A Chapter for the Unmarried.

BY DR. HAMMOND.

MAXIMS as to the age, temper, and other qualities of the parties who are to be made wives and husbands, are, perhaps, sufficiently plenty. Nothing, we apprehend, that is strictly new can be said on these points. We are more anxious, on the present occasion, to call attention to certain natural laws which greatly affect the happiness of the married state, not only of the immediate parties, but of their posterity, and often tell, again, by reflection from posterity, back upon the immediate parties.

One of these laws bears reference to the consanguinity of the parties forming an alliance. All experience shows that an unsoundness of constitution is the unavoidable inheritance of those who derive their existence from parents nearly allied in blood. How or why this should be is of no importance at present, though we may be very sure that, as with all the other laws of nature, a beneficial end is served by it. Certain it is, that the children of parents related in blood are in many more instances conspicuously unsound in body and mind, than those of parents who stand in no known relationship to each other. Often they are well enough to pass amidst the crowd of mankind; and such instances are apt to be adduced in defense of a marriage of the kind in question.

But these are exceptions from a rule; or perhaps we should rather say that these are only instances in which the unsoundness chances to be of small amount, or not sufficient to be observable in a community where so many are from other causes unsound. That there is a greater likelihood of conspicuously unsound children from such marriages than from others, which appears to be established beyond contradiction, is enough for our argument. Such marriages ought to be avoided, because, in any, a danger is incurred, without any of those good reasons or ends which alone can sanction the incurring of any heavy risk.

It is very unfortunate that cousins, from the attachment of relationship, and a frequency of their intercourse, and other circumstances, should be so apt to entertain for each other the tender feelings which give the wish for a matrimonial union. But these are only reasons why the greater pains should be taken to warn all such persons against the dangers in question. Friends, instead of making it, as they often do, a matter of policy to bring cousins together, should exert all their eloquence to depict to them the terrible griefs which attend a progeny irremediably weak and liable to perish before their time. It would even be proper to make this a point in the education of all young persons; for what is of more importance than that persons entering into life should be biassed from a step which is likely to make that life a scene of continual misery?

Delicacy, it may be said, dictates silence on the subject; but surely it must be a false delicacy which can impose such a restraint—a restraint as to words, while conduct is left free to the most disastrous errors.

Nor would we only call upon the young of both sexes to repress the feelings which are apt to lead them into alliances with their kindred, but we would have pointed out to them the important fact that there is a corresponding virtue in the remoteness of origin of those whom they may select for their partners. If not natives of the same town or parish, it is well; if not of the same county, we would say it is still better. If other circumstances made it possible or prudent for persons of different countries to marry, we should say that that were best of all.

We see the force of this advice when we contemplate the little isolated communities which nestle in the recesses of mountainous countries—such as the Swiss Alps and the Highlands of Scotland—where idiots are always abundant; as also in the vigorous national character which invariably arises where races have been much mixed—for example, in our own land. The crossing of breeds of animals, and the importance in agriculture of sowing grain which has been raised from a different soil, are illustrative facts which need only be hinted at. On this point there seems to be one law throughout the whole of organic nature.

The soundness of constitution of those who are to become parents, is another matter of the highest importance. That a taint of constitution, in the mental as well as in all the other faculties, is likely to be inherited by offspring, is apparently as well established as the law we have above alluded to. Certain diseases, as epilepsy, consumption, and fatuity, are noted for reappearing in children; but, it is probable that many kinds of unsoundness, which do not take any very recognizable form, are also transmitted from parent to child. Evil and grief are thus perpetuated from one generation to another. The first party, not satisfied with his own life of suffering, seeks to have it re-presented by other human beings in the next and future ages. He both feels the pains of his own maladies, and, if he survives so long, he experiences the still more exquisite distress of contemplating those of a set of creatures whom nature endears to his bosom, and for whose ease he would willingly sacrifice his own.

A deterioration to that extent of the body of the future people of his country, is another point of view in which the evil may be regarded. Now, by what means might such evils be prevented? Obviously by the abstinence from marriage of those who are affected by incurable disease. It may be thought too much to expect from mankind that any individual of either sex should exercise so much self-restraint for such a reason; and we readily own that with many little it is to be expected. Yet we have hopes from a few—and whatever may be the result, we may certainly assert the principle.

