stone warehouse on Main street, three doors south of Charles Tichenor's feed store—especially for a Repository to exhibit their beautiful carriages. Mr. Hovey, Sr., showed us some of the handsomest carriages that we have seen for some time, such as Top Buggies, Open Buggies, Covered Carriages, Platform spring double seated Carriages, etc. We advise all those intending to purchase a fine carriage, should not fail to call at the Repository, and examine their carriages before purchasing elsewhere. It will well repay the visitor to make a call.

☞ We presume it is not generally known that ministers, justices of the peace, etc., who, at any time, perform a marriage ceremony, are required, by law, to file a certificate to that effect, with the County Clerk of their respective counties; and perhaps, the further fact that physicians whose patients "die on their hands," or assist at births, are also required to certify, in like manner, such births and deaths, is not as well known as the first. Such are, certainly, the requirements of the law, and a heavy fine attached to a violation of the same.

Dog Law.

The following dog law passed the House of Representatives, at Lansing, on April last, and will take effect on July next, 1873:

A bill to provide for licensing the keeping of dogs.

SECTION 1. The People of the State of Michigan, do hereby enact and declare, That every person who shall own or keep a dog, shall procure a license therefor, from the clerk of the township or city in which he may reside, for which he shall pay to such clerk as follows:

For a male dog one dollar, for a female dog three dollars; which license shall run and be in force from the day of its date to the 1st day of April next thereafter. He shall cause the dog to wear around its neck, during the life of the license, and no longer, a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and registered number.

Sec. 2. The clerk, on proper application and payment, as herein provided, shall issue such license. It shall be dated, shall contain the name of the person to whom, and a description of the dog for which issued, the sum paid for it, and a statement of the time when it will run out. All licenses for any one year, commencing the first of April, shall be numbered consecutively in the order in which issued, commencing with No. 1. The clerk shall register in a book to be kept by him for that purpose, the name of each licensee, description of his dog as in the license, the number of the license, and the amount paid. The said clerk shall, on request, permit any police officer or constable of his township or city to take copies of the register. The clerk may retain twenty cents for each license given by him, and shall pay the balance of the money received for licenses into the township or city treasury; and the moneys received for licenses for any one year, and thus paid into the treasury, shall constitute a fund for the payment of damages which any person or persons may sustain by the killing or wounding of sheep or lambs, by a dog or dogs, within such township or city during such year.

Sec. 3. When any person shall be damaged by the killing or wounding of his sheep or lambs by a dog or dogs, he may call on a disinterested justice of the peace of his township or city, not of kin to such person, and not a member of the township board, who shall proceed to view the sheep or lambs so killed or wounded, and if from such view he shall be satisfied that the same were killed or wounded by a dog or dogs, he shall make a certificate thereof in writing, stating the amount of damage sustained by such person, and shall deliver the same to the clerk of said township or city, who shall file the same in his office, and record it in the records of the township or city. The said justice shall receive for his services in each case the sum of two dollars, and ten cents for each mile actually and necessarily traveled by him in performing such service, to be paid out of the aforesaid fund, or of the order of the township board or proper city officer or officers.

Sec. 4. At the annual meeting of the township board in each year, and at a meeting of the common council of each city, in March or April of each year, the said board or council, as the case may be, shall examine all certificates of damage filed by the clerk as aforesaid, during the preceding year, and if satisfied that in any case or cases the certified damages are excessive, they may reduce the same to such amount as they may consider just, and may order the payment of all such damages as they may consider just, out of the fund aforesaid, if it be sufficient for that purpose; and if not sufficient, they may order a proportionate payment of each claim. If any claim remains of such fund, after satisfying all claims on the aforesaid fund, it shall be apportioned among the several school districts of such township or city, in proportion to the number of children therein of school age. Provided, That no payment of damages shall be made, as provided for in this section, in cases in which the party sustaining the damage shall be able to obtain satisfaction therefor from the owner or owners of the dog or dogs which shall have done the damage. And provided further, That if any dog or dogs for which a license or licenses shall have been given by the clerk of any township or city, shall kill or wound any sheep or lambs, in any adjacent township or city, and the owner of such sheep or lambs shall not be able to obtain satisfaction therefor from the owner of such dog or dogs, the damage or a proportionate part thereof shall be paid out of the license fund of the township or city by the clerk of which such license or licenses were given, in the same manner, and subject to the same proceedings, as near as may be, as if such damage had been done in such township or city.

