Big Show.

The event of the year will be the grand street parade, of Maybury, Pullman & Hamilton's Mastodon Circus & Menagerie, which exhibits in our town on Tuesday, May 30th. This is one of the largest circuses that has ever visited our town, and we feel assured that it will please our people and make many friends among us in this its first visit to our State. The press wherever it has exhibited are a unit in their words of praise of it. The show wintered in Louisville, Ky., and opened the season there with two days performances on April 7th & 8th. After seeing the Show, the Louisville Courier Journal says of it:
Maybury, Pullman & Hamilton's "Grand United Mastodon Show," so designed on the bills gave two performances in Louisville yesterday, which, considering the disadvantages of the weather and other drawbacks inseparable from the opening exhibition of the season, were very successful. The crowd at the afternoon performance was not as large as usually attend circuses here, owing to the rain which was falling at the time, but nevertheless it was by no means a small crowd, and at night it was all that could have been desired. The show was a good one. The menagerie is interesting, while the ring performance is a long and varied one of much merit. All the features can not be mentioned, but it would be unfair not to give praise to the splendid horsemanship of Gorman, who, in his numerous bareback feats, displayed admirable skill and daring. The Zeiglers and Baldwins, in their athletic performances, were remarkably effective, as was the young "Ajax" in his fine contortions. The Belmonts were consummate masters of the trapeze, and added no little to the entertainment of the exhibition. The trained dogs and pony were perfect in their way, and were certainly among the most pleasing features of the show. Little Blanche Pullman, in her ball-rolling and skipping, was wonderfully expert, and Salie and Will Marks, in their double equestrianism, were capital. The circus has an excellent clown in the shape of a dog.

DEAR HERALD.—There is an old adage, "that what can't be cured must be endured" and that may be so, but there are but few such cases, but rather, where there is a will there is a way, the trouble of the most of the ills of life, arise from a listless course being pursued, and not an aggressive war waged upon the subject of complaint. I will what led to this thought, was having one of our citizens making complaint about the number of young lads, just in tiny manhood, who are lounging and killing time around town, doing nothing but eating the bread a kind parent provides for the poor child, who is not able to do anything else, but who once seated at the frugal board reminds one of an able bodied man in his attack upon the necessities of life of which he has not contributed a groat to the providing, and it is a lamentable fact, that the parents of such sons are more to blame than the children themselves, they are taught to ignore work that will fit them for usefulness in life, and help to those who cared for them in helpless youth. These young men will sit around, Micawber like, expecting something to turn up, whereby they will become famous by their superior talents, and so flitter away their prospects of laying the foundations of a life of industry and usefulness. There is one thing they are generally ready for, an odd job where no labor or time is required, so that they can extort four times the pay for it, that their services deserved, but they must have a cigar or tobacco to make them manly, or candy to feed some (birdie) as they designate the simpering girl who looks upon them with any favor. They are to indolent to do the few chores and errands of the house, but if asked to do so will flatly refuse or skip out to some hay loft and lay hid until the task is performed by the (old man or old woman) as the case may be— if they are compelled to attend school you rarely find they have more than one study—and then constant complaint is they don't want to go because they don't learn anything—in that they have mastered every branch taught in the school. Such boys have no ideas of what life is, with its responsibilities, they are straws upon the sea of life.

This class of boys move along the streets as though their feet were encased in leaden clogs, and drop upon the first dry goods box they come to under the awning or shadow of some friendly wall, their pockets filled with dime novels, and heads as empty of anything useful as a drum, boys who never earned in all their lives enough to buy themselves a decent suit of clothing, they are a class to which a parody on one of Burns' Poems may apply:
A loading lad is my degree,
And few there are that kee me o'
But what care I how few there be
I'm welcome to my mammy O.

Died.

