CHELSEA HERALD.

CHELSEA, JUNE 12, 1879.

"God Knows."

Oh, wild and dark was the winter night, When the emigrant ship went down, But just outside of the harbor bar;
In the sight of the startled town;
The winds howled and the sea roared,
And never a soul could sleep, Save the little ones on their mothers' breast, Too young to watch and weep.

No boat could live in the angry surf, No rope could reach the land;
There were bold, brave hearts upon the shore,
There was many a ready hand; [shore, Women who prayed, and men who strove When prayers and work were in vain—For the sun rose over the awful void And the silence of the main!

All day the watchers paced the sand—All day they scanned the deep;
All night the booming minute gun Echoed from steep to steep.
"Give up the dead, O cruel sea!"
They cried at dawn the space;
But only a baby's fragile form Escaped from its stern embrace.

Only one little child, of all Who with the ship went down That night, when the happy babies slept So warm in the sheltered town!
Wrapped in the glow of the morning light, It lay on the shifting sand, As fair as a sculptor's marble dream,
With a shell in its dimpled hand.

There were none to tell of its race or kin,
"God knows!" the pastor said, When the sobbing children crowded to ask The name of the baby dead.
And so when they laid it away at last,
In the church-yard's hushed repose, They raised a stone at the baby's head With the carved words, "God knows!"

Old Summer Probabilities.

Starlight and silence. Comparative silence. No sound disturbed the quiet of the long thoroughfare of Jefferson street save the conversation of people as they tramped back and forth, the ringing of the engine bells, and the ceaseless shriek of steam whistles, the rumbling of the street cars, and the rattling of wagons on the uneven street, and the howls of boys, and the tireless clack clack of an auctioneer or two, and an Italian band on the corner, and a man playing the trombone up in a third-story room, and a boy beating a drum in the backyard, and a baby in the next house, uncertain whether to go to sleep or stay awake and have the colic, and a man falling down a flight of stairs, and somebody making an open-air temperance speech on the corner.

All else was silence. Silence how deep—Quarter less twain.
And darkness how profound.
Adown the street they walked;
Walked in the busy crowd, and yet alone, for each to the other was all, or all to the other was each.

At any rate they liked each other. Kind of.
"Leander," she said, and there was a tremulous intonation in the tender voice, "the summer, the long bright summer days and the stary summer nights, filled with the voiceless glory of their love-life beauty, will soon be here."

"Hilo," he made her answer, "they are here now. Did you read in the Hawk-Eye last Sunday morning, love, of the five young people who died so recently, and in such a heart-rending manner; poisoned by vanilla flavoring, love. M. Schweersingham, publisher, who has investigated the subject very thoroughly, says the natives of South America poison the vanilla beans for the purpose of increasing the strength and delicacy of their peculiar flavoring. It is terrible, love. I tremble when I think how many times and how narrowly we escaped death last summer."

Hero shuddered and clung more closely to his arm, but she said nothing, and Leander went on: "And Prof. Doremus says the flavoring extract of the lemon is almost identical with the active principle of yellow fever, and he thinks the Government ought to prohibit its manufacture and use. But I will stand between you and danger, my own, with my very life."

"It is too good of you, Leander," she said, cheerfully, "I am not worthy of such devotion. But do not grieve for me, dear, for they have a new flavoring for ice cream this year—I saw it advertised yesterday—that is not only harmless, but healthful, and far more pleasant than these old and dangerous flavorings. Do not weep, dear," she continued, as Leander caught his breath and shuddered, "for we can have all the ice cream we want this summer, and still be happy."

And Leander? Oh yes, he did not say anything, but he looked as though he thought they might be happy. Oh, yes, very, very happy. Most everlastingly happy, he seemed to think. "Too happy, oh, too, too happy. He could not speak. He could only gasp, and feel his pockets and sigh and kind of choke up and gaze down toward the river and look, oh, so mightily blameworthy. Oh, yes.—Burlington Hawk-Eye.

