THE BRIGHT SIDE.

There's many a rest in the road of life, If we only would stop to take it, And many a tone from the better land, If the querulous heart would wake it! To the sunny soul that is full of hope And whose beautiful trust ne'er faileth, The grass is green and the flowers are bright, Though the wintry storm prevaileth!

A MAN'S A MAN FOR A' THAT.

BY BOBERT BURNS.

It is said that Burns was once invited to a sump-tuons entertainment at the house of a lord, and when the ladies and gentiemen had feated, the poet was allowed to sit with the servants. After supper he was called upon by the host to enter-tain the company with some impromptu verses, when he gave the following.]

Is there for honest poverty Whe hange his head, and a' that? The coward slave, we pass him by. And dare be poor for a' that, For a' that and a' that, Our toils obsoure an' a' that, The rank is but the guines's stamp, The man's the gowd for a' that.

What though on hamely fare we dine, Wear holden gray, and a' that? Gie fools their silk, and knaves their wine, & man's s man for a' that, Yor a' that and a' that; Their tinsel show and a' that; In honest man though ne'er ase poor, Is chief o' men for a' that.

Ye see yon birkie, on'd a lord, Wha struts and stars, and a' that, The' handreds worship at his word, He's but a cuif for a' that, For a' that, and a' that His riband, star, and a' that, A man of independent mind, Can look and laugh at a' that.

