CHELSEA, FEB. 9, 1882.

Twelve Months of Irish History.

There have not been many years in the varied experience of Ireland more eventful than 1881. The disturbed state of that country was brought to the attention of parliament as early as the 6th of January, when the queen in her address recommended the further development of the principles of the land act of 1870, "in a manner conformable to the special wants of Ireland, both as regards the relation of landlord and tenant, and with a view to effective efforts for giving to a larger portion of the people by purchase a permanent proprietary interest in the land." On the 24th of January in the house of commons Mr. Forster moved a bill for protection of life and property in Ireland, the first reading of which was stubbornly opposed by the home rulers. At the end of a continuous session of 41 hours the speaker arbitrarily closed the debate and the bill was read. Parnell, Finnigan and Dillon were suspended for obstruction and ejected from the house, and 27 home rulers who refused to vote were also suspended and removed. On the 25th the trial of the land leaguers at Dublin ended in a disagreement of the lords. Mr. Forster's bill was passed a month later by a vote of 231 to 36, and the Irish arms bill, prohibiting the carrying or possession of arms except by license, and permitting the search of houses from sunrise to sunset, and amending the authorities in nitro-glycerine, passed the commons on the 14th of March and the house of lords on the 17th. The maximum penalty on conviction was fixed at three months' imprisonment without hard labor, and the law was to remain in force for five years.

On the 21 of May John Dillon, member of the commons from county Tipperary, was arrested under the coercion act, and in the course of the next two months not less than 200 others were imprisoned, including one priest, one magistrate, several town councilors and many poor-law guardians.

On the 29th of July the Irish land bill passed the commons by a vote of 230 to 14. It was amended in the house of lords and passed by that body on the 8th of August. On the 19th the commons rejected most of the amendments, and the same day the lords restored them. On the 15th the commons modified some of the amendments, still rejecting the most important, and the next day the lords agreed to the bill as presented and it became a law.

Parnell soon went over to Ireland and stirred up an opposition to the land act, and after making a sort of triumphal progress through several counties was himself arrested on the 13th of October and lodged in Kilmainham jail. Other arrests followed—the cry of "no rent" was raised by the leaders of the league—and on the 20th the lord lieutenant proclaimed the league as an illegal organization and ordered the dispersal of its meetings by armed force.

Since that time the multitude of cases brought into the land court, the formation of the ladies' league and the association for the relief of the prisoners, the boycotting and terrorism brought into play to prevent the payment of rents, and the Irish campaign in America for funds to keep up the struggle, are events too fresh in memory to require special mention.

It is said that when a Deadwood deacon gets angry over a game of poker, and drops his opponent with a pistol, he is not allowed to escape. A meeting of the congregation is held, and in nine cases out of ten he is censured for being so impulsive.

The Missing Confederate Treasures.
The Philadelphia Press of the 18th inst. published a long interview with Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, in the course of which he charged Jeff. Davis with stealing a large amount of money. He desired it to be distributed among the soldiers, as they had received no pay for months, and so wrote Davis after he fled from Richmond to Charlotte, but Davis paid no attention to his suggestion. In answer to a question as to what he knew about the final use to which the money was put, Gen. Johnston is quoted as saying: "It followed or preceded the head of the civil government of the confederacy to the south about the time Mr. Davis went in that direction."

"Have you any idea of the amount of specie Davis carried south?"
"Col. Paul, an artillery officer of the confederacy, and now a prominent lawyer of Richmond, told me that he inspected the specie before its removal from Richmond, and said there was a car load of it. As he only saw it boxed ready for shipment, he could, of course, give no information as to the amount in dollars and cents. Gen. Beauregard, however, was in immediate command at Greensboro while Davis was there, and told me that he was convinced that the president had $2,500,000 in specie at Greensboro. I have no doubt but that Gen. Beauregard's estimate was within bounds. After Davis left Charlotte and moved south a confederate officer told me that, while standing near a bridge crossing a small creek, a man rode up and inspected it. He said that he was in charge of the president's money, and wanted to see whether the bridge was safe or not. The man in charge told the officer he had twenty wagon-loads of specie in the train. This would be in perfect harmony with Col. Paul's statement that there was a car-load when it left Richmond, and with Gen. Beauregard's that there was $2,500,000 at Greensboro."

