Stager's shop has been running nights
to dress Thanksgiving turkeys.

According to the muskrats we will have an open winter. Hope so.

Wheat in this county only averages about 57 pounds to the measured bushel.

A large quantity of wheat was marketed on Tuesday last. Price paid—98 cts.

The first train from Detroit to Ypsilanti over the Michigan Central was run in February, 1888.

J. H. Hoag has erected a brick addition to his livery, which, when finished, will make a very cosy office.

The Knight Templars of this place attended the funeral services of Rev. McGoffin at Ann Arbor, last Tuesday.

The way poultry comes to A. Steger, is a caution, not only does it come in boxes and crates, but by wagon loads.

Here's a hollyhock story. In Geo. A.
BeGole's yard may be seen a stalk nine feet 6 in. high, with 105 buds on it!

A. L. Noble, the clothier of Ann Arbor, changes his "ad" to-day. He is doing a very extensive business, and solicits a call.

The cold weather of last week was the worst experienced at this season for years.
The mercury in some places went down
as low as ten degrees below zero.

During the month of October, Fifty-eight thousand, nine hundred and eighty-eight bushels of wheat were marketed at eight elevators and mills in this county.

J. W. Knight has sold his farm, advertised in the HERALD, to Jacob Eieselbaugh of Freedom. Mr. Knight will retain possession until March. Consideration, $16, 000.

Our compositor made us say that Thursday Nov. 24th, was Thanksgiving day, and the error was not discovered untill a number of copies had been run.
Of course it is Thursday, Nov. 29th.

On Monday last occurred the death of Mr. M. Lehman at his home in this township, of cancer of the esophagus and stomach, at the age of 55 years and 10 months.
Many supposed Mr. Lehman suffered from consumption, but by a post mortem examination by Drs. Shaw, Palmer, and Champlin, on Tuesday last, the true cause was discovered.

E. G. Hoag this week presents a new "ad" for your inspection. He is constantly adding to his large stock, and makes prices so low that his sales are constantly increasing. He will soon show a nice lot of holiday goods.

On Tuesday of last week, C. W. Riggs, of the Wales Riggs farm, came to town and covered his horse with a nice lap-robe but did not tie him. The horse becoming tired of waiting, started for home, but on the way lost the robe, hence the local in another column.

A small but attentive audience greeted Rev. Dr. Holmes last Sabbath evening, to listen to his discourse on "Luther and the Reformation, after the Diet at Worms."
The discourse was very interesting, and we regret that the Doctor will not deliver the other two discourses he intended to—"Luther and his Friends," and "Luther and his Foes," as it is too much work for so short a time.

In mailing our papers last week, we addressed one to Mrs. J. J. V., 454, — street, Toledo, Mich., instead of Ohio.
Imagine our surprise when we received said paper, with a long printed circular from the P. M., at Cleveland, stating there was no such office in state named.
This is "red tape," for he could have put the right state on in a second and could not have been mistaken as the street was mentioned.

An exchange truthfully remarks that two drinks of whiskey means a pound and a half of beefsteak; two beers a breakfast of mutton chops; one cocktail an egg plant or head of cauliflower. "What will you take Tom?" stands for a nice oyster stew
for a whole family on Sunday morning.
"Set 'em up again," means sugar in the house for a month. Sobriety puts wood on the fire, meal in the tub, money in the purse, credit in the country, contentment
in the house, clothes on the children, vigor
in the body, intelligence in the brain,
and spirit in the whole constitution.

A very happy event took place in Lyndon, Thursday, Nov. 28th, being the marriage of P. W. Watts, esq., to Mrs. Isabella Forster. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Kershaw at the residence of the bride's brother, Henry V. Headly, J. P., which is also the old home of Mr. Watts, having been settled by his father fifty years ago.

Immediately after the ceremony the wedding party consisting of friends of the bride and groom, sat down to a sumptuous repast. After a happy and social time with music etc., the happy couple left on the 6 o'clock train for the West. A gathan agreeable termination to the pleasure of the day.

STOCKBRIDGE.

rected efforts alone saved it. It was not insured.

The M. A. L. R. R. depot will be located at the south end of the street which runs along the east side of the road two miles west of town, Friday night, the box car on the construction train jumped the track and rolled in to the ditch a complete wreck,

Fayette Reason was arraigned before justice Peet last week on a charge of selling liquor without having a sufficient bond on file. The case was adjourned to Thursday this week and the prosecuting attorney notified. We are informed that Mr.
Reason finds that the temperance sentiment in Stockbridge is too strong for him, and will give up the liquor business.

