When we read of the number of criminals Gov. Begole has pardoned,—and each week swells the number,—we do not blame people for exercising lynch law on such brutes as Till. Warner, who committed the fiendish outrage on a seven-year-old girl at Cheboygan a few weeks ago.

Not many villages of the size of Chelsea can boast of as fine a library as the Ladies Library Association holds open to the public. It costs but a trifle to become a member, which entitles you to the use of the books. The library now contains 515 volumes, and we understand more will be added soon.

Last Sabbath was observed as children's day at the Congregational church. The morning services consisted mainly in a bible reading respecting children; the evening was occupied by the smaller children in recitations and singing, some of the pieces being very good and impressive. The graduating exercises at the Town Hall last Friday evening were all anyone could wish for. The essays were masterpieces for persons of their ages, and were evidence of hard work. The address by Prof. Dickey, of Albion, was listened to with the greatest attention, and if all would remember it, great good would be the result. The music rendered by the Glee Club added greatly to the evening's exercises. That Prof. Parker is entitled to the thanks of all, will not be disputed for he spared no pains to make the exercises a success. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity, a number of persons not finding sitting room.

The Saline Observer says: "Some 100,000 bushels of wheat were shipped from this station during the month of May. This exceeds by 40,000 bushels the amount shipped during the same month in 1882. Talk about the wealth of farmers in this section. There was over $100,000 distributed among the farmers here for that one article alone last month, as the price for wheat averaged about $1.05 last month."

We do not think Bro. Stair intended to make this statement, and shall think his "devil" added one cipher all the way thro' as the Crop Report of the state reports only 70,873 bushels marketed in the whole county during that month, and we are strengthened in this opinion by another item in which he says: "818,000 pounds of freight forwarded from this station during May," and his wheat figures would make six million pounds alone. As we claim this place to be the banner market, we make the above statement.

A few weeks ago the school board visited the school house and grounds, to see what improvements should be made during the summer. We understand numerous much needed changes will be made, among them the following are the most important: considerable wood work will be grained, and most of it will be re-varnished; several rooms will be calomined, and new recitation seats will be placed in the new school room (and are very much needed). The cornices on the building will be re-painted, which will add greatly to the exterior appearance of the building.

The board certainly deserve the thanks of every parent for the care taken in keeping the house in good repair with the least expense, and should the board deem it advisable to make more extensive improvements, we hope they will have the hearty support of the whole district, as your children (who spend one-half of their time at school), will receive the benefit of them.

J. Bacon & Co., this week present for your perusal, a fresh lot of valuable locals.

One of our most respected citizens not to be out-done in the "rare coin" business, hands us one that must (?) certainly be an old (?) one for it has no date. It is certainly (?) a rare (?) coin (?) and has the appearance of gold (?). One side is blank; on the other side appear the words, "Tommy, Chelsea, M." and the figures "10." Can any of our readers tell us the age, use, origination, and metal of this "coin?"

THE LADIES OF THE LITERARY SOCIETY OF THE MADISON AVENUE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH LISTENED LAST EVENING, IN THE CHURCH LECTURE ROOM, TO A DESCRIPTION OF MRS. JOHN P. NEWMAN, WIFE OF THE CLEVER GYMAN, OF HER VISIT TO THE HAREM OF THE PASHA OF HILLAH, BABYLON.

"The gates of the 'Abode of Bliss' closed instantly after I entered the building. A long corridor opened into the main apartment of the harem. It was furnished with gorgeous tapestry hangings and sumptuous satin furniture of curious design. The curtained window looked out upon blooming gardens. Ranged about the chamber in various attitudes were a score of women. Some were seated on divans and some kneeling. Thirteen of them were the wives of the pasha. A cloud of negro servants attended to their wants. I could speak but a few words of Arabic, but we were at home on the subject of dress, which has a universal language of its own among women.