Sec. 5. Whoever shall keep a dog, contrary to the provisions of this act, shall forfeit the sum of ten dollars, to be recovered with costs, in an action of trespass on the case, in the name and for the use of the township or city in which such dog shall be kept; and no property owned by the defendant in such action shall be exempt from levy and sale, by virtue of any writ of execution issued upon a judgment obtained therein for such forfeiture.

Sec. 6. Any person may, and it shall be the duty of every police officer and constable of any township or city to kill any and all dogs going at large, and not licensed and collared according to the provisions of this act, and such officers shall be entitled to receive from the township or city treasury fifty cents for each dog so killed by them.

COMMUNICATION.

Explanation.

ED. HERALD.—Noticing in your last issue a paragraph entitled "Thanks," in which Mr. J. P. Foster expresses his own appreciation of his work on Mr. C. T. Conklin's barn, and as the facts do not appear sufficiently plain, a little explanation is no more than proper. The idea conveyed by Mr. Foster is, that he performed his work better than was required—hence Mr. Conklin's appreciation backed up by a magnificent present; whereas the fact is Mr. Foster was required by a complete set of drawings and specifications, to perform the work in a manner which he could not avoid—and further he contracted the work at a ruinous rate—and although the work is not performed up to the standard required by the specifications, yet Mr. Conklin has been magnanimous enough to pay Mr. Foster more than he agreed to, which under a little different circumstance would be truly commendable. The justice of this explanation will be more apparent when it is considered, that in this Mr. Foster has attempted to carry off laurels which he does not deserve, by representing to the public that he does work cheaper and so much better than others of his craft (which is not so), that he can draw forth magnificent presents from his patrons through his self-expressed appreciation.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally useful as a cathartic; nor was ever any before so generally adopted into use, in every country and in all climates, as this mild but efficient purgative. The obvious reason is, that it is more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cures them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends; and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of the composition. ## THE MODOC WAR.

Battle of the Lava Beds—Capt. Jack Forged from his Stronghold.

A dispatch dated Headquarters Modoc Expedition, Camp South of Lake, April 16, gives the following account of the way in which the Modocs were forced out of the lava beds. The day opened warm and still, but was shattered by a rain of musketry and the booming of howitzers. Gen. Glenn, who had been waiting for the arrival of his stores and the Warm Spring Indians, issued orders yesterday for the Modocs to be struck down in a compact place near the hospital, for the Modocs to be supplied with three days' rations and 100 rounds of ammunition. Next, for the cavalry to move to a point 2 miles to the east, and for Col. Mason to move to the opposite side of the lava bed, to move at the same hour on the enemy. Col. Perry's and Lieut. Cresson's cavalry were to proceed themselves into the morning by the hospital and artillery. It was hoped the Modocs would observe them, and in an attempt to entice them off into the hands of the cavalry. These movements were faithfully executed, and probably hurried a little on our side by the escape of John Jim, a Modoc, who was under guard a prisoner of war. At midnight he leaped past the guard and escaped, though many shots were fired at him.

REPORTS from San Salvador state that the authorities still persist in rebuilding the city on the same site, although this is the eighth time within 150 years that city has been destroyed. Most of the people, nevertheless, have removed to Santa Tecla. The only building that stood the shocks without the least injury was the little house of the French consul. The impulse at present is to import timber from California, for the construction of such earthquake-proof houses. Aid and money have been sent from all parts of the Republic. Every effort is being made to rebuild the city. The United States Consulate was a mass of ruins inside, though the walls were standing. Advice from Belgrade states that a plot for a general massacre of the Christians of Bosnia, during the observance of the Easter festival, had been discovered and frustrated. The Shah of Persia has started on his European tour. The Pope is again out of danger. He escaped with great ease from the hands of the assassins, on the 12th of April, after a short illness. The troops were drawn up in a manner, with salutes and military bands.

He says that the Modocs are still quiet, but watching the coast with great interest. The federal army, on the 12th of April, occupied the Modoc camp, and the Modocs fled.

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

Making a Hot-Bed.

