

NOTICE.—All communications, local notices, and advertisements must be handed in on Monday of each week, to insure that week's publication. The above rules will be strictly adhered to.

Legal Printing.—Persons having legal advertising to do, should remember that it is not necessary that it should be published at the county seat—any paper published in the county will answer. In all matters transpiring in this vicinity, the interest of the advertisers will be better served, by having the notices published in their home paper, than to take them to a paper that is not as generally read in their vicinity, besides it is the duty of every one to support home institutions as much as possible.

To Correspondents.
Correspondents will please write on one side of the paper only. No communication will be published unless accompanied with the real name and address of the author, which we require, not for publication, but as an evidence of good faith.
All communications should be addressed to "THE HERALD,"

The Education of Women.

If we were asked what we consider the greatest defect in the education of women, we should answer: "The absence of an aim in life." Facilities used merely for amusement or ornament lose half their strength. The painter who takes long rambles in search of scenery for his pictures, or the civil engineer who rides through tracts of country, observing all the characteristics, with reference to the shortest and most profitable route for a railroad, has mind and body simultaneously exercised, and is consequently ten times more invigorated than a man who does the same amount of riding or walking under the direction of a physician, with no other object than a vague pursuit of health. And he who studies for some definite use has immensely the advantage over him who pursues the same study merely as a prescribed accomplishment in the routine of education. A man who studies mathematics merely as part of a course laid out for him by his tutors may be able to solve difficult problems as readily as the man who earnestly applies them to construction of machines; but the mental vigor acquired in the latter process will be tenfold greater than in the former.

Do you ask what we would have their aim to do? We answer, anything and everything that is useful and honorable. Arguments concerning what women have a right to do have always seemed to us superfluous. Plainly they have a right to do whatever they can do well. If a woman can take such observations of the heavenly bodies as render valuable assistance to science, she proves her right to be an astronomer. If she can paint such horses and oxen as farmers and horse-dealers acknowledge to be superb animals, she has proved her right to paint horses and oxen. If she makes statues which connoisseurs are glad to purchase, she proves her right to be a sculptor. If she can plan houses with good taste and judgment, she proves her right to be an architect. If she can make great truths clear to an audience, or stir their hearts to noble deeds, she proves her right to be a preacher or an orator. If she has skill in healing the sick medical societies can do no more than endorse the diploma which God has already given. In all those, and in many other departments heretofore deemed unfeminine, individual women have proved their right to labor by laboring well. At present they are but tolerated exceptions to the general rule. Women of the "clinging-vine" type abound, and will continue to abound as long as men praise that type of character; and there are many reasons founded deep in human nature why they should long continue to praise it, though experience proves that clinging vines are often parasites. But it is a cheering sign of the times that women are becoming more and more self-reliant, and that men are learning more and more to respect them for decided indications of enterprise and energy. Whenever we meet with a young woman who is ashamed of being useless, we rejoice for her own sake, while we welcome her as a harbinger of advancing public opinion.

ALWAYS IN A HURRY.—Reposeful women are a delight to their friends; one can almost forgive slovenliness when it is accompanied by an air of complete ease from care; an air which says: "I am always ready to talk with you or listen to your list of joys or sorrows." On the contrary, the woman who is continually "on the go" is extremely tiresome. We have before our eyes a girl who is a fair representative of the latter type. She is wasting her nervous force and her life in a lamentable manner. She expends enough force and energy in a day to last one so slim of stature for a week. Nothing she does is done slowly or deliberately. Always in the hottest possible hurry, her life seems to be wound up to the highest possible pitch. She dashes about the house, slams doors, and bolts her food in half the time that more sober people take to eat theirs. With her trifles are momentous; her tongue seems to be incapable of uttering a soft sound; her temper is all afire at a moment's notice; her adjectives are all superlatives, and sometimes she is really to weep because she has no bigger and more expressive superlatives to use. Her energy, if properly engineered, would almost stem Niagara; she never moves except as if she was Maud S. and going for a wager. Fervidness and rapture are her daily food. When will all this end? We answer—in the mad-house or in the grave. It is the pace that kills; it is this pace which renders nervous prostration one of the most prolific diseases of the day. Let those of our women who are always intense take a thought for the next generation, in whom the seeds of this abnormal haste are being sown with fatal effect.

Etiquette of Letter Writing.

As a rule every letter, unless insulting in its character, requires an answer. To neglect to answer a letter when written to is as uncivil as to neglect to reply when spoken to.

In the reply, acknowledge first the receipt of the letter, mentioning its date, and afterward consider all the points requiring attention.