"The eating of these dainties and gossiping with each other the whole day long is the sole occupation of the women of the harem. They live in luxurious-bondage, in blissful ignorance of the outside world. I longed to reveal its beauties and possibilities to them, but could converse only by gestures. Before I left, a baby pasha was shown to me. Its mother looked like a sleeping beauty. The babe was wrapped in folds of fine linen, and its robe consisted of over fifty different articles of apparel. The interest shown in the baby and the mother, by the other women of the harem, was most beautiful evidence of the universal sisterhood of women."

"The gates of the 'Abode of Bliss' closed instantly after I entered the building. A long corridor opened into the main apartment of the harem. It was furnished with gorgeous tapestry hangings and sumptuous satin furniture of curious design. The curtained window looked out upon blooming gardens. Ranged about the chamber in various attitudes were a score of women. Some were seated on divans and some kneeling. Thirteen of them were the wives of the pasha. A cloud of negro servants attended to their wants. I could speak but a few words of Arabic, but we were at home on the subject of dress, which has a universal language of its own among women.

"The eating of these dainties and gossiping with each other the whole day long is the sole occupation of the women of the harem. They live in luxurious-bondage, in blissful ignorance of the outside world. I longed to reveal its beauties and possibilities to them, but could converse only by gestures. Before I left, a baby pasha was shown to me. Its mother looked like a sleeping beauty. The babe was wrapped in folds of fine linen, and its robe consisted of over fifty different articles of apparel. HOW WATCHES ARE MADE

In a SOLID GOLD WATCH, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus gold is actually needless. In James Boss' Patent Gold Watch Cases this WASTE is saved, and SOLIDITY and STRENGTH increased by a simple process, at one-half the cost. A plate of SOLID GOLD is soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickel composition metal, and the three are then passed between polished steel rollers. From this the cases, backs, centers, bezels, etc., are cut and shaped by dies and formers. The gold is thick enough to admit of all kinds of chasing, engraving and engine turning. These cases have been worn perfectly smooth by use without removing the gold. This is the only case made under this process. Each case is accompanied with a valid guarantee signed by the manufacturer warranting it to wear 20 years. 150,000 of these Cases now carried in the United States and Canada. Largest and Oldest Factory. Established 1854. Ask your Jeweler.

These three words so often mis-spelled, are three of the cardinal virtues of something that will cure many a bad spell, and that is Salicylic acid, pronounced Sal-i-cyl-i-ca. LITERARY NOTES.

The publishers of Rutledge's Monthly offer twelve valuable rewards in their Monthly for July among which is the following: We will give $20 in gold to the person telling us who was Capaan's Father, by July 10th, 1883. Should two or more answers be received, the reward will be divided. The money will be forwarded July 15th, 1883. Persons trying for the reward must send 20 cents in silver (no postage stamps taken) with their answer, for which they will receive the August Monthly, in which the name and address of the winner of the reward and the correct answer will be published, and in which several other valuable rewards will be offered. Address, Rutledge Publishing Company, Easton, Penna.

The Century Magazine for July has for a frontispiece a portrait of old John Brown accompanied by two sketches of his memorable raid on Harper's Ferry, one by ex-Congressman Boteler, of Virginia, who was an eye witness, and the other by F. B. Sanborn, of Massachusetts, who was a participant. A third historical sketch of the same stirring times is furnished by Gen. Stone, who organized the District of Columbia militia at the outbreak of the war, and who has since been prominent in Egyptian matters. Among the illustrated articles is one on the oil regions by E. Y. Smally; one on floods and plagues in New Orleans by Geo. W. Cable; and one on roses by H. B. Ellwanger, the well-known Rochester floriculturist. The poetry, fiction, essay, reviews, and other literary contents of the number, are up to the usual high standard.

