

NOTICE.—All communications, local notices, and advertisements must be handed in on Monday of each week, to insure that week's publication. The above rules will be strictly adhered to.

Legal Printing.—Persons having legal advertising to do, should remember that it is not necessary that it should be published at the county seat—any paper published in the county will answer. In all matters transpiring in this vicinity, the interest of the advertisers will be better served, by having the notices published in their home paper, than to take them to a paper that is not as generally read in their vicinity, besides it is the duty of every one to support home institutions as much as possible.

To Correspondents.
Correspondents will please write on one side of the paper only. No communication will be published unless accompanied with the real name and address of the author, which we require, not for publication, but as an evidence of good faith.
All communications should be addressed to

Goodly Signs

BY WILL, THE POOR SCHOLAR.

Lines partly suggested by the lecture of the Rev. Holmes, at the Congregational Church, Sunday evening, May 7th, Subject: "What shall I be?"

A man who scorns to be ignoble Or say a mean unmanly word, A true knight to all womankind, A seeing leader of the blind, Whose soul vibrates to no discord.

A woman living to be noble, With virtue's pure white flag unfurled; Lifting from low to higher station Those who would rise to elevation, Shaping the hand that rocks the world.

Peace where once was strife and clamor, Bugle call and clang of arms;
The awful death-fend howling near,
To change the conflict for the bier,
And wake a mother's dread alarms.

A victory over sin and villainess Death and the grave and vice and shame—A conflict for the nobler things Which living to be purer brings—
The triumph of a blameless name.

Courtesy at Home.

Good breeding, like charity, should begin at home. The days are past when children used to rise the moment their parents entered the room where they were, and stand until they had received permission to sit. But the mistake is now made usually in the other direction of allowing too small boys and girls, too much license to disturb the peace of the household. I think the best way to train children in courtesy would be to observe towards them a scrupulous politeness. I would go so far as to say that we should make it as much a point to listen to children without interrupting them, and to answer them sincerely and respectfully as if they were grown up. And indeed many of their wise, quaint sayings are far better worth listening to than the stereotyped common-places of most morning callers. Of course, to allow uninterrupted chatter would be to surrender the repose of the household, but it is very easy, if children are themselves scrupulously respected, to teach them in turn scrupulously to respect the convenience of others, and to know when to be silent.

If a child is brought up in the constant exercise of courtesy toward brothers and sisters and playmates, as well as toward parents and uncles and aunts, it will have little to learn as it grows older. I know a bright and bewitching little girl who was well instructed in table etiquette, but who forgot her lessons sometimes, as even older people do now and then. The arrangement was made with her that for every solecism of this sort she was to pay a fine of five cents, while for every similar carelessness which she could discover in her elders she was to exact a fine of 10 cents. Their experience of life being longer than hers. You may be sure that Mistress Bright eyes watched the proceedings of the table very carefully. No slightest disregard of the most conventional etiquette escaped her quick vision, and she was an inflexible creditor and a faithful debtor. It was the prettiest sight to see her, when conscious of some failure on her own part, go unhesitatingly to her box and pay cheerfully her little tribute to the outraged proprieties.

The best brought up family of children I ever knew were educated to the principle of always commending them when it was possible to do so, and letting silence be the reproof of any wrong doing which was not really serious. I have heard the children of this household, when their mother had failed to say any word of commendation after some social occasion, ask as anxiously as possible, "what was it mamma? I know something was wrong. Didn't we treat the other children well, or were we too noisy?" In that house reproof was never bestowed unsought—only commendation, of whatever it was possible to commend, was gratuitous.

I think this system would be as good for those grown-up children, the husbands and wives, as for those still in the nursery. I once asked the late Hepworth Dixon, with whom I happened to be talking on this subject, what he thought was the reason why some women held their husband's heart securely and forever, while others were but the brief tenants of a few months or years. "What," I asked, "is the quality in a woman which her husband loves longest?"

"That she should be a pillow," answered Mr. Dixon, and then meeting the inquiry in my eyes, he went on, "Yes, that is what a man needs in his wife—something to rest his heart on. He has excitement and opposition enough in this world. He wants to feel that there is one place where he is sure of sympathy, a place that will give him ease as a pillow gives it to a tired head. Do you think a man will be tempted to turn from the woman whose eyes are his flattering mirror—who heals where others wound?"

