GOING TO THE CATTLE SHOW.

From London Society. No one, no, no, my bitterest enemy, can accuse me of pleasure seeking; I am a man of business.

Well, I and my husband, Anthony Slowman, with our daughter Keziah, fixed on going to the grand West of England Agricultural Show which took place, as everybody knows, at Xeter, on Thursday last.

"What's the use," as I remarked to Squire Jilly, of Brimblebop, but the other day; "what on earth is the use of fattening a pig till it cannot see out of the eyes which were given it by a good Providence to see with?"

At length there was quite a crowd assembled, and others coming in parties every minute, so I suppose they thought it was time for the play to begin, for they rung the telegraph bell, and up went the little door where they five out the tickets.

"Now then, Mrs. Slowman," says Slowman, "which class shall it be, bare boards or cushions, or shall we run behind?"

after carriage. I screamed out with all my might, for it was a mercy and miracle we escaped destruction; and as it was, a rough fellow, seized me by the gown, tore my boucians to a rag in his endeavors to save me.

"Not stop!" said I.—But that moment some one close by affirmed that the train was returning to take up a few; and sure enough it came backwards into the station some minutes afterwards, with the passenger glares out of the carriage windows at us like red-hot wild beasts.

"I will never go by this horrid train," I cried, as Slowman, all excitement, was tugging like a madman at the handle of a third-class door. "You may kill me on the spot if you like, Mr. Slowman, but nothing upon earth shall induce me to go by it—there!"

"Make haste, ma'am, make haste! We have kept a capital corner for you, though it is only in a cattle truck they have put on behind."

"I ever there was a finger of Providence," I said as he came up to where I stood, looking sheepish enough as you may suppose; "if ever there was a finger of Providence, Slowman, that was my dear, for I am not the Pope of Rome, but believe it was last past ten or a quarter to eleven—"

"I walked straight up to the counter, and spoke as loud as I could, for there were plenty to hear me: "Three first-class carriage tickets and no half-crowns in the change please," and then went on and left Slowman to pay the amount. As if we were going in common second-class with all the tradespeople and scruff of the town! Keziah and myself were not dressed for nothing, I can assure you.

Bullock has been kind enough to offer to lend—"No, Mr. Slowman," I interrupted, cutting him short, as I laid down my knife and fork, and rose with dignity.

"My good woman," he answered, as grand as Doodman, staring like a stone above my head, "what are you talking about? Is the creature insane?"

"It is my belief, your villain, you took the purse yourself," I called out. He made no reply, but tried to push by Keziah. I was determined he should not escape, if he had been a Hercules and I a midge; so I caught hold of his shoulder, held my breath, and clung like a leech.

"Oh, ma'am!" I cried to the lady, who recognized me by her hat, "did we travel together to-day, ma'am, in the same carriage with the gentleman with the large whiskers and watch-chain?"

"I could scarcely believe my senses. You might have tripped me up with a gossamer. I turned to Slowman to support my evidence; but neither he nor young Bullock were visible, and Keziah was crying like the rain. I let go my hold on the captain's coat, and they had reached the door, when it was blocked up by young Bullock and a policeman, and the next instant brought Slowman and two or three more of the police, who made no ado, but slipped hand-cuffs at once upon the captain and his fine friends, who turned out to be part of a gang of swindlers that had been pocket picking in every direction through the town.

"Why, father, do you know you have Mr. Bullock's purse stuck in your waistcoat pocket?" Slowman went immediately as red as a lobster. "Yes, my dear," he said, hesitating, and looking at me. "The fact is, I may as well tell you; I lost every penny I had, playing at cards in the train with a lot of blessed sharpers—not that Slowman employed the term 'blessed' but if you understand irony you may guess what he used."

Upon examination we found that my dress had been cut with a sharp instrument, and I as innocent as an unborn babe of it, and my purse stolen. I went up my hands and eyes. "Well," I cried, "this beats Banagher, as the Irishman said," and, turning about, who should I see at a corner table but the polite gentleman with the large whiskers and watch-chain, whom I knew directly, although he was holding up a newspaper before him.

