LITERARY NOTES.

the May Century makes appeal to a large variety of tastes. By way of history and adventure there are three illustrated papers: "The Aborigines and the Colonists," by Edward Eggleston, who has made the study of American Indians a specialty, and who brings to light many curious and interesting facts; the first of two papers by H. H., on the Spanish Missions of Southern California, entitled "Father Junipero and his Work"—in which a thorough study is made of the romantic thorough study is made of the romantic settlement of California from Mexico; and, chirdly, a paper of great readableness and ethnological value, by Frank H. Cushing, on his "Adventure in Zuni." The illustrations of all these papers have been made with the strictest regard for historical accuracy. By way of personal interest there are three sketches: One of Cardinal Man-ning (with a portrait which is printed as a froatispiece), written by Mr. C. Kegan Paul, the English publisher and author of a paper on Cardinal Newman, which appeared in the CENTURY some months ago; e second, an exposition of Salvini's King Lear, by Emma Lazarus, with a drawing of the great tragedian in this character, made from life by Alexander; and third, a charming light essay by Henry James, Jr., on du Maurier's caricatures in "Punch," and on the artist's relations to London society. With the last are reproduced a number of de Maurier's best drawings engraved anew in America from the original cartoons for "Punch," by permission of its publishers. Apropos of the recent criticisms of American literature and American writing about England, Mr. Charles Dudley Warner makes a retort corteous to his critics in a humorous paper entitled "The English Volunteers during the Late Inva-sion." "Moral Purpose in Art" by the tela Sidney Lanier, treats a theme of wide interest not unrelated to the current discussion of the novel. There is also an illustrated paper on "The Father of American Libraries" (the Philadelphia Public Libra-ry), by Bunford Samuel. The practical and suggestive series of papers, by Wash-ington Gladden, on "The Christian League of Connecticut, is continued, with an account of the "Third Annual Convention," at which it seems many of the obstacles to union among churches were discussed, reports received, etc.

In fiction there is an installment of Mr. Howell's serial "A Woman's Reason;" a short story by F. R. Stockton in the Rud-der Grange series—"Pomona's Daughter;" and the first half of a story of much fresh-ness and humor by Joel Chandler Harris ("Uncle Remus"), namely: "At Teague Poreet's," etc.

The Art Amateur for May contains some excellent simple designs for wood carving from the Cincinnati School of Design, together with the first of a series of articles. on "Practical Wood Carving for Amateurs," by Calista Hasley Patchin; a seasonable design of dog-tooth violets for a dessert plate, some attractive South Kensington embroidery designs, a page of monograms in "B," and a profusion of designs for jewelers' use. There are illustrated articles of much interest on the decorations of the Cornelius Vanderbilt house, on the costumes and jewelry worn at the Vanderbilt ball, on charcoal drawing, on Japnesque china decoration, and on a remarkable embroidered mitre. The May num er concludes the fourth year of The Art Amateur, and the index for the last twelve months gives a vivid picture of the surprising weath of designs and instruction contained in this invaluable magazine. 2A fire broke out either in the dry-kiln or engine room of the Lansing wagon works, and from the dry and combüstible nature of the from the dry and combüstible nature of the contents, soon spread into the main building which was very generally on fire before the fire department was on the ground. A strong wind was blowing from the northeast which drove the fire away from the store room and thus saved a building and a large amount of manufactured stock ready for shipment. The main building which contained the machinery and stock in process of manufacture was destroyed completely including the south and west wails completely, including the south and west walls of the building. On the entire works there is an insurance of $43,000. The greater part of this amount is on the property destroyed. The loss on the building and contents is estimated

The local option bill was defeated in the Senate by a vote of 16 to 10, while in the House the most exciting discussion of the session was held on this bill. The House adopted a resolu-tion as king the governor for further instruction, but the majority regard the bill as a law.

The wife of A. D. Clark, a well-known citizen and builder of Battle Creek, shot another woman also claiming to be Clark's wife, in the office of the Chapman house at Lansing. The circumstances which led to the tragedy are about as follows; Several years ago Clark met the woman who fired the shot, in Boston. He never married her, but she has lived with him ever since, and borne him three children. She has always been very jealous of him, and probably had grounds for her jealousy. About a year ago Clark went to Chicago and became acquainted with the woman who was shot, and subsequently married her. The two women met in Lansing and the shot was fired which will probably end the life of a fellow-being.

The Saginaw Courier of recent date, has the following: Tuesday evening two men and a good looking woman arrived in the city from the vicinity of Midland. About 7 o'clock they visited justice Fey's office, and the woman stated to the dispenser of justice that her hus-band desired to sell her for $50 to the "other man," and that she was entirely willing the transfer should be made. The justice rather thought that this could not be done legally, but after consultation all around a paper was drawn up to the effect that the husband would release his wife, and that she might live with the other man without molestation from him for and in consideration of $50 in cash. The amount was paid over, and the husband, wife and would-be husband left the justice's office apparently well satisfied with the new arrange-ment. The husband purchased a new suit of clothes yesterday morning, and will go to the far West to seek another wife and another

Fatal Railroad Disaster.

An accident happened on the morning of April 27th on the Chicago & Grand Trunk R. R., one mile west of Olivet Station in Eaton conuty, by which three persons lost their lives, and ten or fifteen more injured, some fatally. The collision was between the regular passenger train moving west and a freight train following it. The air breaks to the passenger train did not work successfully and the train was stopped at the foot of a slight grade and a signal sent back to the frieght train, which was a heavy one. For some reason it passed the signal and rushed along into the rear end of the passenger train shivering into fragments two Pullman coaches. The dead are P. J. Wall of Montreal, Canada, conductor of the sleeping car, H. Frye of Englewood N. J., and J. W. Higgins of Detroit. The wounded are in actitical condition. in acritical condition, some of them being scalded from head to foot. The State railroad commissioner was present shortly after the accident occurred, and immediately began an investigation. It was very apparent that the accident was not caused by the carelessnsss of any one, but by the breaking down of the passenger train between stations. DETROIT MARKETS.