"What became of the money left?"
"That I am unable to say. Davis has never given any satisfactory account, to my knowledge, and what is a stranger thing to me, the southern people have never held him to an account for it."

A National Bankrupt Law.

Last week a number of merchants of New York city, met to consider the question of a national bankrupt law. Only about a score were present, but they adopted a resolution that "they are opposed to Congress enacting a national Bankrupt Law, because it would disturb the confidence now existing between merchants extending liberal credit, and that arising from unfavorable recollections of the former bankrupt law."

It was said that the law is demanded only by those who wish to get release from honest indebtedness, and therefore such a law would be unjust to those who have given them credit. We have often asked, and we would be pleased now to receive a candid answer to this question from any intelligent Christian: "Is it right to make a law by which a citizen shall be legally released from a moral obligation?"

When a bankrupt law is in existence debts are contracted with the understanding between debtor and creditor that under certain circumstances the debtor may escape legal obligation to pay. But when debts are contracted while no such law is in the statute book, is not the moral obligation to pay perfect? And is not a law to release the debtor necessarily ex post facto and therefore in itself wrong?

HOW MEN DIE.—A single paragraph of a morning paper last week contained the following list of untimely deaths:—Washington Wilson died at Rahway, N. J., from lockjaw, caused by wounds inflicted by a large boar, which he was attempting to drive a few days ago. R. E. Bailey, a well-known citizen of Southampton county, Virginia, was killed by a freight train on the Norfolk and Western Railroad. James Conroy died in Providence, R. I., from injuries caused by being thrown from a wagon. His wife, injured at the same time, is in a critical condition. Henry Frazer was killed at Port Kennedy, near Reading, by the premature explosion of a blast. Patrick Barrett was fatally burned by a gas explosion in the Sugar Notch mine, near Wilkesbarre. Albert Jordan, engineer, was killed at Rochester, N. Y., by a train, which struck him as he was stepping off his engine. Aaron G. Lyman, aged 73 years, fell down stairs and broke his neck, in Hadley, Massachusetts.

THE "CONSTITUTION" RETIRED.
The famous old frigate Constitution was formally put out of commission at the Brooklyn Navy Yard last week, when her ensign was hauled down in the presence of all the officers of the yard. She now takes her place in what is called "Rotten Row" with the Susquehanna and Ticonderoga, and unless broken up and sold for relics will be allowed to fall gradually to pieces.

WOMANLY MODESTY.—Man loves the mysterious. A cloudless sky and a full-blown rose leaves him unmoved; but the violet which hides its blushing beauties behind the bush, and the moon when emerging from behind a cloud, are to him sources of inspiration and of pleasure. Modesty is to merit what shade is to a figure in painting—it gives boldness and prominence. Nothing adds more to female beauty than modesty. It sheds around the countenance a halo of light is borrowed from virtue. Botanists have given the rosy hue which tinges the cup of the white roses the name of the "maiden blush." This pure and delicate hue is the only paint Christian virtue should use. It is the richest ornament. A woman without modesty is like a faded flower diffusing an unwholesome odor, which the prudent gardener will throw from him. Her destiny is melancholy, for it terminates in shame and repentance. Beauty passes like the flower of the albe, which bloom and die in a few hours; but modesty gives the female charms which supply the place of the transitory freshness of youth.

THE GREAT LAKES.—Lake Erie is only sixty or seventy feet deep; but Lake Ontario, 502 feet deep, is 230 feet below the tide-level of the ocean, or as low as most parts of the Gulf of St. Lawrence; and the bottoms of Lakes Huron, Michigan and Superior although the surface is much higher, are all, from the vast depths, on a level with the bottom of Ontario. Now, as the discharge through Detroit river, after allowing for the probable portion carried off by evaporation, does not appear by any means equal to the quantity of water which the three upper lakes receive, it has been conjectured that a subterranean river may run from Lake Ontario. This conjecture is not improbable, and accounts for the singular fact that salmon and herring are caught in all the lakes communicating with the St. Lawrence, but no others. As the Falls of Niagara must have always existed it would puzzle the naturalist to say how these fish got into the upper lake without some subterranean river; moreover, any periodical obstruction of the river would furnish a not-improbable solution of the mysterious flux and reflux of the lakes.