"You may imagine how I felt. "Do you mean to say," I demanded, all aglath at his impudence, "that we did not travel together in the same carriage this morning?"

"It was October, and the bay of Bants hunting the raccoon by night for unwearied negroes arose in the distance, and the muskrat and the mink slipped in the ditches as he approached there. His head was full of happiness and lore. As good a Horatian scholar as any body in his walk, he had texts of Tacitus and bars of Juvenal to remember. Old chapels behind graveyard walls blinked at him through their windows.

"It is good to humor them in all natural manifestations and cravings of their affections. A child hungry-hearted for love, is one of the saddest sights in the world. Hardly less pitiful is the condition of a little one who is awfully repressed or discouraged in the sweet impulses that prompt it to give expression to its love. That was danger lies. The boy or girl will not easily go wrong whose arm is twined morning and night around mother's neck, or whose head is welcomed to its cradling place on father's shoulder. It is on the side of their affections that children are most easily held and guided, and the firmest rein is the invisible, golden cord of love. It is good to humor children in following their natural bent in all right and helpful directions. Remember that education is only the leading out of powers and faculties that are within. Encourage, therefore, such inclinations toward books, studies, medicines, music, out-of-door pursuits and healthful sports, as shall help most truly to develop your child. As education comes more and more to include the development of a natural aptitude, it will be more and more successful. It is good to humor your children in preserving their individuality, and in fostering a true self-respect. Teach them early the value of a dime and a dollar. If you can give them but five cents a week, tell them what it costs somebody in labor, and hold them strictly to their allowance. The philosophy of early training is to make the child father to the man—the mother to the woman. The homely proverb, "As the twig is bent, the tree inclines," is not yet outgrown. It is true now as in ancient times, that if some twigs are permitted to grow as they incline, the tree will be a crooked one. Golden Rule.

PROTECTION OF YOUNG EYES.—Encourage the young pupil to look off the book frequently to change the focus of sight by regarding some distant object. It is not enough to look around vaguely; the eye must be directed to something which is to be clearly seen, like a picture or motto upon the wall, or a bit of decoration. The greatest damage to the eyes of students is the protracted effort to focus the printed page. It was simply barbarous, the way we used to be "whacked" in school when we looked off the book. It is easy for a teacher to know the difference between the resting of the eye and the idle gazing around that cannot be allowed. I regard this rule as the most important, and the disregard of it the most prolific source of trouble.—Educational Weekly.

Wagner's Music in Porkopolis. The third act of "Die Gotterdammerung" was selected by Mr. Thomas for the closing of last evening's concert because it is the consummate flower of Wagnerism. Having heard it, we are prepared to say it is. It is as incomprehensible as the Athanasian creed, and we like it for that reason, as the old Scotchman did the sermons of her pastor, because she couldn't understand them, and because she didn't believe the parson himself comprehended them. The act begins with a querulous phrasing for the horns. They appear to be out of temper, to be going with, and the strings are mad too. They grumble and growl, and have spasms of agony. Then the horns get frantic, and romp and roar in their rage. The kettle-drums make matters infinitely worse, and in this state of general outrage and rioting the poor singers begin to shriek. It is not the fault of Cary, or Sherwin, or Norton, or Crane, nor are Campanini, Rudolphsen or Whitney to be censured, if, for the first time, they did not emit a single pleasurable phrase of music, or one that could be carried away in the musical memory.

John M. Clayton's First Fee. Except to Saratoga and to Washington he seldom passed beyond the boundary of the State of which he was in it he was nearly absolute. As an advocate, politician, Senator, Chief Justice and statesman, he was one of the most correct and thorough men of the country. His nature was sluggish and his ambition easily satisfied, but his sense of acquitting himself well overruled both, and he could be equally patient and powerful. Such a minute perceptions have not been seen in this country united with such weight, and behind the bars of that little constituency he paced like a lion in an impecunious show, all his majesty made comic by the disproportionate surroundings.