A VERY PLATTERING OFFER.

The offers relative to Irish emigration, which the British government are favorably enter-taining, are from the Canadian Pacific Railway and Land Companies interested in opening the Canadian Northwest. The proposal of these companies is to settle 5,000 families, 25,000 persons, on government lands under the homestead laws, which give each family 160 acres free. The promoters of the scheme would become security for £1,000,000, advanced without interest by Great Britain for ten years, to be devoted to loans sufficient to start each family or they would be recome as the sufficient to start each family, or they would become security for £2,000,000, with which they would relieve the crowded districts of Ireland of 50,000 persons. This offer meets the approval of the better class of the peasantry, who regard it as the means by which the distress that has so long overshadowed their lives, may be removed.

Bob Burdette's Love Story.

Bob Burdette is known the country over as the humorist of the Burlington Hawkeye, He is the most successful of our funny men. His books have a constant and increasing sale. His salary from the Hawkeye gives him a handsome income, and his little sketches command the best prices from the magazines. In addition he has $150 to $250 a night whenever he wants to take a lecturing tour of one or twenty weeks. His humor is delicate, true and abundant, and he is an honor to the lighter American letters because of his literary achieve-

But better and more honorable than all this is the story of his hearthstone. When he was a young man of twentysix he was engaged to Miss Carrie Garret, of Peoria, Ill. She was a frail and delicate girl, and one evening Burdette was summoned to her bedside with the message that she was dying. Little hope was entertained for her life when he reached her. It was determined at the wish of both he and she that they should be married, even if death should at once claim the bride. The ceremony took place in fifteen minutes, the little lady being able to respond only by a motion of the eyes and a gentle pressure of the hand. In spite of the doctors' predictions she rallied and was finally well enough to move to the quiet and cosy home her husband had provided

But she has been an invalid all her life. More than once her life has been despaired of. Usually she has been confined to her room and unable to walk. One night at a theatre in Philadelphia the writer saw a pale and earnest man making his way to a private box, with life was bright and hopeful until I tried a delicate, clinging woman in his arms. to merge it into poesy. The culmina Her girlish face was full of a pathos that passes description, but was wonderfully pretty. And strangely happy, too —filled with content. Everybody made way for the little lady, and her great and tender eyes seemed to send thanks to every gentleman who moved aside in courtesy. It was Bob Burdette and his invalid wife. This is an index of his life. The temptations of the world, the dazzle and glitter of the society that has welcomed him-the converse with brilliant men, the club, the theatre, wealth, fame-all and either of them failed to win his heart away from the little womhis love and sympathy.

Nor was there lacking a practical reward of this devotion. Mrs. Burdette has been the inspiration of her husband's life - at once his spur and his counsellor. She discovered the rich quality and the spontaneity of Bob's humor, and the homely flavor that would carry it to the heart as well as the intelligence of the public. Imagine the humorist reading the most laughable stories at the bedside of his invalid wife. He tells him-self of how she forced him to write his first lecture, in these words:

house muttering to himself binzle, crin-zle, dinzle, finzle, ginzle, hinzle, and his last words as he died in the insane first lecture, in these words:

"One day when she was lying helpless she said she believed that I could write a lecture and deliver it successfully and so she sat me down to write a lecture, and from time to time I rebelled with tears and groans and prayers. I told her that I was too little, that I had no voice, and that I couldn't write a lecture anyhow. She kept me at it and in due time we had a lecture on our hands, 'The Rise and Fall of the Moustache.' This was all right enough. But now how to get audience. I thought I would try it first at Keokuk. If I delivered it first in Burlington, even though it were tame, tamer, tamest, I thought they might put me on the book But Keokuk hated looked upon as a desirable matrimonial Burlington, and I knew if it was flat they would say so. Mrs. Burdette said as she was responsible for the lecture, three husbands, two killed and one she was going to hear it delivered So I carried her aboard the cars. We went to Keokuk and the people pronounced it good."

From that day he was prospered wherever his homely, insignificant little figure has been seen.—Atlanta Constitution.

The Sweet, Responsive Echo of Soul to Soul."

Virginia (Nev.) Enterprise. Our mutual friend Spykens has "made a mash," to use the language of the worldly. He incidentally became acquainted with the widow McWinzie at a church social last fall. She has now come to the conclusion that he is her natural affinity, and wants him for her fourth husband. Her strong suit is poetry, or, as she expresses it, "human esthetic rhyme; the sweet, responsive echo of soul to soul."

"Dear Mr. Spykens," sighed the widow the other evening, puckering her mouth down to the size of a shirt 000 less than that of 1881. button-hole, as it were, you have lived and loved. The mellifluous profundity of your sympathetic soul has always required that you should."

"Ah, yes, Mrs. McWinzie, you bet,

"Call me Hitty, dear; my name is Mehitable, and those most endeared to me always call me Hitty."

"All right; Hitty goes." "Well, as I was about remarking, my nature was aboriginally poetic; away up among the embarrassed clouds of Heaven's sublimated artillery. My first husband was a dear genial spirit, attuned to poetic harmony, but nothing could rhyme with his name. It was Tulkington. I used to weave it into poetic verse by abreviating it to Tulky, but even then it never would make a smooth rhyme with any other word. Two short years he loved and languished, and then sank to eternal rest as softly as though the springs of his couch had been the Springs of Parnassus."
"Beautiful! beautiful!" exclaimed

Spykens, "what a rattling good obitu ary you must have written for him!"