At the old homestead in Sylvan town ship, Washtenaw Co., Mich., April 17th, 1882, surrounded by his children, passed into the unseen, Mr. Anson Reed aged 79 years.
The Subject of this memoir was born in Herkimer Co., N. Y., in the year of 1803. In the year of 1848 he came to Michigan, and settled on the farm on which he died, came into the wilds of a new State, to grapple with the hardships and privations of a new country—but well has he wrought—the forests have give way, beautiful fields have taken their place. He lived to see his children grow up into manhood and womanhood, and settled in good circumstances—he leaves an aged widow to mourn his loss with three, sons and three daughters: So the old pioneers are passing away, and others are entering into their labors. Time passes on, and soon the places that now know us will know us no more forever. Funeral services at house conducted by Rev. E. A. Gay of Chelsea, Text Genesis 35—29—and Isaac gave up the ghost, and died and was gathered unto his people, being old and full of days; and his sons Esau and Jacob buried him. And so he was laid to rest, near the home where he has gone out and in these many years, by kind neighbors and friends who sympathize with the mourning ones.

Our Darling.

BY WILL, THE POOR SCHOLAR.
Love sometimes leaves the beaten track and finds sweetest solace among the little flowers of earth.
My girl is not a maid of sweet sixteen, With dangling curls and dress of latest style, Coyetish smile and ever changing whim; But a wee darling scarcely six years old, With slightly blushing cheek and modest mien;
And lovely eyes which I can ne'er forget. Sometimes I lay aside my books and think Of that fair picture, which has made my life The brighter and the better.
My girl's her father's pet and mother's joy. She carries light and sunshine where she goes. Her merry laughter, full of childish glee, Reminds one of that holy, happy place Where sorrow's tears shall all be wiped away.
Like a light cloud before the rising sun— Banished by God's own presence.
Sometimes she stands beside me and look up With eyes so full of gentleness and love; Through whose fair lattice looks a noble soul.
I pray "Our Father" who inhabits Heaven With yearning prayer doubly importunate; That to her pure and beautiful child-life Sorrow and sin and pain may never come. I think't was of such little ones as she Our Holy Savior spake on that bright day When mother's brought their innocents an' crav'd
His choicest grace and blessing and he said Of such was Heaven's kingdom.
May He whose watchful care protects the birds; Whose hand paints all the flowers of the field In colors pleasing to the eye and mind; Whose power holds the weight of moving worlds, Bless the dear children whether good or bad, And lead them to Himself.
For bad influence leads the mind away, And makes what might be great intellect, And the adornment of a happy home, A mean groveling thing. God pity such And snatch us brands from the eternal burning.

Mexican Curiosities.

Professor Crosby superintendent of the Museum department of Maybury, Pullman & Hamilton's great Shows, spent the past fall and winter in southern and central Mexico, in quest of antiquated relics of the Aztecs that race of people whose regime in Mexico was one of splendor, more gorgeous then data from all ancient and sacred history gives reference. Their wealth was far greater than that of the Orient, they arose in their splendor, dazzled the world with their wealth and acquisitions and disappeared so suddenly that not an item of information can be learned from the annals of Mexican history as to the disposition of their wealth or the whereabouts of the relics of the race. Recent explorations have developed many rare evidences of the truthfulness of the heretofore deemed incredulous stories of the advancement in the arts and affluence of this defunct race. Prompted by his love of science and habitually researches for evidences of his scientific theories. Professor Crosby, through the assistance of our generous government and its intervention with the Mexican Government was enabled to visit the scene of these explorations, and as the fruits of his researches, he has on exhibition one of the most interesting collections of ancient Mexican curiosities ever preserved by man. The scientist, the naturalist, the sage or the surfer, can each find much of interest in this collection and this lecture of Signore De Satti is at once amazing, entertaining, instructive and chaste. Remember the Show will be here Tuesday, May 9th.