To prepare a hot-bed, a quantity of fresh stable manure should be well shaken up in a heap about the middle of February or first of March; after remaining three days, it should again be shaken up and turned over, and at another interval of three days. Let the manure remain for three or four days more in the heap, and then form the bed of any dimensions that may be required according to the size and number of frames used, making the bed about a foot wider than the frame all around. The bed, when made, should not be less than three feet high, the situation for it should be dry underneath, sheltered from the north as much as possible, and fully exposed to the sun.

In making up the bed, beat the manure well down with the fork. Place about eight inches of light, rich soil in the frame after it is placed on the bed, so that the surface of the soil may be from six to eight inches from the top of the frame. After the bed has stood with the lights on for a few days, sow the seeds of the cabbage, cauliflower, celery, lettuce, radish, etc., etc. When the seeds make their appearance above ground, give some air, day and night, in moderate weather, by raising the light two or three inches, and as the heat of the bed diminishes, increase the supply of air to prevent the plants being drawn up. In severe weather the frame and lights should be covered up at night with mats or straw. In a high wind protect the side of the bed also in the same way, or the current of air through will extinguish the heat of the bed. If made early in the season, water only will be required when the earth in the frame becomes quite dry; as the plants increase in size the supply of water may be increased. In frosty weather the water should be made milk-warm before it is used; this is important.

Seeds of tomato, pepper and egg-plant should not be sown at the same time with cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce, radish, etc., as they require more heat. Therefore, they should not be put in a hot-bed until the last of March, or not later than the first of April. The proper temperature—70 to 80 degrees. To avoid disappointment, note the above.

To Housekeepers.

Now that spring has arrived, and busy housewives are overwhelmed with the cares of house-cleaning, a few hints may be appreciable. In taking up your carpets it is well to rip the center square. The carpet may be better shaken in two pieces; then turn the outer edges inward, sew it carefully, and, if necessary, tack a border over the outer edges. A well-worn carpet may be made to look almost new by this process, simply by a little ingenuity. Tea grounds, soaked in alum-water, are invaluable in cleaning carpets with a large proportion of green in the pattern. They should be sprinkled over the floor, and allowed to remain for a time, then swept off carefully. The carpet, after a long service, will look quite fresh and new after this process. Oxgall, too, is a useful article in cleaning process. By throwing it into the spongers a carpet may be secured on the floor to look fresh and new. In house-cleaning, system should be observed. Begin at the garret and go downward. Take a room at a time and leave behind the trace of perfect order in each. It is not necessary to create a bedlam or chaos in order that peace may follow. Ever reiteration, as applied to things inanimate, may be taken in broken doses more effectively. Closets and dark corners first arranged, the rest is easy. The secret lies in being complete mistress of the situation, knowing what to do and just how to do it.

Short Horns for England.

M. H. Cochrane, Compton, Canada, the celebrated breeder of short-horn cattle, has recently made sale of three young animals for exportation to England. The price paid by the English buyer was $5,000 for one, $4,000 for another, the other price not given. There have been within a few years many other exportations to England of some of the choicest animals from the best herd in this country, all at satisfactory figures as those above given, and some even higher.

English breeders have learned that we have in America some of the best Bates short-horn cattle in the world, and they are willing to pay fabulous prices to secure some of them for their own herds. One of these, a bull which was exported two years ago, earned his owner $500 the first year after arriving. The same animal was recently sold at auction for 1,600 guineas, or $8,250.

Brine for the Preservation of Butter.

To three gallons of brine strong enough to bear an egg, add a quarter of a pound of nice white sugar and a tablespoonful of saltpetre. Boil the brine, and when it is cold strain carefully. Make your butter into rolls, and wrap each separately in a clean white muslin cloth, tying up with string. Pack a large jar full, weight the butter down, and pour over the brine until all is submerged. This brine will keep really good butter perfectly sweet and fresh for a whole year. Be careful not to put upon ice butter that you wish to keep for any length of time. In summer, when the heat will not admit of butter being made in rolls, pack closely in small jars, and, using the same brine, allow it to cover the butter to a depth of at least four inches. This excludes the air, and answers very nearly as well as the first method suggested.

Seedling Plum Trees.