"Ah, me," sighed the wildow, " tried over a year to write seven verses suitable, and perhaps might have succeeded, had I not been wooed and won by Jason Babcock. My new married tion came when I composed twentyseven verses, each one rhyming his name, the best of which were mason, bason, face-on. Then he closed the doors of his heart, took his overcoat and valise, and bade me farewell for ever. I never saw or heard of him

"What a miserable, narrow guage,

"Yes, the rythmatic music of poetry city" did not abound in his worldly soul, and my old friend and schoolmate, Timothy McWinzie. He had a soul full of sympathy, and when he realized how my poetic nature was crushed by the very idea of making rhymes of his name, or any parf of it, he earnestly, yet rashly, attempted it himself. For days and weeks he wrote, and went about the asylum, were minzle pinzle, stinzle,

"How dramatically sad," moaned Spykens, as he reflected on the rhyming possibilities and calamities of his own

"Did you ever read Thaddeus of Washoe?" asked she, beaming her loving eyes, full of literary intelligence, full upon him as she gently laid her hand upon his coat sleeve. Spykens owned up that he hadn't, and tore himself away from her sweet presence, pleading pressing business engagements. The widow had money in bank, and a whole pile of stocks, and is investment, but when Spykens reflects, musingly, upon the sad fate of those driven away by her infernal poetry, assisted materially, no doubt, by her large, cold, clammy feet, he concludes to remain single.

Small Ned was reasonably generous vith his other goodies, but he could never be induced to part with even a "bite" of molasses candy. So the surprise of the family circle may easily be imagined when, after retiring one day to a secluded corner with a thick stick ing it only pulled and twisted the curl, and at last, with tears, partly of pain and partly of vexation, in his eyes, Ned fretfully exclaimed: "Oh dear! whoever may have it.—Harper's Bazar.

A boy of eight, years in one of the Massachusetts schools was asked by his teacher where the zenith was. He roplied: "The spot in the heavens directly over one's head." To test his knowledge further the teacher asked: "Can two persons have the same zenith at the same time?" "They can." "How?" "If one should stand on the other's head."

"Haven't you got another house you can rent me?" asked a man of a real estate agent. "What's the matter with the one you are in?" "Nothing, only I'm behind with the rent, and I thought that by moving into another one of your houses you would forget the old debt while trying to collect the new. -Arkansaw Traveller.

Drive Wells!

me drinking drive well water, you are sure of drinking something that is pure. We can prove this by men who have been around the world. Some may think I can't, but I dare say, I could prove this by U. S. Grant.

No snakes, worms, rats or mice, can get into the water, as it passes through a fine screen. Rats, dogs and cats run into open wells, and cannot get out. Some who have open wells do not know this, but when you go into your well, you will find it so.

The drive well is free from all things that crawl or run, as it is as tight as a drum. Some men hate to leave their open wells, but good water is as necessary as the air we breathe.

Drive wells are durable, always have plenty of water, for you can not pump one dry in a year. Drive wells are the very best, pump with case, all you want on them is a Star windmill. The Prudden boys are always flying around, and make quite a noise, and if you want a drive well, just call on them.

HOW WATCHES ARE MADE

In a SOLID GOLD WATCH, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus gold is actually needless. In James Boss' Patent Gold Watch Cases this WASTE is saved, and solidity and STRENGTH increased by a simple process, at one-half the cost. A plate of solid GOLD is soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickel composition metal, and the three are then passed between polished steel rollers. From this the cases, backs, centers, bezels, etc., are cut and shaped by dies and formers. The gold is thick enough to admit of all kinds of chasing engraving and engine turning. These cases have been worn perfectly smooth by use without removing the gold. This is: the only case made under this process. Each case is accompanied with a valid guarantee signed by the manufacturers warranting it to wear 20 years. 150,000 of these Cases. now carried in the United States and Canada. WASHINGTON. A BIG SHIPMENT

The Treasury Department has prepared for the change in the revenue laws affecting stampe to be placed upon articles from which internal revenue will be collected after May 1 by shipping to collectors throughout the United States stamps of the new denominations to the value of $30,000,000. A shipment was made so that the stamps may be in the hands of collectors for sale by May 1. The stamps shipped of all denominations were made up in 1,140 packages, weighing in the aggregate fifteen tons, and requiring 200 of the largest size mail pouches to accommodate them

STRAMBOAT MAIL SERVICE. The periofice department has ordered the establishment of a steamboat mail service between Detroit and Sault Ste. Marie, by way of Detour, 350 miles and back, five times each week during the season of 1883.

By direction of the Secretary of the Interior the 50,000 acres of land remaining of the Otoe and Missouri Indian reservation in Kansas and Nebraska, will be offered at public sale on the 30th of May. The lands are to be sold in 80-acre tracts, and no one person will be allowed to purchase more than 100 acres.

The first counterfeit of the new five dollar national bank note has made its appearance. It is on the First National Bank of Milwaukee, and is a poor imitation.

WILL FIGHT THE LAWYER. Through her counsel, Mrs. Betty Mason has filed an answer in the Equity Conrt in Washington to the suit of Benj. F. Bigelow for coun sei fees in defending her husband, Sergt. Mason. She states that Bigelow volunteered to assume the case, and was not her choice; that she never agreed to pay him for his services, but had of her own accord paid him $370, for which she holds his receipt; that he connected himself with her husband's defense only for his own glorification, and for the benefit of his reputation, and finally denies the jurisdiction of the court, and holds that his claim is not good in equity, but must be prosecuted as in other civil action.

RAUM'S RESIGNATION.

Gen. Raum, commissioner of internal revenue, has tendered his resignation, to take effect immediately. This action of Commissioner Raum, was a surprise to everyone. The reason assigned is that he wishes to engage in loan business and will open an office in Washington at once. It is rumored that ex-Congres-man Burrows will succeed Raum,

THE OFFICE SEEKER.—Within three hours after Raum's resignation there were over six applicants for the position.

FORTUNATE RED CLOUD. that of an earthquake. Church bens rang and the people fied panic-stricken. Two hundred houses were leveled to the ground within a intuite. Special dispatches report the groans of people buried under the debris as awful in the extreme and beyond description. A large pine forest was completely swept out of existence. Fifteen or twenty people are reported killed at this place, and over 85 seriously injured. An appaling situation exists at Beauregard. The helplessness of the people is something awful. Not a family in the place but has one or more dead or dying members. When the cyclone reached the place every house was the cyclone reached the place every house was leveled in an instant. Bricks, roofs, etc., were blown away and not a house was left standing. About 30 are known to have lost their lives and in all probability the number will be greatly increased when the debris has been removed. he unfortunate towns are near together, in the southern extremity of Copiah county, on the line of the St. Louis & New Orleans railroad, some 40 miles south of Jackson, Miss. Wesson has a population of about 2,000 and Beauregard of 600. Alabama and Georgia were visited by this cyclone which was unprecedented in destructiveness. In Georgia the loss of life is believed to reach 100, and the damage to property fairly appalling. In Mississippi, the loss of life will probably reach 65, while the wounded are counted by hundreds. The thunder seemed like an earthquake, and people rushed wildly about saying that the judgment day had come. THEY DEFY HIM.