And surely he was right. We are grateful for ever a too-flattering faith in us, and if there is any good in us at all, we try to deserve this faith. But tenderness in the conjugal heart is much more common than grace in the conjugal manner. Since, however, next to that supreme good of being satisfied in one's own conscience is that second great good of being satisfied in one's home, surely no details of manners that tend to such a result are too slight to be observed. I believe in making as pretty a toilet to greet the returning husband as one puts on to await the expected, sweet heart; and, when the husband comes, he makes a mistake fatal to his own interests if he fails to notice what he would have praised in other days. It is a trite saying that life is made up of trifles; but surely the sum of all these domestic trifles amounts to the difference between happiness and unhappiness.—[Louise Chandler Moulton.

A TRUE LADY.—Wildness is a thing which girls cannot afford. Delicacy is a thing which cannot be lost or found. No act can restore to the grape its bloom. Familiarity without confidence, without regard is destructive to all that makes woman exalting and ennobling. It is the first duty of a woman to be a lady. Good breeding is good sense. Bad manners in a woman is immorality. Awkwardness may be ineradicable. Bashfulness is constitutional. Ignorance of etiquette is the result of circumstances. All can be condoned and not banish men or women from the amenities of their kind. But self-possessed, unshrinking, and aggressive coarseness of demeanor may be reckoned as a state's prison offence, and certainly merits that mild form of restraint called imprisonment for life. It is a shame for women to be lectured on their manners. It is a bitter shame that they need it. Do not be restrained. Do not have impulses that need restraint. Do not wish to dance with the prince unsought; feel differently. Be sure you confer honor. Carry yourself so loftily that men will look up to you for reward, not at you in rebuke. The natural sentiment of man toward woman is reverence. He loses a large means of grace when he is obliged to account her a being to be trained in propriety. A man's ideal is not wounded when a woman fails in worldly wisdom; but if in grace, in tact, in sentiment, in delicacy, in kindness she would be found wanting, he receives an inward hurt.—Gail Hamilton.

AMERICANS IN EUROPE.—In addition to the swarms of Americans who visit Europe every year and spend their money lavishly in foreign stores and watering places, quite a number of our countrymen reside abroad permanently. Mr. Wians, formerly of Baltimore, is one of them. He pays $50,000 per annum for a deer forest in Scotland, and when in London lives in a palace on Carlton House Terrace. His neighbor is Mr. Russell Sturgis, also an American, and a member of the famous firm of Baring Brothers. Sir Curtis Lambson, the only American who has received hereditary honors from the British crown, lives in splendid style at Eaton Square. He also owns a forest for deer stalking in Scotland. These Americans have in fact given up their country. Their sons and daughters go to English schools and marry into English families. In politics they are generally intensely anti-democratic. They are not to be envied.—From Demorest's Monthly.

May 1st, the new law increasing the liquor tax went into effect, and all liquor dealers will be required to take out new license. The tax has been $65 for sale of beer, and $200 for the sale of spirituous liquors, including beer. The new law gives the amount for the sale of beer at $200, and spirituous liquors at $300.

The secretary of state has sent out circulars calling attention of the supervisors and assessors of Michigan to the provisions of the act to provide for the registration of births, marriages and deaths, by which it is made their duty to ascertain the births and deaths in each township, ward and city, which have occurred during the year 1881. This duty is to be performed between the 10th of April and the 1st of June, by which time the full returns have to be on file with the county clerk. Persons solemnizing marriages are liable to a fine not to exceed $100, and imprisonment until it is paid (not to exceed ninety days), for failure to hand in to the county clerk for record all marriages performed by them.

In Freedom there were three places where malt liquors were sold last year. This year no license for the township has been granted, and no one will probably ask for one. In River Raisin there were two places, but no applications have been received for the coming year.

The young man that was seen on the street on Sunday last intoxicated, was brought up before Justice Lehman Monday morning and was fined. Don't think because there is no great excitement over it, that there was nothing done, there is a great many things happen in this world that everyone in Chelsea does not know.

B. J. Billings, is spending a few days at home with his family.

The world sometimes moves like a pendulum. Four years ago the whipping post was replanted in Virginia, and has borne good fruit, but last Monday the readjusters' decree to pluck it up by its roots was carried into effect. Meantime Maryland is going into the business again, for the special benefit of wife-beaters. In Michigan we have no whipping post, but there is no end to our wife-beating husbands and many other criminals to whom 30 or 60 days in the house of correction is really no punishment at all.—Evening News.

