Legal Printing.—Persons having legal advertising to do, should remember that it is not necessary that it should be published at the county seat—any paper published in the county will answer. In all matters transpiring in this vicinity, the interest of the advertisers will be better served, by having the notices published in their home paper, than to take them to a paper that is not as generally read in their vicinity, besides it is the duty of every one to support home institutions as much as possible.

To Correspondents.
Correspondents will please write on one side of the paper only. No communication will be published unless accompanied with the real name and address of the author, which we require, not for publication, but as an evidence of good faith.

REHETORIC.
POETRY.

Poetry is the name given to compositions of imaginative character. Poetry appeals to the feelings; prose to the intellect. The arguments and opinions of the mind can be expressed directly. The feelings cannot. So poetry, the natural language of emotion, is the indirect expression of something that cannot be expressed directly.

It is said that while the foundation of plans and decisions is the intellect, feeling is the mainspring that incites men to action. We can see the truth of this each day of our lives. Every year the papers are full of statistics in regard to the evils resulting from the sale of liquor, and plans for stopping the business. But unless the feelings of the people are aroused, the cause will remain in the land till doomsday. Some scholars go to school day after day and do nothing, knowing all the time that they are wasting time that is worth more than money. But feeling, the guide-board of the thoughts, points some where else.

To influence people by arousing emotions within them that will make them look at truths that are staring them in the face all their lives, is the mission of poetry. The poets, then, must be a noble ambition.

But, men's emotions are not stirred by maxims, proverbs, or other abstract ideas, nor by illustrations that, come under their notice every day. Hence, the poet must be a quick observer, a keen analyzer of human character, and he must look deep into the nature of things, and see in familiar objects qualities that are hid from other eyes. Prose only hopes to reach the real. Poetry must aim at the ideal.

The natural form of poetry is verse; that is, lines of definite length, arranged with regard to meter and rhyme. This has led to a general habit of calling all versified composition, poetry. Taking the word in its real sense, it is far from being correct. All poetry is not in verse, nor is all verse, poetry.

It is divided into four classes: Lyric, Epic, Dramatic and Didactic. Lyric poems are adapted to be set to music. Therefore the versification must be very exact.

Epic poems narrate the adventures of heroes.

Dramatic poems are intended to be acted on the stage.

Didactic poems aim to instruct as well as to please and move. If there is a man who is to be envied, it is a true poet. He knows no party, no prejudice. He can at the same time admire the heroic bravery of Sigel and of Stonewall Jackson. He can see beauty on the roughest mountain or the most level prairie. He is not the friend of one man, but of all. His habit of studying life and nature prevents him from jumping at conclusions that will only serve to make him miserable; and while others are mourning over the troubles of life and looking with suspicion at every one, he looks for good, and good only; and one who does this will not fail to find it.

He finds in the most trivial object an amount of interest that others will not find in miles of scenery. Even the tiny pebble, he tells us, is an object, beautiful in itself, possessing qualities that are not to be found in the grandest works of art and genius. It lay here, he says, when the first man lived on the earth; and how long before, no one ever knew.

It was here when the mastodon and other monsters of the younger world, stalked across the plains, tramping down forest oaks as an ox does hael brush. It has seen the mound-builders explore the country, build cities, found empires, and pass away so completely as not to leave a name behind them. He tells us how, years after, the Indian smoked his pipe by his camp-fire beneath some great oak, and wondered at its age; not once thinking that the pebble that lay beside its root had seen such trees grow to a full size turn to dust more times than the sun rises and sets during the Indian summer. And he vividly pictures to us that that same little pebble, untarnished by the wear of ages, and unbroken by earthquakes that shake the world and tear down the very mountains, may be kicked, unnoticed, about the streets of a future city, after all signs of our boasted civilization have faded from earth.

There can be no man who is better calculated to benefit mankind, and at the same live a life of happiness, as he who sees "sermons in stones and good in every thing."—Com.

J. D. SCHMITMAN, Clerk.
Brother Scott Bounced.

AN EXAMPLE FOR SOCIETY IN GENERAL TO FOLLOW.

"Am' Brudder Abraham Scott in de hall dis evening?" inquired the president, as he looked down the aisles.

"Yes, sah," answered a voice from the north-west corner.

"Den please step dis way."
Brother Scott scuffled forward, head down, and his countenance betraying about seventeen different emotions, and when he reached the mark the president continued:

"Brudder Scott, in gwine ober to ole man Johnson's las' wife to borry a hunk o' butter for breakfast, I discovered some one lyin' on de sidewalk. My first thought was to yell murder. My next thought was smell of his bread. Dat settled de case at once. It wasn't a murder, but a case of dead drunk. I turned de subject ober to git a look at his face, and whod' 'e 'spose it was?"
Brother Scott gazed straight at a bust of Venus, and had nothing to say.

cloze, an' he hasn't a dozen taters in de house, he had taken good money from his pocket an' paid it out fur bad whiskey. He wasn't a man when I found him. He was a hog—a great big hog! I could smell his breath six feet away, an' it would have made a dog sick. He had lost his hat, rolled in de slush, an' den fallen into a stuporish sleep. I got help an' toted him home, an' to-night he comes to dis meetin' to have a wote among men who work hard, respect demselves an' lib sober lives."

"Ize sorry, sah."
"No doubt of it, but dat am no de-fense. A fool excites pity, kase God made him dat way. A lunatic draws sympathy kase he has met with misfortune. A drunkard arouses nuffin' but contempt. He deliberately goes at it to make a brute of hisself. You have heard me speak of dis matter on several previns occasions, an' you know how de majority of dis club feels on de subject. In de las' two months you have bin drunk fo' times."

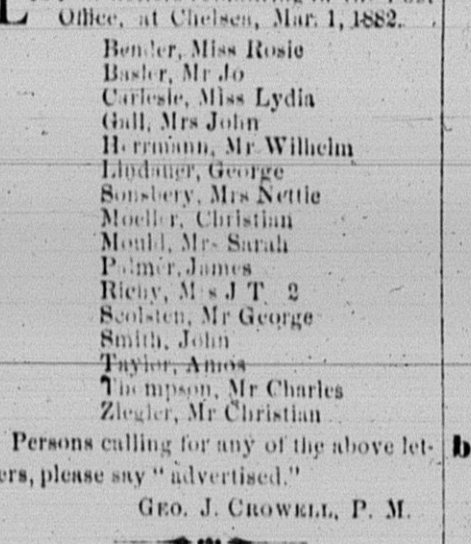

"Yes, sah; but I'll quit."
"I hope you will, but I doubt it. You had ebery thing to lose gettin' drunk de fast time. You have lost character, respect, money, an' standin', an' dar's litle hope dat you will see any reason to quit. We kin guard agin' thieves by lockin' up our money. We kin put de murderer in prison an' have him outer de way. We kin expose de liar an' kiver him with confusion. But de drunkard—de dog—de beast—who kin trust him? Who kin believe him? Who wants him? Who am not degraded by walkin' beside him? Brudder Scott, you am a bounced man! Your name will be crossed from our rolls, you will be refused admission here, and we shall forget dat you war eber numbered wid us. Let us now attack de reg'lar order o' business.—Lime Kiln Club.
