we grow old our tears are few
For friends most lately taken, but fall—as falls the summer dew
From roses lightly shaken—
When some chance word or idle strain,
The chords of memory sweeping, inlock the flood-gates of our pain
For those who taught us weeping.

As we grow old, our smiles are rare
To those who greet us daily,
Or, if some living faces wear
The looks that beamed so gayly
From eyes long closed, and we should smile
In answer to their wooing,
Tis but the Past that shines the while
Our power to smile renewing.

As we grow old, our dreams at night.
Are never of the morrow;
They come with vanished pleasure bright,
Cr dark with olden sorrow;
And when we wake, the names we say
Are not of any mortals,
But of those in some long dead day
Passed through life's sunset's portals.

'He paused for a moment, and an irresponsible shudder shook his frame. "Go on,' I said, for I felt afraid of his breaking down again.

'It was a lovely evening. I had never thought the earth so beautiful before. A gentle breeze just touched my cheek, the water flowed on clear and bright and glowing, covered with purple heather. I walked on and on till I came to that point where, as you may perhaps remember, the path, growing very narrow, winds round the base and on the other by rocks that rise in places sheer to a height of a hundred feet or more.'

'I had not been there before since I was a child,' he went on mournfully, but I recollected it as one of the most fully. solitary spots possible, and my astonishment was great to see a man standing in the pathway with a drawn sword in his hand. He did not stir as I drew near, so I stepped aside on the grass. Instantly he barred my way.

"You can't pass here,' he said.
"Why not?" I asked.

'Because I say so,' he answered. "And who are you that say so?" inquired, looking full at him.

'He was like a god. Majesty and power were written on every feature, were expressed in every gesture; but O, the awful scorn of his smile, the contempt with which he regarded me! Whatever I thought, and you may think, about my friend's dream, it made the most remarkable impression upon his mind. He could not shake off its influence; he passed from one state of nervousness to another. It was in vain ed to be falling around. 'It is getting late, and so I'll e'en turn back.'

I entreated him to exert his common sense and call his strength of mind to his assistance. I might as well have spoken to the wind. He implored me not to leave him, and I agreed to remain; indeed, to leave him in his then frame of mind would have been an act of the greatest cruelty. He wanted me also to preach in his place on the Sunday ensuing; but this I flatly refused to

> "If you do not make an effort now," I said, you will never make it. Rouse yourself, get on with your sermon, and if you buckle to work you will soon forget all about that foolish dream.'

Well, somehow, to cut a long story short, the sermon was composed and Sunday came, and my friend, a little better, and getting somewhat over his fret, got up into the pulpit to preach. He looked dreadfully ill; but I thought the worst was now over, and that he would go on mending. 'Vain hope! He gave out the text

'We talked the matter over, the doctor and I, in the gloaming, as he walked to and fro in the meadow behind the manse; and we decided, having to make our choice of two evils, to risk giving him such an opiate as should carry him over the dreadful interva. We knew it was a perilious thing to do with one in his condition, but, as I said before, we could only take the least of the two evils.

An Old Story Retold.

A great many years ago the governor of North Carolina received a friendly visit from the governor of South Carolina. After a real North Carolina din-ner of bacon and yams, the two govern-ors lit pipes and sat in the shade of the back veranda with a demijohn of real back veranda with a demijohn of real North Carolina corn whisky, copper dis-tilled within easy reach. "There was nothing stuck up about these govern-ors," says a North Carolina state historian, in the homely but vigorous language of his section. Sally Ray, of Leadville.

Mrs. Sarah Ray arrived in Buffalo the other day, from Leadville, on her way to New York, whither she had gone for the purpose of locating her daughter Cora in a school, and arranging for the future care of a little Mexican girl whom she had in her charge.

Mrs. Ray has a history which, if published, would read like a romance. She has dug in mines, fought in wars with Indians side by side with her husband, scoured the plains on horseback as a scout, and became an expert in the business; helped found the city of Leadville, being the first white womau who ever dared venture there; mapped out roads, built houses, took in washing from the Leadville miners, and is today in possession of a fortune that pays her an income of $30,000 a year.