DISORDERLY SOLDIERS.—One corporal, two musicians and seventeen privates of the Ninth Massachusetts Regiment have been found guilty of improper conduct, consisting of intoxication and disobedience to orders and unsoldierly and ungentlemanly acts committed while under the influence of liquor, during the regiment's recent trip to Yorktown. The penalty is discharged from the regiment.

Washington's birthday, Feb. 22th. Burt Congdon was in town last Monday. Our village Charter election next month. We want a correspondent in every neighborhood in the county.

The health of the citizens of Chelsea is reported good at the present time. We are having fine winter weather, clear and dry. St. Valentine's day will be next Tuesday the 14th.

A few tramps got lodging in the cooler the past week. Wheat continues to come in with a rush, and brings $1.30 per bushel. Time for payment of taxes extended to February 20th.

Nearly two weeks of spring weather. Lent begins February 23rd. Gilbert Gay is now engaged in the Chelsea Post-office as an assistant. We wish him success.

Mrs. Aaron Burkhardt left last week for Webster, to attend to her father who is very sick. F. D. Cummings and Wm. Judson, will leave for Texas tomorrow (Friday) with 18 car loads of sheep.

The Pittsburg Sunday Leader quotes Mr. Martin Karg, Silver Creek, Minn., cured a badly wounded horse with St. Jacobs Oil.

The ice houses in Chelsea are nearly all full. The ice will average about ten inches thick. Our merchants are beginning to stock up for their spring goods, which makes business somewhat livelier.

Mr. James M. Condon, has traded farms with Thos. Wilkinson. He going to Waterloo and Mr. Wilkinson to occupy the Congdon farm.

Charles Adams, father of Prof. C. K. Adams, of Ann Arbor, died Sunday night in his eightieth year. Guiteau says he will lecture within a year. Sorry that we won't be there on June 30th, to pull the rope and hear him squeal.

Sheep are booming in price. Buyers for the eastern market are in the north part of the county gathering up all that are for sale, paying as high as $5 to $6 per head for good animals—Grass Lake News.

Rev. David Edgar, editor and proprietor of the Dexter Leader, died at 7:30 last Saturday morning of pleuro-pneumonia. Mr. Edgar was in his office one week ago Saturday, but complained of not feeling well, and went home never to re appear at the office.

Frank Wight, a clerk at H. S. Holmes dry goods store met with an accident last week, by having a nail run into his foot. He is getting better.

H. S. Holmes is ahead of any other firm in town, by having a fine and varied stock of spring goods. He says he can beat the "Jews" for selling cheap goods. Call and be convinced to the fact. See change of advertisement on second page.

By actual merit the famous substance, St. Jacobs Oil, has steadily won its way into it is to-day the national remedy for rheumatism. Lawyers, physicians, clergymen—all use it.—Cincinnati (Ohio) Daily Enquirer.

A Nebel of Sharon, died Saturday of inflammation of the lungs. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn his loss, aged about 35 years. He was a member of the Chelsea workmen's society.

Miss Mary Heizer, who for the past three months has been a guest of D. Heim, returned to her home in Rochester N. Y., last Friday. Mary gained many friends in Chelsea and vicinity during her stay, and we all regret her departure.

James McNally, a young man of Ann Arbor township, was run over by a freight train near Ann Arbor last Friday night and had one foot cut off. James had been drinking.

A large number of the members of Chelsea lodge of Good Templars, visited Ann Arbor lodge on Tuesday evening of last week, for the purpose of being present at the initiation of R. E. Frazer, as a member of the latter mentioned society.

Mrs. Lara Schleicher of Ann Arbor, has been visiting at Miss Sophie Schatz of Chelsea, for the last two weeks.

H. S. Holmes is the happy father of a bouncing boy. The event occurred last Tuesday. Mother and child are doing well.

The Good Templars of Chelsea held a social last Tuesday eve. in their new hall. A good time was enjoyed by all present. The amount realized was $7.00.

We call special attention to our readers to the large new advertisement of Wood Bros., on second page.

The members of the Chelsea dramatic club are requested to meet at their rooms over the Post-office, next Monday evening. By order of President

The Good Templars have rented Thomas' hall. Now let the citizens of Chelsea help them to a carpet.