The New York Herald says plans and specifications have been submitted to clerk Tindall, of the New York city bureau of buildings, for a 15 story flat house for 38 families, which Thomas Osborne, of No. 1,753 avenue A, proposes to erect at the northwest corner of fifty-seventh street and seventh avenue, at a cost of $650,000. The architect said that the building would be erected if the plans were approved. An examination of the papers shows that the building will be located on a plot of ground 150x100, 5x150x150. The frontage on fifty-seventh street will be 150 feet, the rear 142 feet, and the depth 915 feet. The front will be 10 stories and an attic high, and in the rear there will be 15 double stories. The total height from the curb line to the roof is fixed at 182 feet. Inspector Esterbrook, when asked if he would approve of this plan, said he would take time to consider it carefully. The highest building in New York for which plans had been filed, he said, was, from curb to roof, 155 feet, surmounting this proposed structure of 182 feet will be a cupola about 40 feet high.

 A few more words on Florida, and through. Having made men- of the rapid rise in real estate the splendid opportunities that Florida presents for the investment capital, I wish to say a few words the possibilities it affords a poor or one who, at best, can only est small earnings in anything will afford an immediate return. acre of land in Florida can be to produce more in value than one hundred and sixty in Mich- In the orange belt, in the in- of the state, the most approv- is to set out sixty trees to the The best tree for setting is ally considered to be a three- old budded tree, which costs, at ent, one dollar each, in the nur- To clear the ground and break up ready for the trees, costs about per acre. If this acre of ground properly cared for, in four years the time the trees are set out, will begin to bear, and by the tenth year from setting should be, on the average, one thousand oranges to the tree; sixty thousand oranges on the acre, which at last prices, at the grove, would be worth twelve hundred dollars. From this time on, for the next fifty, if not hundred years, the grove can be made, not only to continue bearing, but increase in productiveness. There are orange trees in Florida standing alone and of great age that produce as many as ten thousand oranges in a single year. This, however, will not do to calculate on, at the average full size bearing tree yields about two thousand oranges, which brings the yield on the acre to the value of over two thousand dollars.
 This seems extravagant, yet I am prepared to maintain that many an acre in Florida produces as much; there are always cases, however, where a small piece of ground is being cultivated, and it is made to do its best. And I would have it understood that I am giving figures of the very best that can be reasonably expected, and I would not disguise the fact that there are many orange groves—more than a dozen years old—that do not even yet pay expenses; upon inquiry I found that uni- versally in such cases the fault was with the management. An orange grove can not be produced without great expense and a great deal of labor; else, everybody would have one. But that it can be produced in Florida at a cost that is insignificant as compared to its value, is certain.
 A great many men have made comparative failures in the orange business because they undertook too much. They started on too large a scale, and long before the trees were old enough to bear, they found it was taking a small fortune every year to keep the grove up, and the result would naturally be they would leave the grove, as orange trees are voracious feeders. If the soil is once exhausted and not replenished, the trees die down and will sometimes not still for years, barely keeping up, but producing no fruit. Lat- ly, since the orange culture has been better understood, no one un- der takes to build up a large grove unless he be a millionaire.
 The result is that Florida is being parcelled out into very small hold- ings, five acres being sufficient for a man if he proposes to till the soil. Formerly it was a question to answer, what can a man do to make a living while he is waiting for his orange grove to come into bearing? Now the problem is easily solved; if he has land that will pro- duce a garden truck, he can not only make a living, but a fortune, raising vegetables. In some portions of the strawberry culture is very profitable. It is reported on good au- thority that one of the pioneers in strawberry culture figures up the following product of a single acre of plants: First year $600; second year, $1,500; third year, $2,500; and while this is an exceptional case, it shows what can be done, and on the av- erage it is extremely profitable.