Humoring Children. It is good to humor them in all natural manifestations and cravings of their affections. A child hungry-hearted for love, is one of the saddest sights in the world. THE FIRST SUNDAY SCHOOL. In 1788 Bishop Ashbury, of Virginia, established the first Sunday school on Raikes's plan in the United States. Five years later the first Sunday school society was organized in Philadelphia, under the presidency of Bishop White. In 1797 Samuel Slater formed a Sunday school for his operatives at Pawtucket, R. I.; and the poor colored woman, Kati Ferguson, who had never heard of Raikes, or of Sunday schools, established such a school here in 1793 for the benefit of the street children in the humble quarters in which she lived. A school for secular instruction on Sunday, having no relation to theology, was begun here two years earlier, and incorporated three years later. Between 1801 and 1804 Mrs. Isabel Graham and Mrs. Joanna Bethune, he daughter, who had been acquainted with the English schools while traveling abroad, set up three Sunday schools in New York city at their own expense.

From that time they gradually increased throughout the country, though none of them was connected with a church until 1869, in Pittsburg, Pa. The schools instituted by Raikes and his successors were very different from those of the present day. The teachers were hired; most of the pupils were very ignorant, and often very vicious, belonging to the pauper classes. The spelling book and hymn book were almost the only text books required, and very few could read a line. Religious instruction, in the ordinary sense, was not given, because it could not be understood. The library, as an aid to education, was not introduced for some time. The schools were not controlled here to any extent by churches until 1810, and not until much later in Great Britain. Not a hamlet or village in the land now that has not a Sunday school; but it is said that the attendance in many of the large cities has recently fallen off, particularly in the East. It is estimated that there are now about 250,000 teachers and some 3,000,000 pupils in the whole country. The Sunday schools are most numerous in New England, and least numerous in the extreme Southwest.—N. Y. Times.

Wagner's Music in Porkopolis. The third act of "Die Gotterdammerung" was selected by Mr. Thomas for the closing of last evening's concert because it is the consummate flower of Wagnerism. Having heard it, we are prepared to say it is. It is as incomprehensible as the Athanasian creed, and we like it for that reason, as the old Scotchman did the sermons of her pastor, because she couldn't understand them, and because she didn't believe the parson himself comprehended them. The act begins with a querulous phrasing for the horns. They appear to be out of temper, to be going with, and the strings are mad too. They grumble and growl, and have spasms of agony. It is not the fault of Cary, or Sherwin, or Norton, or Crane, nor are Campanini, Rudolphsen or Whitney to be censured, if, for the first time, they did not emit a single pleasurable phrase of music, or one that could be carried away in the musical memory.

Wagner never intended they should sing such a phrase. It might have been understood by a vulgar mind, and Wagner, like the priests of Isis and Osiris, believes in keeping in advance of the common herd. But next to sympathy for the agonizing instruments, one could not repress a feeling of sympathy for Campanini, who howled and shrieked through the two acts because he had to, fighting his way bravely and heroically through a succession of chromatic passages to the end, without so much as a note upon which he or his audience could perch for a moment with a sense of repose. Like Sue's "Wandering Jew" and Dickens' "Poor Joe," he was compelled to move on. How could he? If he paused to catch breath the violins ripped a d'Arco at him in the wildest manner, the cellos and basses and double-basses growled and grumbled, and the horns hitting all the chronicles as they went, and there was nothing for the poor tenor but to go it again. Red in the face, and perspiring like a glass-blower in front of his furnace, he made a plunge at the desperate score, and became as utterly abandoned and reckless as the orchestra, which by that time had the jim-jams, and only ceased laboring the ear with all manner of dissonance to be found in Bedlam, when utter exhaustion overtook them and the audience.

