WHISPERINGS.

Will there be an ice harvest?

More rain and mud last Tuesday.

School report unavoidably laid over until next week.

School opened last Monday with an average attendance.

Fishing through the ice has been the raging sport the past week.

W. H. Pottle, of Manchester, has a fan 122 years old. His grandmother used it.

In spite of the bad weather, merchants have enjoyed a fair trade the past week.

E. J. Foster of this township, recently made a sale of a number of rams from his blooded stock.

A Coldwater man has a violin 200 years old. If we mistake not, there are two in this place older than that.

Michigan will show the world 600 varieties of potatoes at the New Orleans exhibition, besides loads of fruit and tons of minerals.

Sidney Harrington has bought a house and two acres of land on Middle-st., west, and will remove to the same as soon as the family now occupying it, vacates.

Governor Begole has commissioned D. B. Harrington, Mason's famous potato grower to act at New Orleans as superintendent of the potato exhibit from Michigan.

The Board of Supervisors met in special session last Monday. The most important question liable to come before the Board is, shall this county build a new jail this year?

We know we have been delinquent in publishing correspondence for a few weeks past, but hope our worthy scribes will again favor us with the news in their respective localities.

A Dexter man has a bible in his possession which is 274 years old. By the little use some people make of theirs, we are inclined to think they intend to have them reach that age.

On Monday last we delivered our county job—six weeks after receiving the copy. The pamphlet contains 45 pages, and all the work, printing, binding and trimming was done at this office. This is the first time, we believe, the work has gone away from Ann Arbor.

The fashions.—Fine pastry has become an actual necessity now, and those who use DeLand's chemical baking powder, provide their guests with the most delicious food, without any bitter taste. It is so much more economical than the cheap good offered that the table can be supplied with fine wholesome food every day in the week. Sold in cans only. Most economical.

Andrew Haar, of Waterloo, lost one of his fine grey horses the fore part of the week.

The verdict in the Crouch case is expected to-day. Over 115 witnesses have been sworn, to say nothing of the time wasted by the opposing attorneys.

At about 10 this morning J. Grob and Philip Duffy discovered a dog playing with the body of a male infant on an ash heap in the rear of Masonic Block at the depot. The remains are immature and the birth a miscarriage or abortion. Justice Joslyn is holding an inquest this afternoon.—Ypsilantian, Jan. 2.

The following are the recently elected officers of R. P. Carpenter post No. 41, G. A. R., at this place:

Commander—A. N. Morton,

J. V. C.—James Ames,
O. of D.—John Waltrons, Chaplain—S. D. Harrington, Surgeon—E. Hammond,

During the year ending Dec. 31, 1884, there was mailed at the Chelsea postoffice the following: 62350 domestic letters, 736 foreign letters, 14-197 drop letters and newspapers, 19-500 postal cards, and packages to the amount of $77.20. There were also issued, 721 money orders calling for $7818.37; 1048 postal notes calling for $2457.31. 286 registered letters were sent and 229 received. 207 registered letters passed through the office. Questions answered.

During the year 1884, 247 marriages have been recorded in the county clerk's office. This is probably not more than half of those solemnized. The law provides that all persons qualified to solemnize marriages, shall make returns of them to the clerk's office. The penalty for failing to do so is $100 or 90 days in jail. Clerk Robison says he intends to bring to time some of the ministers who never send in returns because each one costs a quarter. One minister has sent in no returns for two years.—Register.

The following piece of advice is an excerpt from the Courier and is well worth the time and thought of every tax-payer: "The tax-payers of this county are obliged to work hard to support their criminals in idleness. Why not turn the thing around and make the criminals work? Have the tramps pound stone, and pay for their food and lodging. What sense is there in keeping a prisoner in jail for 10, 20, 30, 60, or 90 days, without a thing to do but draw his rations, smoke and play cards? Why will not the people wake up to this matter?"

THE DEAR LONG AGO.

In the gray of the gloaming o'er lowland and highland
The storm-wind is sounding its bugles afar,
The billows roll black on the desolate island;
In vain shall the mariner seek for a star.

O keeper, look well to thy beacon forth-gleaming;
O fisher, steer boldly, with eye to the light, Lost alumber unbroken by waking or dreaming Thy portion shall be in this turbulent night.

Yet quiet I sit, thinking not of the sobbing So eerie and dreary of tempest and snow,
For tones in my heart with strange sweetness Are thrumming the runes and the tunes of the dear long ago.

I am borne to the days that were swift in their flying,
All pulsing with music and sparkling with mirth,
The days when my childhood, no space had for sighing,
No place for the phantoms of darkness and death.

On the hearth pales the fire's red glow to dull ashen;
Without the trees moan in the deepening chill;
But fancy recalls to my spirit the fashion Of fens on the meadow, the plain, and the hill.

I remember the lilacs that budded and flowered,
The willows that dipped in the full-flooded stream,
The orchards with blossoms so lavishly dower-
ed,
In times when joy held me unchecked and supreme.

ah, wild is the winter on lowland and highland,
And black break the waves on the storm-battered coast,
And howl the long bugles on peak and on island,
And rather the tempest with haste and with host.

glimp myself in the gray of the gloaming, I muse on the days that were tender and true,
And my heart, like a child fain to rest after raining,
Is back in the bright days, my mother, with you—
—Margaret Sangster, in Harper's Magazine.

THE EDITOR'S NARROW ESCAPE.