 At present, nursery trees are in great demand, and will be for years to come. Orange seed may be drilled like peas and are sure to grow; and when three years old and budd- ed, are worth, at present rates, one dollar apiece. One can readily see how profitable an acre of ground would become covered with nursery trees. Many a man in Florida is making a fortune in the nursery business, and still the demand ex- ceeds the supply.
 There is still another of the tropi- cal fruit industries—the pine-apple—that is more profitable, acre for acre, than the orange; they are prop- igated by shoots or offsets, and are set in the ground about twenty inches apart; they come to maturity in eighteen months from the time of setting, which is any season in the year; they require but little cultiva- tion of the soil, but are very tender, and in most parts of south Florida, require protection from chilly winds; in fact, the chief work in raising pine-apples, aside from setting them out and gathering, is protecting them. One can see that an acre of ground set out to pine-apples would be worth a small fortune if situated so that easy transportation could be had to northern markets, where the retail prices range from 15 to 75 cents each, and especially as the pines do not have to be re-set after each crop, but simply to have cut off the superfluous shoots, so as to leave but one on the stump to grow, spring- ing perennially from the same stalk until after five or six years they die of old age.
 Now, I imagine I hear some far- mer saying: Why, if that is so, I would go into it on a large scale, and set out fifty or a-hundred acres. No; but you wouldn't,—after you have put out and taken care of one acre or two—you would sit down in the shade (when you had a chance) and be content to wait and get rich off from that acre.
 Good pine-apple land is very scarce, much more so than orange land; and still there is considerable of it yet to be found that is government land, and can be bought for a dollar and a quarter an acre. This state of things will not exist long, however, as the land is being bought up as rapidly as the business at the government office can be transacted.
 There are thousands of people in the northern states, who are having orange groves built up and taken care of by some one living in Flori- da, who are waiting for their groves to get to producing an income before they go there to enjoy them. Where this can be successfully done, it is better than any savings bank or life insurance—the only problem is, how to accomplish it successfully. Of course there are men in Florida, who take charge of groves for northern men, who would be dishonest even with their employers' eyes upon them, and much more so when that employer is a thousand or more miles away, and with no prospect of being nearer for several years.
 It costs from fifty to seventy-five dollars per acre, per annum, to have an orange grove properly cared for and fertilized; so that if one has a two-acre grove set out, it will cost one hundred and twenty dollars for trees, about fifty dollars will clear and break up the land and put it in proper condition for setting the trees, and the additional expense of, say one hundred and fifty dollars per annum for about seven years, will procure him a grove that will, if properly cared for thereafter, furn- ish him an annual income of at least two thousand dollars, with a steadily increasing capital stock.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

GOVERNOR PATTISON, of Pennsylvania, is certainly to be commended for his sound discrimination and wise judgment in vetoing the bill recently passed by the legislature of that state, allowing married women and their husbands living apart under a deed of separation, to sell and convey their separate real estate, free and clear of dower, courtesy and other interests.

THE officers of a certain church in New York city have been soliciting the opinions of prominent members of the congregation upon the desirability of introducing liturgical services. Some of the answers are quaint. One gentleman writes that he does not object to a responsive service if there is a fair understanding that all hands shall go in.

OUR Canadian neighbors are grumbling in anticipation of our proposed reduced postal rates. They see no reason why a letter from New York to Quebec should cost only two cents while one from Quebec to New York will cost three.

In the course of an editorial in the July Century on "The Greatest Need of the Working Class," the editor very pertinently says: "It seems to us that what the workmen most need, for the present at least, is to learn better how to use the income they now receive. Of course, if a man only earns enough to furnish himself and family with the bare necessities of life, he can do little toward improving his lot till he has more pecuniary means.

THE writer of an "Open Letter," in the July Century, gives interesting indorsement of the following striking suggestion regarding the treatment of prisoners: "A plan which is believed to be new, and which appears to have great merit, has been proposed for the reformation of prison discipline. It has been proposed that prisoners shall be paid for the labor which they perform; that, so far as may be, there shall be no restriction of the industries or honest occupations which prisoners may follow; that they shall be allowed to engage in trades and industries on their own account, and that they shall even be permitted to traffic with the outside world so far as may be compatible with insurance against escape and the commission of frauds or other unlawful practices, and that all prisoners shall be entirely dependent upon their industry for their living, except in cases of sickness or other disability; that they shall support themselves by their labor, be entitled to the savings of their labor, and grow rich or remain poor by their labor; in fine, that true individual liberty be not only taught but enforced when the State, by the sequestration of criminals, has put it out of their power to be a present danger to society."

