Legal Printing.—Persons having legal advertising to do, should remember that it is not necessary that it should be published at the county seat—any paper published in the county will answer. In all matters transpiring in this vicinity, the interest of the advertisers will be better served, by having the notices published in their home paper, than to take them to a paper that is not as generally read in their vicinity, besides it is the duty of every one to support home institutions as much as possible.

CHELSEA HERALD.

CHELSEA, SEPT. 4, 1879.

Capital, Cash and Credit.

No business can be carried on without capital. A laborer works with his hands; when he procures a tool or an implement he at once makes use of capital, which is literally the accumulated labor of himself or others, or rather the product or result of it. In business, one has fixed and floating capital. The fixed capital is that which remains year after year permanently invested; it may be in the shape of a house, a ship, or a railroad. Floating capital is that which is always changing its form; it may now be a pair of horses, a mowing machine, cows, sheep, seed, fertilizers, money spent for wages, or merchantable goods of any kind. This kind of capital is more productive than any other, because it can be turned over oftener, sometimes several times in a year, and if well used may bring a profit every time it is returned.

Debt is in any respect something to be avoided. If a farmer has 100 bushels of wheat in the granary, or a cow or two that he can spare, he had better turn these into cash and buy what he wants than to buy on credit. "Easy come, easy go" is a true old adage, and a thing bought on credit begins a habit of buying on credit, until the purchaser is tied up and struggles like Laocoon in the folds of the gigantic python. The old fable is even more apt; for the victim of the deadly serpent was enfolded along with his sons; and the family of the involved debtor shares his fate with him.

The use of labor-saving machinery is imperative. We cannot make our farms pay without them. But, as has been shown heretofore, in buying these, or anything else, on credit, we buy them very dearly. The extra price paid in this way, as we have hinted, is by no means the greater burden upon the farmer. He pays again and again for the mistake of going into debt. He lays a burden upon his mind which paralyzes his energy. The free man holds up his head and encounters his daily labor with elastic energy. His step is firm; his heart is light, and he is full of vigor and hope.

But the slave never feels as a free man; he drudges, not works; hope, and he is strangers to each other, and he is careless of results. The involved debtor is a slave and is bound as a chain. He looks ahead, not in hope, but in dread. He fears disaster before it comes upon him. A threatening outlook for his crops is a miserable nightmare to him, which "murders sleep" and haunts his waking hours. The free man may whistle down his care, and if short crops threaten he is thankful that he has enough and to spare, and looks hopefully for another year. The wife and children, sharing the husband's fortune in the one case, suffer every day; but in the other case may sing and laugh while the skies lower and the rains fall in the midst of harvest.

This is one way in which the farmer in debt pays an extra price, and it is without doubt a bad way. In another way he pays. He gives a note due in a year, trusting to favorable crops for the means of paying it. If there is any way by which a period of time passes more quickly than another it is to have a note coming due. Before one thinks the day is at hand. If not prepared for it, it is renewed; perhaps it is in the hands of a grasping broker who exacts usurious interest as "a shave." By-and-by the original amount is doubled. This happens too frequently. Perhaps in time it is paid through much pinching and saving, but at what a sacrifice of money and happiness! This is another way in which the farmer in debt pays an extra price for his purchase. We need not lengthen out the homily. Many of our readers know too well how it is themselves. The cost of it all is as the physical reaction after an active stimulant, and leaves the victim poor and depressed in far greater proportion than he had been elevated by the enjoyment of possession and use.

Our Girls and Temperance.

The relations of our girls to the temperance question has been forcing itself so strongly on my thoughts of late, that I have concluded to talk about it.

It seems to me that if our girls only appreciated the power they possess over the young men of their acquaintance, they would use it to better advantage.

Just suppose now, that the girls were as particular about the morals of their beaux, as the young men are about the morals of their "girls." Wouldn't the consequence be that drunkenness, swearing and other vices would be as uncommon in one sex as the other? I firmly believe it would.