A serious accident happened to Dennis Spaulding, who lives about four miles south of this village. He was working upon a straw stack last Tuesday, and fell off a distance of twenty-five feet, breaking the spine of his back.

Frank Shaver has moved his barber business to Laird's building, east side, where he will be happy to meet his patrons and friends. Mr. S. intends to stock up with cigars, and other tobacco to suit the wants of his customers—and will also fit up his place in "city style," and other improvements, so as to make his shop one of the best in the State. A call solicited.

Geo. Whittaker has bought seventy acres of J. M. Letts' farm including all the buildings. Mr. Letts will build at once on the balance of his farm fronting on new street. George is an excellent young man and we are glad to know that he is going to remain among us.

The Chelsea bank has been changed in style to the Chelsea Savings bank, and will hereafter have a savings department in which interest will be paid on time deposits under proper regulations. When it gets into its new quarters it will be neat in appearance, and a strong reliable institution.

Lost.—Last Monday evening on Main street in this village, a gentleman's crocheted scarf. A valuable one, but prized more because of its associations than of its intrinsic worth. The finder will be liberally rewarded by leaving the same at this office.

We copy the following from the Millbrook Times (Kan.): Married, at the residence of the bride's parents, Tuesday evening, Jan. 24th, by Hon. James Gordon, Probate Judge, Mr. James Nevitt and Miss Nellie Randall, daughter of Dr. G. W. Randall, all of Millbrook township.

[We are informed that the above lady is a sister to Flora Randall of this village.—ED.]

The Chelsea cornet band, will give a grand masquerade, promenade and ball at Thomas' hall, next Tuesday eve. Feb. 14th, 1882. We hope the inhabitants of Chelsea and vicinity will turn out and give them a full house. They have added a good many new members to their band, and are deserving of having a good benefit. An invitation is extended to all. See large and small bills.

Wood Bro's Watch Poem.

This Poem is respectfully dedicated to the readers of the HERALD, and to those who have purchased watches of them, and who, by trial and comparison, proved their merits and cheapness.

THE WATCH THAT IS FAITHFUL AND TRUE. The Wood Bro's names are renowned, For no watches in Chelsea like theirs can be found. They'll keep time as true as the sun on the dial, And this you will find if you give them a trial.

For no class of watches you'll find as a rule Can compare with the make of Rockford, Ill They are neat and substantial of true Yankee make, Their finish is handsome, so the palm they must take.

Hark! here is a fact which no man can gainsay, A twenty-five dollar American Lever of elegant style! And never since Adam from Eden was hur'd, Has there been such a Lever as this in the world!

No gingerbread plaything lung up for a show, Which only was made for a season to go: The finest of Lever's of world-wide repute, A faithful timekeeper which none can dispute.

From hundreds who buy them they daily receive, Testimonials in proof of the service they give! Like Sol in the heavens, their rounds they will run, And always keep moving as true as the sun.

Some watches will go fast while others go slow, And seldom or never the time you will know. To many they prove an expensive affair, They punish your pocket when out of repair.

But these are the watches which no man need doubt, As true as the needle the time they point out; If you want a watch that will keep sure time and go, There is none that can equal Wood Bro's that's so.

Whether midnight or noonday, or morning or night, They'll watch Father Time in the course of his flight, They'll mark every step this old gentleman takes, And will take careful note of the progress he makes.

They'll register time in a marvellous way, And never, no never, your moments betray, As sure as you wind up these watches they'll go— You can always depend on the Rockford that's so.

A watch they call Rockford—Aye, this is the name— For ladies and gentlemen valued the same; At half-price they're selling, and if you incline, Then post off your order if you'd be in time.

At twenty-five dollars—this moderate charge, For an elegant watch to the people large; The same 's amazing, and all want to know "What's this watch they call Rockford from Wood Bro's?"

'Tis multum in parvo, a splendid affair, A neat silver watch, with which none can compare, From Atlantic to Pacific, o're land you'll go, But none can equal Wood Bro's, that's so. Chelsea, Feb. 2, 1882.

MANHOOD

How Lost, How Restored! Just published, a new edition of DR. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical cure of SPERMATORRHOEA or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary seminal Losses, IMPOTENCY, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, CONSUMPTION, EPILEPSY and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, etc.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land. Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, post-paid, on receipt of six cents or two postage stamps. Address THE CULVERWELL MEDICAL CO., 41 Ann St., New York. Post Office Box, 450.