THE season is close at hand for the annual appearance of the small boy with the toy pistol that carries a cartridge and lock-jaw. It is also the season for anxiety on the part of those who take an interest in said small boy, for they have learned to their sorrow that the average boy is not a careful creature, and that unless the toy pistol is handled with unusual care it becomes a dangerous weapon. It is in vain to entreat the small boy to practice total abstinence from this alluring toy, for like "boys grown tall," he cannot be persuaded to forsake his besetting indulgence; and the very fact that the little toy which looks so harmless may give him a wound, the result of which is lock-jaw, imparts to it that almost irresistible fascination known in scientific parlance as the attraction of repulsion. So don't reason with the boy this time. Simply direct his attention to a law which was passed by the legislature last winter, prohibiting boys under 16 years of age from carrying the harmless (?) toy. This law is a good friend of the boy's, though he doesn't think so now. But when he is older he will more fully understand its objects, and the danger which it is designed to avoid. This law also provides that any person violating the provisions of the law shall be guilty of misdemeanor. It is an absolute prohibition law, and puts an end to all local option concerning the purchase and use of the pistol. But the average small boy doesn't intend to become a law-breaker, for, in spite of his bad opinion of the legislators who have seriously interfered with his pleasure, he is honorable and can be counted upon to render obedience to the law. We commend to the thoughtful consideration of the boy the advice, "Let your to-day's dissipation bear to-morrow's reflection." He will experience great satisfaction when the Fourth is over, and reflects that but for the forethought of older ones he might have suffered with the lock-jaw or be sadly in need of a finger or some other useful member.

SABBATARIANS have always been sorely troubled in regard to the most effective way to compel a proper observance of that day. Various plans and suggestions have been offered and concessions have been made to our rapidly increasing foreign element. But it remains for the Scottish Highlanders to offer a novel solution of the much-mooted question. A strong agitation had been begun on the west coast of Scotland against the transportation of fish on that day by steamboats and railroads. The people were loud in their denunciations of the traffic, the clergymen doing all in their power to rouse their hearers to a degree of enthusiasm and fervor that soon resulted in action. A few Sabbaths ago two steamers filled with fish for the London market arrived at Stowe Ferry. The Highlanders whose motto was to "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy" were on hand, and commanded the captains of the steamers to desist from unloading their cargo. The officers objected on the ground that the cargo was perishable, and that their loss would be very great if they were hindered in their work. But the arguments had no effect upon the Sabbatarians, whose forces were being added to by the arrival of Sunday observers from other points. Soon a fight ensued, in which the fishermen, as well as the sheriff and his posse, who had been summoned to their aid, were beaten, after a siege of several hours. As soon as the battle was over the Sabbatarians assembled in their houses of worship and held their usual services, the clergymen exhorting them most powerfully to maintain the sanctity of the Sabbath.

INCREASE OF STATURE AT NIGHT.—The daily variation in human stature has been made a matter of practical study by Dr. Meckel, the result being as he finds, that the height of an individual after a night's rest, measured before rising from the bed, is two inches greater than in the evening, measured standing; that is, there is a gradual diminution in height, caused by the yielding of the plantar arches and of the intervertebral discs, and a sudden diminution when the individual rises, this occurring at the articulations of the lower extremities. The sinking at the ankle is one-third of an inch, one-twelfth to one-eighth of an inch at the knee, and two-fifths of an inch at the hip,—the shortening at the knee being due, probably, to the elasticity of the cartilages, which would easily involve the extent of variation named.

Making Cheese at Home.