In an article in last weeks issue signed "An observer," came out rather hard against the Marshal in stating that he did not do his duty. We have investigated into the matter and find that it is not so. And further the party says there are lots of "drunks" on Sunday, and he pays no attention. The last statement is also untrue. There is no liquor sold here on the Lord's day, and it is impossible to get drunk— with the exception, sometimes a party in a buggy with lots of "tangle leg" aboard, will come from some other town and make fools of themselves. We think the Marshal fills his position, to the entire satisfaction of this community.

LIMA.—The following teachers have been engaged in this township for the summer: Bertha Keyes at Lima Center; Eva Manlis in Parker; Miss Holmes in Buchanan; Jennie Gettys in Snell; Lottie Earl in Porter; Nellie Butler in Smith, and Lucy Stephens in Jewett districts.

Our big show met with somewhat of an accident. They left Chelsea about two o'clock Wednesday morning, and the hind part of their train was run into by a freight train between here and Dexter. Both trains was considerably damaged, and resulted in the loss of one life, the victim being William Costello, of Dexter, whose body was taken from the wreck yesterday forenoon. The unfortunate young man was about 19 years old, and was riding in the caboose on the circus train at the time of the accident. The trains going east and west was delayed several hours by the wreck.

A singularly interesting case was lately referred to by the Brooklyn Eagle. It was told by Mr. W. A. Davenport, connected with the house of Messrs. Butler, Pitken & Co., 476 Broadway, New York, and concerned the marvelous cure of Mr. Ezra D. Clarkson, near Newark, N. J., of a terrible case of rheumatism, which other remedies had failed even to alleviate. He was on his way to a hospital when Mr. Davenport met him and induced him to try St. Jacobs Oil, with the result named.—Cleveland (O.) Practical Farmer.

WEDDING.—A party of friends assembled at the residence of Mrs. F. Rodell, Lima, Wednesday eve, May 3, to witness the marriage of Miss Dora A. to Willard A. Begole, of Marshall. The bride was lovely in sheer white, with a small bouquet of white rose buds surrounded with draping sinlax, at the left of the neck dressing of lace. The groom was dressed in the conventional black dress coat, white vest and necktie and white kids. The ceremony was performed by Elder Northrup, was brief, but very solemn. The presents were many and beautiful, among which were: Silver cake basket by Mr. and Mrs. Hudler, silver ice pitcher by Messrs. B. Parker, L. Wood, Burkhardt & wives, Etruscan toilet bottles, silver butter knife, three bouquets of cut flowers, by Miss Emma Begole of Jackson, 2 dozen damask table napkins, by F. B. Wright and Miss Blue of Marshall, two pair fine linen towels by Z. M. Fenn, solid silver butter knife by W. H. Snyder and sister, solid silver napkin rings by Mrs. S. R. Callohan, one doz. silver nut picks by Geo. Begole and wife, silver pickle fork by Kittie Begole of Marshall, one pair china vases by Adolph and Bertha Rodell, a beautiful set of jewelry in settings by the groom, a basket of cut flowers, that filled the air with their fragrance, by W. S. Callohan. After the ceremony, we were marshalled in the dining room, where a bountiful repast was spread and all did ample justice. The happy pair's health was drank in good coffee. Elder Northrup said if he could get such a basket of flowers, he would be tempted to get married, to which a general offer was made to supply demand—look out for a notice of the Elders next. The Marshall party returned the same evening. May happiness and peace follow them in their new home is the wish of—
GUEST.

Last Tuesday the big show was here. It reminded us of July 4th. Our streets were thronged all day with the busy crowd going to and fro. The grand street parade, of Maybury, Pullman & Hamilton's Mastodon Circus and Menagerie, which exhibited in our town on Tuesday, May 9th, made a grand turn out. This was one of the largest circuses that has ever visited our town.