Matrimony has really developed into a contagious malady. Three marriages were reported in the Sentinel last week, and a box of cigars were on the counter of H. E. Brown's store, the compliments of a young man whose nuptials were not published. We cannot account for these doings on any other theory than that principle taught in physics—that cold "contracts!"

Mr. Ed., have you seen a stray equine around your town during the past few days? The Sentinel's pagasus has escaped from his keeper, it is believed he has gone off with a certain "iron horse" alleged to have recently appeared unto many people in this vicinity. H. H. Freeman will liberally reward whoever may capture and return the truant, pay all damages he may have occasioned by his escapade, and give suitable bonds that he shall not again escape.
He has arranged a double box stall
with a time lock, for the "animile."

beck'ning for us to come,

bountiful feast, accompanied by friends

never dim the sunlight of their lives.

BEER has never been supposed to have any intimate connection with lumber, but The Northwestern Lumberman asserts that a great deal of the beer which is sold is "doctored" with hemlock bark.

THE Rev. Osbert Mordaunt, rector of Hampton Lucy, Warwickshire, Eng., is proprietor of the only public house in the village, and has been for seven years, during which time there has been scarcely any drunkenness, and then only by the accidental sale of beer to individuals who had already had enough.

When the house first came into the rector's hands he was advised by some people to close it altogether, but he chose to conduct it "respectably," and he thinks that seven years' experience has justified him in the course he has adopted.

A project is on foot to start a Hungarian weekly newspaper in New York City. The Rev. Drs. Howard Crosby, S. Irenaeus Prime, Morgan, and a number of other prominent gentlemen, clerical and lay, have issued an appeal for the support of such a paper, of which the following is an extract: "The steady and extraordinary increase of foreign immigrants to the United States has produced a correspondingly large demand for newspapers in their native tongue."

Phosphorescent Limestone.

A curious natural product has recently been found in Utah, near Salk Lake City. It is a loose-grained, white, crystalline limestone, the grains of which but slightly coherent, giving the rock the appearance of a soft sandstone. Portions of the rock are colored slightly yellow by oxide of iron. Its phosphorescent properties are very remarkable, entitling it to rank as a new variety of limestone.

A Canadian View of Higher Education.

The Toronto Globe recently sent out a circular to prominent educators in Canada, requesting them to give their views on the question of the higher education of women. The answers which it received show that all whose opinions were asked were in favor of increasing the present facilities for the education of women.

How Watch Cases are made. It is a fact not generally known that the pure gold watch cases have led to the manufacture of poor grade of watch cases. These cases are made from 14 or 18 karats. It is not economy to buy a watch case so poor in quality that it will lose its color, or one so cheap that it will let in dust and damage the movement.

DR. PENNELL.
Please send me $5.00 worth of your valuable medicine. It is doing wonders for some ladies here, one in particular, who a year ago was confined to her room and most of the time to her bed. Every one said she had consumption. I knew she had disease your medicine was recommended to cure, and persuaded her to try it. In a few weeks there was a decided change; in a few more she let her hair be cut, and has done her housework ever since, and walks every day a distance of a mile and a half. Respectfully yours,
MRS. G. COBBY.

that will play any tune, and that any one, even a child, can operate.
The Organette has gained such a world-wide reputation, that a lengthy description of it is not necessary. It will be sufficient to say that it is a PERFECT ORGAN that plays mechanically all the sacred airs, popular music, songs, dances, etc. It consists of three strong bellows and set of reeds with EXPANSION BOX and SWELL. A strip of perforated paper represents the tune, and it is only necessary to place the paper in the instrument, as shown in the picture, and turn the handle, which both operates the bellows and projects the paper tune. The perforations in the paper allow the right reeds to sound and a perfect tune is the result, perfect in time, accent and effect, without the least knowledge of music being required of the performer: even a little child can operate it as is shown in the picture, a little girl is playing a song and her playmates are singing the words. It is used in the best parlors of all ages, assists in training the voice and affords hours of social amusement. The Organette is perfectly portable and is made of solid black walnut, decorated in gilt, and is both handsome and ornamental. The price of similar instruments has hitherto been $8, and the demand has constantly increased until now there are over 75,000 in use. We are encouraged to place increased value on the reduction. The Organette, which is similar in construction is an improvement upon our well-known Organette, which sells for $5 and $10. It contains the same number of reeds and plays the same tunes. Our offer is this: On receipt of $7 we will send the Organette by express to any address and include any address and include on receipt of $5 we will send it with over $1.50 worth of music FREE, or for $2.50 we will send it with small selection of music, FREE. The price are equal's prices, and we will expect the full purchaser from any town, to send us a photograph of the Organette, if he so desires. Organette Co., 127 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