The remark was once made to me, "Why! a man couldn't marry a woman of unsound morals; it would ruin his happiness for life." "Sure enough!" I replied, "but wouldn't a woman's life happiness be ruined just as surely if she married a man of unsound morals?" "Oh, well!" he said, laughing, "there isn't so much expected of a man." There is more truth in the remark than I like to admit.

I know girls and women whose lives and hearts are pure and who study to have them so, and yet, they associate with and marry men whose reputations are blackened by many social vices, even drunkenness sometimes. Now my notion is, that a girl would, if she were wise, make the most possible of herself, and expect as much as she gives, of her associates—particularly of the man she marries. If girls would do this, if they would require as much of young men as the young men require of them, they would do more to stop intemperance than all the reform clubs in the country, and the clubs do a great deal. It may be said that a girl cannot tell whether a man's morals are good or not. I think they can, very largely. But suppose they cannot, their brothers can, or their father, and they are safe confidants. I have seen so much misery from neglect of girls about the morals of the young men with whom they associate, that I wish I had words to put the case more strongly. I cannot imagine a worse condition for a lady of good character, than to be the wife of a man who drinks, and is addicted to the other vices which usually beset drunkards. Let us notice their fate. They receive abuse where they have a right to expect protection; children are born to a life of toil and shame; want and misery prevail, where plenty and comfort ought to abound, discord and strife ("for what fellowship has light with darkness?") where the white-winged angel of peace and love ought ever to rest; and every thing growing worse and worse, with no reasonable hope of a change for the better.

Do the girls say, "A good many of us would be obliged to go alone and remain single if we would not accept the company of any but good principled men!" Well, wouldn't rather? Difference in wealth and education are nothing compared with difference in principles. I know many are wheeled into matrimony by promises of reformation; but it is safer to let the reforming be done first, for where one succeeds, ninety-nine fail. I verily believe in reclaiming a man who has formed habits of drinking, using tobacco, etc., before marriage.

I would like to know the opinion of some one else on this subject, especially of some of the young people.

ROYAL COURTSHIP.—A Paris paper, apropos of their silver wedding, gives an interesting account of the first meeting between the Emperor of Austria and his wife. Some twenty-five years ago the young Emperor Francis Joseph visited Carlsbad for no special reason, but simply to amuse himself. There he met his three beautiful Bavarian cousins—the Princess de Thurn et Taxis, the Princess Elizabeth and the Princess Marie Sophie. Very lovely in the evening, in the animation of the waltz, the Princess Elizabeth was even more fascinating, in her black cloth habit and riding-hat with its green veil, as she galloped on her English horse with the elegance and daring of a huntress of ancient times. It is related that one day her magnificent hair, which it was difficult to keep confined, fell down over her shoulders, and covered her like a royal mantle. Her confusion was indescribable, while the Emperor glanced from the escaped tresses to the blushing cheeks of his cousin. She hastened home. After luncheon she found on the table an immense album. Francis Joseph placed it before her, and pointed out some views of Austria, of the Tyrol, and of Hungary. "What beautiful scenery! What a lovely country!" she exclaimed repeatedly, in her admiration. The Emperor whispered: "Would you like to make them your own? Are you willing to reign there?" As she trembled and did not reply he held out to her a bunch of edelweiss—the flower of betrothal. She took it, and put it next her heart. A few weeks later she was Empress of Austria.

Boiled Monkey for Dinner.

SOME OF THE DELICACIES OF THE BRAZILIAN CUISINE.