What would the editor say Should I send him to-day Lines on a subject worn out long ago
By poets untamed
By authors unfamed,
Nothing less than "The Beautiful Snow."

I could sing of its whiteness, Its dampness, its lightness,
And other nice things that I know;
And then when 'twas finished,
With covert undiminished, I call myself author of "Beautiful Snow."

I would write it with ink On note-paper pink,
And tie it with ribbons of pale indigo;
And then, I confess,
I'd call my MS.
Lines on the Beautiful Snow."

But I'm timid and shy,
And don't want to die;
The newspaper man is savage, I know;
So I'll wisely refrain—Though I do it with pain—From writing a poem on "Beautiful Snow."

eliance Roxbury's Protegee.

CHAPTER I.

"It's a harum-scarum idea," said Miss Reliance Roxbury, as she stood among the current bushes at the garden gate. "A most ridiculous idea! I wonder what this gushing American people will do next," and she gave an aphasic twitch to her purple calico bonnet.

There was a faint murmur of dissent from the little woman on the other side the fence.

"No—of course you don't agree with me," continued Miss Reliance, as the sisters of ruby and pearl flew into the quart pale at her feet. "You're so hunted that your feelings are forever running away with your common sense. You never say a word about the National debt, or the condition of the navy, but let anybody start a subscription for sending blanket shawls to Alaska, or putting up a monument to Abraham on the meeting-house green, and you'll give your last quarter. And you're going to open your house to a lot of little ragamuffins from New York."

The motherly brown eyes on the other side of the fence were full of tears, and a pleasant voice replied,—"It makes my poor heart ache to think how the poor things suffer, crowd-together in dirty streets, with never breath of a clover field or a glass of
k. If you'd just read about it, Reliance, you'd count it a blessed privilege to give them a bit of our sunshine."

"As soon have a tribe of Zulus on place," said Miss Reliance, "and ou'll take my advice you'll save yourself lots of trouble."

Mrs. Lane stopped her work for a moment, and said,—"Laikim and me are all alone now, and we've laid Kate Sarah and baby Lizzie over there old burying ground; and Jack is Colorado; and Richard in Boston, we get hungry sometimes for the od of little feet. When I began to d about the fresh air fund it kind of a thrill all over me, and Laikim reads about it every day, and he s his eyes pretty often, too. Then, we heard the parson say that a y would come here if places could ound for them, Laikim spoke right or four, and they'll be here next sday, and I'm going to make it just uch like a heaven as I can."

"You'll make yourself sick, that's all you'll do, Amanda Lane," replied Reliance; "but if you want your overrun and your silver spoons and your house full of flies, and nerves prostrated, why it's your fault. I must go in and get my started."

Miss Roxbury went up the path between the sunflowers and hollyhocks, entered the large, sunny, airy kitchen, and sat down the pail of currants for Hannah, the housemaid, to pick over.

Then she hung the purple calico sunbonnet on the nail that for forty years had been devoted to that purpose, and went into the cool sitting-room to rest in her favorite chintz-covered rocker.

Miss Reliance Roxbury had been for twenty years with the exception of a gardener and housemaid, the sole occupant of this ancient stone dwelling, that had stood for more than a century beneath its elms and maples, the pride of the village of Lynford. She was a stern woman, who liked but few people, and had a horror of children, dogs and sentiment. The village boys, with a keen perception of her unsympathetic nature, called her "Old Ironsides."

She was proud of her birth and of the substantial property that had fallen to her at the death of her father, old Judge Roxbury. She was a member of the Presbyterian church, and paid a high rental for the Roxbury pew, but with that considered that her pecuniary obligations to the cause were at an end.
As a general thing, she had not allowed convictions on the subject of giving to trouble her, but somehow, ever since Sunday, when the pastor stated the work of the fresh air fund and made a fervent appeal for these "little ones that suffer," she had been subjected to numerous vague but uncomfortable sensations.

She rocked back and forth in the spacious sitting-room that no fly dared to invade, and noted the perfect order of the apartment. From the China shepherd on the mantel, to the braided rugs at the doors, everything occupied the same position as in the days of Miss Roxbury's girlhood. There was torture in the thought of having the table cover pulled awry, of seeing the shells and prim old daguerreotypes disarranged on the what-not, of having sand tracked in by small feet over the faded Brussels carpet, and her pet verberna bed invaded by eager young fingers.

Surely, religion and humanity could not demand such sacrifices of her.

"Please ma'am, the currents is ready to put over," said Hannah at the door.

Miss Roxbury rose at once, glad of another channel for her thoughts, but amid her weighing and measuring of pints and pounds, the strange impression did not leave her mind.

After the rich crimson syrup had been poured into the row of shining tumblers on the table, she returned to her chintz-covered rocker, and took up the Bible to read her daily chapter.
Opening it at random, her eyes fell upon these words:

"Then shall He answer them, saying:
'Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these—'

Miss Roxbury read no further on that page, but hurriedly turned back to Chronicles, which she felt was perfectly safe ground. But, mingled with the long genealogical tables, she saw other words between the lines, so that the Israelitish record read thus:—

"The son of Elkanah, the son of Joel, the son of Azariah. (Ye did it not.)"
"The son of Tabath, the son of Assir, the son of Ebiasaph, the son of Korah.
(Ye did it not.)"

Finally, the whole page seemed to resolve itself into these four monosyllables.