The American Express Co., are now issuing money orders to many points reached by express lines in the United States, in sums from one dollar to five for 5 cents, from five dollars to ten eight cents. Call on their agent W. F. Hatch who will save you money. The sheep shearing festival held at Manchester, April 21st, was a grand success, the number shown was smaller than last year, but the quality much better. The exhibitors were C. M. Fellows Sharon, C. C. Dorr Sharon, A. A. Wood Sharon, Van gieson Bro's Clinton, E. J. Foster Sylvan, James M. Kress Clinton, Jerry Vangieson Brooklyn, W. E. Kennedy Somerset, and others. Breeders all report a great demand for good sheep, particularly from the west, as Michigan bred sheep give better satisfaction in the west than any others.

The St. Louis (Mo.) Post-Dispatch at the close of a long article says: In fact St. Jacobs Oil is pushing all other remedies out of the field, and, excellent though some of the liniments, formerly offered are, the efficacy of St. Jacobs Oil is magical in cases of sciatica, rheumatism, pleurisy, neuralgia, nervous headache, lumbago and scores of other disorders; while in the case of sprains, burns or injuries it is an absolute panacea, and for general use it is better than the advice of many physicians. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

Mr. M. J. Noyes arrived home last Friday with 16 fine horses. He has sold six of them to a party in Albion, Mich. Mr. N. considers the last car load to be as good as can be had in the State.

Flowers 6 cts. to $5.00, the most beautiful feathers in the market. Ribbons at cost, Brussels net, Wash blond, Valenciennes and Spanish laces, etc. Come and see. Mrs. Callohan.

We call special attention to the banking advertisement of R. Kempf & Brother, on second page. U. H. Townsend has purchased the news depot from Mr. Conk. He intends to stock up with every kind of periodicals, and will make it one of the finest news depots in the State; also keeps on hand all kinds of fresh-sheet music etc. Depot McKune block, Middle street east.

Attention is called to the great closing out sale of M. W. Robinson's dry goods store, at Jackson. See large advertisement on second page.

The agents and bill posters of Maybury, Pullman and Hamilton's great railroad Show have been billing in and around Chelsea, for the past week. As fast as one agent and his men leave, another comes in, and the consequence is our town and country was never more thoroughly billed than it is now for this Show. The company are to be congratulated upon having representative men ahead of them who know the value of printers ink. Clem Davis the press agent, paid the HERALD office a visit on Tuesday last, and the effects of his visit will be found elsewhere in the shape of a double column advertisement. He is an old printer, carries "a card" and says he "never builds a bridge over a newspaper." Look-out for him along the line.

Well Indorsed by our own Citizens.

No matter how useful anything may be in itself good indorsements seem to increase its usefulness greatly by insuring a wider field for the display of its special merits. We were thus impressed in view of the following statements received by one of our representatives from leading individuals connected with some of the largest enterprises in our midst. Among others whose testimony was freely given was W. H. Stearns, Esq., Master Mechanic of the Conn. River Railroad, residing at No. 28 Boyton street, who observed:—"St. Jacobs Oil has had remarkable effect among the men employed here. One of them jammed his arm very badly, and by the use of St. Jacobs Oil was greatly benefited, and the arm was healed. Another used it for severe rheumatic pains in the knee, and pronounced the Oil a complete success as he was cured by its use. Mr. A. B. Taylor, of the "Ray & Taylor Manufacturing Co." was pleased to say: "My aunt, Mrs. Pillsbury, of Mount Clair, N. J., while visiting at our house tried St. Jacobs Oil for rheumatism and neuralgia, and found immediate relief every time. She pronounced it the best thing she had ever tried for the trouble. Mr. J. B. Weston, 45 Greenwood street, Supt. Car Works, Boston & Albany Railroad, thus addressed our reporter: "I am one more of the fortunates who have had the good luck to hear of that wonderful remedy, St. Jacobs Oil. I had rheumatism in the shoulder severely and could find no relief until I used the Oil. I applied it and must confess I was surprised at the results. I am almost well and expect to be entirely so in a few days."—Springfield (Mass.) Union.

A QUEER FELLOW TRAVELER.