A member of the Philadelphia company which is now engaged in railroad building on the Amazon river has returned, and relates some incidents of life in that region. He says that, when not engaged at railroad labor, the principal business of the population is hunting up the delicacies of the season in the way of food. The company furnish the solids, such as flour and salt beef, but fruit being a luxury which demands higher prices than are charged in Philadelphia, the epicures have been compelled to venture on the live stock that the forest provides. Tiring of bread and beef as a steady diet, one of the laborers, urged on by a stomach strongly appealing for a change, made a bold break one day from the regular bill of fare and announced that he was going to have boiled monkey as the choice dish of his menu just once anyhow. An accurate shot brought a plump young "monkey" tumbling to the ground, and sent a score or two more chattering and squealing into the depth of the forest. Quickly skinned and cleaned, the dispute arose as to how long the game should be cooked, which question was finally settled by an agreement to put the monkey into the pot and let him boil away until it was decided by test that he was done. The first test was made after an hour's steady boiling. The cook picked the animal out with a long, two-pronged fork, and after more than one attempt sliced off a piece from the upper part of the leg. Chopping it into pieces, he handed one to the nearest diner. Placing it between his teeth, he chewed and chewed and chewed in vain, and then brought it forth from his mouth, and, holding it for a moment in his hand, cast it on the ground with the single remark: "Gum boots." The monkey returned to the boiler at once, where he remained for another sixty minutes, and the second tasting brought him out tender and juicy—that is, tender and juicy for a monkey—and, by dint of active mastication and a lively imagination, he passed as a delicate side-dish. Several more attempts and a little more practice and experience in monkey cuisine developed the fact that, with the meat chopped fine and stewed with a flour thickening, a palatable Brazilian-Irish stew could be manufactured out of the ingredients at hand. Flushed with this first success in the experimental culinary line, parrots were next tried, and, after repeated attempts at roasting, boiling and stewing, were found to be edible, although somewhat strong in flavor. With monkey, parrot, the company's provender and plenty of large fish, which are caught by spearing or shooting barbed arrows with ood attached, the settlers are enabled to exist in comparative comfort, working and eating being about the only amusements they have.

The Wise and the Foolish Man.

The foolish man payeth for his newspaper. The wise man standeth on the street corner and obtaineth his information for nothing.

The foolish man wasteth his health by lying abed mornings until the sun has arisen high. The wise man getteth up at the crowing of the cock. He walketh the street, getteth an appetite for breakfast, and cometh home minus his watch.

The foolish man entereth his hotel, and leaveth his hat in the ante-room. He eateth his dinner. When he would depart he discovereth that some unprincipled reptile has decamped with his new hat, and has left in its stead a weather-beaten 20 cent tile. The wise man, to avoid a contretemps, taketh his hat into the dining room, and sitteth upon it.

The foolish bachelor on a cold afternoon cometh home, and there being no fire in the room he shivereth with the cold. The wise man closeth the windows to keep out the draft; he lighteth two lamps; the room warmeth up, and the land-lady footeth the oil bill.

The foolish man loseth his money in wool, and straightway he telleth his friends of his impetuosity. The wise man loseth his money, but holdeth his tongue about it, and thenceforth he eateth at a grocery and picketh his teeth at the Sherwood House.

The foolish man catcheth a counterfeit half-dollar, and he mourneth long over his loss. The wise man goeth to church, and when the near-sighted deacon passeth the contribution box, he droppeth in the half and chuckleth to himself.

The foolish man telleth his wife he will go into the country, and doth as he hath said. The wise man telleth his wife ditto, and then hideth himself, and when the midnight bath come he letteth himself in and goeth up stairs in his stocking feet, but he had no pleasure for his pains.

The foolish man waketh up in the middle of the night, and walketh the floor with a crying baby. The wise man before he goeth to bed wrap-peth his wife in the wooldshed.

The foolish young man maketh habitation at a high-toned establishment, and for his board he payeth $20 a week. The wise young man marieth the landlord's daughter. The foolish man taketh his wife to a church sociable, and spendeth $5 for ice-cream and cake. The wise man alloweth his wife to serve on the refreshment committee, and when the evening cometh he goeth to that church sociable with a market basket. If his wife has improved her opportunities, he cometh away ahead of game.

The fifth instar of cremation at Gotha has just taken place, accompanied by full religious rites. The Protestant clergy signified their approval of these ceremonies, and on other occasions have participated in them.

