THE SPINNING WHEEL.

BY WILLIAM K. COLEMAN.

And whirling with merry round,
The wheels and whorls were found.

Soft and beautiful as the snow,
Bright as the stars above,
The wheels were spun and spun,

And round and round they spun,
As if by magic hand,
The wheels were spun and spun,

And round and round they spun,
As if by magic hand,
The wheels were spun and spun,

And round and round they spun,
As if by magic hand,
The wheels were spun and spun,

And round and round they spun,
As if by magic hand,
The wheels were spun and spun,

And round and round they spun,
As if by magic hand,
The wheels were spun and spun,

And round and round they spun,
As if by magic hand,
The wheels were spun and spun,

And round and round they spun,
As if by magic hand,
The wheels were spun and spun,

And round and round they spun,
As if by magic hand,
The wheels were spun and spun,

And round and round they spun,
As if by magic hand,
The wheels were spun and spun,

They came to town unmolested,
May be sure; and strange, because a few days
Previously a terrible affair had occurred.

The wedding was to take place at an old relation's, Mrs. Dehesue's, and on a lagging wings that day at length arrived.

The door was broken open for an answer. The officers of justice filled the room. Two advanced.

"Come, Captain," said the foremost,
"the game is up at last. It's an awkward thing to arrest a gentleman on his wedding, but duty, my noble Captain,

Entranced, frozen beyond resistance or appeal the bridegroom was fettered, and the bride stood with eyes dilating till they seemed about to spring from her head.

"My Richard, what is this?"
"Scoundrels," said Mr. Hardcourt,
"release my son."

The man laughed. One of them was examining the neck of Flavia. It contained a diamond in the center worth a reason.

"Where did you get this,
miss?" he asked.
"Her friend answered, for the stricken girl was inarticulate. "Mr. Mowbray's wedding gift."

"Oh! ho! This is the diamond Lord St. Hillary was so mad about. By your leave," and the gem was removed from the neck it enticed.

She comprehended something terrible.
She found her speech—"Whom do you take Mr. Mowbray for?" said she.

"Whom? Why the renowned Captain De Montmorency?" A shriek, so fierce in its agony as to cause the criminal to rebound, burst upon the ears of all present.

As he accidentally met Mr. Hardcourt at a country hunt, had, with others of his companions, been invited by the honored gentleman to rustic fete in honor of Flavia's natal day, a day he was wont to observe, remarkable to him as commemorating his greatest misfortune and intensest happiness, and then there the highwayman vowed to win that pure bud of innocent freshness and rare fragrance, or perish in the attempt.

Mr. Richard Mowbray; unscrupulous De Montmorency, I will relate how you kept your vow.

He haunted Aveling Grange till the elusive young heart, the old father's beloved darling, surrendered itself into the highwayman's keeping. Perhaps Mr.
Hardcourt was not altogether best pleased at his dear Flavia's choice, but she was his life, his hope, and he trusted even when he gave her to a husband that her love and doing would still be his own. Besides, Mowbray was well connected, boasted of his wealth, whereas a moderate portion of it would be hers. He was received into moderate circles, in which the good magistrate never pretended to participate, and what with higher bearing, his handsome person and insinuating tongue, Mr. Hardcourt had irrevocably promised to bestow his treasure into the keeping of the profligate, who numbered himself near enough to have been the father of the girl, whom he testified the utmost impatience to call his wife.

It was during the time that Mr. Mowbray was paying his court to Aveling that the neighborhood began to be alarmed by a series of highway robberies, which men said could not have been perpetrated but by that celebrated knight of the road, Captain de Montmorency. No one could stir after nightfall without an attack, which numbers certainly were not wanting.

"Cudgel me, but I'll have him yet," said old Mr. Hardcourt. "I should glory myself, in going to Tyburn to see the fellow turned. Ah, and I should take my little Flavia to see him go by in a cart with a parson and a nosogay—oh, my little girl?"

"Oh, no, father," said Flavia, "I could not abide; though he is such a daring, wicked man, whose very name makes me actually shrink with fear whenever I hear it—I could never bear to see such a dreadful sight—it would haunt me till the day of my death."

Does the gift of prophecy, involuntary though it may be, lurk within us yet? Sweet Flavia's unsuspecting managed girl's lips then pronounced your own doom as irrevocably as though you had been some stern sibyl delivering inscrutable, unquestioned oracles, not a fair child in a girlish frock and sash, your brown hair curling softly over your shoulders, and your soft eyes shining through your lashes.

