Labor.

Work is a necessary accompaniment of enjoyment. A life of ease, without care or responsibility, is not one in which men find the highest enjoyment. God has so constituted man that if he would enjoy the good things of this world he must be a toiler. While the middle aged man sees the intimate relation between labor and enjoyment, the young regard the two as opposites; two enemies that cannot be reconciled; labor to be avoided, and present ease and enjoyment sought.

Labor is not desirable for its own sake, but for its results. Labor is always irksome, and it is put forth only for the sake of the object to be attained. When the desire for the object is strong enough to overcome a man's love of ease, he will put forth the labor necessary to obtain the object, and that labor is ever an exponent of his estimation of that object. As it is with the man, so is it with the child, only with this important difference, that the child cannot appreciate the benefit he will secure by putting forth the effort necessary to prepare himself to do well and easily the work of the future, while with the man a full appreciation of the benefits to be secured is the great motive that determines him to action.

To the ordinary boy, more desirous of present ease and enjoyment, than of future usefulness and future enjoyment, the labors of the school-room are irksome, and there comes a period in his life (I speak now from experience, and to the experience of many men), when he attends school simply because parental control is sufficiently strong to keep him there, during which time lessons are learned because the authority of the teacher is such as to compel him to do so; but in many cases we find that parental control is wanting, and these boys leave the school and are found for a great part of the time upon the streets. They prefer to do odd jobs for a small compensation, thus enabling them to ape the gentleman in the habits of smoking, chewing, etc.

The question now to be raised is, who is responsible for the course taken by such boys? Some one says, "It is the fault of the school," and upon that ground favor a change in teachers. "The school should be in charge of a man who will get hold of these boys, bring them into school and then get them interested in their work." A very plausible argument, and one that will take with those who have failed in every effort to control their children, and to induce them to improve their time and prepare themselves for future usefulness. But what shall we say respecting this unjust charge? We might speak of the success that would be likely to attend the efforts of the ordinary teacher in attempting to do what the parents have failed to do; we might speak of the fact that these boys seldom reach the High School, and so do not come under the personal influence of the principal; we might ask that the reader call up his experience and observation, and consider whether it be not true that just in proportion as a school is a working school, just in that proportion this class will leave the school and its studies to those who will work.

But we leave these points with the mere statement of them, and ask that they be considered. We come back to the question, and we answer it by placing it upon the parents and upon them alone.

To be convinced of this, look through any community, learn what you can about the family government of the various homes, follow the children of these homes to the school room, remembering the character of the home government, and you will be convinced that we are right in the answer given to this question.

N. A. R.

Hasty Words.

SHARP, cutting words they were, twined out with a spiteful jerk, in a bitter tone; and Harry Somers arose from the breakfast table with the air of an offended lord. He did not notice the imploring, half-timid glance cast up at him; he did not see the tearful eye, or the quivering lip, for he only seized his hat, rushed out, shutting the door behind him with a furious slam. The morning grew very dark about her, his patient, self-sacrificing wife, as she sat there alone—the morning that might have been so bright; and all the day long the shadow of that cloud hung heavily about her, and the sound of those cruel words rang in her ears, filling the hours with bitterness.

They were hasty words, the offspring of a moment's impulse, for the man who uttered them was not really unkind at heart. He loved his wife with an ardent devotion, and would have periled life itself, if need be, for her comfort. But, alas! like many another, he had suffered the breath of a discontented and fault-finding spirit to taint his soul till his thoughts and inclinations had grown selfish, and even the tones of his voice were harsh and unfeeling. Out in the crowded streets he was drifted, from the home-scene where he had left the blight of his withering breath, far from the recollections of those bitter words that were written in fiery lines that scorched through and through, drying up the fountains of joy. Poor Ellen Somers.

Oh, earth is filled with the echoes of just such cruel words. There is many a life darkened by their shadows, many a heart grown sad and sore because of their heavy, grinding weight.

Men utter them carelessly to their wives and sisters. Alas! that human lips can thoughtlessly frame words like these—utter them carelessly, scattering the poisonous seeds, and leaving it to spring up and bring forth its deadly fruitage. And then, when the home air becomes tainted and the house-lights darkened, they wonder at the desolation—wonder and complain, perhaps.