"Bub, did you ever stop to think," said a grocer, recently, as he measured out half a peck of potatoes, "that these potatoes contain sugar, water and starch?" "No, I didn't," replied the boy, "but I heard mother say that you putpates and beans in your coffee, and about a pint of water in every quart o' milk you sold." The subject of natural philosophy was dropped right there.

Almost all men are over-anxious. No sooner do they enter the world, than they lose their taste for natural and simple pleasures so remarkable in early life. Every hour do they ask themselves what progress they have made in the pursuit of wealth or honor; and in they go as their fathers went before them, till, weary and sick at heart, they look back with a sigh of regret to the golden times of their childhood.

OUR TELEPHONE.

Owing to the late drought, we have had swamp fires all around us. We have not heard of any serious damage here.

We call attention to our readers of the fact that Chelsea is going to have a new hardware store. Look out for bargains.

D. PRATT, the watchmaker and jeweler, has just received another shipment of those luminous watches. Call and see them.

Our Union School commenced its fall term on Monday last, with a full force of teachers; and also, a larger number of scholars than usual.

Mrs. J. H. DURAND and daughter took a departure, last week, for their old home in the East, to spend a few weeks, for the benefit of their health.

FRANK E. SNOW, the genial passenger agent of the Canada Southern Railroad, at Detroit, has been ordered to Buffalo, where his future headquarters will be.

Our Marshal had quite a lively run after a prisoner on Tuesday last. He was captured and brought before Justice Noyes.

The offence was light, and the fine $7.50.

The man who stood near the "Bee Hive," the other day, with the red nose, left town in a hurry. He is supposed to have gone to Dexter for a drink, to drown his woe because sorrow.

The healthy growth of the baby is dependent upon its freedom from the pernicious effects of opium. Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup is the best remedy known for the diseases of early childhood.

We had a young tornado in this locality last Monday afternoon, doing considerable damage to fruit trees, etc. After the hurricane a heavy rain set in, and gave us plenty of water. It was much needed.

"Poor old Joe," he has been a grass widower for about a week, and is boarding around the district; he has our sympathy. We advise all the "old maids," in this village, to call on him, and try to cheer him up in his loneliness.

The Grangers gave a harvest picnic at North Lake, last Saturday. There was a large gathering present, and some excellent speeches delivered by able men. Our band was present and rendered fine music. A good time was enjoyed by all.

FRANK DIAMOND, the "Star barber," has moved his family into the same building where he does business. Mr. D. is now ready to do business during work hours, and on Saturday until 12 o'clock P. M. Friends and patrons make a note of the above.

"A stitch in time saves nine." Now is the time to treat Catarrh of long standing. Ely's Cream Balm reaches old and obstinate cases, where all other remedies fail. Do not neglect procuring a bottle, as in it lies the relief you seek. Sold by all druggists, at 50 cents.

J. M. BUNCHARD, of this village, informs us to mention, through our columns, that while he was in business last winter there was a good many individuals who borrowed quart oyster pails from him, which he wishes them to return; and also, the lady who borrowed the delf pitcher. The parties are all known. Please leave them at Smith's grocery store.

HOLMES & PARKER, of this village, received last week the largest shipment of goods that has ever been brought into Chelsea, of ready-made clothing for fall and winter wear; also, fine, middling, and coarse boots. The above firm is going to make it lively, by way of greatly reduced prices in goods. Call early and judge for yourselves. See large double column advertisement on third page.

An insane tramp, calling himself a pupil of Bob Ingersoll, got upon a dry goods box, on Main street, in this village, last Sunday, and gave a biblical lecture. He tried hard to expound the bible in his own way, and advised everybody to burn them. We think our Marshal ought to have had him arrested, and brought before Justice Noyes. Then the Justice ought to have made out papers, and sent him to the Pontiac Insane Asylum.

Notice of Dissolution.