Like an Evil Spirit.
In olden times it was thought that evil spirits came in through cracks and keyholes. The generally approved way to keep them out was to plug up the keyholes and stop the cracks with cotton. Notwithstanding these preventive measures, the evil things had their own way and often came in as they pleased.
So comes malaria now-a-days. We try to keep it out of the keyhole and it comes in by the crack. We stop up the crack, and lo! it comes from a leak in the plumbing, or an opening from some neglected drain, or from some unsuspected source and unguarded direction.
We cannot always keep malaria out, but we can give it battle and drive its effects from our systems. If BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is taken in time, malaria has not a ghost of a chance. This is the great family medicine. Your druggist sells it, and you ought to keep a bottle in the house.

Hearing nothing from him and learning that he had long since left Germany, they concluded that their boy had been lost at sea. A few days ago the mother saw in a German paper the announcement that the Sheriff had gone to Sandusky for one Andrew Wittich, a crazy German lad of twenty-one. The thought came to her that this might be her lost boy. She went to Cleveland and asked to see the lad.

Wittich had been very violent and was in a nude state, as no article of clothing could be kept on him. A blanket was got about him, and the woman was called into the corridor. When the little old woman stepped up to the cell door and said "Andrew," he became gentle as a child and said "Mutter." She recognized him and he pressed his face close to the bars and talked to her long and rationally. He told her how he arrived in this country, and that he remembered reaching Cleveland, but all the rest was a blank. When she retired the son was again a raving maniac. His case is pronounced incurable.

"You must be careful in your use of nitric acid," said a professor of chemistry to his class, "for when benzoylnaphthylamid is treated with nitric acid, two isomeria monitrobenzoylnaphthylamides are formed, one yielding mononamido benzonaphthylamide, and the other aktydrobenzodiamidonaphalene, and an explosion is sure to follow."

For Whooping Cough.

A writer in the Inter-Ocean offers the following as an infallible remedy for whooping cough: "Crush a teaspoonful of sunflower seeds; put them in a quart of water; simmer it down to a pint (keeping it closely covered), then add a pint of brandy and one pound of loaf sugar, then bottle for use. Dose, from a few drops for an infant of a few weeks to a teaspoonful for a child of 12 years. Give in severe cases, once in two hours until it affords relief, afterwards not so often."

CHEAPER THAN HATS.—Editors do not wear crowns, although the temptation is great, for crowns are really cheaper than hats. The crown that the Czar of Russia wears has been used for over 600 years; it never had to be repaired, and yet it is good for many years' service. The number of hats a man has to buy in 600 years would cost more than two diamond-encrusted diadems.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

IN CINCINNATI

Treating Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Nasal Catarrh, Sore Throat, Loss of Voice, and other Maladies of the Nose, Throat and Lungs.

DR. WOLFE treats the above named diseases by medicated inhalations. When thus administered, remedies are brought "face to face" in contact with the disease; whereas, if they are swallowed they mix with the contents of the stomach and never reach the organs of respiration.

DR. WOLFE has, by the judicious employment of medicated inhalations, assisted thousands to regain their health, many of whom had been pronounced incurable, and given up to die by their family-physicians and friends.

DR. WOLFE has prepared a list of questions for sick people to answer. They are a character the same he would ask were he by the bedside of the invalid. By writing answers to these questions any one can send an accurate statement of his disease and receive and use inhaling remedies at home, in any part of the United States or Canada, without incurring the expense and discomfort of making a visit to Cincinnati. Any one sending his name and post-office address with a three-cent postage stamp, will receive a copy of the "Circular of Questions" by return mail.

DR. WOLFE has published a medical book called "Common Sense, Cause and Cure of Consumption, Asthma, etc.," a copy of which will send to any body who orders it, by mail, and incloses nine cents in postage stamps with his name and post-office address. The book is of great value to any one afflicted with any disease of the Nose, Throat, or Lungs.

DR. WOLFE has also published another book of 54 pages entitled "Light about the House we Live In," which every healthy person as well as sick ought to read. This book has a special interest to persons who have weak lungs, or any symptoms of Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, or Catarrh. Sent to any address free by mail, on receipt of 6 cents in postage stamps.