A Terrible Tragedy.

GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF A MEXICAN BULL-FIGHT—FIVE PERSONS GORED TO DEATH.

It was a splendid animal, well-knit, strong and powerful. It seemed to comprehend the situation at once, for with a loud tone it bellowed forth its defiance to its antagonist, and then, with head lowered to the ground, commenced pawing the earth and giving demonstrations of speedily commencing the combat. The attendants waved their red flags before it, and irritated it still more by prodding it with their sharp-pointed lances. Our hero closely watched its every movement with keen and intense interest, evidently aware that it might make a sudden rush at any moment. With a roar that appeared to shake the very earth, and that certainly threw terror into every heart in that audience, it sprang forward, lowering its head with the design of tossing the Mexican into the air; but the attempt was a failure, for he sprung quickly to one side, and, goading with his staff the now-incensed animal into a state of fury as it passed him, nerved himself for the more serious part of the conflict. I admired his fearlessness, and saw that he was a man of daring courage that would never falter in any emergency.

Two or three times the bull renewed the attack with no better result, and every time he escaped the lunge of the animal, the audience shouted and cheered loudly, appearing to have overcome the presentiment of evil, and having full confidence in his ability to win the victory whenever he chose to do so. It would hardly be credited that the countenance of a bull could vary in its expression, but it certainly appeared as if intense rage and demoralized hate stood out upon every hair on its face, and the more it was baffled in its attempts to gore its intended victim, the deeper and wilder became that expression of vicious propensity. One of the attendants gave the bull a more severe thrust than he intended to do, when it turned so suddenly upon him that, before he could evade the attack, the animal had him upon its horns, and, tipping the body open with the exertion, tossed him high in the air, while his blood spouted out upon his face. The man fell with a heavy thud upon the soil, and in an instant the bull was goring him again. In vain the others tried to divert its attention from the man, or endeavor to rescue their fallen companion from his terrible fate. In less time than it requires to narrate the episode the poor fellow was a lifeless corpse.

It was a soul-sickening sight. Some of the women fainted at once, while the others screamed in terror and horror at the scene. All this commotion, combined with the scent of fresh blood, wrought the bull into a state of frenzy, and it swept around and across the inclosure with such violence and rapidity that the men could with difficulty escape from its rushing attacks. The cry was given to open the gate and let the bull pass out into the stall in which it had been kept, but the gate-keeper had become too terrified to understand the order or to perform his duty, and the gate remained closed. The nerve of my guide never failed for an instant, but, seeing the terror of the others, and witnessing the fury of the animal, he drew his long knife and calmly awaited the next rush to make the fatal thrust that should terminate the existence of the bull and the scene of excitement. Once more the bull swooped down toward him, and he stood ready to strike the knife into its neck, but, as he attempted to spring back and let the bull pass by him before doing so, his foot slipped, and he was at once impaled upon the horns of the beast, and in a moment his lifeless body fell within a few feet of his dead comrade.

The excitement of the crowd now reached the most intense point; it amounted to actual agony. For a moment they were spell-bound by terror, and gave utterance to piercing shrieks and cries. Then several shots were fired at the bull, none of which took serious effect, but only appeared to increase its madness and its ire. Suddenly the bull, now blinded with rage and maddened by the wounds it had received, dashed against the thorny barrier of the pitahaya, and, breaking through it, rushed among the terrified multitude upon the outside of the inclosure. The crowd scattered in all directions, and the bull tossed or trampled upon all who were in its way as it rushed toward the open plain. There were three others killed outright, and several seriously wounded. Heart-sick with the horrible scene, I blended with the people that were seeking their homes. When drawing near a group that surrounded one of those killed upon the outside, above the wailings of the crowd there rose upon the air the shrill, agonized cry of a heart-broken woman, and, as the group moved away, I saw lying upon the ground one of the animal's victims, while its mother was kneeling over it. It was the first-born of a fond father I had before noticed, the bull having tossed the neighbor who had it in his arms and killed them both at the same time. I would not for the possession of the entire Mexican republic witness another such bull-fight.