A reporter paid her a call as she sat in a Central palace car, waiting for the train to start. He found her occupying a seat facing her daughter Cora, and around her was piled numerous milk if they get too thick, then add to them an equal quantity of strong veal or chicken broth, white pepper and salt to taste.

But she had sworn that at a certain time she was living in Ohio. Upon that point they called a witness to contradict her; and thus established the inference that if she was false in one point, she was false in all. The witness they called swore that he saw her at a dance in Illinois at the time she testified to being in Ohio.

The woman, who was seated some distance from the witness-stand, and wore a beautiful set of false teeth, whispered to the counsel on her side,-

"Let me ask him a question?"
"Certainly," he answered.
Turning her head, she slipped out her false teeth, stepped up quickly to the witness, looked him full in the face, opened wide her mouth, exhibiting two or three rotten fangs, and said-"Did you ever see me before?" "No, I can swear I never did," ans-

> BEFORE MARRIAGE.-Lovers' quarrels arise from different causes; sometimes from mere intensity of affection making undue exactions, and at others from causes which, properly understood and appreciated, would warn the parties of the impos sibility of their ever living happily to gether.

For instance, a young man who is encheaper than a canal, that it could be built in much less time, and that as it involves Whenever they meet other ladies in society she treats him with great coolness. This ly computed. But this last is an error. It chills his ardor, and makes him discontented, so much, that he is in doubt about marrving her at all. He has, in fact, come to the conclusion that if he believed she would treat him after marriage in the same way she does now, he would never marry her. find firm foundation for even an ordinary As a general proposition, it may be laid railway and its heavy traffic. She finds her influence diminished rather than increased after they are married, and disappoint ments, disagreements and misery necess rily follow. Marry no one with whom without any change of character, your are not satisfied.

REASON IN ANIMALS. - Is man the only animal endowed with reason? Upon the affirmative or negative answer to this question much is made to depend by that large class of persons who see, in the possession of reason, the distinguishing mark between men and other animals. If by reason he meant the power to perceive a probable effect from a given cause, then it is more than likely that such animals as dogs, horses, and elephants, pre-eminently, and some other animals, in lesser degree, are endowed with reason. Nor is it necessary, in order to believe this, to con found instinct with higher faculty. Man is possessed of instinct as well as reason a sufficient evidence that the presence of one does not act as a bar to the other.

The answer to the question formulated above is of metaphysical value only, but is, nevertheless, of general interest. It would seem as if the most direct way out of the difficulty would be to accent it as ficiently proven that animals can reaon, and then go back and reject the ide that the possession of reason distinguisher man from other animals. The gulf be ween man and the rest of animated creaion is so wide that it has never yet been similating himself with the lower orders of creation. There may, perhaps, be some brutes better than some men, but that is solely the fault of the men.

William Ransom, a wealthy farmer of Batavia, just west of Coldwater, hung himself in his barn. Temporary insanity was probably the cause, as he was possessed with he idea that there was a conspiracy to defraud him of large sums of money.

The house of Steed Spencer, near Mayville, was discovered on fire, and when the neighbors reached the fire they found that Steed Spencer, an old man who lived alone, was dead, with his head nearly burned off. It is the opinion that he fell in a fit, striking the stove, and while in this condition his ciothing took fire. He leaves no relatives in this country.

A veritable case of trichiniosis is reported by the Lausing Republican in the family of Jacob Ransom, near the cemetery. One of the family, a boy about 15 years of age, died, and portions of muscle from the body were obtained by Drs. Hayden and Dolan, and subjected to microscopic examination. The microscope revealed the presence of hundreds of parasites in the fiber, leaving no doubt of the correctness of the diagnosis of the physicians. H. C. Hahn, druggist, on Michigan avenue, has two specimens of the muscle taken from this subject on exhibition under microscopes at his store for the benefit of the curious. Of the four victims still living it is thought that one at least can still living it is thought that one at least can

Mrs. Ezra Ogden, of Union township, Branch county, was burned to death Sunday, her clothes having caught fire while she was taking off a stove lid with her apron.