A True Story. Some years ago I had occasion to take a long journey to the north—a journey which would involve my traveling all night. A few days before I had received an invitation from a friend of mine, who lived at a town which I had to pass, to dine and stay the night at his house; an invitation which I gladly accepted, as it would prove a pleasant break in the monotony of the journey. I resolved therefore to so arrange matters as to arrive at his house in time for dinner, and proceeded to my destination next morning. When the day arrived I was very busy; so, after a hurried lunch, I packed up a few necessities and rushed off to Euston, where I arrived with just two minutes to spare. I asked for my train, which the guard pointed out, adding: "If you don't hurry up, sir, you'll lose it." I took his advice, and jumped into the nearest first-class compartment, the door of which stood open, and in which there was but one other occupant, myself, for my journey, and for the first time had leisure to observe my fellow-traveler. Now, I rather pride myself on being a judge of physiognomy, and my first impressions of him were the reverse of pleasant. He was evidently a fidgety, nervous sort of man; he had restless gray eyes, without much expression in them, while his hair and beard were of a reddish hue. He was dressed in a long ulster, which I thought quite unnecessary; for though it was late in the year, the weather was by no means cold. There was on the seat beside him a small oak box, strongly bound with brass; and his eyes were constantly glancing from this box to me in a way that I did not at all like. I began to have visions of Fenian plots, infernal machines, and I do not know what. After regarding me steadily for a few minutes, he said: "Is it possible, sir, that you are not aware of this carriage being reserved for State officials?"

I looked around and seeing no indication of the fact, replied that: "I was not aware of such being the case." "Then, sir," he replied, "I must beg of you instantly to vacate it, and leave me in solitary silence." Considering that the train was then going at the rate of about forty miles an hour, and would not stop until it reached a small station half-way to my destination in about an hour's time, I could not quite see how I was to comply with his request, or rather command; and I frankly told him so, adding that "I had as much right there as he had, and did not intend moving."

He replied with a most solemn air: "Then your fate be on your own head." This began to frighten me, for the man's manner convinced me that he must be insane; and the prospect of an hour's journey shut up in a first-class railway carriage with a madman was not calculated to raise my spirits. However, I put a bold face on the matter, and affected to be engrossed with my newspaper, and though in reality I was watching his every movement. He suddenly seized the hold of the wooden box and held it on his knees, mumbling some inarticulate words, then suddenly replaced it beside him. In doing so I caught a glimpse of the butt of a pistol sticking out of his pocket. Here was a pretty dilemma; shut up in a railway carriage with a man who was decidedly insane, and armed with a revolver or pistol; while I had nothing more defensive than an umbrella and a roll of papers, which, in consequence of their length, I was compelled to carry in my hand. Presently he began again:

"Have you studied the marvelous powers of electricity, may I ask?" I replied in the negative. "I have," said he, "and have arrived at such a pitch of perfection that, aided by the contents of this box, I could blow infinitesimal atoms." "But," I hazarded, "how about yourself?" "I should calmly mount into the air and survey the scene without injury." "How?" said I. "That," he replied, "is my business; look to yourself." Pleasant this, for me! However, I made some remark which seemed to satisfy him, and he lapsed again into silence. I felt more than ever convinced of his madness, thinking he had probably escaped from some private asylum, for he was evidently a gentleman; yet I could not understand what the box could be which he guarded so jealously. I felt sorry for him, in spite of my dangerous situation. I then tried another tack, and made several commonplace remarks to him; to all of which he answered in monosyllables, suddenly bursting out with:

"Do you dare to address me, sir, without having first disclosed to me who you are? Your temerity surprises me!" I thought it best to humor him, and handed him my card, on which was inscribed: "E. Smith, Esq., Smith's, you look like one; a blacksmith, if I may judge by the smuts on your face." Here he broke into a maniacal laugh. When he had finished laughing he said: "Do you want to know who I am?" "I said I thought I might as well know his name, if he did not mind." "Well," said he, leaning forward and peeping into my eyes, keeping one hand on the box, "when you first jumped into the carriage I was the Khan of Tartary, but the wonders of electricity are such that I am now a blacksmith; I may be anybody in a few hours, or even minutes." I suppose I looked surprised, for he went on: "Ah, you look surprised, but perhaps you will hardly believe that my temper depends on who I may happen to be. Not long ago I was conversing with some friends, and I suddenly changed into the King of Siam, and before they could get out of my way I bit three of their fingers off. You should have seen them scatter. Ha, ha, ha!" "Good gracious!" I exclaimed. "You don't mean it?" "O, yes I do; but do not be alarmed, I never am so dangerous unless I happen to assume that character."