It is said by the admirers of Wagner that we shall love and delight in this music when we understand it. We believe it. But life is short. We may have leisure in the sweet by-and-by to study it and understand it. So we are contented to admire without understanding. We do. We are entirely willing to take Thomas' word for it that it is a big thing. It must be. If we may be permitted to express a plain opinion about it, it is music with the belly-ache. It has knots a V cramps and spasms, increasing in violence suddenly and subsiding as quickly, but never quite coming to a state of internal rest. The contortions are simply awful, and exhibit all the symptoms of musical colic verging on cholera morbus. There are gasping of teeth, groanings that cannot be uttered, bellowing as of the bulls of Bashan. It may be the music of the future, but it will be heard in the realms of Pluto, and amaze the good Dr. Watts himself, as he watches the sinners swim in the fiery billows that roll beneath the slippery rocks.—Cincinnati Commercial.

ENGLISH GRAIN MARKET. LONDON, May 24.—The Mark Lane Express says: In consequence of the cold winds the favorable anticipations formed in March and April have been considerably modified. The drought is generally causing well founded anxiety, as the land is more than surface dried. If the state of the growing crops in several southern counties is any criterion, there will be no wheat ears this month. Maize was hardly ever so scarce in this country as now, and this has made itself unmistakably felt in Mark Lane of late, where the credit of the smaller country millers has been much shaken. Business has been somewhat interrupted by holidays, and the grain trade is rather weaker. English wheat was marketed very sparingly. L. 3 week's full quotations were fairly obtained with difficulty, but growers were mostly firm. The imports of foreign into London have been very moderate, and trade remained uncertain. As a consequence of some signs of improvement in the weather millers have hesitated to increase their stocks. A price of 10s. 6d. for the best quality of wheat was sold to sell American wheat ex-shipment of the recent advance of 6d. to be lost. A reduction has been necessary to effect sales of Indian, but the demand has lately been very restricted. Wheat, such as fine Australian, slightly favored buyers at the close of the week. Maize was in good demand at 2s. 6d. @ 25s. but offerings were small. Oats closed firm. Arrivals at ports of coal have been very limited. Wheat under strong continued demand continued to improve until 5s. 3d. for the Continent was paid for the red winter, but during the past few days the market has been somewhat easier, owing within any restriction, a change of one week. Maize met with a steady inquiry and prices, in consequence of the arrival, advanced to 25s. 6d. @ 25s. 6d. Wheat shipment was offered on rather easier terms, and sold to a moderate extent at an improvement of 3d. per quarter.

The sales of English wheat last week were 2,577 qrs at 44s 8d per qr, against 35,672 qrs at 41s 10d per qr for the corresponding week last year. The imports into the United Kingdom for the week ending the 15th instant were 626,077 cwt of wheat and 190,916 cwt of flour.

A NOVEL LAMP.—In some parts of Paris to obtain an instantaneous light they resort to the following expedient: Take an oblong vial of the whitest and clearest glass, put in it a piece of phosphorus about the size of a pea, upon which pour some olive oil, heated to the boiling point, filling the vial about one-third full, and then seal the vial hermetically. To use it remove the cork and allow the air to enter the vial, and then recork it. The whole empty space in the bottle will then be luminous, and the light obtained will be equal to that of a lamp. As soon as the light grows weak its power can be increased by opening the vial and allowing a fresh supply of air to enter. Thus prepared the vial may be used for six months. This contrivance is used by French watchmen in all magazines where explosive or inflammable materials are stored. Envy is as malignant in a paltry waiting wench as in the vainest and most ambitious lady of the court. It is always an infallible mark of the basest nature; and merit in the lowest, as well as in the highest station, must feel the shaft of envy's constant arrows—falsehood and slander.—Mock-His.