The Menagerie was interesting, while the ring performance was a long and varied one of much merit. All the features cannot be mentioned, but it would be unjust not to give praise to the splendid horsemanship of Gorman, who, in his numerous bareback feats, displayed admirable skill and daring. The Zeiglers and Baldwins, in their athletic performances, were remarkably effective, as was the young "Ajax" in his fine contortions. The Belmonts were consummate masters of the trapeze, and added no little to the entertainment of the exhibition. The trained dogs and pony were perfect in their way, and were certainly among the most pleasing features of the Show. Little Blanche Pullman, in her ball-rolling and skipping, was wonderfully expert, and Sallie and Will Marks, in their double equestrianship, were capital. The circus had an excellent clown in the shape of a dog.

The afternoon and evening performances of the big show, was crowded to its full extent. Mostly everyone present came to the conclusion, that it was one of the best Shows that had ever visited Chelsea.

A family paper published a long article entitled "Housekeeping hereafter." "Merciful heavens!" groaned a distracted Mother of five children, and the keeper of one husband and two servants, "If I thought there was going to be any house-keeping hereafter, I declare I'd never die."

A foolish man in Detroit removed his front gate, so his daughter and ten beans could not swing on it every night, whereupon twelve crows came into his yard, broke down all his trees and ate up his garden and kicked a twenty five-dollar watch-dog in the ear so that he died next day.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN

On the Loss of

MANHOOD

A lecture on the nature, Treatment, and Radical cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhoea, induced by self-abuse, involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy, and Piles; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c. —By ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M. D., author of the "Green Book," &c.
The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without dangerous surgical operations, blood-lettings, instruments, rings, or corsets; pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, post-paid, on receipt of six cents or two postage stamps. Address THE CULVERWELL MEDICAL CO., 41 Ann St., New York.

THE PRAISE OF GOOD DOCTORS.

The best of all the pill-box crew, Since ever time began,
Are the doctors who have most to do With the health of a hearty man.
And so I count them up again,
And praise them as I can:
There's Dr. Diet,
And Dr. Quiet,
And Dr. Merryman.

There's Dr. Diet, he tries my tongue,
"I know you're poor," says he;
"Your stomach is poor, and your liver is springing."
We must make your food agree.

And Dr. Quiet, he feels my wrist, And he gravely shakes his head;
"Now, now, dear sir, I must insist That you go to ten to bed."

But Dr. Merryman for me Takes all the pill-box crew;
For he smiles and says, as he fobs his fee:
"Laugh on, whatever you do!"

So now I eat what I ought to eat, And at ten I go to bed,
And I laugh in the face of cold or heat:
For thus have the doctors said!

And so I count them up again,
And praise them as I can:
There's Dr. Diet,
And Dr. Quiet,
And Dr. Merryman.

AN ARK OF SAFETY.

The Bell of St. John's—A story of the Recent Floods.

For many days the rain had fallen in ceaseless, heavy torrents, and from every direction came now the brooks and streams rushing with untroubled swiftness, and sending up a deep, hoarse murmur, which was but as a musical echo to the voice of the mighty, swollen rivers.

In the little town of Chesterbrook there was every cause for the anxiety and alarm increasing hourly; already was the giant Mississippi, near which the village lay, at its greatest height known at that point, and a terrible encroaching neighbored nearer upon the main street, while the inhabitants dwelling farther back were thankful for the natural rise in the land placing them in a safer position.

"Is not the river very high, grandfather," asked Ruth Boynton, a timid accent faltering in her tone.

She was a young girl of fifteen years, busied at the time with preparations for the evening meal, but pausing now as she spoke to look toward her grandfather as he sat beside the window in his large chair, looking anxiously without.

Ruth came nearer to him, laying her hand on his shoulder.

"Does it not look very, very high?" she repeated, "and there seem to be so many timbers floating on the waves?"

"It is, indeed, higher than I have ever seen it in my eighty years, Ruth," answered the old man in the voice of one feeling with age.

"Do you think the town is in danger, grandfather?" asked the young girl, a slight pallor creeping over her face as she spoke.

"Not to-night, child, not to-night," he answered, "and to-morrow may bring brighter skies; yet, to-morrow, who knows," he murmured softly to himself, as Ruth turned away to her work again, and the old man folded his hands and closed his eyes in silent prayer to the God who rules the storm and clouds.

Midnight had already passed in the thick darkness enshrouding the silent town, and even the most watchful and anxious were at last sleeping heavily, when suddenly—with a confused thunder of sound rising in crashing din above the voice of storm or river, and seeming to rend heaven and earth asunder, the village nestled so peacefully under the shadow of the hills was roused to death and destruction.