GRACE'S VALENTINE

A crisp, clear morning, with a dome of purest blue overhead, and a mantle of snow-white ermine underneath the feet...

It was a pretty scene. Warmly clad and daintily blooming—lying along over the sparkling surface of the lake...

Such is life—fitter must mingle with the sweet, and suspicious, crabbed nature...

It was the day preceding the one which is marked with the white pebble upon the calendar of every child, and also upon that of many children of a larger growth...

But to return to my story. One swift-footed fairy of a girl was the cyresser of all eyes as she circled around...

She had no lack of attendants. It is one of the peculiarities of male nature to set a value upon what is most difficult to obtain...

I will not deny that Elsie was very much pleased when she saw Harry Vail make his appearance upon the ice...

Owing to this prepossession in his favor he was considered a privileged person among the rest of the boys...

"I want you to ask Harry," as you call him, to tell Mr. Clifton his Cousin Alice is visiting at your house...

"Yes, I shall put one in the post to-night for little May in the infant class at Sunday-school. You've seen him, May, and he's the cunningest little thing—and so patient!"

"May be I'll send him one, too, now that you've put me in mind of it. But aren't you going to have a little fun of your own account? I am. Mamma says I'm getting too big for such things, but I don't think so."

"I haven't quite made up my mind yet," answered Elsie, with a warning glance at her friend, for Harry was evidently paying interested attention to what they were saying...

"It is splendid fun to send comic ones," he answered, "that is, if you can hit upon a good one."

"We've a visitor at our house," said Harry, "and he's a perfect gem of a fellow. He can draw the oddest things. I believe I'll get him to scratch me off something nice, and I'll send it to the girl I want to love for my valentine all through the year."

"People can't always get what they want," was May's scintillating answer. "May be the one you like don't like you."

son in another sister who had reached the mature age of six.

"But 'Here's me, too, Tonsie Ally," piped a small voice, and Kitty was in turn kissed and made welcome.

"It was not long before the little runaways were missed from the nursery, and Miss Alleyn, their young governess, came in search of them to Miss Anstruther's room.

"You rogue," she said, smilingly, as she shook her finger at Kitty, "why did you let Mamie come and bother Miss Anstruther?"

"No, pet, not in the least. Come in, Miss Alleyn; I promised the children to show them my scrap-album, and as there are some things in it worth the attention of grown people, perhaps you would like to look it over with me."

Grace Alleyn accepted the invitation, and was soon engrossed with the pictures. As she sat with her head bent and her eyes cast down, Alice took the opportunity to satisfy her wish to have a good look at her face.

"What difference does that make?" burst in Alice impudently. "I did not fall in love with your uncle's money; it was with you."

"I did not mean that, Wayne, but I shall have to make my own things, even to my wedding dress and bonnet, and that would give me time."

Wayne had his way about the marriage taking place with that of Alice. Grace was married in white, and looked as graceful in her simple dress as did Alice in her rich toilette of satin and point-lace.

She would have dearly enjoyed presenting her Grace with a trousseau as hands as her own; but she could not prevail upon her to accept anything so costly, and so she had to content herself with giving a pretty and serviceable tea-set of silver for her wedding gift to her new cousin.

Shooting on the wing is a mechanical art like billiard playing, boxing, or fencing. There will, of course, be degrees of excellence, but any one with the full use of his faculties is doing as well as he can.

"So you are 'Grace'?" she said, softly. "I wish Wayne loved so dearly his promised wife. You naughty girl to almost break my poor cousin's heart. I thought I should have you if I ever met you, but I don't one bit. I love you, for I see that you are as unhappy as he is, and that there has been a mistake. Will you let me be peacemaker?"

What more she intended to say remained unspoken, for an interruption came. Elsie rushed into the room, eager and glowing from her walk to the post-office.

"O, Cousin Ally, see what a lovely valentine has been sent to me! It isn't any of your stupid bought ones, it's hand-painted, and I know who did it. It's Mr. Wayne Clifton, who's visiting Harry Vail's brother—his is the college club, Harry says."

Grace had recovered her self-possession by this time, and, but for the trembling of the hand which stroked Mamie's curls, one would not have believed that she had heard the name Elsie's very lips had uttered.