LOVE IN A PRISON.—The following is the latest prison romance, and the scene is the Berkshire (Mass.) county jail. Nellie Grant, a girl of dubious antecedents, was imprisoned as a witness in a murder case. She was quite pretty, and possessing a fine soprano voice was a good singer. She was excessively fond of revival tunes, and pursued the jailer to purchase her a Moody and Sankey hymnal. From this Nellie would sing for hours augmenting her own comfort and that of the other prisoners. Among these was a mischievous Milesian chap who had been indulging in some waywardness that sent him to the county "reception room" for a period of 60 days. Dennis O'Brien was his name, and Killaney's romantic vales his native soil. Dennis was young, not altogether bad to the core, and a pretty fair "broth of a boy." He was placed in the cell immediately contiguous to Nellie's. Dennis was also a pretty fair vocalist, with a tendency to the basso in tone. Nellie's singing charmed him, and he declared he would become an honest and respectable citizen. A stovepipe ran through the cells. Besides this a small aperture. Through this opening Dennis and Nellie passed letters. A few days since Dennis was released, and now he and Nellie have been married in the good old-fashioned way, and settled down to the delights of matrimonial felicity.

OUR TELEPHONE.

IMPROVEMENTS are the order of the day in Chelsea.

Soon Chelsea will have two as good hotels as there is in the State.

Wood Bro's & Co. have put up a nice side-walk in front of their store.

The Pioneer Society will meet in Ann Arbor the first Wednesday in September.

This next term of the circuit court will convene at Ann Arbor, on next Tuesday, the 17th inst.

The citizens of Chelsea vie with each other to see who can keep the cleanest and nicest front yards.

PROF. MEKES, the elocutionist, entertained the inhabitants of Chelsea at Red Ribbon Hall last Monday evening.

GEORGE V. CLARK wishes to inform the citizens of Chelsea that he will deliver talks to any part of the city for 4c a quart.

Last Tuesday morning we were visited with a hail, rain, thunder and lightning storm—it was short, but terrific while it lasted.

T. McKONE has commenced work on his new hotel building. He says he is going to rush things through now until it is finished.

During the severe rain storm one night last week, the lightning struck Mrs.
Johnson's house, on Railroad street, but not much damage was done.

The donation party given to Rev. Thos.
Holmes, of the Congregational Church, last Thursday evening, passed off pleasantly. Net receipts forty dollars.

On next Wednesday, the 18th inst., the fifth annual reunion of the Pioneer Society of the State of Michigan, will take place at Jackson, on the fair grounds.

TO MOTHERS:—Should the baby be suffering with any of the disorders of baby-hood use Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup at once for the trouble. Price 25 cents.

It is quite common to hear traveling men, who stop in Chelsea on business, say "This is the liveliest town in the State, according to its size and population."
They ought to know.

Last Saturday evening the Chelsea Cornet Band discoursed sweet music on the public square. They are improving fast, and are destined to take a leading place among the bands of the State.

Mrs. COLE may be found over Reed & Co's drug store—prepared to do dressmaking and plain sewing—and would respectfully invite the ladies of Chelsea and vicinity to give her a call. 3918

It is about time that the public well was quit being made a nuisance. A great many of our business houses depend on it for their drinking water. We hope the Marshall will see to it that the tank and trough are kept clean, and arrest all offenders.

CLOSING OUT.—Miss Libbie Foster desires of closing out her stock of millinery goods, wishes to inform the ladies of Chelsea and vicinity that she has a nice line of bats, caps and laces, also a nice line of lacy trimmed and untrimmed which she will dispose of at cost. Call and judge for yourselves.

One day last week, Madison Miller, a painter whose home is in this village, while painting a barn at Plainfield, by some cause the scaffolding on which he stood gave way and precipitated him to the ground, a distance of 18 feet, injuring his spine. He was brought to his home and is now slowly recovering.