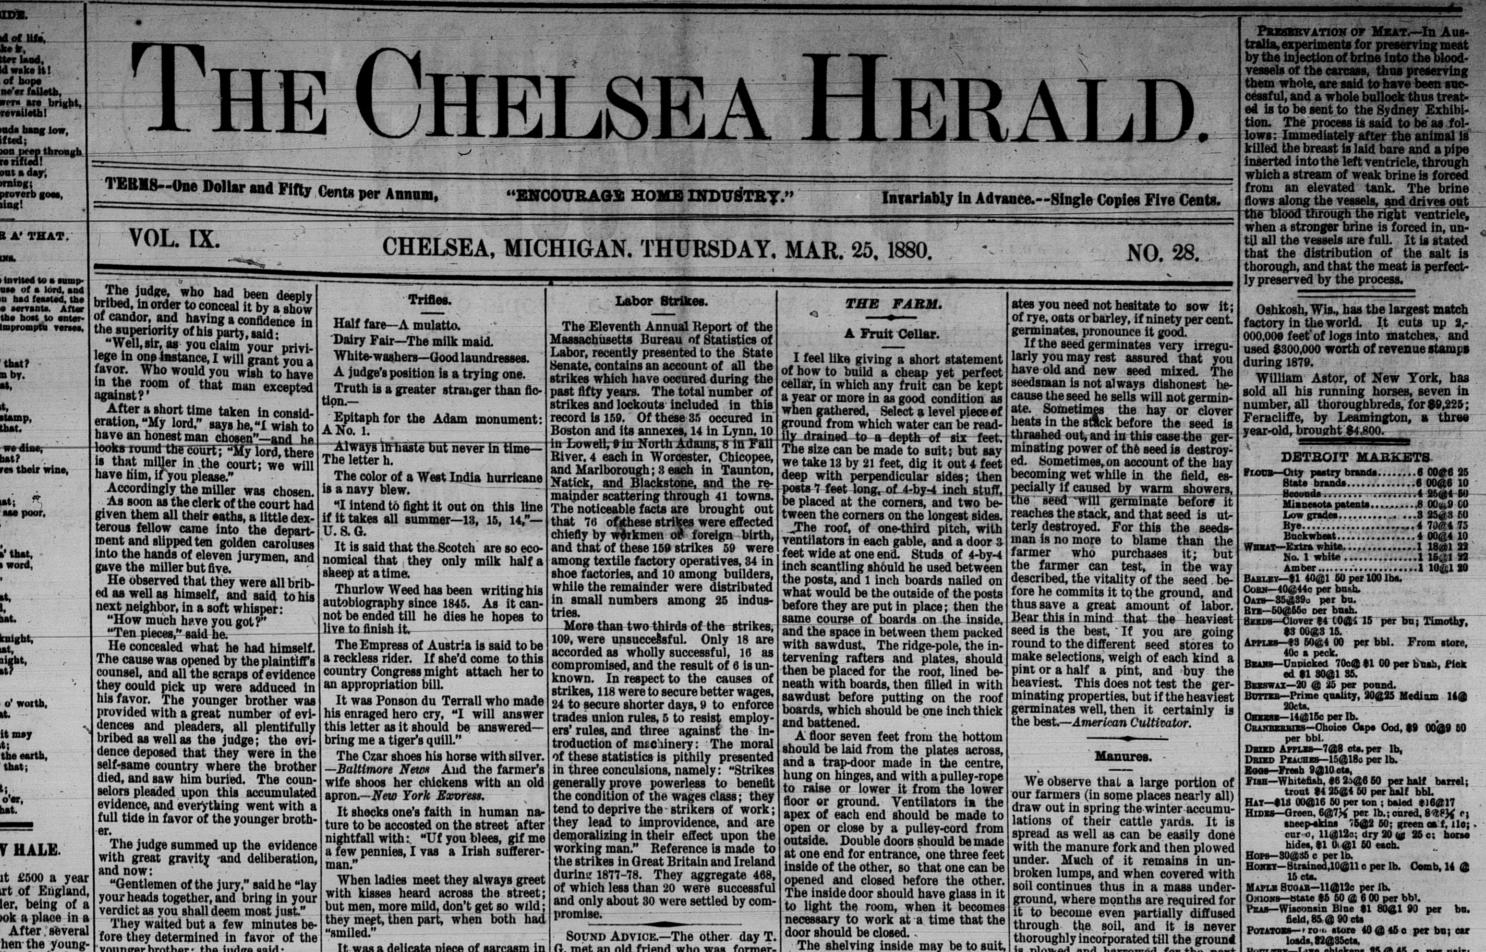

The king can make a belted knight, A marquis, duke, and a' that, An honest man's aboon his might, Guid fath, he canna fa' that? For a' that, and a' that, His dignities and a' that, The pith o' sense and pride o' worth, Are grander far than a' that.

Then let us pray that come it may As come it shall, for a' that; That sense an' worth o'er a' the earth, Shall bear the gree, and a' that; For a' that, and a' that, It's coming yet, for a' that; That man to man the world o'er, Shall brothers be, for a' that.

PRESERVATION OF MEAT.—In Aus-tralia, experiments for preserving meat by the injection of brine into the blood-vessels of the carcass, thus preserving them whole, are said to have been suc-cessful, and a whole bullock thus treat-ed is to be sent to the Sydney Exhibi-tion. The process is said to be as fol-lows: Immediately after the animal is killed the breast is laid bare and a pipe inserted into the left ventricle, through which a stream of weak brine is forced from an elevated tank. The brine flows along the vessels, and drives out the blood through the right ventricle, when a stronger brine is forced in, un-til all the vessels are full. It is stated that the distribution of the salt is thorough, and that the meat is perfect-ly preserved by the process. PRESERVATION OF MEAT .--- In Ausly preserved by the process.

At last he hit upon this happy thought—that he would consult the first of all the judge, Lord Chief Justice Hale. Accordingly, he flew to London, and laid open the cause and all its circumstances. The judge, who was the greatest lover of justice of any man in the world, heard the case patiently and attentively, and promised him all the assistance in his power. (It is very probable that he opened his whole scheme and method of proceeding enbining the utmost secrecy.) The judge contrived matters in such

CIRCULATION OF THE BLOOD .- Dr. C. Huter, a German sayant of Greifs-wald, has devised a simple arrange-ment which demonstrates the circulation of the blood in the human body by making it visible. Dr. Huter's methods is as follows: The patient's head being fixed in a frame, on which head being fixed in a frame, on which is a contrivance for supporting a mic-roscope and a lamp, his lower hp is drawn out and fixed on the stage of the microscope by means of clips, the inner surface being uppermost, and having a strong light thrown upon it by a con-denser. When these preparations are completed all the observer has to do is to bring the microscope to bear on is to bring the microscope to bear on the surface of the lip, using a lower power objective, and focusing a small superficial vessel. At once he sees the endless procession of the blood corpus-cles through the minute capillaries, the colorless ones appearing like white specks dotting the red stream. Dr. Huter asserts that by taking careful note of variations in the bloodflow and of variations in the bloodhow and changes in the corpuscles he has de-rived great advantage in the treatment of medical cases. This is the first in-stance of the flow of the vital fluid in one person being watched by another.