NOTICE is hereby given that the partnership heretofore existing in the Village of Chelsea, County of Washtenaw and State of Michigan, between Curran White and Edward L. Negus, under the firm name of White & Negus, was dissolved by mutual consent on the twelfth day of August, 1879.

All persons indebted to said firm are requested to call at their office and settle immediately.

The business formerly carried on by said firm will be continued by Edward L. Negus.

Dated August 18th, 1879.
CURRAN WHITE,
EDWARD L. NEGUS.

Europe must look to America for the next year to come for much of her grain, beef, pork and mutton; besides other products which we here have an over-supply. She proposes to pay for those supplies in American securities, or at least in great part, and it is to be hoped that she will do so. There has never been so favorable a time since our bonds were put upon European markets for them to be returned as the present, and who cares if by sending them back in payment of our grain they do flood the market a trifle, and that they should depreciate a little—in the end it will be money in Uncle Sam's pocket. But we shall receive much of England's gold for what we have to sell, we shall also be paying our foreign debts, while we shall hold our own securities at home, and the money for which the securities are sold will not a cent of it go out of this country, but will be expended here for grain and provisions. Things are running pretty smoothly on this side, and there is nothing to fear unless it be the politicians in 1880, and by that time the new era of good times will have gained such momentum as not to be stopped for this or that party scheme, but will continue right along to a greater state of prosperity than this country has ever witnessed. The fruitful earth has given us the means to pay off our foreign debt and left us a surplus, consequently let us rejoice that we are able to do so, and that this is the time to do it.

THE FEVER.—The yellow fever still continues unabated at Memphis, Tenn. Although the death rate may not be as large in proportion to the number of cases stricken down as it was last year. The weather so far has been unfavorable, and there is but little prospect of change for the better for some weeks to come. Most of the fresh cases of the last few days are from newly infected districts. The suburb of Chelsea is suffering a great deal of fever, while there is little sickness of any kind in the central portion of the city. The convalescent squad is daily receiving accessions, and those recovering from the first attack are just beginning to appear in their old circles. The Howards have filled thirty-nine orders for nurses since last week, of which seventeen are for new cases not yet reported to the Board of Health. The Governor of Tennessee issued a proclamation urging the people of the State to contribute aid to suffering Memphis.

THE WRESTLER.—On Wednesday evening of last week the Detroit Opera House was packed full, to witness the wrestling match between Colonel J. H. McLaughlin, of Detroit, and Andre Christol, of France. A word about the Colonel would be out of place, as all know of him from his public record for the past half dozen years. But the little Frenchman is comparatively a stranger. To say that he is one of the best made men that ever appeared in the capacity of a wrestler is not saying too much. His cunning, grit, and muscle, will pay one for going to see him, and although he is no match for McLaughlin, as in truth there are none, yet he is plucky in the extreme. He won the Gracco-Roman fall, but lost the collar and elbow and catch as catch can falls, which gave the match its opponent.

"My son wouldn't steal peaches from Mr. ———'s orchard, I hope!" "No, ma, I wasn't in that crowd the other night." "That's right, my boy. Keep out of bad company, and you'll never do wrong. Let your conscience be your guide in all things," and the fond mother patted her son approvingly on the head, and went about her duties with a light heart. Left to himself, the noble boy thus soliloquized: "You don't catch me foolin' around old ———." "My conscience can guide me to lots of better orchards than his, where there ain't no dog, nuther."

MEDICAL.

THE facts fully justify every claim put forth in behalf of THOMAS' ELY'S OIL. Testimony of the most convincing nature, to which publicity has been frequently and widely given, and which can easily be verified, places beyond all reasonable doubt the fact that it fully deserves the confidence which the people place in it as an inward and outward remedy for coughs, colds, catarrh, sore throat, incipient bronchitis, and other disorders of the respiratory organs, as a means of removing pain, swelling and contraction of the muscles and joints, rheumatism, neuralgia, kidney disorders, excoriation and inflammation of the nipples and breasts, lumbago of the back, dysentery, colic, piles, burns, scalds, bruises, corns, and a variety of other diseases and hurts, and of abnormal conditions of the cuticle. It is inexpensive and safe as well as prompt and thorough. It is inexpensive and safe as well as prompt and thorough. CATARRH!