In reply to the inquiries of a southern correspondent with reference to making cheese at home, we do not know that we can do better than to copy the following extract from Arnold's American Dairying:

For making cheese under any circumstances, a few things are absolutely necessary. One must have a vessel large enough to hold the milk. It may be any clean tub, boiler or kettle. A wooden tub is best, because it will lose the least heat while standing. There must be means for warming, which can be supplied by a cook stove. Rennet for coagulating the milk must be provided and soaked beforehand. A strong hoop for pressing the curd, with a capacity of at least 6 cubic inches for every quart of milk used, and power for pressing equal to at least the weight of a ton. These being provided, warm the milk in any convenient way without burning, to about 84, and add rennet enough to have it begin to curdle in 15 minutes, and cover the milk to keep it from cooling. The quantity of rennet to use must be found by trial. A good rennet, well soaked and rubbed, in time will curdle about 2,000 quarts of milk, but there is so much variation in their strength that only an approximation to the quantity required can be made. When the curd has become so hard as to cleave before the finger when passed through it, it should be cut with a blade that will reach to the bottom of the vessel, into columns an inch or so square, and then covered again to let the whey separate. After it has stood 15 or 20 minutes, the whey which can be conveniently removed may be dipped off, and the curd carefully broken with the hands into pieces of the size of chestnuts, or even finer. When this is done, the whey which has been dipped off, or what is better, an equal bulk of water, heated to 150°, may be turned into curd and stirred enough to make all parts of the curd warm up alike. The curd should be again covered to prevent cooling, and left standing 15 or 20 minutes, or as long as it can without sticking firmly together, when the whey may be again dipped off, the curd broken up fine again, and more hot whey or water turned on and mixed evenly with the curd by gently stirring, so as not to rile the whey and waste the richness of the curd. Cover the curd again, and repeat the operation till the mass is raised to blood heat. The stirring should be repeated often enough to prevent the pieces of curd from adhering, and the whole covered and left standing for the curd to harden. When it has stood so long as to become hard enough to squeak between the teeth, or spring apart readily when pressed in the hands, or what is better, to respond to the hot iron test, the whey may be at once dipped off, and the curd drained on a strainer-cloth laid over something which will allow the whey to run steadily, like a large sieve or a basket. When the curd has been stirred till it is freed from whey, and becomes a little cool, and the large lumps broken up fine so it will all receive salt about alike, salt at the rate of one ounce for each ten quarts of milk. Mix the salt thoroughly through the curd, and then put to press. As soon as the curd is well stuck together, so it can be handled safely, remove it from the press, put on a new press cloth, turn the under side up, fold the cloth evenly over it, and press again till the press is wanted for the next day's cheese. Upon taking it from the press; let it stand an hour or two till it becomes dry; then rub it over with some soft grease, and turn and rub daily till it is cured, which will be in from 30 to 60 days. On small cheese for home use, no bandage will be required. The surface must be greased often enough to keep it from drying and checking. In making small cheese for home use, the press, though desirable, is not an absolute necessity. If a curd is properly made, it will form itself into a cheese of good texture by its own weight. In molding a cheese without pressing, the hoop should be made of perforated tin, so the whey can readily escape, and should have a cover of the same material for its top and bottom, shutting over and outside of the tin like the cover of a pill box, and should be only just about large enough to hold the curd to be molded. A cover is placed upon the lower end of the hoop, the warm curd filled in, and the cover put on the upper end, and set on any level foundation. After standing a few minutes, the hoop is turned quickly upon the other end, the curd slides down and makes a smooth surface on what was at first the upper end. By turning the hoop a few times while warm, both ends get an even surface, and then, by standing still, the curd will permanently adhere and remain firm when taken from the hoop. To succeed well in molding cheese without pressing, the curd should be taken from the whey a little sooner than otherwise, and be quickly drained and salted and put into the hoop quite warm. Cold curd will not adhere without pressing.

The Cook Book.

Starch to Gloss Linen.—Take 2 oz white gum arabic powder, put into a pitcher, and pour on it a pint of boiling water; then having covered it, let it stand all night. In the morning, pour it carefully from the dregs into a clean bottle; keep for use. A tablespoonful of gum water stirred into a pint of starch that has been made in the usual manner will give linen collars, shirts, etc., a look of newness when nothing else can restore them after washing.

Chocolate Carmels.—One pint of sugar, dissolved in as little water as possible half a cup of butter, one tablespoonful of vinegar, one cup of grated chocolate; boil until quite thick, put in buttered tins, and cut in squares when partly cooled.