She closed the Bible and put it in its accustomed place on the table, bounded on the north by a lamp, on the south by the match box, on the east by Bunyun's "Pilgrim's Progress" and on the west by a bunch of worsted roses under a glass case. She was restless, miserable, tormented. She endeavored to read the "Life of Napoleon Bonaparte," but even the thrilling story of the Russian campaign was lacking in interest, compared with her own inward conflict between duty and the cold selfishness of a lifetime.

She did not enjoy the dinner, although the butterbeans were from her garden, and the black raspberries were the first of the season.

She could not take her accustomed afternoon nap, for the first time in years the daily paper was unopened.
She even put it out of sight in the china closet. A wonderful new design in patch-work, known as the Rocky Mountain pattern, could not fasten her attention.

She ordered the horse and rockaway and drove four miles after wild cherry bark, for which she had already a great barbarism.

At last the dreary day came to its close, but was succeeded by an equally uncomfortable night. Amid frequent tossing and waking, Miss Roxbury dreamed of thin little hands stretched out to her in piteous appeal, and of a sad, wonderful voice that said with infinite reproach,—"Ye did it not."

Rev. Joseph Alder was surprised soon after breakfast the next morning by the appearance of Miss Reliance Roxbury in the parsonage porch. She brought a basket of black raspberries, and said,—"I won't come in this time, thank you. I just wanted to say that I'll take one—one of those children."

The second thimble centenary has just been celebrated at Amsterdam.
The first thimble was made in October, 1684, by a goldsmith, Van Benscholten whose idea in the manufacture of the pretty conceit was to protect the fingers of his lady-love. The English were the first to adopt the new invention.

The telephone may be the cause of the red halos. Halo!—halo!—halo!

Better Than Freedom

The following extract is from "Becket," Tennyson's last drama. The fifth act ends necessarily, in Canterbury Cathedral, with Becket standing at bay.
Here is the defiance of the knight:

Ye think to scare me from my loyalty To God and to the Holy Father! Not The all the swords in England flash'd above me
Ready to fall at Henry's word or yours—
The all the loud-lunged trumpets upon earth Glared from the heights of all the thrones of her kings,

Blowing the world against me, I would stand, Clothed with the full authority of Rome, Maid in the perfect panoply of faith,
First of the foremost of their flies, who die For God, to people Heaven in the great day When God makes up His jewels. Once I fled—Never again, and you—I marvel at you—

President Grant's Little Story.

Ex-Secretary Robeson, quoted in the Washington Correspondence of the Cinn. Gazette.

"By the way," he went on, "I remember an incident that clearly illustrates his (Gen. Grant's) character. When I was secretary of the navy some hundreds of the sailors of the better class came to me and asked to have some rank given them. They didn't care for an increase of pay, they said, but they wanted relative rank."

"I couldn't do anything for them, but they came several times, and were rather importunate, and I finally led a delegation of them over to the White House, and let them present their petition to General Grant in person. They told him what they wanted, and argued for a redress of their grievances plainly but forcibly."

"At last an old boatswain came to the front, and hitching up his trousers and, turning over his incumbent quid, he said: 'Mr. President, I can put this ere matter so's you can see it plain. Now, here I be—a parent, in fact, a father. My son is a midship-man. He outranks me, don't you observe? That ain't right, don't you see?'

"Indeed," said Grant; "who appointed him a middy?"

"The secretary here," the bo'sun said; and encouraged by the question, he went on: It ain't right, don't you see, that I should be beneath 'im? Ef I was to go onto his ship, the boy I brought up to obejence would boss his own father! Jest think of that!"

"An' he has better quarters 'n me, and better grub, nice furn'ture, an' all that; sleeps in a nice soft bed, 'n all that. See?"

"Yes," the President said; "yes the world is full of inequalities. I know of a case quite similar to yours."

The old bo'sun chuckled quietly, and gave another hitch to his lower gear.

"I know of an old fellow," said General Grant, "who is postmaster of a little town in Kentucky. He lives in a plain way, in a small house. He is a nice old man, but he isn't much in rank.
His son outranks him more 'n an your son does you. His son lives in Washington, in the biggest house there, and he is surrounded by the nicest of furniture, and eats and drinks anything he takes a notion to. He could remove his father from office in a minute if he wanted to. But he doesn't want to.
And the old man—that's Jesse Grant, you know—doesn't seem to care about the inequality of rank. I suppose he is glad to see his boy get along in the world."

"The old bo'sun looked down on the carpet, and tried to bore a hole in it with his toe, and his comrades all laughed at him joyously, and slapped him on the back, and filed out in great glee. It was the last I ever heard of the petition or the petitioners. The old bo'sun flung his quid into a cuspidor as he left. Probably he had concluded to give up thinking."

Forgotten.

Youth's Companion.

An American traveller in England lately asked a farmer near Stratford-on-Avon to drive him into town. He did so with alacrity, pointing out Shakespeares house, etc., with much pride.
The American presently spoke of his plays.

"A play-actor?" exclaimed the Englishman. "Was that all he was?"
"I thought, at least, he had been Mayor!"

On the other hand an Englishman, visiting our foremost literary man last summer, asked a conductor on the Beverly train,—"Doctor Oliver Wendell Holmes lives in this village?"

"Don't know, really. Young dentist moved there this spring. Probably he's the party. Rising young man."

Somebody, before Carlyle's death, inquired of a butcher in which house on Cheyne Walk, he lived.