If the letter is to be very brief commence sufficiently far from the top of the page to give a nearly equal amount of blank paper at the bottom of the sheet when the letter is ended.

Should the matter in the letter continue beyond the first page it is well to commence a little above the middle of the sheet, extending as far as necessary on the other page.

It is thought impolite to use a half-sheet of paper in formal letters. As a matter of economy and convenience for business purposes, however, it is customary to have the card of the business man printed at the top of the sheet, and a single leaf is used.

In writing a letter the answer to which is of more benefit to yourself than to the person to whom you write, inclose a postage stamp for the reply.

Letters should be as free from erasures, interlinations, blots and postscripts as possible. It is decidedly better to copy the letter than to have these appear.

A letter of introduction or recommendation should never be sealed, as the bearer to whom it is given ought to know the contents.

BUSINESS LETTERS.

1. In letters of business use as few words as possible.

2. Business letters should be promptly answered.

3. Use a clear, distinct writing, avoiding all flourish of penmanship or language.

4. Come at once to your subject, and state it so clearly that it will not be necessary to guess your meaning.

5. Give town, county, State and date explicitly. It is frequently of great importance to know when a letter was written.

6. Read your letter carefully when finished, to see that you have made no omissions and no mistakes. Also carefully examine your envelope, to see that it is rightly directed, with postage stamp affixed.

7. Copy all business letters, of your own, by hand, or with the copying press made for the purpose.

8. Send money by draft, postoffice order or express, always stating in the letter the amount, and by what means sent. Thus you have something to show for the money, guaranteeing you against loss.

9. Write date and from whom received across the end of each letter, and file for future reference, fastening the letters together with rubber bands, or binding in a letter file adapted to the purpose. The possession of a letter sometimes prevents litigation and serious misunderstanding.

In ordering goods state very explicitly the amount, kind, quality, color, shape, size, etc., and on what terms wanted. Whether you wish the same sent by freight or express, and what express. Much inconvenience is experienced by business men because of a neglect to designate explicitly what is wanted.

Should the writer wish to make suggestions, ask questions or add other matter to the letter, which is foreign to the subject, such words should be placed entirely separate from the order. Of the fifty or 100 letters received to-day, by the merchant, that one which is mixed up with complaints, inquiries, etc., will probably be laid over till to-morrow, or until such time can be gained as will enable the merchant to read it through. Had the order been explicitly stated, and the suggestions placed elsewhere, the goods would have been forwarded immediately.

Send your order, also, early enough to give yourself plenty of time to wait for the goods to arrive.—From Hill's Manual of social and business forms.

Old Newgate.

"Old Newgate," as the jail of 1672 is usually called, consisted of three distinct prisons—the master's Side, Common Side, and Press Yard. The first was occupied by debtors whose means enabled them to pay fixed rents for their accommodation, in addition to the fees, which, under the names of "footing," "garnish," and "chumage," were demanded by the turnkeys or by their fellow-prisoners. On the arrival of a newcomer, his companions intimated their willingness to "drink his health;" a process for which two "taps," one on the Common Side, the other in the Lodge, offered ample facility. Should the new arrival be either unable or unwilling to pay the "footing" thus demanded, he was required to sacrifice a part of his scanty wardrobe for the purpose; and his fellow-prisoners were not slow to enforce the rule, if their victim hesitated to comply. "Garnish" was a payment openly extorted by the keepers of the jail as a species of entrance-fee, under the pretence of supplying extra comforts for the prisoner; while "chumage" is a term the meaning of which seems to have differed in different jails. On the authority of the Slang Dictionary, we learn that "chumming-up" was "an old custom among prisoners, before the present regulations were in vogue; when a fresh man was admitted to their number, rough music was made with pokers, tongs, sticks, and sauce pans; and for this ovation the initiated prisoner had to pay half a crown."

North of the hall lay one of the most horrible apartments in the prison, known as Jack Ketch's Kitchen, fitted with furnaces and boilers, for the purpose of boiling the heads and limbs of executed criminals in a preparation of oil and pitch, previous to their exhibition on Temple Bar and other places of the city. Female felons occupied separate wards, named Waterman's Hall and My Lady's Hold; and debtors of the fair sex were accommodated in a room above the Kitchen. Two condemned Holders, one for each sex, which were also used by the turnkeys for the temporary correction of such of their charges as grew refractory under their exactions; the Press Room, an apartment in which torture was inflicted in order to compel the accused to plead, the chapel and the houses of the governor and keepers may be roughly said to have completed the interior arrangements of the prison.—Chamber's Journal.