Address, DR. N. H. WOLFE, 146 Smith St., Cincinnati.

Fair are the flowers and the children, but their subtle suggestion is fairer. There is the rose-burst of dawn but the secret that clasps it is rarer. Sweet the exultance of song, but the strain that precedes it is sweeter. And never was poem yet writ, but the meaning out mastered the metre.

WHAT ONE GIRL DID.

Molly Perry woke, the morning of Memorial Day, about as cross as it is possible for a healthy, sunny-tempered girl to be, and with some reason.

For, to begin with, her waking senses were first greeted by a strong whiff of tobacco smoke wafted into her open window from the pipe of the lodger below; and as she had gone to sleep with the same incense in her nostrils, you must own that it was trying, particularly to a country-born nose that knew the fragrance of wild grape vines and locust trees. Whatever you may think, Molly was wrathful, and flounced out of bed, shut the window with emphasis, and sitting down in her one rocking chair, eyed with strong disfavor a pile of clothes on another chair. And here was another reason for her crossness. The night before she had taken account of stock in the way of clothes, and found herself on the verge of bankruptcy. "Not a decent thing among them except that gray suit," she thought, disconsolately; and the truth is they were a shabby lot. Barring the gray suit, a navy blue serge (ragged as to edges, and shiny as to elbows and back), a faded cambric, an old black cashmere, hot and dusty-looking, made up the sorry display.

"Why didn't she buy some new clothes?" Well, there was no particular reason, except that she had no money to buy and no time to make, being one of the forty or more clerks in the "Mart of Fashion," on Washington street, at a salary of $6 a week. Any one mathematically inclined can do the sum which Molly did each week:

Table with 2 columns: Item and Amount. Board $4.00, Washing and Ironing $0.50, One sitting at "Trinity" (a very humble one) $1.50, Total $6.00.

And out of the difference between this total and six dollars must come boots and gloves and hair-pins and pocket-handkerchiefs and everything else, so you can see that the Queen of Sheba was quite safe from a rival as far as Molly was concerned.

But this mention of the "Mart of Fashion" brings me to the cap-sheaf of Molly's discontent. She had expected to have the day to herself, but Rush & Crush, scenting possible profit from country visitors, had decided to keep open. So it was a very cross face that looked at Molly from the little way looking-glass, and the soft brown hair was hatched and twisted with very few of the little pats and touches usually bestowed on it, and the blue dress was donned with some twitches. The sight of the breakfast table did not lighten her mood. She looked down its long length; and noted the spots and rings and splashes on the coarse cloth, the knives and forks at all angles, and the dishes piled up, fragments and all, by the untidy table-girl, and felt an unutterable disgust for it all.

It is not necessary to go into the story of sickness and death and debt which had brought her from a quiet, refined home to be a clerk in the "Mart of Fashion" and an inmate of Widow Jackson's second-rate boarding house; but we will start with her this Memorial morning, when, after trying her sharp little teeth on some tough steak, and turning over on her plate some flabby fried potatoes, she fished a fly out of her coffee, and took her way to the store.

Half the long forenoon had worn away when Molly, with a box of tumbled laces before her, stood looking after a lady who had just passed with a cluster of violets at her throat, and thinking wistfully of a certain place she knew of where they grew, cool and moist in their green leaves, when the ubiquitous floor-walker brought her back to the present.

"Miss Perry, if you are not more attentive, I shall have to report you."

"I will save you that trouble," said she, and clap went the cover on the box, and swish went the box into its place, and Miss Perry, with very red cheeks and bright eyes, went down the long store to the office and tendered her resignation, "to take effect at once, if you please."

Mr. Rush was pleased, for trade was slackening and there were twenty girls for every vacancy. "But you know our rule," Yes, she knew the rule, which was that a clerk leaving without notice should forfeit pay from the last Saturday night settlement. But Molly's ancestors did not fight at Concord without leaving something of their spirit to their descendants, so she turned to go with an air that betokened no acquaintance with "rules," when Mr. Rush, whose heart had been a trifle softened by memories of a certain grave in Mount Auburn which would be decorated that day, handed out three trade dollars, and in ten minutes Molly was in the Common, "with all the world before her where to choose." The unusual leisure was so pleasant that the girl loitered and lingered, enjoying the sunshine and air, and only when the noon whistles blew did she come down to reality.