"Carlyle? Oh, he's the old man where they buy three lion chops on Monday. That's the place. They eat no meat at all."

Young men invariably look forward to fame as the chief prize of life, but almost as invariably old men who have gained it are annoyed by the personal notice which it draws upon them. This personal notoriety lasts but a short time, even with the most brilliant reputations. Even while a famous man is living, he is but a name to all the world to but a small circle of his own acquaintances, and when he is dead, it is only his work that survives. Biography is, after all, but one man's account and opinion of another man, which is very often totally incorrect. Shakespeare, Goethe, Franklin, still are great living powers in the world, but the men themselves are but faded dows

Even of the person of the Savior of mankind, we have no accurate knowledge; no tradition gives us the voice, or look, or peculiar bearing with which He walked the streets of Jerusalem.

We can almost believe that the blotting out of His personal life was intended to teach us the worthlessness of personal glory; and that only the work done by a man for mankind should endure. The word spoken from the soul lives when the lips that uttered it are dust.

The Congo.

Democrat's Monthly.

Speaking of the Nile suggests Africa, and recalls the fact that the commercial nations of the world are organizing to open up the interior of the Dark Continent to trade. There is a population of nearly 50,000,000, who have so far been shut off from the commerce of the world. The inhabitants of Congo Land are far superior in every way to the Negroes of both the east and west coast to Africa. They are more industrious and in a higher scale of semi-civilization. Central Africa now produces many articles of prime necessity to the rest of the world, and will in time consume vast quantities of goods in the way of clothing and ornaments, as well as some luxuries. There is a strife between the different nations as to which shall profit by this trade; but of course the United States is out of the race, as Europe can undersell us, and we have no ships of our own. Naturally, Great Britain would profit most by the opening of the Congo country; but France is first in this field, and Germany has entered her claim for an equality with other nations. The latter power is making itself felt in every quarter of the globe. Bismarck evidently believes that the maritime greatness of Great Britain has culminated, and that Germany has the best chance of being her successor as mistress of the seas and as owner of vast colonial possessions. Although the United States will not profit by the opening of the Congo to commerce, it is some salve to our national vanity to know that it was an American, Henry M. Stanley, who first discovered the possibilities of the Congo, and who announced its importance to the outside world. But his great work has been done under the auspices of the Belgian government.

Shooting for a Girl.

A peculiarly romantic story is reported from the lumber section near Coalton, Penn., where the extensive mills of the Clarion Lumber Company are situated. Two young men by the names of Nicholson and Brant came together from the Maine lumber woods to work at the Clarion mills last July.
They had been life friends. A few weeks ago the daughter of the superintendent of the mills, Miss Laura Glan-cey, came home from school in New York state. The two young lumbermen fell in love with her, and both began paying her marked attentions.

After a time Brant suggested to Nicholson that they shoot a match at 300 yards, the winner to be considered the one entitled to pay his suit to Miss Glancey, the loser to give up any further effort to win her. The men fired twenty shots each, tying each other every shot. On the twenty-first shot Nicholson missed, and his friend won the match. The men informed the young woman of what they had done and its result. Brant made her an offer of marriage at once. She said that she was already engaged to be married to a man in Waverly, N. Y. This unexpected termination of his suit so char-gined Brant that he bade the young lady and Nicholson good-bye, and left the neighborhood within an hour, telling the young man that he intended to return to Maine.

Nicholson remained at the mills, and persisted in urging his suit, and succeeded in winning her from the young man to whom she was engaged. Her father, however, objected to the match with Nicholson. The marriage with the Waverly man was set for New Year's day. On Christmas she obtained her father's consent to visit a young woman in a neighboring village. Next day Nicholson could not be found around the mills. Glancey, suspecting that he had gone to meet his daughter, started in pursuit. He found them at the house of the friend she had gone to visit.
They had been married an hour, and were just sitting down to a wedding dinner. The father accepted the situation and joined in the feast.

A Sagacious Dog.

The London Spectator.

The best authenticated of all the stories of sagacity in dogs has been made public this week. Mr. Arthur E.
Rende, secretary to the Charing-Cross Hospital, writes to The Times of Wednesday to say that at 10:30 on Sunday night a rough terrier barked outside the door of the hospital till he was let in.
When admitted he limped in, squatted under the mat, and held up an injured forepaw.

The house-surgeon came, whereupon the dog followed him at once from the hall to the accident room, jumped at once, when invited to do so, on the chair, and again held out the injured paw. It was dressed, when the dog licked the hand of the surgeon and loudly barked its gratitude till it had to be turned out, showing great reluctance to leave. Mr.
Bellamy, the house-surgeon, confirms this statement, and adds that on Thursday the dog came like any other outside patient to have his paw dressed. It is not known to whom the dog belonged.

The remains of

H. Perry Brewster, late Stat Col.

ance of Texas, were buried at sea on the 1st inst, in accordance with the dying request of the deceased. Col. Brewster served in the San Jacinto, was first Adjutant-General of Texas and served as chief of staff under Gen. Albert Sydney Johnston in the late war. Deceased passed his life on land, but was strongly infatuated with a desire to be buried at sea. He first made known his peculiar desires in this respect to his bosom friends, Gen. John M. Claiborne, and Col. Jack while lying together under a tree just before the opening engagement of the battle of Shiloh.

Afterward, during the progress of the war, he frequently repeated the request to several army friends. He said he desired to be buried in sixty fathoms of water at high meridian. His theory was that at that particular depth the pressure of the water was of just sufficient density to keep the human body quietly upon the bottom.