Mothers speak sharp, impatient words to their children, and marvel if, by-and-by, their dispositions become soured, and their characters distorted. Friends utter them to friends, and then in a little while they stand aghast over the ruins of their hopes and loves. Yes, men let them fall upon the ears of their fellow-men—let them fall quick, and sharp, and piercing—and then are astonished that the world often turns its cold shoulders upon them, that their presence is not always prized.

If we sow tares, shall we expect to reap nothing but wheat? Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? No wonder that the pages of our life-books are all blotched and stained. But is it not strange that we are so slow to learn in this great school of humanity—that we keep rushing on and on, with our eyes closed to the lessons that are written out all above us? Is it not strange that we are too blind to see the unloveliness and sin of these hasty words?

The ruin and desolation which they bring lie scattered all along the wayside of our life paths. Sweet joys withered by their hot breath, bright hopes blown far away, precious loves dried in their fountain, fond hearts torn and writhing—such is only a part of the price we are paying for the thoughtlessness, for the deadly blows we are dealing with those rash, unfeeling words.

One by one, the words we utter fall upon the air, making little waves strike our ears, and then are gone; but there are those who tell us that they only swell out in widening circles, like the rippling waters when a pebble strikes their surface, swell on and on, but are never lost. Who, then, may know whether, some time in the great hereafter, our faculties, quickened and sharpened by immortality, shall not stand face to face with the utterance of our earth-lives? Com.

Wit.—There is no more interesting spectacle than to see the effects of wit upon the different characters of men; than to observe it expanding caution, relaxing dignity, unfreezing coldness—teaching age and care and pain to smile—extorting reluctant gleams of pain from melancholy, and charming even the pangs of grief. It is pleasant to observe how it penetrates through the coldness and awkwardness of society, gradually bringing men nearer together, and, like the combined force of oil and wine, giving each man a glad heart and a shining countenance. Genuine and innocent wit is surely the flavor of the mind! Man could direct his ways by plain reason, and support his ways by tasteless food; but God has given wit, and brightness, and perfumes to enliven the days of man's pilgrimage, and to "charm his pained steps over the burning marie."

This and That.

During the election for the representation of East Aberdeenshire, one of the ministers in a rural parish, canvassing one day among his parishioners, came across one of them who was a staunch Liberal, and at once commenced sounding him on the subject. "I suppose they'll be all sound up this way, John?" "I don't say they are." "Of course, John, you'll be going to vote for our side?" "That's my business." The minister, rather taken back by this sharp answer, said: "Oh, I'm asking no questions!" "I'm answering none," was the dry rejoinder.

"Sally Jones, have you done that sum yet?" "No, thir, I can't do it!" "Can't do it! I'm ashamed of you. Why, at your age I could do any sum that was set me. I hate that word 'can't,' for there is no sum that can't be done, I tell you." "I think, thir, I know a thum you can't thiffer out." "Ha? Well, let's hear it, and we will see." "It ith thith, thir: If one apple canthief the ruin of the whole human rathle, how many thum will it take to make a barrel of thweet thider?" "Miss Sally Jones, you may turn to your parsing lesson."

An Irish bricklayer was one day brought to the Edinburgh infirmary, severely injured by a fall from a house-top. The medical man in attendance asked the sufferer at what time the accident had occurred. "Two o'clock, yer honor," was the reply. On being asked how he came to fix the hour so accurately, he answered: "Because I saw the people at dinner through a window as I was coming down."

Two friends, just married, were, a few days ago, discussing rapturously, as they congratulated each other, the merits and charms of their spouses. Said one: "My wife has got the loveliest head of hair I ever saw, even on the hair renovator labels. When she lets her hair down, the ends fall to the floor." "That's nothing," replied the other. "When my life lets down her hair, it all falls to the floor."

"It is a very unclerical practice, and I must say a very unclerical one. Tobacco! Why, sir, even a hog would not smoke it!" "Doctor C—," replied his amused listener. "do you smoke tobacco?" "I! No, sir," he answered, gruffly, with much indignation. "Then, pray, which is most like the hog, you or I?"

A very young miss, who resides on Fourth street, thus addressed her paternal ancestor at the breakfast table on Sunday morning: "Poppy, I want a new hat and a pair of new shoes." "I s'pose so. What don't you want?" remarked the paternal. "Well," answered the quick-witted little miss, "I don't want any trousers."