TOO MUCH POWDER.

Lowrey Brothers' powder magazine, containing about 1,500 pounds of powder, situated about a quarter of a mile from Larned, Ks., exploded, instantly killing Chas. L. Goodrich, late of Delaware, O. James Zigler, a comrade, of the same place, was with him duck hunting, but on the opposite side of the creek, and escaped injury. The explosion shook buildings and broke windows half a mile distant. A hole six feet deep and a few pieces of brick are all that are left to mark the spot where the magazine stood. It is supposed young Goodrich fired a shot into the door of the magazine, causing the disaster. His body was blown several feet from where his gun was found several feet from where his gun was found.

THE LAND LEAGUE.

The land league convention that assembled in Philadelphia on April 25, was a representative Irish convention. Many prominent land leaguers were present. The object of the Irish National Land League of America was to wind up its affairs and merge it with another body with a broader scope. As now organized the great question of national self-government does not come within the province of the league. The new organization will grapple with all these important questions. The secretary made a very gratifying report, and the speech made were of a character to inspire enthusias within the breasts of every son of the Emersid

When Kring entered jall eight years ago his weight was 190 pounds and he was a strong, robust and muscular man. To-day he is emaciated, feeble, a mere skeleton, is suffering from consumption and it is thought he cannot live long. He will next be arraigned for murder in the second degree, but his acquittal is expected as the evidence cannot again be procured. Dora Broemser, whom he shot January 4, 1875 was the wife of his business partner, with whom he wife of his business partner, with whom he was infatuated and who refused to leave her husband, and go with him. Kring's case is one of the most remarkable on record and has attracted general and professional attention in all parts of the country.

CRIME.

A SCENE AT THE "CENTER OF THE WORLD." A place about two miles from Teavittsburg D., known as the "Center of the World," was the scene of a terrible tragedy. A man named John De Long killed a widow lady named Griswold and then committed suicide. It appears that De Long had proposed to Mrs. Griswold to marry him, but she persistently refused, and he determined that no one else should have her. So he called at the residence of Richard Allen, where the victim was employed as housekeeper, and asked to see her. As soon as she appeared he opened fire on her with a revolver which he had in his hand. The first two shots took effect in the head and the third in the cholera, fevers, liver complaints, malaria, and side, and the woman fell dead without a murmur. De Long then placed the muzzle of the revenue that the crew had suffered more than temporary revolver to his temple and fired, falling dead within three feet of the prostrate body of Mrs. that now, in the closing days of the cruise, there Griswold.

When Phil. B. Thompson, member of congress for the eighth Kentucky district started for Washington in November last, Mrs. Thompson accompanied him to Cincinnati, but was to return home the same night. She is a was to return home the same night. She is a rather preposessing woman, but addicted to the use of liquor, the taste for which was contracted during a long illness throughout which stimulants were freely ordered for her by the attending physician. While on the street in Cincinnati after her husband's departure Mrs. Thompson met Walter H. Davis, a prominent business man of Harrodsburg, Ky., a friend of the Thompson family, who knew of her unfortunate habit. He is alleged to have taken advantage of her failing, piled her with liquor and taken her to his room in the St. Clair hotel, and late that night the watchman found her lying in the corridor. The proprietor would have put her in the street but for recognition by his wife. Next morning she was overwhelmed with shame on discovering her disgrace and left the hotel. Miss Buckner, a friend of the woman, wrote to Thompson telling him of his wife's disgrace, but said nothing of Davis' conduct, whereupon Thompson refused to further recognize her as his wife. On his return from Washington a few days ago, while in Cincinnati, Thonipson heard for the first time of the part Davis had taken in his wife's disgrace, and the two men met at Harrodsburg Junction, where both boarded the smoking car Davis saluted Thompson, when the latter with an oath said: "How dare you speak to me?" and immediately drew a pistol. Davis atempted to draw but changed his mind, and pulled the door shut. As Davis was going down the steps Thompson fired and Davis fell dead, rolling down the embaukment. The train stepped and Thompson got off, saying he would stopped and Thompson got off, saying he would go back to Harrodsburg to give himself up. He returned on the train that carried the dead body of Davis. Going to the court house he addressed the judge saying it was not custom-ary in his situation to make remarks, but he felt it due himself and the community to state the facts leading to this result. He then de-tailed the facts of his wife's disgrace and ruin

A REMARKABLE STORY.

The following narrative is self explanatory. The letter which precedes it is a true copy of the original, and was sent to us, together with the details, by an officer now in the United States Navy.

United States Flagship Nomad, Navy Yard, Boston, Mass.

My dear Friend:-Your kind favor contain ing congratulations on my restoration to health is before me. When we parted thirty months ago little did we imagine that either would be brought near death's door by a disease which selects for its victims those who present an internal field of constitutional weakness for its ed through a terrible illness, my delivery from death being due to the wonderful discovery in medical science, made by a man who to-day stands in the front rank of his fellow-workers in favor of that which is sneered at by old practitioners, may startle you, but "seeing is believing," and when I recount the attack made on my old hulk, how near I came to lowering the agency above mentioned, gave me victory, you will at least credit me with just cause for sincerity in my thankfulness and belief. I will also spin my yarn anent my China cruise, and altogether, expect to entertain as well as be entertained by you. With best wishes, Sincerely yours,

Rear Admiral U. S. Navy.