Then he sat quiet, and I was thankful for a little peace. On looking at my watch I found that we had yet another quarter of an hour before the train would stop. How I wished the time away! For I fully intended to change my carriage at the next stopping station. All at once, to my alarm, he said, quite unconcernedly: "I feel it my solemn duty to inform you that I am changing, and that in a few minutes I shall be the King of Siam."

Instinctively I looked around for some means of escape, at the same time grasping my umbrella firm, resolved at least to sell my fingers dearly. Never shall I forget the feeling of thankfulness with which I heard the whistle of the train announcing our approach to the next station. I collected my things together near me, so as to be prepared for a hasty exit, the more so as I noticed the feelings of his Majesty of Siam were being worked up to a pitch of excitement, and the way he showed his teeth would have terrified a far less nervous man than myself. As we neared the station the train lurched, and at last stopped. Just as I jumped out the maniac made a spring at me, but I fortunately avoided him, and slammed the door in his face. I got into the next compartment, which was empty; and, as the guard closed the door, I called out: "Here, I say, guard, there is a madman in—." But the whistle drowned the rest of my sentence, and the train moved off before I had time to complete it. I sat still in a horrible state of nervousness, expecting I hardly know what.

At last the train stopped at the station for which I was bound, and I jumped out. As I passed the carriage I could see him sitting there quietly; and I went into the station master's room and told him shortly what had happened, advising him to take some means of securing him. He promised to telegraph, but said it was no business of his; and with this assurance I had to be content. I then went off to my friend's house, where I arrived just in time for dinner. I suppose the traces of my fright still lingered in my mind, for when I entered the dining-room that my host exclaimed: "Why, what is the matter, old man? You've not met a ghost on the road, have you?" I told him I had seen somebody a good deal worse than a ghost; and, during dinner, I related my adventure, upon which they all congratulated me on my lucky escape. After dinner I went off early to bed, pleading fatigue and the next day's business as my excuse.

When I awoke in the morning, I found my host ready for breakfast; and I joined him at once as my train left in an hour's time. As I shook hands with him at the station, he remarked he should like to hear of the man being caught. I transacted my business; and, as I had time to spare, I turned into the first hotel I came to, and walked up into the billiard-room, where I met Fred Charlton, an old schoolfellow of mine, who was playing billiards with three other fellows. He seemed surprised to see me, and asked me how I got there. I told him I had come down there early that morning, and then proceeded to give him a sketch of my adventurous journey of the night before. Fred smiled, and said: "Ah, yes, old man; I heard something about it."

"You heard something?" I said. "From whom?" "Well," he replied, "I'll tell you all about it, for the benefit of the company. Old Harris, the diamond merchant, told me last night that he had just come down from London. When he had taken his seat in the carriage at Euston all alone, just as the train started, some fellow rushed at him, and jumped in. Harris said he did not much like the look of the fellow, and as he had about eight thousand pounds' worth of diamonds with him in a small box, he began to feel uncomfortable. He said the stranger was a strong active man, and that if it had come to a struggle for the diamonds Harris would have had no chance—for he evidently felt sure the fellow meant robbery, so he determined to try and frighten him out of the carriage by pretending madness, which he says he did so effectively that the fellow, in sheer fright, bolted at the first step and left him to finish his journey here alone. But we did not know that you were the hero, old man, said Fred. "You must stay and be introduced to him again, and he will be here to-night."