PECULIARITIES OF THE JAPANESE CALENDAR.

—If the length of the shadow on the 21st of June is divided into four equal parts, and the length on the 21st of December into two equal parts, we shall have six equal measures of length corresponding with six unequal intervals of time; these intervals may then be distinguished according to the length of the shadow. The Japanese avail themselves of this peculiarity of shadows in their country to adjust the division of their solar year, the first day of which corresponds with the 21st of June of the Gregorian reckoning. They divide the year into twelve months (mangus), which are respectively 41, 23, 24, 25, 27, 43, 43, 26, 25, 24, 23 and 24 days long. Independently of this division, the farmer plants his rice and other crops according to the height of Orion and the Pleiades above the horizon. This height is taken either at nightfall, half an hour after sunset, or in the morning, half an hour before the sunrise. The following are the names of the calendar months, and the most important observations and farmers' rules that are connected with them:

First month (Kasa), 41 days, from the 21st of June to the 31st of July, inclusive. Orion and the Pleiades are visible in the east, respectively, twenty-one and forty-five degrees above the horizon. The sun turns back toward the south; a man's shadow at noon reaches four feet south. The fresh water fish iwak bettik has one spot on its head. It is time to plant the second crop of rice.

Second month (Kara), 23 days long, from the 1st to the 23d of August. The Pleiades are in the zenith, seventy degrees above the eastern horizon. The iwak bettik has two spots. The sun goes farther toward the south. A man's shadow at noon measures two feet south.—Popular Science Monthly.

UNGRATEFUL TRAMPS.—A touching illustration of the fact that soft hearts are to be found under rough jackets is to be found in the following incident:

A couple of tramps met an Austin clergyman not far from his house, and applied to him for a voluntary contribution, as they were hungry and without a cent of money. The kind-hearted clergyman listened to their tale of woe, and then, with a moist eye and lump in his throat, gave them each a silver half-dollar, for which they expressed their gratitude; but he was hardly out of hearing when one of the sufferers said to the other in a low, deep voice full of gratitude and the smell of whiskey:

"That's another one of them thieving aristocrats who are stealing the bread out of our children's mouths."

"Yes," responded the other, looking at the half dollars.

"If he had to work for his money as we have to, he wouldn't have so many half dollars to throw away."

What they said and did when, on trying to change the money, they were told it was counterfeit, can be better imagined than described.

The registration law provides that there must be a registration of all legal voters previous to the next election, which takes place in November. Even if his name was registered before, every voter must register again. We believe this law does not apply to cities. After the new books are opened, the old ones will be closed up, sealed and deposited with the township clerk; and can then only be opened by order of the court, or a competent committee appointed by the legislature—Dater Sun.

"NOT BORN TO GOOD LUCK."—A correspondent, in bewailing his misfortune, says: "But I was not born to good luck, and so, I suppose, I must put up with the bad luck which has followed me all my life."
In the ordinary course of life there is no such thing as luck. Indeed, it is a matter of absolute fact and demonstration that great and enduring success, as well as average prosperity, comes from the exercise of good judgment, backed up by industry, economy, patience, and self denial. Moreover, experience has abundantly shown that, in the long run, nothing does a man any real, substantial good, for which he does not, in some way, pay a fair price. What is called luck is usually a mere running in debt to fortune, and the greater the seeming luck, the heavier the real incumbrance. To whom much is given, much is required; and the eternal requisition is inexorable, and must be met.
Unhappy the man who has had a fortune left him—dropped down upon him, as it were, from the skies—which he does not know how to use so as to get any real advantage out of it. How often, in such a case, his "good luck," as he calls it, is only "a heritage of woe," and ultimately proves to be his own and his children's ruin.—Ex.

A Familiar Expression

"I wish I could find something that would cure galla and prevent the hair coming in white," is an expression frequently heard. Cole's Veterinary Carbolisave will cure wounds, galls and sores quicker than any other remedy, and will always bring the hair in its original color. W. H. Taylor, Macomb, Ill., says: "I find Cole's Veterinary Carbolisave a splendid remedy for collar-boils, sore back, sore necks, cuts and any abrasions of the skin whatever. As a cure for scratches it is unequalled. I keep it in my stables all the while, and could not get along without it." Pound cans, $1.00; small cans 50 cents.