After dinner, with locked door, she held a council of war. Here, on one side, was Molly Perry, 24 years old, with health and hope, five dollars in her trunk, three silver dollars in her pocket and one good suit, and on the other side the great, pushing, scrambling, selfish world, eager to grasp, and slow to give.

Molly did some hard thinking. "There's one thing sure," she thought, "I won't tend store again, and I won't sew for a living, and I won't be cooped up in a shop." The chances are narrowing fast. Suddenly came an idea. "I'll do it," said Molly; and what it was, the Advertiser told next morning:

WANTED, by an American girl, who is a good plain cook, a situation to do housework in a small family. Country preferred. Address M. P., Advertiser office, Boston.

Well, the answers fairly poured in. It seemed as though all womankind had been waiting for "an American girl who is a good plain cook;" but Molly resolved to be critical, and waited. In the meantime, seeing that a way was open, she dressed herself in her best and went shopping. She chose to patronize Rush & Crush, where her high and mighty airs gave unbounded satisfaction to the clerks, with whom she was a favorite. She sailed up to the print counter with great dignity, turned the goods over, pulled the corners crosswise, after the fashion of women shoppers, depreciated the patterns, etc., but finally bought print for three dresses, gingham for aprons, etc., to the amount of $3, and counted out with great majesty the three trade dollars.

"Oh, Molly, you know we can't take them," said the clerk. Molly turned to Mr. Rush, who, sauntering along with his eyes on their side of the store, was taking in the whole proceeding.

"Mr. Rush," she said, "I took these here the other day, and now the clerk refuses them."

Mr. Rush was grimly amused at her audacity, but instead of answering her turned to the grinning cash-boy in waiting, and snapped: "Cash, what are you waiting for? Take the goods and money this instant!"

The youthful Mercury disappeared like a spirit, and Molly felt somewhat as her great grandfather did at Concord.

Monday morning brought a letter which seemed promising, and which read as follows: WHEATSFIELD, N. H., June 2.—Miss M. P.—We need a domestic, and prefer one of our own nation. The family consists of myself and wife and a hired man. My wife is feeble, and the domestic would have to take charge of everything. We would pay $3 a week to the right person. If you feel capable for the place, and can bring a recommendation, we should like to have you come as soon as possible.

Then followed some directions about trains, and the whole was signed in plain, homely fashion, "Yours, Bethuel Harlow."

"Wife feeble," mused Molly; "well, she won't be poking around the kitchen all the time" (another flash of the Concord spirit). "Domestic," not "servant" or "hired girl." That suited.

The result was that a few days later Molly, armed with a letter from her minister, was set down, the only passenger, at Wheatfields station.

Squire Harlow, waiting for the "good plain cook," was smitten with great misgivings at the sight of the stylish young lady, for to his eyes, accustomed to the dress of Wheatfields's daughters, the simple gray suit with its graceful drapery seemed the height of elegance, and he was not reassured by the question of the station agent: "Got company from the city, ain't ye?" But it was too late to retreat, and soon old Dan'l was pulling them steadily toward home. The Squire said little, but glanced at the girl occasionally from under his shaggy eyebrows. It was a fair, honest face, which freshened with every mile in the sweet evening air, and the gray eyes took in everything, from the chipmunk on the wall to the locust trees with their fragrant, drooping clusters.

"Want a piece?" said the Squire, as they drove under one. Her face was answer enough; and stopping old Dan'l, the good man cut a cluster and dropped it in her lap. She thrifflily took off her new lisle-thread gloves to take it, showing hands so white that the Squire groaned internally. Those hands wash his dishes and scrub his floors? Was this young lady, who was prettier and better dressed than any girl in Wheatfields, his domestic? He shook his head slightly, chewing a bit of the locust.

He ventured a few questions about the city, and heard the story of what was always uppermost in the Squire's mind—the story of the lost daughter Mary, one of the victims of New England's scourge, who had faded away three years before, since when "Miss Harlow had sorter pined." It was a pathetic little story, told in the laconic New England way, but the brown, knotty hands worked unsteadily on the lines, and the Squire's eyes had a far-away look, as though toward the country which held his Mary.

Presently they drove up to a comfortable house, with an air of plenty about the large barn and wide porch, over which grew a white lilac. Molly found her mistress a little woman, with faded, gentle eyes, and soft, slow voice. She looked at the girl kindly, and held out her hand. After giving her a few directions, and telling her where to find things, she added to her husband, "Tell John to carry her trunk to the east chamber." This apparently was something unusual, for the Squire opened his mouth as though to say something, but being a man of few words, shut it again, and went out.

