

NOTICE.—All communications, local notices, and advertisements must be handed in on Monday of each week, to insure that week's publication. The above rules will be strictly adhered to.

Legal Printing.—Persons having legal advertising to do, should remember that it is not necessary that it should be published at the county seat—any paper published in the county will answer. In all matters transpiring in this vicinity, the interest of the advertisers will be better served, by having the notices published in their home paper, than to take them to a paper that is not as generally read in their vicinity, besides it is the duty of every one to support home institutions as much as possible.

To Correspondents.
Correspondents will please write on one side of the paper only. No communication will be published unless accompanied with the real name and address of the author, which we require, not for publication, but as an evidence of good faith.
All communications should be addressed to "THE HERALD,"

Women and Character.

The education and perfect equality of woman with man must have had some effect upon the quality of mind on this continent. Education in the old time was not only narrow in its course of study, comprising language and mathematics, but it was narrow in its outreach toward persons. It reached only men, and but few of that group. It overlooked women. In those days, and they were many, women did not keep or mold character. She was not the creator of an age, but its victim. Her chief office was to toil hard for her husband, and look to him for wisdom and government. The educational scheme of the present includes all the young, as a result, woman has become a powerful agent for good. Her taste, her higher ideals, her superior moral nature, are made more powerful by her education and by her liberty, and that half of society which has long been dormant has, in these later times, risen up into a great moral activity. If, as is commonly said, there are more happy homes in America than in Europe, the result comes from the fact that woman is not here an ignorant, powerless child, or an abject slave that must be ignorant or must simply endure, but she is an equal, a companion worthy of perpetual respect. The widening of education which years ago began to include woman tends at last to give the home symmetry. Barbarism and despotism have always had two sets of law, one for man, one for woman. In order for this two-faced justice to be tolerated woman had to live in inferiority of mind and feeling. She must be either ignorant or powerless. Education and liberty in their gradual spread over this domain have created a better home by creating a justice single-faced—one law of right for all. Thus additional honor is coming into the masculine mind by way of the progress and greatness of woman. When one attempts to explain the upright character of a Garfield or a Longfellow, one must attach great influence to the lofty character of the life-long companion of each. Home was not to these men a mere abode, but it was a small world that had all good in their confines.

What a Woman Can Do.

As a wife and mother, woman can make the fortune and happiness of her husband and children; and, if she did nothing else, surely this would be sufficient destiny. By her thrift, prudence and tact, she can secure to her partner and herself a competence in old age, no matter how small their beginning, or how adverse a fate may be theirs. By her cheerfulness she can restore her husband's spirit shaken by the anxiety of business. By her tender care she can often restore him to health, if disease has over-taken his powers. By her counsel and love she can win him from bad company, if temptation in an evil hour has led him astray. By her examples, her precepts, and her sex's insight into character, she can mold her children, however adverse their disposition, into noble men and women. And, by leading in all things a true and beautiful life, she can refine, elevate and spiritualize all who come within reach; so that, with others of her sex emulating and assisting her, she can do more to regenerate the world than all the statesmen or reformers that ever legislated.

She can do much, alas! perhaps more, to degrade man if she chooses to do so. Who can estimate the evils that woman has the power to do? As a wife she can ruin herself by extravagance, folly or want of affection. She can make a demon or an outcast of a man who might otherwise become a good member of society. She can bring bickering, strife and discord into what has been a happy home. She can change the innocent babes into vile men, and even into vile women. She can lower the moral tone of society itself, and thus pollute legislation at the spring-head. She can, in fine, become an instrument of evil instead of an angel of good.

Instead of making flowers of truth, purity, beauty and spirituality spring up in her footsteps, till the earth smiles with a loveliness that is almost celestial, she can transform it to a black and arid desert, covered with the scorn of all evil passion, and swept by the bitter blast of everlasting death. This is what woman can do for the wrong as well as for the right. Is her mission a little one? Has she no worthy work, as has become the cry of late? Man may have a harder task to perform, a rougher road to travel, but he has none loftier or more influential than woman's.

Wit and Humor.

Passing around the hat is one way of getting the cents of the meeting. Head-line for the report of a club banquet—A stuffed club.

Why is love like a pillow? Because it can take on a "sham" and still be nice.

Two Cincinnati men who got mad and threw billiard balls at each other were "pocketed" for thirty days each. It must have been a St. Louis judge who got away with Cavendish and Burke.

Doctors now pronounce cucumbers a tonic. Doctors, it will be observed have an eye to business.

Times are so hard that it is said married men at summer resorts this season smoke 3-cent cigars and flirt with their own wives.

Simpson said that when he asked his girl, who is now his wife, to marry him, she said: "I don't mind," and that she never has minded.

"Dear me!" said Mrs. Partington the other day, "young girls nowadays are not what their mothers used to be. Half of them are sufferers from nervous prostration!"

The flat hat that is so prevalent at this time is liked by the young men who wear it, because they can reach over the edges and hold it on with their ears when the wind blows.