I did not stop to hear anything more. I rushed downstairs, thoroughly realizing that I had been made a fool, caught in the first train home, and have not sought myself in that neighborhood since.

A Western Mine. A Committee of stockholders who waited upon the Superintendent of a California mine to ask why in blazes the said mine hadn't panned out anything but assessments were graciously received, and invited to be seated, and the official explained: "Gentlemen, you are all aware of the fact that we had scarcely begun work when the mouth of our mine was blocked by a landslide. That put us back a month." They nodded their remembrance. "Then we had just got in shape to take out 4,000 tons of ore, worth $2,000 per ton, when the mine caved in. You recall it?" They did.

"Once more we bent ourselves to the burden of reaping $500 for every $10 invested, when the mine was flooded by a subterranean river." "That was true all right." "Then we had just got the water out when we discovered that our mine was located on another man's claim. We had him shot to prevent trouble, and once more we were about to declare a dividend of 200 per cent. when the dead man's heirs put in an appearance. There were three of them. We chased one of them by the range, had another one hung by the Vigilance Committee, and I am happy to inform you that I have every hour expecting to hear that he has tumbled off a cliff. Gentlemen, there is hope ahead—golden hope. Please come up and drink with me; after which there will be another assessment of ten per cent!"—Wall Street News.

—Seth Barnes, a fifteen-year-old boy from North Sterling, Cayuga County, N. Y., died a few days ago of verdigris poisoning caused by swallowing a short piece of a brass watch-chain.

A Duel With Dominoes.

Not long ago two young fellows, journeymen bronzsmiths, were sitting in a small Warsaw cafe, playing dominoes. A glass half full of liquor stood on the table between them, and one or two of their fellow-workmen were looking on at the game with evident interest. There was little in the appearance of the group to attract special attention, still less the four young men composing it were two duellists and their seconds, or that the stake of the dominomatch was a human life. Presently, however, the game having come to a conclusion, the younger of the two players, a lad of sixteen named Stanislas Julian, lifted the glass to his lips, and drank off its contents at a draught. Five minutes later he was a corpse. The wretched boys had quarrelled and agreed to fight a duel in such sort that the death of one or the other must ensue. Having placed themselves in the hands of two seconds, these latter arranged that their principals should play a "best" of three games at dominos, upon the solemn understanding that the loser should swallow a dose of the deadliest poison procurable. This hideous compact was carried out to the letter, nor did any of the surviving persons concerned in it, when interrogated by the police authorities, before whom they were summoned for the purpose, betray the least remorse for the part they had taken in this ghastly transaction. Julian's adversary, indeed, boldly avowed that, had he lost the match, he would have fulfilled his pledge to drink the poison as faithfully as had his dead antagonist; and the seconds protested that they had only "done their duty in seeing the duel fairly fought out according to the conditions settled beforehand."—London Telegraph.

Booth's Panacea. The audience at the Opera House last Friday night when Edwin Booth played "Hamlet," undoubtedly noticed the pungent odor that pervaded the house, after the great scene between Hamlet and his mother, during which the old Chamberlain Polonius is killed. It was peculiar yet not unpleasant, and only those familiar with the substance producing it could account for the odor. The eminent tragedian himself and the company supporting him, have been suffering for several days past from colds and physical aches produced by the changeable weather and the usual exposure on the stage, and one of the company, Mr. D. C. Anderson, who played Polonius, was taken violently and suddenly ill during the play; by directions of Mr. Booth, who is always solicitous for the welfare of his people, a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil was brought from his dressing case and the suffering actor thoroughly rubbed with it, the famous German Remedy, which soon brought relief and recovery. Mr. Booth always carries this reliable ointment with him, and the contents of his dressing case without it, would be as incomplete as the play of Hamlet without the ghost.—Burlington (Ia.) Gazette.

In proof of the assertion that cattle will stray into strange places, we have seen a cow hide in a shoemaker's shop.

The Engineer of Cincinnati says: Hon. P. T. Barnum strongly indorses St. Jacobs Oil for pain. His combination and artists all use it.