"I want you to ask Harry," as you call him, to tell Mr. Clifton his Cousin Alice is visiting at your house, and that she wishes to see him as soon as he can make it convenient to do so.

"I'll ask her," she said, "it's the luckiest thing you ever did in your life to draw that valentine for the youngest who sent it to my little cousin, for but for that I should not have known you were here. Now I want you to answer me a question: Are you still fond of Grace? I ask because you wrote me such a bitter letter about her that I am sure disappointed, but faithful love gave it its sting."

"Don't take up that old word, Ally; it is not sufficiently healed to bear probing. Do what I will I cannot help loving the girl, and I wish I could help her—the heartless coquette! to play with a man's happiness and then throw him over for a richer lover."

"Am I sure she did that, Wayne?" "Am I sure that I am alive?" he answered, bitterly. "But why do you ask?"

FARM AND FIELDSIDE

Sunflower seeds, fed in small quantities, imparts a beautiful gloss to the plumage of poultry.

Never set a hen in a box above the ground or floor of the chicken-house, if possible to do otherwise, as the eggs dry fast and lose their vitality.

There are some kinds of cotton cloth which almost invariably turn yellow when first washed; this can be prevented by two ways before the regular washing of the cloth is soaked in clear water.

A very agreeable dentifrice for good teeth is made from an ounce of myrrh in fine powder and a little powdered green sage, mixed with two spoonfuls of white honey.

Before dipping a new pen into ink thrust it into a fresh-cut potato, and the ink will never clog. When the pen is thickly gummed with dried ink a few thrusts will clean it perfectly.

Poor shelter, care and feed will, in a few generations, make scrubs of the finest thoroughbred stock. Thoroughbred scrubs are but little better than native scrubs, and the farmer who raises either will always be poor.

Allowing for considerable variations, owing to prices, etc., Professor Caldwell, of Cornell University, names from three-quarters to one pound per day to 1,000 pounds weight of stock, as the quantity of linseed oil cake, which may be most profitably fed during winter when it is only desired to keep the animals in good condition.

The Croup.—Take lobelia, ginger and cayenne pepper, of each one-half dram, put them in a pitcher with one-half pound of sugar and a pint of boiling water; stir the sugar dissolved; leave to settle; then add one dram of oil of peppermint, and one ounce of the tincture of myrrh.

The immense herds, now aggregating twenty millions, which roam over the pampas of the Argentine Republic, and comprise, with the sheep, most of the wealth of that country, are all descended from eight cows and a bull which two Portuguese brothers, named Goes, took to the Spanish colony there in 1533.

The alarming prevalence of the small-pox makes timely this item, taken from the Liverpool Mercury. "I am willing to risk my reputation as a public man," writes Edward Hine, "if the worst case of small-pox cannot be cured in three days, simply by the use of cream of tartar, one ounce of cream of tartar dissolved in a pint of water, drunk at short intervals when cold, is a certain, never-failing remedy. It has cured thousands, never leaves a mark, never causes blindness, and avoids tedious lingering."

Cup Coffee.—Four eggs, two cups sugar, one scant cup butter, one cup milk, one small teaspoonful soda, two of cream tartar. Beat the whites and yolks separately. Beat the sugar and butter very light, then add the eggs and just enough to stiffen. The flour should be used with good judgment, as there is great difference in the quality. Three cups of flour is the prescribed quantity, but Mrs. P.'s cook used less, and her cup cakes cannot be beaten by any one.—Mrs. Beecher.

Table Notes. A table daintily arranged with food daintily cooked and served produces a more favorable impression upon guests than one overladen with elaborate decorations and an unending variety of perhaps poorly prepared dishes, with no regard for order or appropriateness.

The table should be laid with the greatest care, first covered with a mat or cover of cotton flannel, which will add greatly to the appearance of the table-cloth, making it look much heavier and handsomer.

Well Indorsed by Our Own Citizens

No matter how useful anything may be in itself, good indorsements seem to increase its usefulness greatly by insuring a wider field for the display of its special merits.

What a Three-Cent Stamp Will Do

It will do more than any other piece of paper of its size and value in the world. It does what a five-cent stamp would do, and does it in a more economical manner.
