The countenance of Mr. Edgemoor became instantly very grave.

"Sometimes I do," he answered, assuming indifference.

"I have a note of Leyden & that I wish discounted," said Edgemoor.

"For how much?"

"Three hundred dollars; six months' time, Mr. Edgemoor, please the note."

"I don't desire to pay for four months' time," remarked the money lender.

Then he asked, "what rate of interest do you expect to pay?"

"Whatever is usual. Of course I wish to get it done as low as possible. My profits are not large, and even for a year I pay in discounts to my business from the growth of my business the comfort of my family."

"You have a family?"

following. It was late in December and Winter had commenced in earnest. Snow had fallen for several hours. Now, however, the sky was clear, but the air keen and frosty. One day to Mr. Edgar was one in which more than the usual number of "transactions" had been made. One perfectly safe note he had been able to charge as high as three per cent. more than the full of pleasurable excitement had his mind been, while gathering in gain; but now, the excitement being over, he was oppressed from whence the pressure came. He did not know. A cloud was closing upon his spirits, and the sunshine and there was not a gleam of sunshine enough to chase it from his sky.

sure. But Sabbath means rest; to man most needs is rest; restore the rest which has been lost; restore the body of the mind after a week of toil is one of the great unsolved problems of sociology. It seldom occurs to those who attempt an innovation on Sabbath observance, by way of social reform, that at bottom their schemes are not less but more labor to some of the people, and labor can never be made to spell rest.

Some Turkish Intrigues

Perhaps the most striking fact in the life of the stranger is the little interest Turkish women seem to inspire among the Turkish population of Constantinople. But few strangers are, perhaps, aware of the danger of a word, or even of a prolonged gaze into the carriage of a grande dame Turque may provoke the ire of an attendant eunuch, and lead him to lay about right and left with a heavy whip with which he is armed; but the greatest danger is not in this; it is in the intrigues in the treacherous encouragement of the grande dame herself. Some years ago a M. B—, a young French Color-Blindness.

It is something beyond mere curiosity which induces Dr. Jeffries to take such pains to procure statistics regarding the prevalence of color-blindness among the children of our public schools. He has for some weeks devoted a few hours each day to the examination of these children, and he reports the following results: Among the boys, the proportion of color-blind is one in every twenty; of the girls he examined he only found two in over 3,000 who were thus afflicted. The test which he applies is very simple, and yet the result is always conclusive. He holds in his hand a knot of bright green which has no tint of blue or yellow; on the white-covered table in front of him is a large pile of various colored worsteds, ranging through all the colors, from a light gray to a dark brown, including the different shades of red, blue, yellow, violet and green. The scholars, called class by class, are ranged before him, and one by one he asks them to name the color, but showing the knot which he holds in his hand he says: "Now pick out what looks to you like this, whether it be light or dark." If the person is color-blind he will pick out red, gray, certain shades of browns and possibly green; that shows that all these colors look alike to him, and, as nearly as can be determined, the effect is gray. It is peculiar that, while a person may be what is termed green-red blind, they can distinguish yellow or purple. Sometimes this order is reversed, and while they can distinguish between red and green they cannot see any difference in yellow and violet. For some time the idea seemed to obtain that color-blindness was more prevalent in the lower classes, but actual experiment proves that such is not the case. In one class of 36 boys, in the Lawrence School in South Boston, a school attended largely by the poorer class, not one who was color-blind was found; and in the 133 who were examined the next day only five were found. It was quite amusing to hear some of the names of colors given by these children.—One of them called gray "dark white," another called a very dark shade of brown "black brown." Some of them had a very quick eye for color, and selected shades with a great deal of discrimination.

The object of all this is to bring the question of color-blindness into prominence, in relation to the danger from this infirmity in persons connected with railways and the pilot service. As red and green lights are used almost exclusively as signals, it becomes a matter of some moment whether the man who runs the engine on the railway-train, or guides the ship into harbor, can distinguish one from the other. In England the strictest tests are applied to the person in search of a "situation" of the kind, and it is hoped that the same rule may be enforced in this country. Certainly it is a question in which the general public is, or should be, actively interested, involving as it does so much of importance to human life. Already it has come before the Legislature.

Christianity a Noble Manhood.

To me a noble manhood, noble in the truest and broadest conception of manhood, is the grandest of all things, and I verily believe that Christianity, properly understood and truly lived, is not only the deepest inspiration and the surest guide to such a manhood, but crowns it with a glory truly divine. It places before all a lofty, a faultless ideal; it brings to all a deep, unchanging love in the fatherhood of God, a vicariousness, an outgoing of that love for others as seen in Christ; it puts man into the real life of principle, and endows him with a sense of inward righteousness, and gives them power to so live. It tells men that they are immortal, and bids them live now as in the beginning of endless years. But in saying this, in making this broad plea for Christianity, it is for Christianity as a system, and as a life, as Jesus Christ taught it and lived it, and not for all the crude and misshapen theories of men about Christianity that have found place in the conceptions of men, and have been called Christianity; nor for the weakness and hypocrisies and shams that have been called piety, and too often passed for piety.

We have all about us, and there is all over our world, much poverty and sin and suffering. These must weigh heavily upon all sympathetic hearts. And, strange as it may seem, the way to find rest in this is for the Christian world to take the burden of this suffering more and more upon its heart. To seek to escape it is to retreat into a narrowness, a selfishness, a state when any large, general satisfaction in life is impossible. It seems like a paradox, but it is nevertheless true, that the losing of selfishness is the only way to come into the universal life of man. The more we pour forth into the account of the world's need, the more is left for ourselves. There is no pay, no deep rest like that which comes from bearing in our measure the burdens and sorrows of others; and trying to bring them into a better state. This was the life of our Lord. He gave Himself for us; and we should give ourselves for others. We should come into the vicarious suffering of His love. Then, and not till then, shall we know His peace and rest. O, that all our hearts were baptized with His spirit! O, that the Christian world would take upon itself the suffering of Christ's love! Then would a holier rest come to all in seeing the sorrows of others turned to joy.—H. W. Thomas, D. D., in Alliance.