A COOKING QUIP.—The rolling pin.—A. C. Picayune.

JUDGE W. F. FILEY, of Pittsfield, this State, was cured of severe rheumatism by St. Jacobs Oil.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

"HANNAN," said Mr. Smiley after reading the paper, "do you remember the 'evening Star' Highwight?" "La, yes, Ichabod, I never forgot her. Why she had a sniffling notion that you, did, after you were out of your put that very delicately. I did pay some little attention to her and she seemed to like it. Well, I see by the paper her husband is dead." "Poor thing!" "Well, you needn't be. He was a low-lived, sneaking, miserable scoundrel as ever I read the paper." "The great reason for his death," cried Sarah herself and Ired her husband, "Ichabod!" exclaimed his wife. "I've always been a good wife to you. Haven't you always lived with me, and have you ever squandered your money on any other woman's territory of her? 'Yes, yes, yes. There, there. Why, why. Who'd a thought? Why, that have I been squandering, anyhow? and it was about an hour and a half before the reconciliation occurred, but then it was worth the little difficulty."—New Haven Register.

How Very Annoying. When one is invited out to a hearty dinner, how very annoying such dyspeptic symptoms as retching of the food, belching, heat in the stomach, heartburn, etc. If this afflicted, your digestive organs are weak. Nothing assists so effectively in giving tone and strength to the stomach as St. Jacobs Oil, as that Queen of all vegetable tonics, Dr. Guyot's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It is a cordial tonic, and it makes good flesh and blood. It cures hysteria, nervous excitability, wasting of the flesh, and expels all blood impurities. For brain workers it is especially beneficial; it checks all tendency to insanity. It removes such symptoms as dizziness, shivering, tremor, and loss of memory, erig, catarrh of the bladder, painful urination, dyspepsia, general despondency, etc.

JAMES GORDON BENNETT'S new yacht cost $50,000. It is hardly necessary to state that Mr. Bennett is an excellent Chicago Tribune.

MR. CHARLES A. REYNOLDS, of Madison, Ind., writes: "For ten years I have been trying to regain my health. Sometimes I could not get my kidneys, again, I would take such medicines and consumption cures, and then my dyspepsia would return. I had to go to a doctor for that. Hearing of Dr. Guyot's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, I bought a bottle, it did me more good than I expected. I am now in perfect health, and have not felt sick for a long time. I feel strong in every part of my body, and at night I enjoy most refreshing, dreamless slumber."

SPRING FEVER

There are political outbreaks so popular with the whole people that the state dare not interfere. The breaking out of pustules, pimples, letter and the like on the face, can be pleasantly cured by Dr. Benson's Skin Cure. Also good for the hair and scalp. Dr. Benson is also the proprietor of Celery and Chamomile Pills, which now have a wide reputation as the best remedy known for all diseases of the nerves and all kinds of headaches.

The man who never failed is a myth. Such a one never lived, and is never likely to. All success is a series of efforts, in which, when viewed, are seen more or less failures. The mountain is not to overthrow the hill; but a hill is reality, nevertheless. If you fail now and then, do not be discouraged. Bear in mind it is only the part and experience of every successful man and the most successful men often have the most failures.

Fees of Doctors. The fee of doctors is an item that very many persons are interested in just at present. We believe the schedule for visits is $3, which would take a man confined to his bed for a year, and a family physician for a year for medical attendance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1,000 and all the year's sickness.—Post.

Of course, smoking is worse than chewing, for the old adage says: "Of two evils choose the least."

"FROGERS are not always facts," but the incontrovertible facts concerning Kidney-Wort are before us. For instance: "It is curing everybody," writes a druggist. "Kidney-Wort is the most popular medicine we sell." It should be right, for no other medicine has such specific action on the liver, bowels and kidneys. Do not fail to try it.

"Does poultry pay?" asked a stranger of a city dealer. "Of course," was the reply; "even the little chickens sell out."