Lemon Custard.—Beat two cups of sugar and half a cup of butter until light, then add four well beaten eggs, two grated crackers, the grated rind and juice of two lemons and a pint of milk.

Graham Muffins.—Set the iron gems pans on the stove to heat; beat one egg light in a basin; add one teaspoonful of sour milk and two tablespoonfuls sugar stir well together, add a pinch of salt, stir in graham flour to make rather a stiff batter; mix thoroughly, with the addition of one tablespoonful of melted butter and lastly, stir in one-third teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a teaspoonful of hot water. The batter, when ready to drop into the well-heated and greased gem pans, should be so thick that it will not run from the spoon, but drop out nicely. This will make one dozen excellent gems.

Ripe Tomatoes and Cold Meat.—Take large, ripe tomatoes, cut them in halves, and with a spoon scoop out the centre. Chop any kind of cold meat very fine, and mix with it a teaspoonful of chopped onions, some crumbs of bread, a little salt and pepper, and a well beaten egg. Fill up each half of a tomato with this mixture; scatter bread crumbs over the top of it; put a small piece of butter in the center, and bake in a slow oven for forty minutes. Put the tomatoes into a buttered baking tin. Serve on a hot platter, garnished with springs of parsley or water cresses. This makes a delicious breakfast dish or a side dish.

Stuffing a shoulder of Lamb.—Remove the bone from the shoulder, and fill up the hole with a stuffing of bread crumbs, moistened with an egg, and highly seasoned, to which a little chopped onion can be added. Sew up the shoulder with coarse thread, and put it into a dripping-pan with a few slices of bacon, cut very thin, and laid over and under the meat. Let it roast for half an hour, then pour some boiling water on it; baste the meat frequently, and sprinkle flour over it to brown it well. It will take two hours to roast a good sized shoulder of lamb. If preferred it can be stewed in a stew-pan, slowly, for two hours, and the gravy seasoned with chopped celery stalks.

Tomatoes with Rice and Ham.—Take one dozen skinned tomatoes and season them with pepper and salt, a chopped onion, and a large tablespoonful of butter. Put the tomatoes into a sauce-pan, and add a teaspoonful of rice, well washed, and three tablespoonfuls of finely chopped ham. Cover the mixture with boiling water, and stir it frequently; when it becomes thick, again cover it with boiling water, and stir it often. Again it will thicken so as to be in danger of sticking on the sauce-pan, and then fill it up with hot water. It will take from thirty to forty minutes to cook it, and it must be seasoned highly and quite moist. Take some slices of toasted bread, and put the mixture over it.

Breast of Veal with Peas.—Cut a breast of veal into eight or ten pieces, and fry them a light brown in half butter and half lard. Turn in boiling water and let the meat simmer slowly for two hours. Skim off all the fat and scum which rises. Add a spoonful of tomato catsup and a pint of fresh, shelled peas, and simmer for half an hour. Take out the veal upon a hot platter. Skim out the peas around it, and strain the gravy over it. If it is not thick enough thicken it with a little corn starch wet in cold water. A breast of lamb can be cooked in the same manner.

Lemon Tartlets.—Pare two lemons very thin, and soak the rinds in half a coffee-cupful of cold water. Put into a tin basin one pound of loaf sugar, and six ounces of fresh butter, and stir to a cream. Squeeze into it the juice of the lemons, and the water in which the rinds have soaked for half an hour. Beat five eggs for five minutes, and add to the mixture. Put it into a pan of boiling water and stir it constantly until it is as thick as boiled custard. Line little patty pans with puff pastry. Bake the tarts a light brown, fill them up when done with the cheese cake, and put them back in the oven to brown very slightly. This mixture will keep in a glass jar, tightly covered, for weeks.