A Venerable Homestead.

The Boston correspondent of the the Hartford Courant gives an interesting account of what is said to be the oldest house in New England. It is the oldest house in New England. It is in Dedham, a town about ten miles from the centre of Boston. This house was built in 1639. It has under-gone some changes since, but much of gone some changes since, but much of the original structure is there, easily distinguishable and in a good state of preservation. The house is beautifully situated under heavily branching elms. and with the moss on its roof and the encroachment of the ground upon its walls, the effect is in a marked degree picturesque The most curious fact of all is, that it is furnished with not a little of the original furniture of over two hundred and forty years ago. It has been in the possession of a sin-gle family by the name of Fairbauks during the whole of that time. This family, in all its generations, has had a passion for "keeping things," as the country people express it. Among other articles there preserve ed, is the original inventory of the furniture of the Fairbanks who built this house. By means of this the articles which he carried into it are identified. There are his chest, his case of drawers, his lamp (after the Pompeiian pattern,) and scores of other relics. Conspicuous among them all is suspended the old King's arm which he kept for protection from the Indians. Every generation that succeeded him has also transmitted something. The place is a museum, with successive strata of curiosities from the Puritan period down to the present. The generation which has just died out of the house the house of the house of the house which has just died out of the house the house to the surrender off. A Confederate Hero.

Richard Kirkland was the son of ohn Kirkland, an estimable citizen of Kershaw County, a plain, substantial farmer of the olden time. In 1861 he farmer of the olden time. In 1861 he entered, as a private, Captain J. D. Kennedy's company Second South Car. olina Volunteers, in which company he was a sergeant in December, 1862. The day after the sanguinary battle of Fredericksburg, Kershaw's brigade oc-cupied the road at the foot of Marye's hill and the grounds about Marye's house, the scene of their desperate de-fence the day before. One hundred and fifty yards in front of the road, the stone facing of which constituted the famous stone wall, lay Syke's division stone facing of which constituted the famous stone wall, lay Syke's division of regulars, United States Army, be-tween whom and sur troops a mur-derous skirmish occupied the whole day, fatal to many who heedlessly exposed themselves, even for a moment. The ground between the lines was bridged with the wounded, dead and dying Federals, victims of the many desperately gallant assaults of that column of thirty thousand brave men hurled vainly against that impregnable position.

All that day those wounded men rent the air with their groans and ago-nizing cries of "Water! water!" In the afternoon, the general sat in the north room up-stairs of Mrs. Steven's house in front of the road surveying the field, when Kirkland came up. With an expression of indignant remonstrance pervading his person, he said, "General! I can't stand this." "What is the matter, sergeant ?" asked the general. He replied, "All night and all day I have heard these poor people crying for water, and I can stand it no longer. I come to ask permission to go and give them water.

The general regarded him for a mo-ment with feelings of profound admira-tion, and said, "Kirkland, don't you know that you would get a bullet through your head the moment you stepped over the wall?" "Yes, sir," he said, "I know that; but if you will let me, I am willing to try it."

After a pause, the general said, "Kirkland, I ought not to allow you to run such a risk, but the sentiment which actuates you is so noble that I will not refuse your request, trusting that God may protect you. You may go."

The sergeant's eyes lighted up with pleasure. He said, "Thank you, sir!" and ran rapidly down stairs. The general heard him pause for a moment, and then return, bounding two steps at a time. He thought the sergeant's heart had failed him. He was mistaken. The sergeant stopped at the door and said. "General, can I show a white handkerchief?" The general slowly shook his head, saying, emphat-ically. "No, Kirkland, you can't do that." "All right, sir," he said, "I'h take the chances!" and ran down with Bome weeks ago President Hayes sent for President Angell of Michigan University to come to Washington, and there were several interviews at the White House and state de-partment, which resulted in a tender to Pres-ident Angell of the Ohinese mission. This was declined, as President Angell preferred to re-tain his connection with the University. He was then asked if he would accept a com-mission as envoy extraordinary to the emperor of Ohins, and go to that country to negotiate an emigration treaty, which would not necessitate his resigning the presidency of the University, as it would not require more then a year or fifteen months, and it was thought that Pres-ident Angell might obtain leave of absence for that time.