The entertainment of Miss Du Ruisseau on Tuesday evening at Red Ribbon Hall, was attended by a large and appreciative audience. She manifested the highest powers and versatility as an elocutionist.
Her voice is finely modulated, and her face and action is in unity with the sentiment and theme that employ her powers.

The following are the jurors for the next term of court, which commences at rior; Wm. B. Arnold, Sylvan; Edwin

CHILDREN'S DAY

was celebrated at the M. E. Church last Sunday with great display and taste. The church was beautifully decorated with evergreens, singing birds, and with rich and fragrant flowers; in fact it had the appearance of an enchanted fairy abode. The choir produced angelic music, and the young folks were quite delighted.

Sheep stealing is the general gossip of the town at present. It seems almost every farmer in the county have had sheep stolen from time to time, and it is rumored that there is a gang of sheep thieves around. Four young men in the neighborhood of this village are supposed to be implicated, and three of them have been arrested, the other having gone to Paris unknown. They had an examination on last Tuesday before Justice Noyes, but was postponed until to-morrow (Friday). We will give full particulars next week.

MUSIC.—Any one wishing vocal or instrumental music, will do well by calling at the photograph gallery. I intend to keep constantly on hand a large stock of the latest music published in the United States. I am also agent for different musical papers, the Score, Folio, &c., &c. Instruction books for any instrument. Call before purchasing elsewhere and I will try and satisfy you. E. E. SHAVER.

BEAUTIFUL PICTURES FOR ALL.—The Great Art Publishing House of George Stinson & Co., of Portland, Maine, moves steadily on the even tenor of its way, apparently not feeling the dull times. During the year 1875 they sold over Four Million pictures of all descriptions. They publish every description of fine pictures, and the prices range from ten cents upwards to twenty dollars per copy. Their correspondence for this large business is immense; they receive, on an average, over one thousand letters per day. Messrs.
Stinson & Co. publish only the better class of pictures, and it is well known that anything coming from this reliable house is of standard merit. We have just received copies of four very fine steel engravings, which they have just brought out. The plates were engraved in London, at an expense of four thousand pounds sterling, or twenty thousand dollars, to which great sum must be added the customers duty of twenty-five per cent on account of their being imported into the United States. These engravings are after paintings by great modern masters of art, and the artists who engraved the plates stand in the front rank of the world's renowned engravers.

It is believed, and generally conceded, that these engravings make up the finest and most elegant set of works of high art ever brought out by American publishers.

This enterprising firm, though many years in the Art Publishing business, have not grown old and unprogressive, but on the other hand make improvement and progress year by year, giving the people better and better pictures for the same or less money. They may, we feel sure, fairly claim to stand at the head of the Art Publishing business in America. We can only understand the colossal proportions their trade has assumed by remembering that this is a great and mighty nation of nearly fifty million people. We cannot better illustrate the magnitude of their business than to state the amount of money paid by them for postage stamps during the years 1876, 1877, and 1878. We have the figures direct from the firm, or we should think there was some error. In 1876; they paid for postage $83,104.92. In 1877, they paid for postage $87,268.70. In 1878, the amount of money that they paid for postage stamps was simply enormous—a little over $50,000. Stinson & Co. stand among the largest and most judicious advertisers in the country, and a short time since paid in a single day $24,000 in cash on a contract for advertising. They employ agents everywhere throughout the United States and Dominion of Canada for the sale of their pictures by subscription; we call attention to their advertisement for agents in another column. Those who need pleasant, profitable work should correspond with them.

Besides paying the large amounts of postage stated above, their express and freight bills are enormous—only small orders are sent by mail, the larger being sent by express and freight. American homes should be made beautiful by refined works of art, and prices for really meritorious pictures are now so low that there can be no excuse for the wall to remain gloomy, unadorned and cheerless. American homes should be made beautiful, and the tendency of this will be to make more refined and beautiful the lives of all dwellers therein.