Prior to his death in the city of Anstin, Sunday December 28, Judge Brewster repeated to his daughter his last wishes in regard to the disposition of his body.
Miss Brewster communicated with Gen.
Claiborne and other friends of this city and it was determined to carry out the last request of the father and friend.

THE BURIAL.

Gov. Ireland placed the little state steamer Hygeia at the disposal of Miss Brewster for the purpose of carrying the body to sea. At 10 a.m. the remains under military escort were placed aboard the Hygeia and the last solemn journey to the sea began. The locality selected for burial was the place where nine years ago the steamship Waco was burned with great loss of life. Many old friends of deceased accompanied the remains. Miss Brewster, yielding to the entreaties of friends, parted forever from the remains of her honored father at the point of embarkation. The sea was very rough. The little steamer braved the waves under the hand of an experienced pilot. Several tugs and pilot boats accompanied the funeral boat. The shipping in the harbor flew flags at half mast. At exactly 12 o'clock, being well out to sea, Gen.
Claiborne briefly recited a history of the life of his friend and gently consigned the casket to the water; and it instantly sank beneath the waters of the angry gulf.

Pine Wood Baths.

At some of the watering places of Germany the very simple prescription of the physician is that the patient should spend several hours a day walking or riding through the pine woods.
This simple treatment is said to be sometimes supplemented by the taking of pine baths, and in the case of kidney diseases and for delicate children this is claimed to be highly beneficial. The bath is prepared by pouring into the water about half a tumblerful of an extract made from the fresh needles of the pine; this extract is dark in color and closely resembles molasses in consistency, and when poured into the bath gives the water a muddy appearance, with a slight foam on the surface. As an adjunct to the daily bath this infusion of the pine extract is said to induce a most agreeable sensation; it gives the skin a deliciously soft and siky feeling, and the effect on the nerves is quieting.

The Steam Engine Must Go.

New York Mail and Express.

Edward H. Jones, of the Edison electric companies is a man of such business capacity and practical experience in electrical affairs that his opinions will have great weight with all who know him. He declares that the leisive problems in the substitution of electricity for steam as motive power have already been solved, and that the work which remains is only the perfection of the new system in details. Enough electricity can be produced, and at a sufficiently low cost, to satisfactorily perform the work now accomplished by steam, and the regulation of the electric force is very effected. Time will be required to perfect the new system in its details, but the electric motor will yet completely supersede the steam engine.

Figure This Out.

The New York Tribune of the other day printed the calculation of the London Echo in regard to the number of grains of corn that would be on a chess board if one grain were placed on the first square, two grains on the second, four on the third and so on. The Echo said that the corn on the squares would fill 1,888,875 barns, each holding 1,000-000 bushels, allowing 100,000 grains to each bushel. A clever Brooklyn correspondent, who has figured it out, says that the English paper is away off, and gives the following as the true figures: There would be 184,467,440,737,075 bushels of corn on the squares, which under the conditions named would fill 184,467,440 barns.

Eddie's Catechism.

Harper's Bazar.

The rector was paying a visit to the Sunday school, pushing there to make a suggestion, here to ask a question.

"Eddie, do you know your catechism well?" he asked a little fellow in the infant class.

"Guess so."

"Well, let's see. Who made you?"

"God."

"Very good. Now, who was the first man?"

"Don't know," and then, after a pause, with a look of innocent self-satisfaction, "but mamma says you're the handsomest man in town."

—Fort Sumter is now a very insignificant place compared to what it once was. It has been razed to one story and looks quite dilapidated. —“My son,” asked a proud father, after the usual greetings upon the young man's return home from college, “have you a microscope among your traps?” “A microscope dad,” replied the astonished youth. “Yes, my son; you have been in college, you know, four years, and I thought if you had a microscope handy I should like to see how much you had learned.”

—Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore, the orchestral leader, has been a great hero in Coney Island ever since the earthquake. The tune then in hand was “My Country, 'Tis of Thee,” but while the music stand was shaking Patrick S. raised his baton, hushed the music and whispered to his players. Then there burst upon the ears of the startled multitude the first chord of “O, Dear, What Can the Matter Be?” —N. Y. Graphic.

—It is said that the only portrait of Pocahontas that was ever painted was engraved by Simon de Passe, and published in a volume early in the seventeenth century, which was issued shortly after her death. Says a correspondent of Notes and Queries: “It has never been discovered who painted this portrait. It somehow came into the possession of the Rolles, of Tuttington, and from them passed into the family of the Elwins, of Boston Hall, near Aylstam. It is said to have once hung on the walls of Heacham Hall, which is not improbable, as the Rolles of Heacham were blood relations of Pocahontas' husband, and connected by marriage with the Elwins.”

GATHERINGS.

Prof. E. Baur says that he examined twelve peach buds from his trees after soaking them in water. All but one had been killed by the cold snap following so suddenly after warm weather. That one was not in a vigorous condition. If other peach trees in this vicinity have fared similarly the prospects for a peach crop next year are just about nil. —Register.

L. J. Layton, the famous hunter and trapper, arrived home last Thursday night, from Columbia, Dakota. He claims to have killed 2000 ducks and also 50 in the short space of three hours, it's a good record and hard to beat. He has 2,200 muskrat pelts and a large quantity of other furs, viz: beaver, otter and mink. —Pleasant Lake correspondent Jackson Citizen.