ELY'S CREAM BALM
A Decided Cure.

A Local Remedy.

HARMLESS, EFFECTUAL, SIMPLE.
Application easy and agreeable.

The effect is truly magical, giving instant relief, and as a curative, in advance of anything now before the public.

The disagreeable operation of forcing a quart of liquid through the nose, and the use of snuffs that only excite and give temporary relief, are already being discarded and condemned.

CREAM BALM has the property of reducing local irritation. Sores in the nasal passage are healed up in a few days. Headache, the effect of Catarrh is dissipated in an almost magical manner. Expectoration is made easy. Sense of taste and smell is more or less restored. Bad taste in the mouth and unpleasant breath, where it results from Catarrh, is overcome. The nasal passages, which have been closed up for years, are made free.

Great and beneficial results are realized in a few applications of the Balm, but a thorough use of it, in every instance, will be attended with most happy results, and generally a decided cure.

Fifty cents will buy a bottle, and if satisfaction is not given, on application the proprietors will cheerfully refund the money. Trial size, 10c. Ask your druggist for it. ELY BROS., Oswego, N. Y., Proprietors.
For sale here by W. R. REED & Co.
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Dec. 2, 1878.

Messrs. ELY BROTHERS—I cheerfully add my testimony to the value of your Cream Balm as a specific in the case of my sister, who has been seriously debilitated with Catarrh for eight years, having tried ineffectually, Sanford's Remedy, and several specialty doctors in Boston. She improved at once under the use of your discovery, and has regained her health and hearing, which had been considered irremediable.

THE FARM.

Currant Culture.

The currant will grow in any soil where corn grows. The fruit is best, however, in a rich, sandy loam, kept well pulverized and free from weeds. No fruit responds more gratefully to generous treatment. Not only are the berries large and more abundant when grown in a congenial soil and well cultivated, but the juice is richer and better flavored, while the seeds diminish in number and size. It is one of the peculiarities of fruit-growing that high cultivation increases the pulp and lessens the seeds. Wood-ashes make the best fertilizer for the currant. Prof. Eimmon's analysis of the currant shows it to be rich in soda, the phosphates, and potash, and these are not supplied by wood ashes. If ashes are not to be had, mulch the bushes with leaf, or horse manure from the forest. We are certain that currants are good for cultivation, just as surely as strawberries or pears and apples. Some recommend that the currant should be grown tree shape, that is with a single stem from the roots, with branches a foot or more from the ground. Such is not our experience. The natural growth is bush, and we get more fruit when the sap is permitted to ascend through the many stems. It is a constant fight with suckers when we undertake to grow currant-trees instead of bushes, and though it is possible to conquer the suckers, it is a victory measured more severely but not collectively.

The propagation of the currant is so simple and easy that no farmer need go to a nurseryman for his stock, if he only has a neighbor who is a currant grower. The best mode of propagation is by slips or cuttings. The slips, a foot long, may be cut in the Fall and planted immediately where they are desired to grow permanently, or thickly in some good dry soil, where they may be left till Spring. In either case one or two buds should be left just at the surface of the ground, and as soon as severe cold weather comes on the cuttings should be covered with coarse straw, manure, or a mulch of leaves, to be removed early in the Spring. The permanent planting should be attended to as soon as the ground can be stirred, as the currant pushes its buds early. It is just about as well to make and set the cuttings in the Spring, if only the work is done in season. If any one has a few bushes of his own, he can multiply them, indefinitely by transplanting suckers. We trust farmers will give currant-culture its due share of attention, as we are confident they will find comfort and cash from their labor.—N. Y. Times.