Restraint no longer by any former bounds, the relentless stream had broken every barrier, and now amid the despairing cries of frantic human beings was wildly sweeping away every tenement or building in its widening pathway.

With the first wild alarm, Ruth Boynton had started, terrified and bewildered from her bed and rushed into the adjoining room to find her grandfather also up, groping with the nervous tremor of age, blindly for a light. In that moment it seemed as though the old man, who had been strong for his eighty years, was transformed into a weak and timid child.

"What is it, Ruthie?" he cried, with an imploring, piteous glance, but the girl entering with a candle in her hand, "What can it be, and what, O what shall we do?"

"It is the river, grandfather," she answered, hurrying to the door; "the town is flooded, and everything is being swept away!"

"My God, my God!" cried the old man, trembling in every limb, "who will save us, and what can I do?"

Whether it was the sense of appalling danger at their very door, or tender pity even in this terrible moment for her helpless companion, the young girl seemed suddenly imbued with a new heroic strength, tingling in every nerve, and with a voice almost steady, she said, calmly:

"God is still with us grandfather, and will surely make some way of escape; try to be strong and trust to his help."

But even as she spoke another fearful crash, accompanied by piteous shrieks, told of a nearer catastrophe, and Ruth impulsively laid a trembling hand on the old man's arm.

"Come, grandfather," said she, "let us hasten to the nearest house; they may be there making some plan for safety and will help us; and waiting to exchange the flickering candle for a lantern, the two helpless ones hurried out into the darkness of the night.

But little were they prepared for the scene of desolation around them; only in the distance glimmered moving lights and with the slow progress alone possible in the feeble condition of her companion, Ruth felt that they could never reach the far-off help. Only a small strip of land seemed left to them, the river behind and to the right of them, while on the left rose the high steep bank, up which her active feet might have climbed, but never the old man by her side; and not once did the thought of escape apart from him enter the brave girl's mind.

With a heart beating wildly with fear, Ruth raised her eyes to a prayer for aid, while the trembling one beside her uttered a helpless groan. Suddenly a ray of hope quickened her senses. A little higher up on the left, somewhat elevated above the path before them, stood the old church untouched as yet by the water, looking in silent pity upon the scene of destruction surrounding it.
It was possible that safety might be found there; even though the waves should reach it, might not the strong foundation on which it had stood so long prove inviolable?

"The church, grandfather, the church!"
cried Ruth, in tones of hope and encouragement. "Surely we will be safe there," and the next moment they were hurrying over the short space intervening, and finding but a feeble resistance in the old lock, they soon stood within the silent church.

Was it that the soothing spirit of prayer still hovered like incense about the place, or was it the thought of the ever-abiding presence of God in this house, that seemed to impart a sudden calm to the weary old man? Silently he sank within one of the old-fashioned pews; and here, ah, yes, here, he could die peacefully if such were God's will.

The lantern gave but a feeble light in the great room; but thankful for even this mitigation of the darkness, Ruth placed it near, and with loving, tender care knelt beside her grandfather, still bent on cheering and encouraging him.

"I think we are surely safe here," grandfather, said she, nodding her head toward him in her old childlike way, feeling now, having done all that she could, a sudden longing for comfort and support.

"I trust so, my child," answered the old man, in a tone so strong and calm that it surprised as much as it comforted the young girl. "God has surely guided and sustained you in this hour of danger, and we are now in His hands; he will save or take us to himself as he sees best."

A deep silence fell upon them, then, a trembling, prayerful silence on Ruth's part, for nearer and nearer came the sound of the rushing water, while a great sense of desolation crept over her.

Suddenly a cold dampness seemed to pervade the room, and the next moment a perceptible tremor passed over the building, causing the young girl to spring to her feet and clasp her arms about her grandfather, trembling violently.

Quickly and firmly he drew her closer to him, pressing her tenderly to his breast.

"Be brave, my child," he said in a voice subdued, but calm; "the hour of danger has come, but God is with us still."

Again and again came that quiver through the old building, while around it could be distinctly heard the splash of waves; then came one convulsive throes, that seemed violently wrenching timber from timber, and with a roaring, reeling motion the old church, with its sixteen inmates, was washed from its foundations, and floated away on the bosom of the angry stream.