Molly, following her trunk, found herself in a small room, with a bright rag carpet on the floor, white curtains looped away at the window, home-made linen towels with knotted fringe on the little table, an old fashioned chest of drawers, and a low, four-posted bed with valance and patchwork counterpane. The room was neat, but had an unused look, and Molly wondered if the tribe of girls of which the Squire had made mention had marched through it; but, too tired to think long, she unpacked her small wardrobe, said her prayers, and knew nothing more until morning, when a trilling of birds and a ray of sunshine on her face woke her to her first day of service as a "domestic." While making her simple toilette she gave many quick glances at the billows of apple blossoms under her window; and something born of the light and fragrance and music was reflected in her face as she took her way to the kitchen. The wood and kindlings were near at hand, the fire started off briskly with a cheerful air of encouragement, and then Molly considered her bill-of-fare. There was salt mackerel, eggs, stale bread, the inevitable salt pork, doughnuts and pie, and a pan of cream whose yellow, wrinkled surface bore testimony to the Squire's Jersey.

"That mackerel won't be fried," said Molly, for the course of frying at Widow Jackson's had been severe. The fingers that had measured lace and ribbon so deftly made short work of getting breakfast, and the Squire, coming in from his strawberry bed with a pan full of "Wilson's," found it about ready.

But somehow his table had an unfamiliar look. The cloth was on straight, the knives and forks were laid with mathematical precision, an unwonted air of trimness pervaded his familiar crockery, and—there was no pie on the table. But there was mackerel baked in cream, and mashed potatoes, and nicely browned toast, and the doughnuts.

"Miss Harlow don't feel able to come out to the table this morning, and I guess I'll take her a bite before I eat." And so saying the Squire took a plate, and commenced piling things on it in a promiscuous way.

"Oh," said Molly, "let me do it. I have had a long experience with sick people. They must be tempted, you know."

She looked up at him with her bright smile, and the Squire gave in at once, and watched with wonder while a tray was brought, a clean napkin spread over it, a piece of the mackerel laid on a plate with the cream ladled daintily over it (Molly had seen too much of plates where the meat seemed to have been launched on them by an avalanche of gravy); then came a little plate of the potato, a slice of brown toast, a little plate of butter, a cup of coffee, knife, fork, spoon, etc. Then she whisked into the pantry, and out again with a saucer of strawberries, and added them to the contents of the tray.

"Wait a minute," she said, as the Squire lifted his burden, and in a twinkling she was out of the door and back again with a spray of white lilac, which, in a tall glass, was given the place of honor in the middle of the tray.

"Sho!" said the Squire, with a slow smile, "that'll just suit my wife. She's famous for having things fixy."

Mrs. Harlow had missed the accustomed smell of frying, and wondered in a feeble way if Molly couldn't find the pork.

"Why, Bethuel," she said, as her husband set the tray down beside, "how pretty! I really believe I am hungry." And the Squire went back to his own breakfast so happy that he entirely forgot the absence of the pie.

Well, this was the beginning, and though life afterward was not all cream and strawberries and white lilacs, and though bread would sometimes burn, and pastry flatly refuse to be flaky, and though unused muscles sometimes ached with the new work, yet the girl kept up a brave heart. The Squire and his wife were uniformly kind, and the latter, who had suffered as much from lack of cheerful society as from any physical cause, gradually grew stronger, and would sit through the long summer forenoons in the great airy kitchen, placidly knitting or paring apples, and though she sometimes looked wistfully after Molly as she tripped from pantry to cellar, and longed for the girlish figure which used to flit about in the same way, her heart took great comfort in the bright, cheerful stranger. And the Squire, hearing the fresh young voice singing about the house, would give a great sigh for the lost voice, but somehow the old house seemed less lonely to him, and after awhile his first question would be, "Where's Molly?" The plain country society readily took her in and considered her high authority in the matter of "looping" of overskirts and "doing up" of hair, and at last no merry-making was complete without Molly Perry.

Those of you who have followed this story in expectation of some absent son or nephew or younger brother of the family appearing and taking Molly for a wife may as well stop here, for nothing whatever of the kind happened, for the Squire and his wife had no sons, and their nephews and brothers were all married long before Molly's day. It is true that some of the smart young farmers of the region round about tied their horses occasionally at the Squire's gate, and it is equally true that Molly said "No" to all of them, though they one and all swore by her.

This story is not written to induce all clerks and shop-girls to rush into housework, for not one in twenty would be capable of doing as Molly did, and not one in a hundred would find such a home; it is written simply to show what one girl did.—Hester Stuart in Harper's Bazar.