A reverend sportsman was once boasting of his infallible skill in finding a hare. "I were a hare," said a Quaker, who was present, "I would take my seat in a place where I should be sure of not being disturbed by thee from the first of January to the last day of December." "Why, where would you go?" "In to thy study!"

A gentleman, whose house was repairing, went one day to see how the work was getting on, and observing a number of nails lying about, said to the carpenter employed on the work: "Why don't you take care of these nails? they'll certainly be lost." "No," replied the carpenter, "you'll find them in the bill."

An old colored preacher in Georgia was lecturing a youth of his fold about the sin of dancing, when the latter protested that the Bible plainly said: "There is a time to dance." "Yes, dar am a time to dance," said the dark divine, "and it's when a boy gits a whipping for gwine to a ball."

A lady became so much dissatisfied with her lover that she dismissed him. In revenge he threatened to publish her letters to him. "Very well," replied the lady; "I have no reason to be ashamed of any part of my letters except the address."

"Oh, Liberty! what crimes are committed in thy name!" wailed a man, as he sat himself down in the wood-shed, where his wife had locked him up, and he heard her slam the front door as she went out to do her marketing.

"Don't you think, husband, that you are apt to believe everything you hear?" "No, madame, not when you talk."

Uncle Tom: Carrie, can you read notes? Carrie: Yes, indeed, when Charley writes them. (Uncle Tom means musical notes.)

OCCASIONALLY people will put a ten cent stamp, or a stamp of a larger denomination than is required on a letter, and, after dropping it in the office, will inform the clerk that they will take the balance in other stamps. It Does Pay.

BY ALICE M. DRAPER.

Yes; it does pay. What? To have good trusty servants, to have good farmers, mechanics, lawyers, legislators; in short whatever we have it pays to have the best. Where is there a mind so imbecile as not to recognize the evil in sending a man of prejudice, ignorance and intemperance to our legislative halls?

Where is the man or woman who is not ready to cry out against imposters in the pulpit? Whatever may be their own lives, they feel and know that the best men and women only should go before the people as teachers of that religion which, if universally practiced, would give us a second paradise. Having failed to put the best workers in the legislature and in the pulpit, it is not strange that the schools of our land have received more injustice, more neglect from you than all the rest combined. Comparatively few of the masses on American soil will have accepted this of any importance whatever. And you still stand aloof and refuse to give your schools the supervision and money they need. You seem not to recognize the fact, that by-and-by these boys and girls, with half-trained intellect and dwarfed souls will, in turn, take their places at the head of our national affairs. What can you hope from them? What indeed but disaster and ruin? The many prate of the cost of our schools, the enormous wages paid to our teachers. How few say anything about the cost of tobacco and alcoholic beverages. Touch these, and you have laid the hands of violence upon the gods of the people. But parents, whatever God you may worship, it is your duty to provide the best teachers possible for your children. Remember, it pays to educate, to submit the plastic mind of youth to the best teachers. That word best means a great deal. It means teachers who have an unimpeachable character. Teachers whose example is safe to follow. Men and women free from vulgarity and profanity. Teachers free from the curse of tobacco and alcohol. And when you add to this requisite educational ability, you have what every school should have. You have teachers that merit more than the mere pittance usually bestowed.

Parents, believe me, I know whereof I speak, and I beg permission to tell you again that it does pay to put just such men and women in our schools as I have described. For the sake of your children and the perpetuity of our national glory, I beseech you, permit such and only such to become teachers of youth.

Manhood: How Lost! How Restored!!

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of Spermatorrhea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence, or sexual extravagance, &c.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

SALERATUS AND
BI-CARB. SODA
Which is the same thing.
Impure Saleratus or Bi-Carb Soda (which is the same thing) is a slightly dirty white color. It may appear white, examined by itself, but a comparison with Church & Co's "ARM AND HAMMER" BRAND will show the difference.
See that your Saleratus and Baking Soda is white and PURE, as should be ALL SIMILAR SUBSTITUTES used for food.
A simple but severe test of the comparative value of different brands of Soda or Saleratus is to dissolve a dessert spoonful of each kind with about a pint of water (not preferred) in clear glass stirring nautilla thoroughly dissolved the deleterious insoluble matter in the inferior soda will be shown after settling some twenty minutes or sooner, by the milky appearance of the water and the quantity of floating lumpy matter according to quality.
Be sure and ask for Church & Co's Soda and Saleratus and see that their name is on the package and you will get the purest and whitest. These with our milk, in preference to Baking Powder, save twenty times the cost.