"Is it fair," asked Mrs. Easy, "to allow your husband to attend a fair, with some other fair, and pay her fare?" "Hardly fair; and if it was my husband, she'd fare hard," responded Mrs. Gripping.

An old lady died last week while trying to count the number of new seaside resorts that have sprung up all along the New England coast. In her will she cut off several of her relatives who formerly kept hotel.

"The bees are swarming and there's no end of them," said Farmer Jones, coming into the house. His little boy George came in a second afterward and said there was an end to one of 'em, and it was red-hot too.

But you can't tell what this is, "An Apology for the Superficial Thinking, Critical Attitude and Speculative Tendency of our age." Why, it's simply the subject of a light and airy editorial paragraph in the Vassar Miscellany. Pass us that chewing-gum, please.

You never would suspect that the fine looking member of the horse guards, who shows off to such advantage on parade days, is the identical man who peddles milk and mashes the servant girls, would you? Such is the fact, however.

The man who rides with his best girl in the open-horse-car has no cause to say, "Come close to my side, dearest." Five in a seat, with a stout man at each end, will bring him as near his loved one as heart could desire.

"O by the way, dear, have you congratulated Lily on her engagement?" asked Miss Florence of her friend. "O yes, of course. I went round yesterday afternoon. I told her she couldn't have done better—and I don't think she could, the horrid homely thing."

"Some other folks would deceive you about these goods, but I have been in the business twenty years, and never told a lie," said the guileless dry-goods clerk. "And why do you begin now?" said the gentle fair one in front of the counter, as she gathered her draperies together and glided away.

"What makes Col.—so popular? I'm sure he's very stupid. He can hardly see beyond his nose." He said a lady to a friend, who replied: "My dear, sharp-sightedness is not what makes a person popular. It is what the Colonel doesn't see that gives him such popularity."

Village doctor—"Well, are you better? Have you taken your medicine regularly, and eaten plenty of animal food?" Patient—"Yes, sir. I tried it, and so long as it were beans and oats I could manage pretty well, sir; but when you come to that there chopped hay, they right-down choked me, sir!"

Rev. Dr. Studley says that once, after a lecture in New England, the manager asked him to take his pay in tickets which were not sold.

On Monday last about 25 teams were loaded at the lumber yard with barn timber, lumber etc. for John Howard of London. Mr. H. is bound to have a barn fire or no fire. The Guthrie Bros will do the work.

Like wild-fire has spread the intelligence that the Chelsea Herald has changed hands and the next issue of the Herald is waited for with specious impatience.

Our nights will be sleepless and our meals go uneaten until it appears etc.—Correspondence to the Leader. This is the man who's acquaintance we want to make, and if he did go without eating and sleeping, we will give him our old hat.

Caught by a Star Fish.

"I was once a diver—not a wreck-er, but a pearl-diver, and a hard business it was," recently observed the captain of a Spanish brig to a reporter. "We worked off the Mexican and Panama coasts, principally on the Pacific side. Sometimes we worked alone, but generally on shares, and sometimes for pay. We went to the grottoes in small sailing vessels, then we took the small boats and covered as much ground as possible. Each man had a bucket, a weight and a knife. For sharks? Yes, but it is poor defence, for it is almost impossible to swing the arm with any force under water. The best weapon is a short spear. When you reach the ground you strip, put your feet in a big snail, take the basket that has a rope for hoisting, drop over, and soon find yourself at the bottom. Then your business is to knock off as many oysters as you can, and pile them into a basket before you lose your wind. It is a terrible strain, but I could stand it in those days for six minutes, and I have known men who could stay down ten; but it is sure death in the long run. If the ground is well stocked you can get 20 or more, but it is all luck. When the basket is full it is hauled up, and after you come up for your wind, down you go again, the snail being hauled up with a small cord for that purpose. It was on one of these trips that I ran afoul of the animal that gave me a lasting fright. You will smile when I say a star-fish, but that it really was. I went down 60 feet with a rush, and, landing on the edge of a big bunch of coral, swung off into a kind of basin. The basket went ahead of me, and as I swung off to reach the bottom something seemed to spring up all around me, and I was in the arms of some kind of a monster that coiled about my body, arms and legs. I tried to scream, forgetting that I was in the water, and lost my wind. It was just as if a plant had sprouted under me and threw its vine and tendrils around me. There were thousands of them, coiling and writhing, and I thought I had landed in a nest of sea snakes. I gave the signal as soon as I could, and made a break upward, part of the creature clinging to me, while the rest, I could see, was dropping to pieces. They hauled me into the boat when I reached the surface, and pulled the main part of the animal away from me. It was oval, about three feet across, and the five arms seemed to divide into thousands of others. I probably landed on top of that one, which at this time was the largest I had ever seen. I afterwards saw the body of one that was washed ashore on the isthmus that must have had a spread of thirty-five feet. Their power of grasping is considerable, but touch them in a certain way and they throw off their arms in a regular shower, and are soon reduced to an oval body."