An autumnal afternoon in the year 188-found

HON. GEORGE WENDELL, Sinclair Place, Boston.

the taunt flagship Nomad rounding the treacherous and dangerous extremity of South America. And this day certainly intended to place itself on record with those of its predecessors marked stormy, its nastiness in wind and weather giving all hands on board the flagship their fill in hard work and discomforts. The record of the Nomad on this cruise, which she was now completing on her homeward bound passage to Boston, had been most disagreeable, when considered in the light of heavy weather work. From Suez to Aden, then on to Bombay, Point de Galle, Singapore, Hong-Kong, Shang-hai, Nagasaki, and Yokohama, the balance sheet stood largely in favor of old Neptune's rough characteristics, but with remarkable evenness the health and original roster of the ship's company stood this day as it did nearly three years ago-with one exception. Through out the diverse and varied exposures incidental to cruising over the Asiatic station, where colds of all degrees reign in full force, none of the crew had suffered more than temporary stood nine chances for, to one against, a victory being at last scored for the destroying angel Early this morning Wm. MacDuff, a financial broker, doing business at 73 Nassau street New York, and living at Pulaski avenue, killed his wife, his 6-year old son and himself. Pistol shots were heard by a tenant on an upper floor, who supposed them to have been discharged in the street, and it was two hours later that the tragedy became known. Mrs. MacDuff was a diplomatic recention at the Consulate at Death. When the Nomad reached Shanghai in admiral to the doctors of his ship, "and easy to cure." So thought the medical officers, but with a quiet though insidious progression, this cold clung to the admiral in spite of their best efforts to eradicate it, and when the time came for leaving Yokohama, homeward bound, the admiral realized that his lungs and throat were decidedly out of order. The doctors advised returning home by mail steamer to San Francisco, so that greater means for curing this persistent cough might be found in the Naval Hospital there; but the admiral preferred to stick to his ship, still imagining that his trouble would eventually be overcome by the doctors' treatment. No one who looked at the admiral even in those days imagined that he would fall a victim to lung trouble. But it was the old story again typified in this case. Only a cold at first; and in spite of orthodox treatment the peculiar climatic effects of China nursed it, and hastened the sure result of such a deep-seated trouble. Time passed after leaving Yokohama for Boston, bringing varying symptoms in the admiral's case, and the doctors imagined that they held the disease in check at least. But with the formation of tubercles, night-sweats, and the now rapid consumption of lung tissues, which had set in with alarming symptoms, the patient realized that his cold had laid the seeds of that fell agent of Death, Consumption. The hacking cough of the admiral had in itself been sufficient food for serious consideration, and now, as in the warm autumn days the flagship gallantly rode over the blue water of the Pacifie, bound for Cape Horn, the doctors hoped much for success. But this boisterous afternoon found the good ship struggling with gigantic seas set off from the Cape by a fierca northerly wind. Leaden were the heavens and send the heavens of sell abroad for the text. sad the hearts of all abroad, for that morning the usual bulletin of the medical officers had set forth this intelligence: "The admiral is in same condition as reported last night. A burning fever has been slightly reduced, while other symptoms are as heretofore announced." All understood these words without questioning. The beloved admiral had during the past two weeks sunk very low. The symptoms of blood-poisoning, a torpid liver, intense pains throughout the body, eyesight and mental faculties affected, appetite gone, through inaction of that great regulator—the liver. These were the means which had reduced the admiral from the pippagle of health to the valley and from the pinnacle of health to the valley and shadow of death. Consumption held full sway now, and the well-known skill of naval doctors tailed the facts of his wife's disgrace and ruin at the hands of the deceased, who knew her unfortunate weakness for liquor, adding: "My domestic relations are bankrupt; my daughter exiled from home. Not all his blood are worth her tears. I throw myself on the justice of my countrymen." When he finished, Judge Harding said it was not proper for him, as a judge, to express the sympathy he felt as a man. He would hold Mr. Thompson in $5.000 to answer to the grand jury. The bond was given, and Mr. Thompson released.

I mow, and the well-known skill of naval doctors was in this instance at least completely foiled.

The admiral had issued orders for the flagship to touch at Montevideo for coal, and it was the intention of the doctors to land the admiral there for treatment. But one man in the ship was wrapped in the gloom of despair, as standing by the weather rigging on the poop deck he gazed absently over the seething waste of waters. This was the admiral's son, a lieutenant, and attached to his father's staff. He feared that the wear and tear of ship life would sap his father's strength beyond endurwould sap his father's strength beyond endurance, and before the ship could reach Monteance, and before the snip could reach Monte-videc. Among a group of sailors gathered around one of the great guns on the spar deck stood the captain of the fore-top Brown, a slight but healthy looking man. His compan-ions were listening to a recital of his sufferings from consumption, which had developed while he was attached to the sloop-of-war Ranger, lying in the harbor of Yokohama a year ago, this "yarn" having been started by a discussion about the admirally condition. sion about the admiral's condition. That afternoon Chang hove up with fourteen bottles of a lush, enough to kill or cure the whole ship's crew, an' that looked fresh in their nice wrappers. With this triumphant assertion Brown looked about the circle. Then, lowering his voice, said, "boys, I've four of those precious bottles left—ain't give 'em all away yet after I was cured—an' if you all think that it would not be too free with the 'old man,' suppose I go to his son there on the poop deck and say what I have to you, an', askin' his pardon, say we want the admiral to try the stuff in my bottles again' that they gured my consump bottles, seein' that they cured my consump-

This idea met with approval from all sides. Therefore Brown walked off for the interview with the admiral's son, with no little anxiety in his good heart as to the result of his mission. Approaching the Heutenant, Brown saluted, and asked for permission to state his reasons for doing so. This was readily granted, and Brown spoke out.

"Seeing that I was once cured of consumption, lieutenant, I make bold to ask if I can tell you how, an' why I've the reasons for wishing you to use on your father what was my salva-In a few moments the lieutenant had Brown's weather his trouble, is the prayer of all the ship," said Brown, as the lieutenant turned to enter the cabin.