ELEGANT HAIR is woman's crowning beauty. When it fades she fades as well. While it is kept bright, her personal attractions are still maintained. By preserving the hair fresh and vigorous a youthful appearance is continued through many years. Those who grieve over their fading hair turning gray too early, should know that Ayer's Hair Vigor prevents it, and restores gray or faded hair to its natural color. MEMORIAL DAY.—Quite extensive preparations were made for Memorial Services, and a grand time was expected. Sunday morning heavy clouds appeared, and soon the rain fell in torrents so that it was impossible to visit the cemetery as planned. It was determined not to abandon the exercises but to hold the service in the M. E. Church. At half-past 2 o'clock in the afternoon the audience room of the church was thronged with people. The Chelsea Band furnished excellent music. Rev. Mr. Hudson presided. Prayer was offered by Rev. E. A. Gay; a roll of honor was read by W. E. Depew, and a very forcible and eloquent oration was delivered by Hon. E. P. Allen. Excellent solos were sung by Miss Octoby, Miss Sargent, Mr. Ward and others. The exercises passed off smoothly, and were a perfect success. Monday morning a committee of young ladies visited the cemetery and decorated the graves of the soldiers with flowers.

A clergyman, not many miles from Chelsea, preaching a sermon on death, concluded with the following observation: "But even death, my brethren, so well deserved by mankind for their sins, the wisdom of Providence, has, in its paternal kindness, put at the end of our existence; for only think what life would be worth if death were at the beginning!"

REMOVAL.—French's Shoe Store has removed from the Kandleher Block to the Congdon Block, one door west of Bacon's Hardware Store. They have the most complete stock of Boots and Shoes in Chelsea, and every lady will tell you their prices are the lowest. Give them a call.

A FATHER'S LOVE.—A family who had lived happily together for many years, became disturbed by the conduct of the eldest son, who had become dissipated, and frequently brought the family into disgrace by his conduct.

Prodigal as he was, he wandered from his father's home, but always the loving parent forgave him and brought him back. At last he became so bad that the other children told their father that the next time their brother disgraced them he would leave the house for good, or they would. It was not long before the weak brother again gave way to temptation, and plunged deeper into vice than ever.

The father was restrained by his family from going after his unfortunate boy, but at last the prodigal came to himself, and longing to once more enter the happy home he had left, he sent to his kind father a letter full of penitence and self-reproach, pleading for the forgiveness which he felt he did not merit.

The father's heart went out to his boy. He longed to welcome the wanderer back, but his other children would not listen to him.

"No!" they said, "choose between us. If our brother comes back, we will leave you. He has been pardoned repeatedly, but forgiveness to him has only been encouragement to do worse. We will not live in the same house with him."

In vain the father pleaded for his first-born. In vain he read his letters to them, and beginning with the youngest, implored them individually to forgive their brother once more.

They each answered: "No!"

When he came to the eldest girl he appealed to her sympathy, saying: "Remember he was your playmate in childhood, your companion in youth—will you not allow him to come back?"

But she answered: "No!"

The father could stand it no longer. He saw there was nothing left for him but to make a choice between them. He loved his children all; he could not bear to part with them, but then he thought of his poor, prodigal son, away from the protection of his home, exposed to the temptations he could so hardly resist, and as the last answer was given to his earnest appeal his determination was formed.

"He shall come home," he said; "I love him more than you all. I will bring him back, and as long as I have a home he shall share it with me."

The prodigal was brought back; and, won by a father's love, he changed his course, and became, in time, an honored member of society. Thus it is ever—love will conquer when everything else fails.

A WORD FOR FICTION.—To suppose that fiction could permanently appeal to so many classes of mind, if it were only fiction, is to suppose an absurdity. Fiction is most powerful when it contains most truth; and there is but little truth that we get so true as that which we find in fiction. So long as history is written by partisans, and science by theorists, and philosophy by hobby-riders, the faithful studies of human life, as we find them in the best novels, are the truest things we have; and they cannot fail to continue to be the source of our favorite knowledge, and of our finest inspirations.

Ayer's Ague Cure
Is a purely vegetable bitter and powerful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders. In malarial districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, thirst, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and coldness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.

It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic, and other poisonous minerals form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics" in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poisons in the system, producing quinsin, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. AYER'S AGUE CURE thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient; and its growing excellence, above its certainty of cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the attack.

For Liver Complaints, AYER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition.