A channel has been cut through the ice from the docks at Grand Haven to open water in the lake, and the steamers Depere and Menominee will go forth, bound for Milwaukee, and search for the steamer City of Ludington, now two weeks out and fast in the ice.

The house of Steed Spencer, of Watertown, Tuscola county, burned Saturday night, and Mr. Spencer, who was an old man and had lived all alone for a number of years, perished therein. It is supposed that he had a fit and fell upon the stove, upsetting it.

At about 1.15 Sunday morning the brick store of Josiah Kingsbury, at Memphis, Macomb county, was discovered in flames, and it was soon completely gutted and the contents destroyed. The Lapeer Tragedy.

The examination of Mrs. Barnard charged with the murder of Mrs. Curtis, was continued before Justice Barber at Lapeer last week. The prosecu-tion introduced the dying declaration of Mrs. Curtis, which was admitted as evidence after objection and argument. The declaration reiterates the statement that Mrs. Barnard is guilty and relates the manner of the alleged crime as heretofore detailed in these columns. Dennis E. Holland, the officer in the case, gave the details of the arrest and the prosecution rested. On Wednesday the defence introduced

Wm. Henderson, at whose house Mrs. Barnard boarded. Witness had occasion to get quite near to the defend-ant's dress on the night in question and did not smell either kerosene or gaso-

Wm. Colerick, sheriff of Lapeer county, testified that he made a thorough examination of the prisoner's clothing about half an hour after the arrest, and found ne unusual smell of any kird about them.

On Thursday several witnesses were introduced who testified to the good character of the defendant, and the case closed with a motion to discharge made by the defence. The justice overruled the motion and held the occused for trial, declaring the crime to be murder in the first degree and not bailable by an examining magistrate.

It is understood that the defence will move for a change of venue and apply to the supreme court for leave to furnish bail.

Opium Culture.

Owing to the ever poverty-stricken state of the Indian raiat, or husbandman, the Government advances the means whereby he can engage in poppy cultivation. The nature of their engagement is about as follows: The cultivator undertakes to sow a bigka, or about one-twentieth of an acre, with poppy seed. For this he is given the requisite amount of seed, If a well has to be dug, he is not only given a sum, on loan, sufficient to carry out his purpose, but also money enough to buy bullocks in order to enable him to draw water from the well when it is finished. This is tearmed the first advance, and is simply given him to prepare his land for the sowing of poppy seed. The second advance is given when the plant begins to shoot above the earth's surface, and the third when the plant is finger over the cuts. About five to six 15,595 incisions suffice for the drawing of the juice. The opium is placed in brass vessels, slightly tilted, so as to drain off the dew or any other watery substance. It is then manipulated and placed in new earthern vessels, and is thus kept until it is brought to the it is brought to the weighing stations. The cultivator of poppies does not employ labor. His holdings are mere garden patches, so that all the aid he requires, from the sewing of the seed to the maturing of the plant and the gathering of the opium, can be had from the members of his family. The whole of this work is done by himself, his wife, and his little ones. Many of these opium plots, worked by a man and his family. ily, amount to only one-sixth or onetwelfth of an acre, perhaps, in a few isolated instances one man is wealthy enough to own half an acre.

We can imagine how glad must be the raiat when the poppy plant has begun to exude opium, and when his opium has all been gathered he waits patiently for the order to march with the fruits of his labors to the weighing station. It depends entirely upon the season as to whom the cultivators can bring their opium to the government stations to be weighed. As a general rule the month of April is the beginning of the weighing season. Intimation is then given to the opium cultivators that they must present themselves on a certain day with their opi um, in order to have it tested and weighed. In the districts where the poppy plant is cultivated, all are astir, and grand preparations are made for a general exodus. The opium is collected safely in red earthen pots, which are put in wicker crates, and the whole family, with burdens on their heads, make for the weighing stations. The picturesque Indian lanes are crowded with these men, marching like sheep to their destination. They only travel during