There was no cessation in the storm that evening. The gale howled through the rigging in wild, discordant tones; the great ship labor-ed through the white-capped mountains of water threatened to engulf her with each burst of their storm-whipped crests Within the admiral's cabin the Argand lights, the comfortable furniture, and the numerous evidences of the Admiral's wanderings over land and water, as displayed in bric-a-brac and trimmings, gave to the room a warm, snug appearance, most pleasing this wild night to those within. In his stateroom lay the admiral, made comfortable by all that loving hands and willing hearts could suggest. By his side sat his son, who in quiet voice was recounting to his father the interview with Brown, and the opposition met with from the doctors when the idea of giving this new medicine was broached.

"You were sleeping at the time, father, and therefore missed a laughable scene, made so, in spite of your condition, by the intense dislike displayed by the doctors for this 'new-fangled stuff,' this 'patent liquid,' which they given you. Well, I cut the matter short by saying that I would take all the responsibility and with your permission would administer it. That I obtained when I found you awake, and now you are under way with the first bottle as per directions. I am satisfied, dear father, that it will do you good, a premonition filling my heart that at least we have found the means of arresting the burning fever and hacking cough which have been troubling you so much."

The admiral's reply was cut short by a severe spell of coughing, during which he spat blood, and when finished sank back exhausted. But the grateful look which he bestowed on his son was an additional assurance of belief in that which the admiral had at first sight dubbed as a possible but doubtful means of dubbed as a possible but doubtful means of doing him any good. But laying aside his dislike for any but old-established remedies, the admiral acquiesced in his son's request, and now, after this last spell, admitted that the effect of the dose had softened the dreaded severity of the racking cough.

Three weeks later found the Nomad making the narbor of Montevideo. After severe and prolonged weather she had rounded the Cape and now was standing in the harbor for the purpose of recoaling and watering. To one given to the study of human lineaments the faces of those aboard the flagship this bright morning would have afforded infinite scope for such pursuit. But the source of each man's happiness flowed from the same fountain of grateful joy. The beloved admiral was the cause of this. And why? If you could have seen the admiral this bright morning, dear reader, your answer could be easily found in his face. his face. A changed man was he. Victory was perched on his guidons! the dread enemy was slowly retreating! The fight was a very severe one, but with no cessation in vigilant action and careful application of the contents of four bottles the admiral had turned the fight of consumption and many the fight of consumption and many the fight. flank of consumption, and was slowly but surely driving him off the field with a power which astounded the doctors and filled all hearts with joy and thankfulness. What was this, then, that had won the victory for the seaman Brown, and was now leading the admirel's shattered forces to the same grand result? When asked this question by one of his officers on duty, in Montevideo, the admiral slowly lifting his hand, replied, "I would that in letters of gold, and so placed that all the world could read them, the name of this great remedy could be shown, coupled with the genius who discovered it,—The Golden Medical Discovery! Naturally against the chase of man!

ture's ally against the abuse of man!"

Well might the admiral sing the praises of that which had so unexpectedly rescued him from a fatal illness. When the ship anchored the first commission for the admiral's son to execute was a large purchase of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which, as the admiral sadly admitted, he had seen in every port the world around and had only admired as an evidence of the energy and enterprise of an American who could thus place his Golden Medical Discovery in every nook and corner of the globe. But now he was one more to testify to the wonderful power of this medicine, and certainly did so in Montevideo, by praising it up to all the high officials who visited him.

A week later and the Nomad sailed for Boston direct. What the condition of the admiral "A year ago this day I was hove to in the 'pill man's' sick bay in the Ranger, then off Yokohama, an' I tell you, pards, 'twas no use pipin' my number, 'cause I was nigh on passin' in my enlistment papers for a long cruise aloft," continued Brown. "Consumption had me flat aback, and the Doctor says it was no use to stow away his lush in my hold seein' that my bellows was condemned by a higher power than he could wrastle with."

"How did you pucker out of it?" asked a gunner's mate.

From the wonderful power of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical discovery over that terribly fatal disease consumption, which is scrofula of the lungs, when first offering this now world-famed remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought fayorably of calling it his "consumption cure," but abandoned that name as too restrictive for a medicine that from its wonderful combination of germ-destroying, as well as forti tion of germ-destroying, as well as touic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing anti-bilious, diuretic, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all the chronic diseases of the liver, blood, kidneys, and lungs. Erysipelas, salt-rheum, fever sores, scaly or rough skin, in short, all diseases caused by disease germs in the blood, are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine. Great eating ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influences. Especially has its manifested its potency in curing tetter, rose rash, boils, carbuncles, sore eyes, scrofulous sores and swellings, white swellings, goitre or thick neck, and enlarged glands.

The reader will pardon the foregoing digression, prompted by our admiration for a remedy that performs such marvelous cures, and permit us to say that when the admiral returned to his home in New York the only cloud cast upon the happiness of the reunion with his family was caused by the continued illness of his eldest son, a young man of twenty-four, whose disease, when the admiral sailed from Montevideo, had been reported as succumbing to the treatment of the family doctor. But his father found it otherwise; the unfortunate young man was suffering severely from chronic disease of the kidneys and bladder. Before leaving Boston the admiral had purchased a copy of Dr. Pierce's book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." He read this valuable book thoroughly, and upon his arrival home had made up his mind as to the future treatment for his son. The latter was N. Y., conducted by Dr. R. V. Pierce, and his competent staff of specialists, where, under skillful treatment, the sufferer soon found relief and a permanent cure.

In the library of his handsome home the admiral placed one of the four bottles sent him by the seaman Brown. Conspicuous in its pret-ty frame and stand it attracts all eyes, which can easily read the lines in golden letters inscribed on the tablet under the stand as follows: -"This bottle once contained the ammunition which secured for Admiral—the victory in his battle off Cape Horn with the enemy, consumption. His undying gratitude is thus shown for that which this bottle and its mates held."

A HARD LITE!

BY PERCY B. ST. JOHN. CHAPTER I.

MY UNCLE JOHN

My early recollections are not pleasant ones. My father and mother were very poor; my father, who had combined a clerkship in the city with something obscure in the literary way, had fallen ill, and was unable to continue his regular duties. and to depend wholly on his pen. My mother had a connection as music teacher, but it was a hard thing to make both ends meet.