The power that gas possesses under certain circumstances was shown in this office Saturday afternoon. A gasoline blow-lamp that had been used by workmen to solder the wires being put up for electric purposes, had been put out and placed upon a bench in the press room. About an hour afterward an explosion was heard and upon examination the lamp minus its bottom was found lodged on a board at the top of the ceiling. It required a great deal of force to do that deed. —Register.

The Fountain of Youth.

Dyspepsia is the prevailing malady of civilized life. A weak, dyspeptic stomach acts very slowly or not at all on many kinds of food, gases are extracted, acids are formed and become a source of pain and disease until discharged. To be dyspeptic is to be miserable, hopeless, depressed, confused in mind, forgetful, irritable, drowsy, weak, languid and useless. It destroys the Teeth, Complexion, Strength, Peace of Mind and Bodily ease. It produces Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of Stomach, Bad Taste in mouth, Bilious attacks, Palpitation of Heart, Inflammation of Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms. Dyspepsia invariably yields to the vegetable remedies, in GOLDEN SEAL BITTERS, the great purifier of the blood and restorer of health. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement. We warrant GOLDEN SEAL BITTERS. Take no others. Sold by R. S. On this drain special commissioners were appointed by the probate court, consisting of Comstock Hill, David Dewey and David Wiley, who declared said drain necessary and for the good of the public health, and made an award to — Green as damages to the amount of $300. Said order has been by the issued but not tendered because did not deem it safe under existing law to proceed. I am assured that the right of way is perfect with the exception of tendering Mr. Green his order.

This drain is one of considerable magnitude being the outlet of over 5,000 acres of marsh and swamp and is over 8 miles long. Special commissioners were appointed by the probate court, consisting of H. D. Platt, Wm. April and G. A. Peters, who declared said drain necessary and for the good of the public health and that it was no damage to any person. All the papers pertaining to this drain are on file, including the percentage of benefits. We were assured in the spring from Lansing that the question of the sale of lands for drain taxes would soon be settled by the supreme court, who, undoubtedly, will be called on to decide whether the Co. treasurer or the Auditor General must sell delinquent drain tax bonds or whether they can be sold at all under existing law. This law has been of so much importance to me that I have deemed it best not to proceed with this drain or the Pittsfield drain or to grant the petition for any new drain until that question was settled.

There is at least $200 due to John Thistlewood and other commissioners on this drain for which no orders have been issued. Before proceeding on this drain, and after application was made to me, by advice of the court to employ good counsel I submitted all of the papers on file in the county treasurer's office to my attorney, who said it was all right and advised me to proceed. On the day of sale of said drain nearly all of the plaintiffs in the suit were present with counsel who made no complaint or objection to my proceedings. The next day after the sale of said drain I submitted all of the papers pertaining to said drain to the probate attorney who gave it as his opinion that I was safe in proceeding with the drain. When this drain was nearly two thirds completed an injunction was issued by the circuit court to enjoin the collection of the tax. Thomas Murry, treasurer, was made defendant, who refused to defend. It seemed absolutely necessary that the suit should be defended. The most of those who had favored the drain had obtained a fair outlet by our work and did not wish to shoulder a lawsuit. Under all the circumstances we deemed it a duty which we owed these who had employed to defend this suit. This drain had been laid out and in use over twenty years, had been reclaimed ten years after being constructed. The court decided that the drain was illegal, on the ground that the law under which this drain was originally laid was unconstitutional and that a drain commissioner had no right to deepen or reclaim a drain without obtaining a new right of way. In the result of this suit a great wrong has been done to those having done the work or holding orders, to which we call your earnest attention and ask you to try to devise some means of relief to these poor laborers. In the case of Webster drain I was petitioned by John Stanton, Stephen VanRiper and others to construct a drain, which under the present existing condition of the drain law, I thought best not to do. I have also received petitions from the townships of Augusta, Pittsfield and Northfield, which petitions I did not accept. For the reason that from the best information I can get on the subject, it is doubtful whether a drain tax can be collected under existing law. At all events I have discovered that dishonest tax payers with slippery township officials and cunning lawyers can, under the present law, make much cost and trouble and cheat poor, honest laborers out of their just pay. And not wishing to be a party to such transactions I have declined to commence any new drains since my last report. Lima, Oct 20 1884. EDWARD A. NORDMAN, County Drain Commissioner.