Almost unconscious from fright, Ruth lay on her grandfather's breast; but as the movement became more regular and steady, she raised her pale face and whispered:

"Grandfather, are we really floating?"

"Yes, my child, like the ark of old," answered her grandfather. "We are afloat, and God—God—knows how long we may float, or what the end will be.
Let us not murmur at His will; we will perhaps find many friends who have gone to-night into the other world."

The girl hid her face again for a moment, but suddenly a faint, as it were, far off sound broke the stillness—the sound of a bell freely, slowly tolling.

Ruth started up. "O, listen, grandfather!" she cried, "it is the bell, the church bell, tolling with the motion of the waves?"

The old man started, listening intently and slowly down his furrowed cheek.

"Aye, child, it is the old bell of St.
John's, that has rung out many a chime.
It is tolling now its long last message—tolling its own knell, and the knell of the many that to-night have passed away."

But to Ruth the familiar sound, solemn and sad as it was, seemed to bear a message of life and hope; and, with her young face all aglow, she started once again to her feet, exclaiming:

"O grandfather, I know what I will do!
I will climb the steeple stair, and hang the lantern from its high window, and I will send out such a pale beam from the old bell that help, I am sure, must come."

Timid for her safety, where he was brave for his own, the old man anxiously tried to dissuade her from an effort so perilous at this hour of darkness; but, scarcely waiting for permission, Ruth had already darted away with the lantern, leaving her grandfather in the solemn darkness, where he could only wait and pray, and pray, and pray, and pray, and swiftly climbing the steeple stair.

On through the gloom and silence the old church floated, when suddenly through the darkness a bright light sparkled like a beacon star from a light-house tower, and above the din of the rushing waters, a ringing peal came forth, awakening the startled echoes slumbering on the river bank.

"Clang! Clang! Clang!" the sound seemed almost to dance along the waves, while the brave girl aloft clung to her frail support, and the old man prayed loudly.

The river had now found a deeper, narrower channel, with high dry cliffs once more on either side, and as that strange sound rang out amid the storm and gloom, a group of men with skirts moored high peered up the rushing stream with wondering, awe-struck faces.

"Egad!" cried one, "it sounds like the old bell of St. John's! Can it be the timbers of little Chesterbrook that have been floating by to-night?" On came the pealing sound, and now the starlike light shone out upon them. "A live!" cried the same speaker, "it is the old church afloat, and that bell could never ring like that from the motion of the waves; there are living souls within calling for help! To the rescue, men; out with the ropes and skiffs!"

Five minutes more and strong, brave hands were out in the stream, all unknown to the two anxious ones within; heavy ropes were being sent forth, fastened to the old building, and, with the bell still tolling, the old church was rapidly towed toward a haven-like break in the cliffs. And suddenly, with a startling shock, it stood still, and with a frightened, beating heart, Ruth gazed anxiously from the little window, "Could it be possible? Was that really the bank on which they were safely moored? And the lights and moving figures—had God really sent help so soon?"

Hastily, swiftly, she descended the rickety stairs, crying joyfully, "We are saved, grandfather! thank God, we are saved!"

A sudden light in the doorway, and the next moment kindly voices were breathing the silence. Lanterns held high shone revealed the two lonely figures, and guided by kindly, helpful hands, Ruth and the old man soon found themselves by the hospitable firesides of a little hamlet a short distance back from the dangerous river. And here they did also more than one of the few who were picked up and rescued from the ruins of Chesterbrook. — N. Y. Observer.

FARM AND FIFESIDE.

—In Europe 1,000,000 acres are devoted to beef cultivation.

—To prevent choking, break an egg into a cup and give it to the person choking. The white of the egg seems to lubricate the obstacle and remove it.
If one egg is not sufficient try another.

—Never heat a braze or tissue veil with sewing silk; take some of the ravelings of the material, thread a coarse needle with it and hem the veil. The stitches will not show at all if small ones are taken. — N. Y. Post.

—Growing Tomatoes.—Put a very small piece of tallow in a spoon and heat it very hot. Pour it on the corner of the leaf, and the inflammation and granulation will subside, and the parts will become dry and destitute of all feeling.
The nail can then be pared away without the least pain. — Country Gentleman.