ENTERTAINING COMPANY.—I pray you, oh excellent wife, not to cumber yourself and me to get a rich dinner for this man or this woman who has alighted at our gate, nor a bed chamber made ready to too great a cost. These things, if they are curious in, they can get for a dollar at the village. But let this stranger see if he will, in your looks, in your accent and behavior, your earnestness, your thought and not buy at any price, at which he may well be made sparingly, and hold. Certainly the bed be dressed for the traveler, but let not the emphasis of hospitality be in these things. Honor to the house where they are simple to the verge of hardship, so that the intellect is awake and sees the laws of the universe, the soul worship truth and love honor and courtesy flow into all deeds.

In Memoriam.

A beautiful infant son four month's old, of Mr. & Mrs. Howard Everett, died in this village last Sunday evening. The funeral ceremony was held at the residence of Jay Everett last Tuesday forenoon.

Little Baby—just a seed that dropped from Jesus hand
Upon your desert lives for you to nourish care and expand
You watered it with love, and loves own breezes kissed its cheek:
Fate seemed to smile, and spun with gentle hands and meek
A skein of life which love took up and added threads so fair,
That Baby's life seemed prone to be all love without a care.
Such could not be; dear hearts, in every web of life
Will follow thick and fast, great knots of care and strife.
Perhaps if Baby lived, its little will had proved too weak
To battle 'gainst the throne of sin, and grovelled at its feet.
That God that ever snatched love from burning brands
Of helpless sin, has stooped and taken Baby's hands
Instead, dear hearts, of thinking it a pain that Baby died—
Look up and thank your God that future tears are dried.

Another Defeat at Waterloo.

For sometime past a man of prepossessing appearance and business address by the name of J. E. Mack, has been selling agricultural engines and separators in this vicinity with seemingly fair success. Mr. Mack represented that he purchased his engines and separators out and out of the manufacturers for cash—thereby obtaining an exceptional large discount from regular prices—but on account of his large sales for approved notes he was obliged to have considerable paper discounted. All paper taken was made payable to J. E. Mack, or order, and when negotiated regularly endorsed by him on the back. Mack had sold paper to Pratt & Burclard, Grass Lake, J. D. Corey, Manchester. Mr. Mack president Ann Arbor savings bank and recently to Chelsea savings bank—the latter took immediate steps to ascertain of the parties purporting to have signed the notes the genuineness of the signatures and amount—so well executed were the forgeries that one party promptly acknowledged the genuineness of a note that is now considered a forgery—although his close scrutiny of the signature of the note was requested and given with positive assertion that the signature was genuine, and all a. k. The next party called upon revealed a forgery, as he had given no note, but paid cash for his engine and had a receipt in full—therefor of course it aroused Mr. Glazier who left his horse and carriage at Ann Arbor and came home late Friday night, bent on looking up at once the genuineness of the remainder of the paper they had bought. At sun-rise Saturday found him seventeen miles from Chelsea, in north-west part of Waterloo, where another revelation occurred, which was becoming unpleasantly frequent, of the last party it was learned that Mr. Mack was to come to his house that day to obtain his pay and that in all probability he would return with him to Grass Lake to draw the money. It was decided to proceed to Grass Lake and await Mr. Mack's appearance. When opposite Mr. Huddler's farm house, Mr. Mack suddenly hove in view with a lively team and driver. Mr. Glazier motioned to the driver to stop, and stepped out of his buggy and spoke to Mr. Mack, who seemed partially asleep, and informed Mack that he had discovered some irregularity in the notes he had sold, and demanded Mack should alight and explain matters. Mr. Mack did alight and run "like a streak" with Glazier at his heels—Mack had drawn his revolver and Glazier was gaining on him—but the extreme effort he made soon carried him off his feet and landed him in the dust, from which he soon recovered, and continued the pursuit through corn-field's & meadows into the Portage marsh, where younger and fleetier men making hay on the marsh took up the chase and soon brought Mr. Mack to bay, and capture. He was very penitent and willing to make all restitution possible and by a cunning device, succeeded in making Mr. Glazier believe he would come to Chelsea, and fully prove the genuineness of remaining papers at nine o'clock that evening. Mr. Glazier having no warrant and thinking that no other irregularities had been perpetrated on other banks, as he had supposed all the papers sold by Mack had been bought by him, he concluded it was safe to let him come direct to Chelsea, while Glazier went home by the way of Grass Lake to make a collection intending to arrest Mack when he arrived at Chelsea, on a warrant he had left at home, not expecting to meet Mack on the bloody fields of Waterloo. Suffice to say that Chelsea savings bank had a very lucky escape from loss, and it should behoove them to be more "restless and sleepless" in the future than in the past if possible. Every effort is being made to arrest Mack and the officers are close on his track.