On Sunday evening D. B. Taylor, C. H. Kempf, R. B. Gates, C. S. Laird, and about fifteen others, went to Lima Center to hold a meeting for the Reform Club recently formed there. Mr. Taylor presided over the meeting, and several speeches were made by the members of the Chelsea club.

The Chelsea Reform Club choir, under the direction of Mr. McAllister, furnished excellent music. The meeting was a very pleasant and successful one.

While the above party was returning home they had a hard time. The night was very dark, and it was almost impossible for a horse and buggy to get along, on account of the darkness. One buggy, containing three persons, completely up set, another got into the ditch, and several ran into fences. There was none of the party very much hurt—only scratched a little.

JOHN R. CLARK—Probably but few lecturers have visited Chelsea to the more perfect satisfaction of the people who heard them, than John R. Clark, who delivered three lectures in the Congregational Church, last week, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. The first two were temperance lectures, of a high order, and the third was his famous lecture, "To and fro in London," which was one of the most instructive, and at the same time amusing and entertaining lecture that the people of Chelsea have been privileged to listen to for a long time.

Mr. Clark in this lecture is master of the position, having spent all his early life as a London boy. Judging from his manner of speaking, we should say Mr. Clark was a little on the order of a shouting Methodist, with safety valve pretty heavily weighted; however so their stock is little liability to explosion. The audiences the first two nights were small, but on the third the house was comfortably filled.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.—Just at present Cincinnati is a very attractive place to all the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The Twenty-third General Conference of that church was opened in that city on the first day of the present month. It will be composed of ministerial and lay delegates, chosen from 96 annual conferences which represent 1,696,837 members. It is one of the largest ecclesiastical bodies ever assembled on this continent. Some of the interesting features of the session will be the election and ordination of several bishops; also the election of book agents for the publishing houses of the church, missionary secretaries and thirteen editors for the various papers of the church.

The evening of May 6th began a series of evening meetings for the reception of fraternal delegates from all the leading denominations in this and other countries.

On May 6th, during the day, there was a meeting of the representatives of all Methodists, appointed with reference to the proposed Methodist Ecumenical. On the same day the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, of the M. E. Church, held their eleventh annual meeting.

An extensive excursion runs from the great Northwest, via Chicago, to the seat of the General Conference, under the management of J. R. Berry, Vinton, Iowa. Persons from Chelsea, taking advantage of his rates, could go to Cincinnati and return, by way of Chicago, for about $16.

Another excursion goes from Detroit under the supervision of Rev. D. B. Tracy, of Detroit. Fare from Detroit and return, $10.50. During this present month there will be a grand excursion from Cincinnati to Washington via the Mammoth Cave, in Kentucky.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.—Don't be discouraged if in the outset of life things do not seem to go on smoothly. It seldom happens that the hopes we cherish of the future are realized. The path of life in the prospect appears smooth and level enough, but when we begin to travel it we find it all up hill and generally rough enough.

The journey is a laborious one, and whether poor or wealthy, high or low, we shall find it so to our disappointment, if we have built on any other calculation. To endure what is to be endured with as much cheerfulness as possible, and to elbow our way as easily as we can through the great crowd, hoping for little, yet striving for much, is, perhaps, the true plan.

Don't be discouraged, though occasionally you slip down by the way and your neighbors tread over you a little; accidents will happen, miscalculations will sometimes be made, things will turn out differently from our expectations, and we may be sufferers.

It is worth while to remember that prospects are like the skies in April, though clear, soon over-clouded. As it would be folly to despair of again seeing the sun because to-day is stormy, so it is unwise to sink into despondency when fortune frowns, since, in the common course of things, she may be sure to expect to shine again.

Don't be discouraged under any circumstances. Go steadily forward; rather consult your own conscience than the opinions of men, though the least are not to be disregarded.