Under these circumstances she apled to my grandmother, a very starchy old woman, a reputed miser, who was saving for, it was supposed, my benefit.

Mrs. Clifford, for all reply, sent five pounds and an intimation that she would like to live with us, paying for self and servant so much a week for her board and lodging.

I was nine at the time, and was a being without fear; but when I saw my grandmother I was somewhat oppressed with awe. She was a dry, weird-looking old woman, with thin, cunning face and a manner that was thoroughly tyrannical.

She had a middle-aged servant named Martha, who was even more tyrannical than herself; and I was doomed to bear the brunt of their joint tempers.

My father was always at work or in bed, my mother out giving lessons or waiting on the invalid. Our little maid, Jane, had enough to do, and I was there as special attendant on Aunt Clifford and her middle-aged maid, who was more like a companion and friend than anything else.

She was fairly paid, but the bait which made her faithful to Mrs. Clifford was her share of the inheritance. It was thoroughly understood that I was to be grandmother's heir, but that Martha Singleton was to participate.

My life was not a happy one. My grandmother always wished me to be within call, so that I was deprived of my natural amusements and playtime.

My school-hours were counted, and any dereliction punished.

My mother, who was weak and in ill health, rather feared Martha, and when I complained of cuffs and other assaults, she advised me to be patient, and that all in good time should receive my reward.

But to my youthful mind the dim future presented no compensation. Like most persons of my age, I wanted immediate enjoyment. would jeopardize half a dozen inheritances for a game of marbles or trap and ball.

But the fiat had gone forth, and I had to submit. Not wishing to vex my father and mother, I concealed my unhapiness as best I might, and comforted myself with the daily were the whole ground and finds: First, that flection that the old woman could bases the discovery is not one competent to settle such an important question; would take her away some day—at moidence between bright solar lines and at which my heart greatly rejoiced.

fair, and was attended only by my mother, Martha and myself. The The details were seen to by a Mr. Lewis, a friend of my father's who remained with him during the ceremony.

"Zephaniah," said his wife with a chilling severity, "I saw you comchilling out of a saloon this afternoon." "Well, my darling," replied the heart-less man, "you wouldn't have your husband staying in a saloon all day, would be mony.

My grandmother always hinted that her money would be found in a field near the railroad, saws new loco-certain box, the key of which she come trichtsped, and ran to the house My grandmother always hinted never parted with until during her last illness, when she gave it very bust, sure; it's red hot clean to the top bust, sure; it's red hot clean to the top bust, sure; it's red hot clean to the top of the stoyepipe." escretly to my mother, with strict injunctions to use it only after the funeral.

The box, a small black portmanteau, was now opened. It contained old books, papers, and a small pocket-book. This was eagerly examined, and found to contain a ten-pound note "for my funeral," and documents connected with an annuity, which, as we afterwards found, she had sunk all her money to pur-

"There is nothing else," cried Mr. Lewis, upon whom, in the absence of my father, the task of examining the box devolved. "The supposed fortune of the late lamented was a myth-had no existance."

"My poor boy!" groaned my mother, as she clasped me around the

"I'll search again," said Mr. Lewis, who was a very methodical man.

And he did, tapping the furniture, examining the arm-chair, cutting up the foot-stool, but with no better result. The inheritance was a fraud, a delusion and a snare.

Martha Singleton now showed herself in her true colors. She swore that she had been robbed; that my mother who had possession of the key had secured the treasure and destroyed the will.

She solemnly vowed that she had seen accumulated notes and gold, and at last grew so violent and abusive that Mr. Lewis, with the assistance of a policeman, turned her out of doors.

She went away vowing vengeance, but we never saw her again.

But things went badly with us. On the strength of the inheritance things had been obtained for my father; and now creditors had become clamorous. My mother, though she strove hard to keep up her courage, grew weaker and paler. She still stuck regularly to her work, but it was obvious that she would soon be unable to do anything for a living. I was unable to see this, but still I could feel an impending shadow was

The CHICAGO DAILY NEWS is the pioneer of cheap journalism in the West It was founded Dec. 20, 1875, as an evening paper with editions at noon, 8 and 5 o'clock. A complete newspaper,—complete in the one essential feature of American journalism, i. e., presenting all the news, -sold on the street at any price less than the conventional nickel, was an innovation in western journalism, and, like all new enterprises, the "cheap paper" had to contend with longestablished custom and even prejudice before securing the recognition it sought and deserved. At the end of the first year, 1876, it had achieved a daily sale ranging from 8,000 to 10,000 copies. From this time forward its progress was beyond all precedent in American journalism. In 1877 its average daily circulation was 22,037 copies; in 1878, 38,314 copies; in 1879, 45,194 copies; in 1880, 54,801 copies. On the morning of March 21, 1881, the CHICAGO MORNING NEWS made its first appearance. In September following, the sixth month of its publication, its circulation amounted to 490,019 copies, or a daily average of 18,846 copies,—a circulation never before attained by any daily paper in the United States, within a corresponding time.

The CHICAGO DAILY NEWS, therefore, as now published, consists of MORES-ING, NOON, and EVENING ISSUES, known respectively as the Morning NEWS, Noon News, and Evening News. The average combined circulation of the three issues of the Daily News now exceeds 90,000 copies each day. To appreciate the exceptional extent of this vast circulation it is only necessary to state that it is over three times the circulation of any other daily paper in Chicago or the West, while its circulation in the city of Chicago is GREATER than ALL. other Chicago daily papers COMBINED. Being an independent paper, the organ of no party, sect, or class, it is the one universally read Chicago paper. The subscription price of the DAILY NEWS, either MORNING OF EVENING issue, is $6.00 per year, or $2.00 for four months, postage included.