Our Public Domain.

Harper's Magazine.

A few years ago a statement went the round of the newspapers showing how nearly all the really valuable public land of our continent had been taken up, and that soon the American pioneer or foreign immigrant would find that Uncle Sam had no longer a farm left to give away. Such statements are apt to be received and accepted as fact without question, yet the short period that has elapsed since it was made shows that to-day we know of more good farming land yet unoccupied and open for settlement between the Missouri River and the Pacific than was supposed to be in that entire region at the time that statement was made.

Some will tell you that all the really valuable Western lands have long since been taken up, and that only rocks and arid deserts remain; others, that after the completion of the Pacific railroads there will be only a few branch lines left to be built in the far West; others, that the mines of the Rocky Mountains will soon be exhausted, and when they fail we shall see that region deserted. Such is the language of the croaker, of the disappointed man who failed in the West, as he would have done anywhere of the Eastern man who thinks civilization is bounded by the Mississippi. But if you have lived in these regions, or have visited them, you will believe, with me, that never at any time in the history of our country have her prospects for rapid growth and continued prosperity been any better than at the present time. Each year sees new regions not only opened up, but others discovered to be valuable for some purpose, while the ever-growing network of iron bands binds the whole country in a closer union. Monopolists may seek to control the traffic of a continent, but the power of a free and intelligent people is still, and must ever remain supreme in our land.

Christ's Tender Care.

Taking for his text the healing of the woman who touched the Saviour's garments, Mr. Talmage said:

"In the midst of the crowd was a very sick woman, Martha, or Veronica, I do not know which her name was. She had been sick for twelve years, and had tried all sorts of remedies; the shelves of her humble home were filled with medicines; I suppose she had been blistered from head to foot, had tried the compress, drank decoctions of astrigent herbs, been mauled, laced, cut and lacerated, until she was nearly dead. Her doctors' bills had run up frightfully; she had paid money for medicine, attendance and hygienic apparatus till her purse was exhausted as well as her body. With face distorted with suffering, biting her lips to repress her pain, and was only able to stand because the crowd kept her up, she just touched the blue fringe of Christ's outer garment. Quick as an electric shock a thrill of robust, rubicund health went back through her exhausted system over the suspension bridge of nerves and through the tunnel of bones. Christ recognized somehow that magnetism and healthful influence had shot out of him.

"In this account St. Mark gives us a dramatization of the Gospel. As infectious diseases are spread by clothing, garments may be surcharged with health and so filled with physical magnetism that it permeates all of a robe down to the fringe, and maybe transmitted to others. We cannot expect to be in the world without self-sacrifice, or help others without strength going out of us. The man who goes home worked out in providing for his children, the wife who bears up against misfortune to encourage her husband, the mother who devotes the best years of her life to her children and has nothing to show for it but a profusion of gray hairs and deep wrinkles, is like Christ, for the strength has gone out from them. Christ is the personification of all sensitiveness. He feels the slightest touch of human suffering; he is not a hard, preoccupied Christ, not an iron-cased Christ, but an exquisitely sensitive Christ, who cares for the invalid."

A Sick Elephant.

Barnum's $15,000 elephant, Albert, is very ill with fever in New York. An attempt to save him will be made by removing the cause of the trouble by a surgical operation. This has never been attempted before, as the operation requires enormous incision at the kidneys, which are required to be reached. Professor Doremus and Dr. Leavid, the eminent French veterinary surgeon, think that there is chance for a favorable result, but as Albert must either be killed or cured, for under no circumstances can he be left to live in his present condition, the attempt will be made within the next fortnight.

I would do what I pleased, and doing what I pleased, I should have my will, and having my will, I should be contented, and when one is contented there is no more to be desired, there is an end of it.—Cervantes.

Sensible Words.

Lansing Republican.

There is in every community a class of croakers who are only happy when making the most dismal showing of business, not only in the communities which have the misfortune to number them among their citizens, but in predicting the most disastrous outcome of everything in the entire financial horizon. Crops are ruined; there is no export demand; business is overdone; credits have been extended; banks are contracting their advances, and merchants and manufacturers must go to the wall by hundreds for want of help. These men forget, if they ever knew, that the time for despondency and distrust is during a "boom," when prices are inflated, factories running to their fullest capacities and extending them, and banks are seeking for customers to take their money. Two years ago stocks and all standard products were on top, and everybody was flying kites. For the past year they have been going down, and to-day the markets are more free from cliques and corners than they have been for years. The market and financial reports indicate that prices in all directions are lower, and people are exercising more caution and judgment in trade transactions. Manufacturers and merchants limit their business to actual demands, and bankers scrutinize their credits.