We are not, then, for advocating the maxim that the sound should keep apart from the unsound. We do not like the selfishness of that form of the maxim. What we would say is this—that every human being who is sensible of possessing a hereditary taint, of whatever kind, is bound in conscience to abstain from sending it into a new generation. No human being has a right to make others miserable; neither has any human being a right to call into existence beings who are sure from that very fact to be miserable. Men are every day of their lives preaching the propriety of avoiding giving each other pain. Shall they do so—shall they be shocked when they see one inflict so much as a harsh word on another, and yet be reckless though they occasion to perhaps more than one a whole life of misery? Assuredly, as the conscientiousness of our race becomes clearer, and of greater force, it must see this in the right light, and set it down as one of the greatest of all offenses to become a medium for the perpetuation of such great afflictions.

It is interesting to observe how exactly the interest of immediate parties; those of the other nearly concerned parties, and those of the world at large, harmonize in all these matters. By marrying one remote in blood, the health and strength of the next generation is most likely to be secured; the parents are thereby rendered happy; the community is advantaged by the addition of sound instead of unsound members. By the contrary course, all the benefits are reversed in evils. Again, when an unsound person abstains from marrying, the misfortunes of his state are confined to their original amount—he acquires no satellites to reflect back the light of his own pains in tenfold intensity upon himself—the race is spared the evil of new vitiation. By the contrary course, all these benefits are in like manner reversed into evils.

LAKESIDE STOCK FARM AND SYRACUSE NURSERIES, 199 West Genesee st.

Syracuse, N. Y., March 27, 1880.

J. W. BARKER, Sec'y, Syracuse, N. Y.

Dear Sir: We take pleasure in stating that we have used the Onondaga salt more or less for the past 25 years, and found it generally beneficial in nursery and on farm, especially so for Standard and Dwarf Pear, Plum, Quince Trees, Grass, Wheat and Oats; also, as a covering to compost heaps, as it assists in decomposition and in killing obnoxious vegetation.

Yours truly, SMITH & POWELL.

Analyses of this salt have been made to determine its value as manure. It is so rusty that no one would dream of using it on their table, and if it were used to salt beef or fish, the results would be disastrous, yet its value for manure may be seen from the results of analyses:

Common Salt.....	87.74
Chloride of Potassium.....	2.49
Sulphate of lime.....	1.68
Carbonates of lime & magnesia.....	75
Oxide of Iron.....	87
Water.....	6.38
	99.91

Salt that contains 24 per cent. of chloride of potassium in place of the same amount of chloride of sodium, is worth $1 a ton more for manure than pure salt.

The weather is exceedingly warm.

ANY amount of rain fell in this vicinity on last Friday.

Hon. S. G. Ives has returned home from his northern trip.

The repairs at the Baptist Church are expected to be completed next week.

Will the inhabitants of Chelsea celebrate the coming "glorious Fourth?"

A. STEGER shipped 35 barrels of eggs the past week. Each barrel contained 70 dozen.

C. H. Kempf will be one of the speakers at the County Temperance meeting in Ann Arbor to-morrow (Friday).

REMEMBER that next Sunday will be Decoration Day. Those who have bouquets of flowers to spare please leave them at the residence of Mrs. Negus.

THERE will be a grand temperance mass meeting held at Ann Arbor on Friday 28th inst. It is expected that there will be a large delegation from Chelsea. The cornet band will also accompany them.

SEWALKS around St. Mary's Church, East Street, North Street, Middle Street, Church Street, and in fact all over, are badly needing repair. Where is our Marshal?

A large number of the inhabitants of Chelsea left last Wednesday morning on the M. E. Church excursion train for Detroit and Belle Isle. A pleasant time was enjoyed by all.

JOHN R. CLARK will talk and sing to the Sunday school children of this place, on the afternoon of the 30th inst., and address the Reform club on temperance in the evening.

THERE was a large annual gathering of the Washtenaw Co. Baptist Association held last week at the Baptist church in this village.

FOUND.—A party found a watch last Wednesday on the Michigan Central railroad track, two miles east of Chelsea. The owner can have it by proving property and paying charges. Enquire at this office.

A beautiful smile is to the female countenance what the sunbeam is to the landscape. It embellishes an inferior face, and redeems an ugly one.