The French and Their Clocks. Watchmakers in dull quarters of Paris derive good fixed incomes from being employed to attend weekly to the chimney clocks of prosperous bourgeois. Punctuality is not a French virtue, and half an hour's law is given at private dinner parties to those invited. At public dinners the guests sit down at about an hour after the time specified in the cards of invitation. Railway clocks on the facades of terminuses are five minutes in advance of those inside. An appointment is hardly ever punctually kept. Gambetta was one of the rare Frenchmen who are always to the minute. But his friend M. Spuller sometimes gives himself a couple of hours' margin. M. Clemenceau piques himself on the observance of social duties, and is in this respect a pattern Radical, but when he makes an appointment he is not vexed if the person he is to meet is half an hour late. M. Barthelmy St. Hilaire and De Lesseps keep time by marine watches purchased abroad. I know a deputy who piques himself on his observance of social duties. One day I had an appointment with him for one o'clock. He came after two. When I ventured to reproach him with being so late, his answer was: "I am very sorry you had to wait so long, but why did you come so early?" The way in France is for each of the parties who have made a rendezvous—unless as duellists—to give the other half an hour's margin, which being taken on both sides makes in all an hour. This system of addition is analogous to what a Californian said of a big tree. It grew so high that it took two men and a boy to see to the top. The Prussians have been branded since 1870-71 with the name of Voleurs de Pendules. They were especially tempted by the pinchbeck-looking galvanoplastic articles which are usually protected from the air by glass shades. Timepieces of a severe style, and in real bronze, were not so often looted. Prince Bismarck took a fancy to a dark bronze clock, which stood in his sitting-room at Versailles on an elevated bracket. It represented the Fall of Lucifer. The defeated archangel was more Byronic than Miltonic. When negotiating the preliminaries of peace M. Thiers was placed at the table opposite this timepiece. He was nervous and fatigued, and though not habitually superstitious, felt very uncomfortable whenever his eye caught the sardonic visage of Lucifer. Bismarck secretly noticed his discomfort, and enjoyed it. At last M. Thiers avowed that he could no longer endure the irritation which the sinister-looking figure caused him, and asked to be allowed to change places with the Chancellor. He would have been glad if Lucifer had been taken out of the room. The proprietress of the house was asked by Bismarck to let him have the clock at a valuation. He wished to keep it as a souvenir of the event which took place under its shadow. It was reluctantly sold to him.—London News

CURRENT TOPICS.

LET'S not ponder on the troubles that the dead year has seen, on the friends it has taken away, or the losses it has brought us. There are enough bright things to occupy our minds, and if we are willing to do justice to the old year each of us can find something pleasant to think and say of it.

A MAGNIFICENT cathedral has just been completed at Moscow, to commemorate the retreat of Napoleon from Russia. The building, which will accommodate 10,000 worshippers and the total cost of which has been over £2,000,000 ($10,000,000), has been in process of construction for the last fifty years. One of its bells, it is said, weighs over twenty-six tons. The human figures on the dome are fifty feet in height.

HERE is good sound sense from the Lansing Republican: "Where is my boy tonight?" is a question which every parent should propound to himself each evening about half past eight o'clock, and if the youth does not make his appearance the fond parent should form himself into a procession of one and launch forth on a voyage of discovery. There are hundreds of boys in Lansing from 8 to 14 years of age on the way to destruction across lots who might be saved by a little wholesome discipline.

AMONG the attractions of a church fair in a Montana town recently was a raffle for a fawn. At the conclusion of the fair the holder of the winning ticket in the raffle asked one of the lady managers for his fawn. She replied that she had no fawn for him, but that there were plenty out on the hills and he could have all he could catch. The man got wrathful, declaring that the whole thing was "a darned swindle." For using this language he was promptly suspended by the church, and the local paper declared that he was no gentleman for talking in that way to the fair managers.

FOUR years ago William H. Vanderbilt invested $50,000,000 in United States four per cent. bonds. Since that time he has converted $18,000,000 of these bonds into money. Financial men in New York say that within the past four years Vanderbilt's fortune of $200,000,000 has been cut squarely in half. In 1880 New York Central was selling at 155, Lake Shore 135, Michigan Central 112 and Canada Southern 90. January quotations for the same stocks were 85, 61, 55 and 30 respectively. Vanderbilt's boys, including his son-in-law Twombly, have lost him $15,000,000 alone in the last two years.

SAYS THE Cincinnati Times-Star. The loss of life by extraordinary casualties, on land and sea, and on the battlefield, during the past year has been above the average of years when no destructive wars have taken place between any of the great nations of the world. In January, the number of lives lost in such casualties as are given prominence in the newspapers reach about 580. The February list foots up 7,000, including Bakor Pasha's force of 3,500 that the Sudanese rebels annihilated. The record for March shows 200 deaths, and for April 476. In May, Berber was captured and 3,600 of the population and garrison were massacred. There were, in addition, 280 lives lost in disasters during the month, making a total loss of 3,780 from unusual causes. June, July and August brought few accidents of much consequence, the total loss for the three months being 132. In the Kiang Leo Province of China 70,000 people perished by the floods in September, and eighty-two deaths by catastrophes were reported from other parts of the world. The October record was 140; November, 78; and December has experienced one great calamity—the earthquake in Spain, involving a loss of about 3,000 human lives. From other causes, including the sinking of a French transport by a Chinese cruiser, 1,400 persons have perished, bringing the total up to 4,000. At a low estimate, 93,000 lives were lost by the greater casualties during the year.

The archaeological institute of America has sent into the country of the Euphrates and the Tigris an expedition, under the command of the Rev. W. H. Ward. Miss Wolfe of New York defrays the expenses of the researches.

MICHIGAN NEWS.

Depopulating the Prisons.

Begole sent the following commutations of long time sentences: George Davis, sent from Genesee county, Nov. 25, 1882, to serve 20 years in the state prison for rape—to 10 years; William Witham sent from Genesee county, February 26, 1880, for life for murder—sentence commuted, so that the term expires January 1, 1885; Jalla Cargis sent from Leelanau County December 19, 1876, for life—term commuted so as to expire December 23, 1885.

School Legislation.

The question of school legislation which has been agitating the minds of some of our prominent educators for some time was entrusted to a committee, and as a result the following recommendations were made by the chairman, Prof. David Howell, superintendent of the Lansing schools: That the civil township be made the district unit for the management of local school affairs. This would reduce the number of district school officers in the state by about 15,000. Incredible as it may at first appear, the statement is true as the records prove.