The betrothed pair were together to visit London.

"But I shall not dare," said the girl as walking together in the fashionable Dutch garden she leaned her head upon her guilty lover's breast—I shall not dare to take such a journey, for fear of the highwayman, De Montmorency."

"Fear not, my sweet Flavia; this breast shall be pierced through ere Montmorency shall cause one fear of this."

"Richard, sweetest, why do you leave us so early every day? At sunset, I have remarked. These are not London habits. Ah, does any other than poor Flavia attract you? Oh, I must die if it be so. I could not live dear Rich, and know you were false."

An English Lady's Experience.

Our country has some of the best men in the world—and some of the worst. But an English authoress traveling here, pays the following tribute to the uniform courtesy of American gentlemen. Journeying to Boston from Washington, she had her berth made into a bed, and, divesting herself of her outer garments, retired behind the curtain, and slept until daybreak.

"I knew," she proceeds, "that at each end of the sleeping-car there was a toilet room, with marble basins and washing paraphernalia. I put my head out between the opening of the curtain to see if the place was unoccupied, when, to my amazement, what should meet my eye, all the way up and down the narrow corridor, but stockings—no, I mean soaked feet, struggling into boots of the most decidedly masculine 'persuasion.' As I was contemplating the possibility of threading my way through this novel living hedge, I came to the knowledge that I was the only lady in the car, and that, unknown and unprotected, I had been passing the night in the most ignorant and reckless security, with about twenty men! In any other country this discovery would have been horrifying in itself and extremely disagreeable in its results; but, short as my experience of American chivalry had been, it was quite sufficient for me to know that I had absolutely nothing to feel uncomfortable about. Most of the gentlemen did me the honor to ignore my presence completely, thereby making me feel very much assured; those that did not, neither stared nor spoke; but, as the train slackened at the Jersey City station, two of them helped me down the steps of the platform, and one taking my shawls and the other my handbag, said, 'Allow me, madam, to see you to the ferry,' whither they accompanied me and bowed themselves off."

How Often Should Cows be Milked? The following from the Irish Farmers' Gazette, is worthy of consideration: "Regularity in the milking of cows is of as much importance as regularity in feeding them. In a state of nature, the cow is relieved of its milk a great many times each day. A calf allowed to remain with its mother will help itself seven or eight times a day. Under such circumstances the udder of the cow will remain small, and if allowed to retain the milk secreted during twelve hours ferocious symptoms are likely to be produced. The practice of milking cows more than twice in the course of twenty-four hours, causes the capacity of the udder to be greatly increased, and probably helps in maintaining the lactal secretion long after pregnancy has taken place. When, however, by an artificial system the cow has been enabled to retain her milk without inconvenience for twelve hours or so, she ought to be milked regularly every day at the same hour. When the time for milking arrives, the udder usually becomes distended to its utmost capacity, and if it be not speedily removed, the animal suffers considerable pain. Cases of fever, the result of allowing animals to remain too long unmilked, are, indeed, by no means of infrequent occurrence. It is especially necessary to attend to this point for some days after the animal has brought forth its young, for during that period every irritation of the lactal organs is likely to bring on that most fatal of maladies, fever. If milking be too long delayed, nature will try to help the poor animal. The absorption of milk into the blood will to some extent take place, and that which remains in the udder will become deteriorated. When neglect to milk a cow at the regular time is repeated several times the secretion of the fluid is prematurely checked, and there are many cases where by such neglect an animal has become dry in less than a month.

VALLEY OF DEATH.—For a time the upas tree of the Island of Java was the wonder of the age. Its fearfully poisonous character was represented to be positive death to animal and vegetable life within the sphere of its influence. Science has corrected the idea of the existence of that death dealing tree, by ascertaining that poisonous emanations from the ground caused death. That one tree was enabled by its peculiar organic properties to resist the destructive agency of gases that killed everything else.

Another valley of death is described by travelers in Java quite equal to the Upas territory. Death is the certain penalty of entering beyond the line of demarcation between vegetation and the sterile plain where desolation reigns in triumph. Mr. Loudon, an English savan, experimented with dogs and fowls forced over the line, and thus confirms the representation of the natives, who say that skeletons are bleaching there, giving the idea of a Golgotha unparalleled for horror. Animals, accidentally entering in their flight from enemies, and men, ignorant of the mephitic vapors that perpetually come to the surface, fall almost instantly dead by inhaling them. A dog fastened to a pole was forced over the line and died very quickly. In ten seconds the poor creature tumbled over. Fowls carried there, on being thrown over into the barren basin, were completely dead in a minute and a half. It is probable the region is volcanic and that sulphur is the poisonous agent.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth.

This hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous, and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. It wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

READY-MADE CLOTHING.—We would inform the many readers of the HERALD, to the fact, that Mr. A. Blackney has opened a first-class ready-made clothing establishment, at the old stand of Wood Bro's & Co's, east side of Main street. Mr. B. is determined to almost give away clothing, as his prices is so very low for cash. All those visiting town, and intending to purchase goods in his line, can save fifty per cent by paying him a visit. See advertisement on third page.

SIGNS OF DEATH.—In 1870, the Academy of Sciences in Paris offered a prize of 20,000 francs ($4,000) for a simple but positive sign of death which any non-professional person could understand and apply. The British Medical Press and Circular says: "The most practical and satisfactory one given was to tie a string firmly around one of the fingers of the supposed corpse; if the blood circulates in the least, the whole finger, from the string to the tip, will swell and become discolored. This depends upon the fact that, however profound the syncope, or however deathlike the person may appear, if there is any circulation whatever, the person is not dead. The test is simple and conclusive."

HOW WE GO TO SLEEP.—If the phenomena of sleep were not so common, they would be regarded as among the most marvelous of all our experiments. In sound sleep, all voluntary motion is suspended. The muscles relax, beginning with those which move the body, the large muscles of the legs, then the muscles which keep the head erect, then those which support the lower jaw, and, last of all, those which keep the trunk in an upright position. Of the senses, that of sight is the first to surrender. The muscles which draw up the upper eyelids lose their power, and the eyes close, but the retina loses its sensitiveness to the light, even when the lids remain open. The sense of taste disappears next, then the sense of smell, then that of hearing, and last of all, the sense of touch, which disappears only in profound slumber. When a person is to be aroused from slumber, touch is the first sense to respond, then hearing, then smell, then taste as the last, the sluggish of all the senses. Sound sleep, and plenty of it, is indispensable to health. It is the great restorer of the waste which takes place during our waking and our working hours, and is indispensable to long or happy life.

Generosity during life is a very different thing from generosity in the hour of death; one proceeds from genuine liberality and benevolence, the other from pride of fear.

Have you paid your subscription to the Chelsea Herald, neighbor? "Well, no, I haven't; but will endeavor to do so at once. I suppose he needs the money." That's right, pay the printer.

The Methodist Society at Sylvan Centre, Mich., have purchased an Estey Organ of five stops, for their house of worship. It is a beauty, being finished in the style of a parlor organ.

Every heavy burden of sorrow seems like a stone hung round our neck; yet are they often only like the stones used by pearl divers, which enable them to reach their prize and to rise enriched.

There will be quarterly meeting services at the M. E. Church, in this village, next Sabbath. Rev. R. S. Partridge, of Grass Lake, Mich., will officiate as Presiding Elder.

Why is it that the young men of this village, who have not the manliness to accompany the young ladies to church, have the impudence to hover around the church doors, in everybody's way, to beg the honor of "seeing them home?"

Farmers, don't get discouraged. We have known corn and potatoes planted as late as the 10th of June, and still a good crop. The great months for corn and potatoes are July and August. If your ground gets dry enough any time this month, plow and plant, and trust in the Lord.

It isn't what people eat, but what is digested that gives strength and flesh; it isn't what people say, but what they mean, that determines acts; it isn't the color of the sky, but the direction of the wind, that shows what the weather is to be; it isn't what is on a lady's face, but what is in her heart that indicates her nature.

COOP UP YOUR CHICKENS AND PEN UP YOUR COWS.—We are requested by many who have just planted their garden, that it is very annoying to have chickens and cows come into their ground, and destroy what labor they have put on their garden. This friendly notice we hope will give a warning to all those whom it may concern.

Mr. Lovell Loomis, residing near Sylvan Centre, Mich., met with a serious accident, one day last week, while at work on his farm. His team became unmanageable, and threw him violently against some rails, tearing two or three of his ribs from the back-bone. At first his life was despaired of, but now he is slowly recovering.