The man who gave weight to his feelings found them very heavy one day last week in Chelsea.

"Tis not the whole of life to live, nor all of death to die;" 'tis raising cash to pay our bills that worries you and I.

OUR streets have been crowded to excess with wheat teams for the past four days. We counted no less than 125 on Monday last and the average each day was 75. How is that for a grain trade?

SOME of our merchants have used gasoline for lighting purposes, and their stores present a rather "cloyed" appearance as a consequence thereof. What next?

NEIGHBORS not on calling terms are enjoying themselves just now in commenting on the extreme homeliness of each others' carpets as they swing upon the lines.

HENRY C. WENTWORTH, general ticket agent of the M. C. R. R., officially notified the public that all who desire to attend the National Republican Convention, at Chicago June 2nd, 1880, will be permitted to purchase excursion tickets at the rate of two cents per mile each way, for all trains May 31, June 1st and 2nd, limited to return until the 5th inclusive.

A CASE OF SUNSTROKE.—On last Tuesday evening Mr. A. Burkhardt, of this village, had a very severe attack of sunstroke while at work in the store of Wood Bros. Dr. Shaw was called in and rendered his assistance. Finally, in a few hours he partially recovered so as to be removed home. He is now in a fair way of recovery.

PERSONAL.—We learn with regret that Prof. Richards will sever his connection with the Chelsea Union School at the close of the present school year, he having made an engagement to take charge of the Union School at St. Louis, Mich., at a salary of $900 per year. We say we regret the change, and in saying so we know that we but give voice to the feeling of the entire community. During the two years that the Professor has been at the head of our schools he has gained for himself the respect and esteem of all lovers of education. He has been an honest and sincere worker, and while we deplore our loss we congratulate St. Louis on her gain. It is much to be regretted that the district took out of the hands of the board the power to engage a teacher before the annual meeting, thereby depriving them of the power to retain Mr. Richards while it was possible.

THE BEAUTIFUL.—Ideality is a strong guardian of virtue; they who have tasted its genuine pleasures, can never rest satisfied with those of mere sense. But it is possible to cultivate the taste to such a degree as to induce a fastidious refinement; when it becomes the inlet of more pain than pleasure. Nor is the worst of over-refinement the loss of selfish gratification; it is apt to interfere with benevolence, to avoid the sight of inelegant distress, to shrink from the contact of vulgar worth, and to lead us to despise those whose feeling of taste is less delicate and correct than our own. If the beautiful and the useful be incompatible, the beautiful must give way—as the means of the existence and comfort of the masses must be provided before the elegancies which can only conduce to the pleasure of the few. Selfishness, though refined, is still but selfishness, and refinement ought never to interfere with the means of doing good in the world as it at present exists. It is not desirable to appeal early to this feeling, or perhaps even directly to cultivate it. If the other faculties are well developed and properly cultivated, this will attain sufficient strength of itself. The beautiful is the clothing of the infinite; and in the contemplation of the beautiful, and the love of perfection—not in churches—we seek our highest and most intimate communion with God, and draw nearer and nearer to him. The fine arts—painting, sculpture, music, as well as poetry—ought all to minister to ideality. The proper use of painting, for instance, ought to be to represent everything that is beautiful in the present, and to recall all that is worthy of remembrance in the past. To give body to those spiritual pictures of ideal beauty and perfection which ideality forms—to give a faithful representation of the great and good that have departed, and to put vividly before us those actions and scenes, those pages from universal history which have a tendency to refine, to exalt, and to enlarge the soul—this is what painting ought to aim at. To paint, however perfectly, horses being sold, deer being hunted, the agony of poor animals in traps, bread and cheese, and lobsters, and foaming ale, is but an abuse and a perversion of one of the highest gifts and attainments, which a more civilized age will repudiate. A pig-sty, however perfectly painted, still but recalls the idea of a pig-sty; and if it excites any feeling, it is one of regret, that such wonderful art should be so misapplied.