—The inventor of stereotyping—William Ged, the inventor of stereotyping, was a Scotchman. He was a jeweler in Edinburgh, Scotland, as he adhered to his original vocation he was permitted to prosper. When he ventured to exercise his ingenuity by facilitating the printer's art he was doomed. On his making known his discovery of block printing, the trade deemed their craft in danger and formed a combination for his destruction. Master printers, journeymen and apprentices united against him as a common enemy; they loaded him with invectives; they reproached him with ignorance and assumption. The arrows of calumny hit him on all sides. Who could long withstand such an array of hostilities? Poor Ged, who ought to have made a fortune out of his discovery, died of a broken heart.

Boston is trying to compel gentlemen to appear in full dress at opera. That is right. We utterly mistake in our culture when we make our religion namia-bile or our amiableness underdone. The majestic and the lowly, the solemn and the gay, are to meet in humanity—to meet and mutually relieve, soften and exalt each other.

After all, the most natural beauty in the world is honesty and moral truth. For all beauty is truth. True features make the beauty of a face; and true proportions the beauty of architecture, as true measures that of harmony and music. In poetry, which is all fable, truth is still perfection.

DR. M. M. FENNER, Fredonia, N. Y.

Dear Sir— I have been using your Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic for the past few weeks, and desire to say that I like it. I find it admirably adapted to the purpose for which you recommend it. It is also an excellent remedy for the biliousness usually incident to the change from winter to spring, sufficiently physic and yet not debilitating as the mercurial remedies are, but strengthening instead.

Truly yours, W. McKINSTRY.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic may well be called "The conquering hero" of the times. Whoever has "the blues" should take it, for it regulates and restores the disordered system that gives rise to them. It always cures Biliousness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headaches, Fever and Ague, Spleen Enlargement, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Pimples, Blotches, and ALL SKIN ERUPTIONS and BLOOD DISORDERS, Swelled Limbs and Dropsy, Sleeplessness, Impaired Nerves and Nervous Debility; Restores flesh and strength when the system is running down or going into decline; cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties. It does these things by striking at the root of disease and removing its causes.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Honey will relieve any cough in one hour. Try sample bottle at 10 cents.

A large army of workmen has gone into the pine woods in detachments all over the State. If the winter, which has begun early, holds out long, all the rivers in the lumber regions will be fairly choked with logs next spring.

The flouring mill owned by Gardner, Campbell & Co., at Irving, Barry county, with about 17,000 bushels of wheat stored there, by farmers in the vicinity, was entirely destroyed by fire. Loss, exclusive of the wheat, about $25,000; insured for $15,000.

The Cheboygan Democrat of the 18th says: "Two weeks ago to-day the body of a Canadian woodsman, named Fred Pupple, an employee of the Mackinac Lumber company in camp No. 4, was found lying on his face in the woods, with a horrible gash in the back of his head, his arms lying 15 or 20 feet from the body with the slightest trace of blood upon it, and it is supposed he was murdered, but by whom, or for what gratuity, ends in one of the mysteries that may never be revealed this side of the judgment day.

They have an embarrassment of riches at the celebrated Vulcan mine in the upper peninsula. When fixing up the foundation for a new engine house at the mine it was found to rest on a solid bed of iron ore, and now it is feared they will have to move the engine into another county to avoid setting it on the ore.

The settlement of the Perrin and Sibbey estate at Marshall, after six months for a battle of lawyers and members of that profession from abroad are frequently registered there, coming on matters connected with the Sibbey case principally. Buffalo, Detroit, Grand Rapids and Rochester attorneys seem to take deep interest therein. The closing up of the Perrin estate bids fair to rival the famous case of Janyaroy vs. Janyaroy in duration and complexity.

Notwithstanding the early closing of the sawing season, by which the cut has been curtailed some 20,000,000 feet, the lumber product of the Saginaw valley for the season of 1880 will be found to be exceedingly large. The estimates made by some of the millers show that there has been a large increase over 1879. For instance, Rouse Bros., of Essexville, place their cut at 10,000,000 feet, last year they cut 7,000,000; John McEwen is reported as having cut 11,000,000 last year the cut was 11,500,000; Sturtevant, Green & Plummer, of Saginaw, estimate their cut at 17,000,000 feet, last year the cut was 15,000,000; Geo. F. Williams & Bros., of Saginaw City are reported as having cut a little over 12,000,000 feet, last year they cut a little over 10,000,000 feet. The product of 1880 in this district will not be far from 75,000,000 feet, an increase over last year of some 50,000,000 feet.

A strange kind of hog disease exists in the south part of Wayne and north part of Monroe counties. Pains-taking autopsies of the remains of hogs that died revealed the presence of large numbers of worms, about an inch in length, in the kidneys of each subject; while the healthy animals that are being killed are found to have glands distended almost to the point of rupture, in nearly every case.

The experiment of the Michigan Salt Association in shipping salt in sacks south has proved a success. The salt is put up in 150 pound sacks and takes the place of English salt in the southern market. Thus far 10,000 sacks have been shipped, and the trade promises large development. The product gives universal satisfaction, and a territory for the Saginaw salt crop is opened that heretofore obtained its supplies in another direction.—Saginaw Herald.

The Chicago & Grand Trunk railroad company will locate its shops, etc., at South Bend, Ind., if a bonus of $25,000 and the necessary land are given. South Bend thinks the figures too high.