An inspection of the plum orchards and nurseries of Hagensdorf, in September, 1871, demonstrated that seedling trees had withstood the severity of the winter much better than those propagated from suckers. Of the latter, thousands of old trees were killed, as well as bands of young ones, while adjoining beds of seedlings were entirely unaffected. It was also noticed that trees which abounded in sprouts were more generally affected than those from which the sprouts had been removed at an early age. It is also contended that seedlings send out their roots more vertically and deeper down, and in consequence are more likely to reach moisture in dry weather, and less liable to injury by the plow in cultivation, or to send up suckers.

The Cranberry Crop.

The cash value of the cranberry crop in the United States, according to statistics, has been estimated as follows: In 1870 Maine produced 1,000 barrels, Massachusetts 8,000, Connecticut 2,000, New Jersey 50,000. This amount of 61,000 barrels was raised principally from the cultivated fields. At nineteen stations on the St. Paul and Milwaukee railway 14,885 barrels were freighted during the season of 1869. Only about 3,000 barrels were shipped in 1868. The

To Make Old Black Silk Look Like New.

Unpick the garment and wash the pieces in hot water, then dip in second water prepared as follows: Boil two ounces of logwood chips in five quarts of water; add a quarter of an ounce of copperas; strain through an old bit of calico, and dip your silk into this dye. Let the silk be pinned out to a line by the corners, and hang until it is nearly dry. Then take it down and iron it between two pieces of old black silk. It will look like new.

An Ink that will not Freeze.

Take about one handful of maple bark—the inside bark. Scrape or shave off the outside bark. Put it in three parts of water and boil till the strength is all out of the bark, then strain all the bark out of the decoction. Next put in the decoction half a tablespoonful of copperas, and boil five or ten minutes till the copperas is all dissolved. Keep stirring. This will make near one gill of good ink that will not be injured by freezing.

Contagion.

M. Kleitzky, noting that persons sick with small-pox were often visited by flies, placed near an open window of the hospital a small jar filled with glycerine. The flies gathered about it and were caught like birds with glue. In consequence of free themselves the foreign matter adhering to them was left in the glycerine, which was carefully examined by the microscope. The glycerine was found to be full of strange cells, similar to those seen by persons attacked with small-pox, but never found on the fly. This discovery shows that flies can be a very dangerous means of spreading contagious disease.

A Family of Monomaniacs.

The most remarkable case of lunacy, occurring, probably, that has ever occurred, is recorded of a family in Baltimore. Medical men say that the books contain in its way so extraordinary. A whole family—father, mother and son—under the same delusion. Their names are Sheaf. They are quiet, inoffensive people, live in a modest and work at tailoring. They all make and make a murder has been committed in Baltimore, of which the authorities refuse to take cognizance, because they have all been hushed by a money gag, and they are equally honest and earnest in this belief. They have made every effort to get the matter investigated. The visionary murder is in their own family, and by a relative, and they have a deep interest in exonerating themselves from complicity. Finding that the police authorities of Baltimore would not sympathize with them, they all made a pilgrimage to Washington, and interviewed the President. They were put in charge of some of the Baltimore officers, who returned with them to Baltimore. Explanations followed, and they were advised to go home and trouble themselves no more about the murder. Physicians pronounced them entirely rational upon every other subject but that of the supposed murder.

Spring in the Clearings.

In newly cleared regions of country, spring is always an unhealthy season. The virgin soil, enriched by decomposed vegetable matter, sends up, when first hard to the sunshine, volumes of miasmatic vapor that generates every variety of intermittent and remittent fever. All low-lying, swampy districts, the deltas of rivers, the prairies, the salt-marshes on the coast, the bayous of the Gulf States, and the shores of the Northern lakes, are also visited at this season by malarious epidemics that prostrate no inconsiderable number of their inhabitants. This ought not to be, for it can easily be prevented. No fact in medical history is better established than the fact that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will avert every species of malarious disorder. A course of this standard tonic and alterative commenced in advance of the unhealthy season, and continued regularly until its close, will prove an absolute protection against chills and fever, bilious remittent fever, and other complaints of a periodical type, as well as against the disturbances in the digestive organs and bowels, so common at this period of the year. As a remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, liver disease, nervous disorders, physical weakness, rheumatism, melancholia, hysteria, and ailments to which the weaker sex are exclusively subject, Hostetter's Bitters has no competitor at home or abroad.