—In speaking of calla lilies many ladies wonder why the leaves persist in dying even when the greatest care is taken with them. The real truth of the matter is that the older leaves of a calla will always shrivel up as the new ones grow, four leaves being all that are around on the stem at one time. — Denver —A good cough mixture.—Take two ounces of warm milk, the freshest you can procure, and boil them very slowly down to one pint, then strain it, and add one pound of honey in the comb and the juice of three lemons. Let them all boil together until the wax in the honey is dissolved. This has been known to cure a cough of long standing. — N. Y. Examiner.

—Crooked or broken breast-bones in children are caused by perches being placed too high from the ground when the roosting place is of small size. Objections are made to letting children sit on the floor, or on the ground, and it is if the perches are at a proper height.
It is the perpendicular, sudden flight to the ground in a confined space which injure and breaks or bends the tender breast-bone. In limited space, and with chickens brought up in confinement, shelves, and then littered with chopped straw are guards against this evil. — Chicago Journal.

—To cure a cow of kicking faster her up by the head in some manner, then tie a large cord or rope around the body, just back of the fore-legs, and with a stick twist the cord tightly. According to a New York farmer the cow cannot kick when treated in that method. Milk as quickly as possible and remove the cord, it will eventually give pain. After a few times according to the same authority, it will be necessary to slightly tighten the cord, and in a short time the kicking propensity in that animal will disappear. — Lansing Republican.

Planting a Forest.

The first, the fundamental point in tree-planting on a large scale, that is, in planting what may be called a forest, is to consider the trees as a crop, like any other crop, only this requires a much longer time than ordinary crops to come to maturity. This will at once put the subject to many if not to most persons in a new aspect. Accepting the idea that trees are to be planted like corn or wheat, as a crop, there follows at once the necessity of care and cultivation, and the consideration that these are the conditions of success. We do not expect to harvest an ordinary crop, and one that will yield a satisfactory pecuniary return, without having bestowed upon it care and labor.
No more should we look for success in the larger growths of the forest without a corresponding culture. And when we come to look upon the growth of a forest in this light we shall easily, almost inevitably, regard our ordinary native forests, where the trees are simply exposed to grow up in complete neglect, exposed to injury from the intrusions of cattle and from other causes, as at best only a partial utilization of the fields which Nature has provided for our comfort and profit. It is to us that forest, and come to maturity in rough places, and on poor soils, where nothing else will grow or where the cultivation of other crops is impracticable and unprofitable. It is true also that the growth of these forest-trees, instead of improving, enriches the soil. Hence there is no use of our poor and what we call waste lands; which abound more or less everywhere, at once so economical and profitable as to devote them to the growth of trees. Left to themselves, as our forests are, they are generally arid, they are unproductive. But the right made much more remunerative. They would be, if, instead of regarding them as one of the accidental products of Nature, we were to regard them as one of our staple crops, something to be managed and cared for by us. — N. H. Eggleston, in Popular Science Monthly.

The Blind Bridle.

We know not who invented this instrument of horse torture, but we know he did not understand the anatomy and physiology of the eye of a horse. Human vision is binocular—that is, we see the same object with both eyes—and so do just the axis of vision that the object appears single, though seen with both eyes. But the eyes of the horse are placed on the side of the head and the axis of each eye is nearly at right angles with the longitudinal line of the body, so that it is impossible that the same object can be distinctly seen with two eyes. Now, by blinding the eye in the direction in which it should see, it is forced to use an oblique vision, as if we should cover the front of our optics and be compelled to see only by the corners of our eyes. This unnatural and constrained use of the eye must, to a greater or less extent, impair vision, if not entirely destroy it. The object for which the blind bridle is used is not accomplished by it. A horse is more readily frightened when he cannot see the object of his dread than if he can have a fair view of it. But it is surprising to observe with what tenacity men hold on to an absurd and cruel practice when a moment's reflection would teach them better. Nineteen out of every twenty horses you see in harness are blind bridled, and if you ask the owner to explain its benefits, or why he uses it, he will be utterly unable to give a rational answer. We are not surprised that draft horses are subject to disorders—yes, we wonder that they are not all blind. — American Farmer.