That a change be made in the method of school supervision. The records show that the ungraded schools were better served under the system of township supervision than under the present.

That the recent law requiring the teaching of the effects of alcohol and narcotics on the human system be strengthened by a clause making a penalty for non-compliance with its provisions.

That annual disbursement of the primary school fund.

Brutal Treatment of an Old Lady.

Burglars visited the toll house on the Tascosa plank road, three miles from Bay City the other morning. The manner in which the burglars conducted operations is most dastardly and outrageous. Mrs. Hogle, the lady at the toll house is about 65 years of age. There was also a hired man about the house, and several children. The burglars broke open the door with cord-wood. The hired man was aroused, and attempted to fire at the burglars, but his revolver would not work, and he was cornered by the desperate men, who then turned their attention to Mrs. Hogle and the children, and at the muzzle of a revolver drove them up stairs, and bound and gagged them threatening them with instant death if they did not tell where the money was kept. The threats did not move Mrs. Hogle, and she was bound more securely and compelled to kneel upon the floor for the purpose of being burned. One of the burglars removed the chimney of the lamp and placed the flame close to Mrs. Hogle's body. In the meantime one of the robbers had gone down stairs to search for money and a quiet hired man. Fortunately however, that individual was able to fire off one barrel of his revolver, the bullet hitting one of the robbers on the forehead and glancing off. The wounded man cried out in pain, and his pals who were up stairs torturing the old lady came to his rescue. The three then left the house. Mrs. Hogle managed to free herself, but she was badly bruised, and suffered such tortures that she says she could not have endured it five minutes longer. The police were at once notified and after a little search arrested "Shang" Clark, a noted desperado (who is wanted in Syracuse on a grave charge.) Wm. Brennan, a Detroit crook, and Thomas Laray a crook of Bay City. The burglars were arrested at a disreputable house kept by John Mathison, known as "Canada Jack." The burglars secured only about $25 at the toll-house.

UNDER WATER.

Grand Rapids Nearly Inundated, and the Situation Growing Worse.

A City in Darkness.

GRAND RAPIDS, January 4.—This city is threatened with a flood, exceeding in magnitude that of two years ago. On the night of January 21 an ice jam began eight miles above Grand Haven, and by midnight on the 31 a solid gorge of ice had formed to Grand Rapids. The gorge varied from four to fifteen feet in thickness. The water immediately began to settle back of the rapids, and to rise at the rate of a foot an hour. About four o'clock the ice moved off the rapids, and piled up below the city 15 feet high.

The south end of the west side canal went out and the canal and river were all one, and in a short time the water flooded all the sewers at the main part of the city and the basements along canal street contained from one to two feet of water. The flaring mills in the vicinity were soon flooded and their contents were removed. The basement of the jail contained over a foot of water, and it was impossible to have a fire in the furnace.

To add to the horrors of the situation the electric light works were cut out, leaving the city in total darkness.

On the west side the people at once began to move out of their houses to places of safety. The police force has been doubled, as the city is full of crooks waiting to take advantage of the confusion and darkness to ply their nefarious calling.

The river was filled with floating ice on the morning of the 5th and in all probability a rise will occur, as the ice is still ag in about the city adding pressure to the already immense strain.

On the evening of the 4th the water reached the mark of the great log jam of 1883, and another foot's rise will flood the whole north end of the city.

Would Not be Bent.

The Veterans.

One of the Michigan regiments in the Army of the Potomac was brigaded with a Pennsylvania regiment into which their chaplain had infused considerable religious feeling. Several had been baptized; this feeling prevailed to some extent in other regiments of the brigade, but had not taken effect in the Michigan regiment. The chaplain referred to, having the welfare of the Michigan regiment at heart, conceived the idea of calling on the colonel, a soldier from his youth and every inch a man, gruff, but brave; not sudden and quick in quarrel, nor full of strange oaths, but bearded like the Par; gaining reputation even at the cannon's mouth. Consequently the chaplain waited upon him, calling at his tent and finding him, stated that several members of other regiments of the brigade had recently experienced religion, and in his own regiment he had baptised fifteen the previous day; remarking, also, that he was very desirous of a like result in the Michigan regiment; but, unless the colonel made some effort in that direction, the regiment would be behind in the matter.

The colonel, a little nettled at what he called over-zeal of the chaplain, and especially at the idea of having his regiment suspected even of being slow or behind in any respect, started to his feet, called the sergeant major, and hurriedly said: "Give my compliments to the adjutant and direct him to detail immediately with orders to report to the chaplain here, twenty men for baptism; my regiment shall not be beat in any way by any regiment in the brigade." The chaplain gave him one serious look and left quick.

Here is a dainty little bit: Wednesday, Dec. 17, the birthday of John G. Whittier, the pupils of the junior class of the Girls' High School in Boston sent him 77 choice roses in honor of his seventy-seventh year. The class is now engaged in the study of his works. In reply, the poet sent the following:

To the Girls' High School, Junior Class, Boston: The sun of life is sinking low; Without a winter's falling snow; Within your summer roses fair; The heart of age, your offering cheers; You count in flowers my many years; God bless you one and all.

An old man about 60 years of age, by the name of James Beston, was found dead in his bed at his home in Royal Oak Wednesday, December 31. He had been drinking heavily for several days and his death is attributed to his carousals and other excesses.