OVERHEATED ROOMS.—The great tendency in winter is to keep rooms too warm. The foundation of pneumonia, pleurisy, and pulmonary consumption is frequently laid in over-heated, ill-ventilated apartments. The inmates become accustomed to breathing hot, close air, the system is toned down and relaxed, and a slight exposure to cold and wet results in serious illness. A uniform heat of seventy degrees is adequate, from a sanitary point of view, in any weather. If that temperature is not sufficient to give warmth, it is an indication that the person does not take sufficient exercise, and the cure for it is more miles than fanned. In the coldest weather, when the ground is like stone under the feet, when there is no drip from the eaves, and when snow lies on roofs, rooms should be ventilated. Pure air should be admitted through open doors and windows, so that the oxygen consumed by flame and by respiration may be replaced, and the effete and poisonous matter thrown off by the body thoroughly driven away.

STRENGTH OF CHARACTER.—Most people keep too strong a hold of their personality to be able to forget themselves in their subject; they carry an unacknowledged self-consciousness along with them. If to be single minded is to have an undivided interest in things, they are not single minded. Beauties are aware that they are handsome; clever people are in the habit of showing themselves to advantage, however little their subject lends itself to these considerations. The natural character is not blind to its good points, nor is it ashamed to own them; it is not bashful, but the thing under discussion is bona fide the subject of thought; it has no feigned interests, not ministering to self-love by indirect means. Naturalness is the gift of unconsciously doing things without thinking or knowing how you do them, and, perhaps, we should add, doing them well. Under the charm of such a spirit we feel a sense of liberty and expansion; we breathe a purer air. One natural person makes many, and inspires a confidence in human nature. And how straightforward intercourse becomes under these conditions!

FRITTERED AWAY.—How many times we fritter away without doing anything for ourselves or the public good. For such omissions it is too much the habit with us all to excuse ourselves on the plea of a want of time; whereas, in truth, this is seldom a good and sufficient ground of justification. Nothing is easier than to fritter away time in matters of no use to ourselves or to anyone else. The habit is readily formed. It grows upon one unawares. Keep a strict account of every hour of your own time for a single week, setting down correctly the exact manner in which every hour is spent, and see whether, when you come to review the record, you do not find it full of admonition and instruction. In this simple way one can readily understand the secret of his want of time. He will discover that he has given hours to idle talk, to idleness, and to inconsiderable trifles, which have yielded him neither profit nor pleasure. What is the remedy? Arrange your work in the order of its comparative importance. Attend first to the things which are essential to be done, and let the unessentials take their chance afterward. The difference in the amount of work accomplished will be astonishing. Duty before pleasure. Those who practice this precept have plenty of time for pleasure, and enjoy far greater satisfaction than those who reverse this rule.

SOUND SLEEP.—Sound sleep is essential to good health. It is impossible to restore and recuperate the system exhausted by labor and activity without this perfect repose. Sleep has a great deal to do with the disposition and temper. A sound sleeper is seldom unduly disturbed by trifles, while a wakeful, restless person is apt to be irritable. A great deal has been written about the advantages of curtailing the hours of repose, and of sleeping but little. We are inclined to think that there is room for doubt whether the benefits of closely limiting the time given to rest have not been exaggerated. Active persons of nervous temperament can hardly get too much sleep. We know very well that from slumber is in one sense equivalent to a considerable prolongation of human life, and we are no advocates of indolence; but the fact still remains that sleep may be so much abridged as to leave the system incapable of as much effective work in two hours, as might be performed in a better condition in one.

UNITED STATES POSTAL LAW.—We would direct attention to the following sections of the law, regulating certain relations obtaining between the publisher of a journal and those who read it. Fortunately we have but few on our list whose special attention we would ask to this matter. These few are those who have not yet favored us with their remittances for past indebtedness, as well as the current volume. We shall be pleased to hear from these subscribers at their earliest convenience.

1. A postmaster is required to give notice by letter (returning a paper does not answer the law) when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and state the reasons for its not being taken.

Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publishers for payment.

2. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.

3. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it be taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.

4. If the subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post-office. The law proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

From the Sturgis (Mich.) Weekly: Mr. John Braat, living in Sherman Township, informed us a few days ago that his feet had been so terribly frost-bitten that he could hardly stand the pains caused thereby. He happened to think of St. Jacobs Oil—which he always keeps handy—rubbed his feet twice with the remedy, and the pain disappeared entirely. He not only values St. Jacobs Oil as an unexcelled remedy for a great many other painful diseases, to which mankind is subject, but he also asserts that it is really invaluable for the many diseases horses and stock are subject to, and which so often play havoc with the prospects of the farmer and stock raiser.