Those who bought on the top of the market are now looking for chances to sell at the bottom. There is a plenty of money, however, and the currency is sound; and although crops have partially failed in some sections, there is enough to be had at reasonable prices, and a surplus for export. There is one feature of the case that is worthy of observation, for therein is safety. Speculation is no longer popular, and whole communities that were recklessly engaged in it two years ago are now among the most conservative. There may, and doubtless will be more failures of firms that shouldered more than they could carry, during the general carnival of speculation previous to 1881, but these will be small when measured against the business strength of a country so vast, so wealthy, and so full of resources as this of ours. There is no evidence that these croakers have any grounds for their predictions, but on the contrary there is ample proof that an era of more substantial prosperity is about to dawn, based upon the actual resources of the country, uninflected by reckless speculation and gambling.

Comfortably Fixed.

Before the war there were very few men in the United States worth over $5,000,000. Most of Stewart's property was acquired during and after the war. Most of the men now worth $10,000,000 and upward were considered poor and honest twenty-five years ago. Today W. H. Vanderbilt has $65,000,000 in United States bonds, and is reported to hold some $10,000,000 in New York Central and Hudson River stock, $50,000,000 more for other railroads in New York and other States, and a vast amount of valuable real estate in this city.

His property cannot amount to less than $200,000,000, and probably is nearer $300,000,000 than the former sum. He is without doubt the richest man on the globe to-day. He could buy any of the Rothschilds, and still be the richest man in the world. And unlike the rich men of England—the Dukes of Bedford, Westminster, Argyll and Buccleugh, who inherited their great estates—Vanderbilt's property has been accumulated in two generations, and most of it within thirty years. The case stands without a parallel in history.

It is a singular list of names that follow that of Vanderbilt in this catalogue. We take each at his reputed valuation: Jay Gould, $100,000,000; Mackey, $50,000,000; Crocker, $50,000,000; John Rockefeller, of the Standard Oil Company, $40,000,000; C. P. Huntington, $20,000,000; D. O. Mills, $20,000,000; Senator Fair, $30,000,000; ex-Gov. Stanford, $10,000,000; Russell Sage, $15,000,000; J. R. Keene, $15,000,000; S. J. Tilden, $15,000,000; E. D. Morgan, $10,000,000; Samuel Sloan, $10,000,000; Commodore Garrison, $10,000,000; Cyrus W. Field, $10,000,000; Hugh J. Jewett, $5,000,000; Sidney Dillon, $5,000,000; David Dows, $5,000,000; J. DeNavara, $5,000,000; John W. Garrett, $5,000,000; W. W. Astor, $5,000,000.

Notes and Queries.

Before a young man is married his friends invite him to a party, which is called a "bachelor's funeral;" sometimes the dying bachelor is carried on a sofa shoulder high, as a mock funeral. If while shaking hands, you happen to cross another couple also shaking hands it means a wedding. A shot made of silver will shoot any one, even those protected by magical power, and sometimes, when one has been out snooting it is said in fun: "I think you have shot your game with a silver bullet"—that is, bought it. If you find any shot in game take it out, for you will never miss with such shot. White spots on the nails are enemies. If you pull out a hair and it curls, you are hot tempered (Northumberland, proud). If dogs or cats gnaw the grass it is a sign of rain; also if the flies bite or the swallows fly low. You must never kill a spider. If you go and stand under a tree where there is a cuckoo sitting, you will be very lucky, and whatever you wish for you will get, provided you do not tell any one; if you tell your wish misfortune will follow you.

The Finest Dry Goods Store

CENTRAL MICHIGAN

Old Mammoth, at Jackson.

This store has been re-fitted at a large expense and is now being filled with NEW, FIRST-CLASS merchandise.

For many years it has been the rule of the former proprietors, Camp, Morrill & Camp, to sell nothing but first-class goods and under no circumstances allow any salesman to misrepresent. As it is my desire to continue the business, and wishing to increase the sales largely, I shall sell all goods at the lowest possible profit and at any time goods bought from my establishment that are not as represented, may be returned and I will cheerfully refund the money. I buy all my goods for Cash and sell them for Cash, and as my store is the best lighted of any in the State, the customer can see exactly what they are getting.