On July 2, 1878, the Daily News purchased the Cuicago Evening Pose. consolidated its daily issue with the DAILY NEWS, and continued its weekly issue under the name of the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS. The WEEKLY NEWS under its present name and management is therefore less than five years old, though as a consecutive weekly publication it is now in its twentieth year. The CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS takes a corresponding field among weekly newspapers to that occupied by the DAILY NEWS among dailies. It gives the news of the world in condensed yet complete form. Its Chicago market quotations are pecially complete and trustworthy. That the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS has been correct in its judgment of the requirements of a large class of readers of the weekly press is best evidenced by the extent of its circulation, which aggregated in the month immediately preceding the date of this writing, 202,053 copies, or a weekly average of 50,513 copies. The subscription price of the WEEKLE NEWS is but SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS per year, postage included.

The phenomenal success of the Carcago News in both its DAILY and WERKLY ISSUES has been achieved by observing that fundamental principle of offering the best article of its kind in the market at the lowest cost to the purchaser. The Chicago News is cheap only in price. The character of its news service is unsurpassed. It is a member of the Western Associated Press, and in addition to the unrivalled news service furnished by this Association, it enjoys the exceptional advantage of its own special telegraphic wire from Chicago to Washington and New York on the East, and to Milwaukee and St. Paul on the North Giving all the news through reportorial and telegraphic failities unsurpassed by those of any other Chicago paper, it commends itself to all classes in the community, to rich and poor alike, in that it offers an absolutely complete record of the news of the day in concise form, without the needless verbiage and amplification which render so many metropolitan journals "a weariness to the flesh," while its price brings it within the reach of all classes. #### A CHAPTER OF TRIALS.

Spoopendyde and his Printing Press.

Brooklyn Eagle.

Spoopendyke came home one night bringing a small bundle in his arms. "It's a printing-press, on which I expect to do all my own printing hereafter," he said. "Oh, but isn't that lovely!" fluttered Mrs. Spoopendyke, dropping the stork and rushing to her husband's side, "and can't we do the loveliest things with it! Is it the kind that the Herald and Sun and all those papers are printed with?"

"Oh, yes Mrs. Spoopendyke," growled her husband, "you've hit it exactly. This is the very kind. I got Mr. Bennett to kindly try it on, so as to get it the same size that the Herald is printed on.

"And will you print papers with yours like Mr. Bennett and the other editors?" continued Mrs. Spoopendyke

"Oh, but won't I, though?" yelled her husband. "It needed a dod gasted female idiot to think of that; you've struck the proper plan.

"Think you can print a 50x60 showbill with a 3x4 press? Well, I tell ye that ye can't. Can ye get it into your measly head that this is a card press, and can only print a card three inches by four inches?"

"Oh, it's a card press is it?" ventured Mrs. Spoopendyke; "then we can print those beautiful Christmas cards on it, can't we?"

"Now you've got it." yelled her hus-band, "that's the idea. It prints in I had offended her about something thirty-five different colors at one impression, and any design from the pic-ture of an old crank with a sealskin overcoat, loafing around somebody's chimney with a game-bag full of jumping-jacks, to the New Year, 1883, represented by a hump-backed baby dressed in a broad grin, with a napkin tied round his waist, driving out the old year, dressed as an old tramp with a mowing machine and a gallon jug of whiskey under his arm. That's the idea, exactly. Think you can print chromos and lithographs on it, don't you? Well you can't. You can only print one color, that is black. Think you grasp it now?"

"Well," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, "I suppose you can print visiting-cards on

"Yes, Mrs. Spoopendyke, I can," said her husband, in a softer tone, and he grew in a much better humor as he proceeded to show his wife the press and exhibit his dexterity in the use of the type and the press. At last he got his worthy helpmeet's name set up in type, and proceeded to put the chase on the press with a grand flourish. But in an evil honr he had forgot to key it up, and at the first touch the whole business went to pi, and at the next fell in a confused mass

all over the carpet. "Why, what makes it do that?" said

Mrs. Spoopendyke, laughing. "What makes it do what, Mrs. S?" sneered her husband, as he hit his head on a corner of the table in a mad dive after the type. "What d'ye s'pose makes it do it? What makes anything to anything? If I had your talent for asking idiotic questions, I'd get a glass of beer and a three-inch paper collar, and live out as a prosecuting attorney. By this time the worthy gentlemen had got the name set up and securely fastened, and was printing with great gusto, but he had, unfortunately, set "My poor little Effie," he says the soothe away my reminiscences of my the types in wrong order, and the first eight perfumed visiting cards came out eight perfumed visiting cards came out like the following:

Mrs. 2 goodsublish. When Mrs. Spoopendyke saw it she set up a little scream, "Oh but isn't that funny, though. What makes it be wrong side up?' "Funny!" howled her husband, with horrid derision, as he grasped the situation. "It's a perfect thunderbolt of fun. It's the most deliciously humorous thing of the century. All you need is an advertisement of liver pills on the cover, and a joke about a goat on the first page, to be a comic almanac. With your appreciation of humor, all you need is a broad grin and $3,000 worth of stolen diamonds, to be the leading comedienne of the American boards. Can't you see the measly type's turned wrong? They have only got to be turned round the other way.

After half an hour of diligent labor, the types were again in position, securely keyed up and put on the press.

When the final arrangements were want to be a literary man." "Plenty completed, Mr. Spoopendyke turned round to wink at the baby, and incautiously left his thumb over the edge of the press. As luck would have it, Mrs. and cut off twenty-five cents worth of bacon at a whack." "But, father, there is nothing original in trade." "How so, sir?" "Nothing original, for you lever down and the press closed on that know even the markets are filled with gentleman's thumb, making him jump quotations." The poor old man who had taken so much pains with the way- that would have made the second lieutenant of a company of pirates blush! 'Dod dast the measly printing press,' he shricked, as he smashed the base-burner with it, and then threw it in the alley. "Haven't ye got any sense scarcely? Why don't ye go on with the entertainment? The measly thing only got as far as the bone. Why don't you begin on the skeleton? Why don't ye finish the chapter?" and Mr. Spoopendyke danced up-stairs, five at a time, with a parting injunction to his wife to hire out for a slaughter-house. "Well," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, as she picked up the baby, and put a pitcher of water where her husband would be sure to fall over it when he went down stairs in the morning, "If