Sponge Cake Pudding.—Take one pint of milk, four eggs, two ounces of butter, three ounces of loaf sugar, four ounces of flour, ten drops of vanilla, and three sponge drop-cakes or lady-fingers. Cut the butter into the flour with a knife, and mix it into a paste with one beaten egg and enough water to roll it out smoothly. Line a pudding dish with the paste. Boil the milk and sugar, beat up the eggs and stir into the boiling milk, and remove from the fire in two minutes. Flavor with the vanilla; turn into the pudding dish lined with pastry, and break up the sponge drops into the custard. Bake in a slow oven for thirty minutes. Sprinkle a little white sugar on the pudding a few minutes before it is ready to serve, and let it brown.

Root Beer.—Take two ounces of ginger, two ounces of saffras bark, four ounces of hops, ten drops of the essence of spruce, and ten drops of the essence of wintergreen; boil in four gallons of water for twenty minutes; strain, and add four gallons of cold water and two quarts of molasses, and when blood warm turn a cupful of yeast on some crusts of bread. Cover the firkin jar, and let the beer ferment over night; bottle the next morning, and cork tight.

Gooseberry Pudding.—Take one quart of gooseberries; pick off the stems and tops, and wash well in a colander. Chop very fine a quarter of a pound of suet, and mix it with three quarters of a pound of flour, half a saltspoonful of salt, and a teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat an egg thoroughly; add enough water to it to fill a teacup, and wet up the suet and flour into a stiff paste. Roll it out thin, and line a pudding mould with it. Put in the gooseberries, well mixed with sugar—at least half a pound—and put a cover of the pastry over over it. Tie a cloth over the mould, place it in a kettle of boiling water, and boil it two hours and a half, not letting the water boil over the top. Serve with a foaming sauce of sugar and butter stirred together, and melted in a cup of boiling water. The gooseberries could be stirred into the flour before it is wet with the egg and water, and boiled in a mixed paste together in a pudding cloth, first dipping into boiling water, and then floured thickly.

A Valuable Autograph Album.

Mr. David Pulsifer of Boston, has in his possession a collection of autographs which he values highly. The book opens with that of John A. Andrew, who wrote "A man's a man to-day." General Butler in 1866 wrote "We are puppets all, moved by an unseen hand at a game." Mrs. Livermore, seeing this sentiment, wrote on the opposite page, "Character is destiny." "Alexis 1871" gives the flavor of royalty to one page. The Chinese embassy cover four pages with hieroglyphics, and a number of Japanese gentlemen have written appropriate sentiments in their native language. Many pages are inscribed with Hebrew characters written by eminent Jewish rabbis who have visited Mr. Pulsifer to see an ancient and precious scroll in his possession. The names of D. L. Moody and R. G. Ingersoll are not far apart. A Parsee, a Zoroastrian by religion, has written a bit of poetry in his own language, and Mr. Kapsin, a Russian who came to Boston to study the methods of doing business in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, has left a bit of Russian with a good translation beneath. Edward J. Maitland, an ensign in the American Navy, and a nephew of the Captain Maitland who carried the first Napoleon in the Bellerophon from France to England, has left his name in the album, and so have M. E. Hicks-Beach, baronet and member of Parliament, and at one time Secretary of the State for the Home Department; and Leon H. Courtney, M. A., Cambridge, afterwards Under Secretary of State for the Colonies.

Melissotter says that to see an exhibition of the paintings of modern masters one must go to the United States.

NEW BOOKS.

We have received the book entitled "The Celestial Cymbol Interpreted," advertised in another column, and is far ahead of any thing we have yet seen, treating on this subject. It is a book of 704 pages, with 58 fine illustrations, among them being a number of steel engravings. The book contains 49 chapters, divided into six parts as follows:

- First, The sun as the primary globe.
- Second, The sun as the fountain of light.
- Third, The sun as the source of heat.
- Fourth, The sun as the source of actinism.
- Fifth, The sun as a magnetic centre, and
- Sixth, The sun as the center of gravitation.

The book throughout has a close connection with the scriptures, and should be read by many. It is published by J. C. McCurdy & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

It is said that a young lady can never whistle in the presence of her lover. The reason is obvious. He dosen't give her a chance. When she gets her lips in a proper position for whistling, something else always occurs.—[Rochester Post Express.