—In a conversation about grave robberies by medical students, a leading physician of Syracuse, N. Y., said that a student in the medical college of that city a few days ago graduated in a neat suit of broadcloth taken from the body of a well-to-do citizen which was removed from the grave immediately after burial.
It fitted him very well, except that the coat was a little too long. All the medical students knew whose clothes they were, but as the graduate was poor nothing was said about it. — Chicago Times.

Vegetable or Mineral.

A physician writing to a journal of medicine, not long ago, proclaimed against the use of mineral poisons in curing diseases, on the ground that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred more mischief than benefit was the result. In his practice he dispensed entirely with the use of mercury, etc., and attributed his success mostly to his prescribing vegetable and herb medicines only. In the face of these facts, every invalid should take warning.
To use the system and give strength to the various organs of life by using, such a remedy as Dr. Guyard's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla.
Its soothing and refreshing influence will drive away all physical and mental diseases. It is especially strengthening to the urinary and digestive organs. A single bottle will prove its merit. It is very pleasant to take.

When a murderer is reprieved twenty minutes before the performance is to take place, a playful way to put it is, that he "skipped the rope." — Texas Siftings.

A YOUNG man signing himself J. L. D. writes as follows: "Six months ago I felt all broken up. I was very nervous. The least excitement caused my heart to thump like an engine, and my head seemed to reel. I was altogether. I also had dyspepsia bad, and at night I was very restless, and had disturbing dreams. My whole system seemed out of gear, and I was a nervous wreck. I was greatly advised by a friend to try Dr. Guyard's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It has restored me to perfect health."

"On, for a better half!" said the sorrowing widower when he found a counterfeit fifty-cent piece among his change. — Cambridge Tribune.

"Dragging Palms."

Dr. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.: "Dear Sir—My wife had suffered from 'female weakness' for nearly three years. At times she could hardly move, she had such dragging pains. We often saw your 'Favorite Prescription' advertised, but supposed like most other medicines it did not amount to anything, but at last concluded to try a bottle, which she did.
It made her sick at first, but it began to show its effect in a marked improvement, and two bottles cured her. Yours, etc., A. J. HUXLEY, Deposit, N. Y."

"CAN you find a flirt?" asked a coquette of her partner. "No," he replied, "I can not; but I can find a flirt."

Dr. PIERCE'S "Pellets," or sugar-coated granules—the original "little liver pills," (beverage of imitation)—cure all ailments of the liver, kidneys, and other diseases of the urinary and digestive organs, and cleanse and purify the blood. To get genuine, see Dr.
Pierce's signature and portrait on Government stamp. 25 cents per pill, by druggists.

It is a sad astronomical fact that during

A FOOLISH old woman, being one evening at a party, was greatly at a loss for something to say. At length she ventured to inquire of a gentleman who sat next her whether his mother had any children. The gentleman politely pointed out the absurdity of her inquiry. "I beg pardon," exclaimed the old lady, perceiving her mistake; "don't you understand me, I wish to inquire whether your grandmother had any children."

Shrewdness and Ability.

Hop Bitters, so freely advertised in all the papers, secular and religious, are having a large sale, and are supplanting all other medicines. There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of these Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability in commending Bitters whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation. — Examiner and Chronicle.

RYAN, the pugilist, is fond of "Pinafore." It is said. We cannot believe this, as he has shown no desire recently to face Sullivan's music. — The Sun.

"A doubtful friend is worse than a certain enemy." And see ever a certain friend is a doubtful enemy, and a doubtful enemy is a certain foe. This is a proverb that every man should remember. It is an incomparably better friend to the human race than whole categories full of doubtful friends. It is an unfailing remedy for all diseases of the heart, lungs, and bowels, and it moves the bowels freely, and thus removes the cause. Do not fail to try it faithfully either in dry or liquid form.

A GENTLEMAN who was asked for his marriage certificate took off his hat and pointed to a bald spot. The evidence was conclusive.

The fairest faces are sometimes marred by myriads of pimples, and markings of teeth on the forehead, and a doubtful remedy. A

WELLS, RICHMOND & CO'S
IMPROVED BUTTER COLOR
A NEW DISCOVERY.

For several years we have furnished the Buttermen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter, so satisfactory that it not only gives success everywhere receiving the highest and only prize at both International Exhibitions.

It is by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.
It will not turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made.

And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become Rancid.
It is a perfect color, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.
If you cannot get the "Improved" write us