Adam Forepaugh, the King of showmen, will visit Chelsea soon with his great menageries, museums, and circus. The press unite in pronouncing his establishment the "largest and finest upon earth," and the bare announcement of his coming to Chelsea will get up an unusual excitement. Wait for Forepaugh and his big shows. They are coming here soon.

An editor announces the marriage for a friend thusly: "He has read himself out of the jolly bachelorhood of bachelors, sold his single breasted lounge, packed his baggage and checked it for glory, walked the gang-plank of courtship to the vessel of matrimony, and is now steaming down the stream of bliss by the light of the honey-moon."

FLOWERS.—While passing the residence of Hon. M. J. Noyes, on Monday last, we were perfectly enchanted to look and admire the beautiful flowers, in his garden, all in bloom. We were informed that he has about fifty tulips all in blossom, and any amount of other rich and rare flowers, to be seen and beautiful to the eye. It would well repay the stranger to make a passing visit.

The Signs of Madness in Dogs.

The British Medical Journal calls attention to the measures recommended by the Council of Hygiene of Bordeaux, for the better protection of people against the dangers of hydrophobia. It is well known that the madness of dogs has a period which is premonitory and harmless. If these periods were generally known, the dogs could be put out of the way before they become dangerous. On this subject the Council of Hygiene has issued the following instructions:

"A short time, sometimes two days, after madness has seized a dog, it creates symptoms in the animal which it is indispensable to recognize."

"1. There is agitation and restlessness, and the dog turns himself continually in his kennel. If he be at liberty, he goes and comes, and seems to be seeking something; then he remains motionless, as if waiting; then starts, bites the air, as if he would catch a fly, and dashes himself, howling and barking, against the wall. The voice of his master dissipates the hallucinations; the dogs obeys, but slowly, with hesitation, as if with regret."

"2. He does not try to bite; he is gentle, even affectionate, and he eats and drinks, but gnaws his litter, the ends of curtains, the padding of cushions, the coverlets of the beds, carpets, etc."

"3. By the movement of the paws about the sides of his open mouth, one might think he was trying to free his throat of a bone."

"4. His voice undergoes such a change that it is impossible not to be struck by it."

"5. The dog begins to fight with other dogs; this is a decidedly characteristic sign, if the dog be generally peaceful."

"The three symptoms last mentioned indicate an advanced period of the disease, and that the dog may become dangerous at any moment, if immediate measures are not taken. It is best to chain him up at once, or, better still, to kill him."

Meteoritic Stones.

The fallen meteoric is invariably coated with an incrustation, sometimes shining as an enamel, generally black, but occasionally colorless where the aerolite is free from ferrous silicates; and this incrustation is said to have been formed in the atmosphere, since it is found coating surfaces of fragments that have been covered by the explosions in the air. Aerolites frequently fall simulta-

THE SIGNS OF MADNESS IN DOGS.

The British Medical Journal calls attention to the measures recommended by the Council of Hygiene of Bordeaux, for the better protection of people against the dangers of hydrophobia. It is well known that the madness of dogs has a period which is premonitory and harmless. If these periods were generally known, the dogs could be put out of the way before they become dangerous. On this subject the Council of Hygiene has issued the following instructions:

"A short time, sometimes two days, after madness has seized a dog, it creates symptoms in the animal which it is indispensable to recognize."

"1. There is agitation and restlessness, and the dog turns himself continually in Manifest Absurdities.

Is there any good reason why the dictates of common sense should be disregarded in medical practice? Surely not. Yet how literally they are sometimes set at naught in the treatment of dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation, nervous prostration and general debility. How often are powerful purgatives, emetics and salivants given in cases of indigestion, bilious colic and constipation, when the disease has already robbed the patient of strength he needs to combat the attack. The absurdity of giving debilitating medicines to sick people who are too weak already, is so manifest, that it is astonishing how any sane man can believe in such practice. The rational course under such circumstances is to administer a tonic and regulating medicine, and the experience of a quarter of a century has proved that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the most wholesome and efficient preparation of this class to be found in the medical repository. It is, however, somewhat more than an invigorant and a regulator. It is a powerful and reliable medicine, and its salutary and purifying effect upon the blood, its utility when given as an anodyne, instead of laudanum, or chloral, or digitalis, or some other simply narcotic, its tranquillizing tendency in cases of nervous prostration, its efficacy in counteracting the sickening pills and potions of the pharmacist, certainly entitle Hostetter's Bitters to be called the most comprehensive remedy in existence.
