WHISPERINGS.

Fine spring weather so far, this week.

A "ham" race at the rink next Saturday evening, May 16.

Where is the monument scheme so much heard of a year ago?

Snow-lay on the ground in this village last Saturday morning, May 9.

Remember the social at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Kempf next Tuesday evening.

Messrs. Alva Freer and U. H. Townsend made business trips to Ann Arbor, last Monday.

The people living on South-st. think the cutting away of Randall's sand bank, quite an improvement.

A goodly number the Workers met with Mrs. John Cook yesterday, and enjoyed themselves hugely.

How have the mighty fallen! The Mooreville cheese factory is to be converted into a creamery!

Monday morning, May 11, ice formed the thickness of a pane of glass, on pools of water and in pails.

Thirty-one names will be engraved on the soldiers' monument at Stockbridge, which will be dedicated Decoration Day.

French, the corner merchant, calls your attention this week to the large assortment of boots, shoes and clothing, furnishing goods etc. which he is (as usual), selling at bottom prices.

Wm. Yocum is constantly improving his grounds and house. His latest improvement consists in raising the latter several feet above ground, and adding an addition on north side.

The oranges served the wedding guests at the marriage of Mr. Dancer, were sent by Mr. Glenn, of Florida, and were probably of his own growing. They were very delicious.

It is pleasing to state that one lady exercised the right to vote last Monday. Mrs. R. B. Gates deposited a ballot, and it is hoped that all who have the privilege to vote will do so next time.

Bacon, the hardware merchant, is now kept busy showing and selling gasoline stoves. He put out three the first two days of this week, and from all indications he will sell four times the number he did last season.

The Women's Foreign Missions society are in session at Grass Lake to-day. Miss Florence Bachman of this place delivers a recitation this afternoon on "The Leaden Cross." A number of persons from this place are in attendance.

The Grass Lake News man said some thing a short time ago which displeased three "valuable" subscribers and they withdrew their patronage. Thereupon a few went to work and in one week sent in twenty-one new subscribers. Good!

A social under the auspices of the Y. P. C. A. will be held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Kempf next Tuesday evening. Dainties and amusement will be served in abundance. Let there be a large turnout.

The machinery, consisting of an engine and boiler, a two hundred and a three hundred gallon churn, a butter worker and three large vats, cans, cranes etc., arrived last Monday and are now being placed in position. It is expected that Monday next will see the creamery in working order.

It may be of interest to the taxpayers in this school district to know that the attendance in the primary department during the fall term was 99, and the building has only 56 sittings. At one time Miss Lewis' room had 50 pupils, Miss Harrington's 48, Miss Mitchell's 62, Miss Depeu's 50, and the High School 63, a total of 372 pupils. The total number of sittings in all the rooms are 378. From this it will be plainly seen that more room must be furnished the primary department. No person with the least knowledge of school affairs will suggest that 5-year-old scholars should be placed in the same room with the older ones, consequently the question arises, what shall be done?

General order, No. 15, issued by Commander-in-chief, John S. Kountz, G. A. R., reads as follows:

In accordance with Rules and Regulations, May 30th will be observed as Memorial Day. As defined by resolution of the Eighteenth Annual Encampment, it will be kept sacred to the memory of our heroic dead. Let no idle merry-make mar its consecrated hours.

Twenty years have passed since our last Grand Review. The death roll of years has added tens of thousands to the half million graves we left behind. The daily tolling bell, the freshly knotted crape, the muffled drum, the slow and solemn procession, tell how fast our comrades join the silent ranks above.

The flowers of love are immortal. Be it ours to cherish them in our hearts and let their fragrance fill our lives.

HEADQUARTERS R. P. CARPENTER POST No. 41, G. A. R., CHELSEA MAY 14, '85.

All members of Post are requested to assemble at basement of Town Hall, Sunday afternoon, May 24th, at 2:30 o'clock, to attend memorial services as a Post.

Orange Blossoms.

The Chelsea House, the residence of our esteemed fellow citizen, H. J. Hoag, was the center of attraction last Tuesday night, May 12, 1885. Scarcely had the shades of evening revealed "the glittering orbs of night" when galli dressed ladies and clean dicked gentlemen, representatives of the elite of Chelsea, were seen coming from various directions, but all having one destination. Other parts of Michigan were also represented, as well as New York and Dakota. At 8:30 of the clock, some seventy guests, aged and youthful, grave and gay (mostly gay), were assembled in the well lighted, flower-bedecked parlors to witness the union of two happy lives in one harmonious life still more blessed. Miss Nina Jane Hoag and Mr. Wm. J. Dancer were joined in the holy bonds of wedlock by Rev. Thomas Holmes D. D., all of Chelsea.

The ceremony was one of great beauty and appropriateness in thought, expression, manner and length. (Not so short as to be ridiculous nor so long as to be tedious.) The bride was beautifully, tastefully and becomingly attired in a beige colored brocade silk, whose ample and graceful folds formed an appropriate setting for the more beautiful and precious jewel they contained and adorned.

The ceremony performed, and congratulations and happy greetings exchanged, the company were conducted to the dining room, where "the keen demands of appetite" were not only satisfied but satiated by every thing that heart (stomach) could wish. Those who are accustomed to eat at that table need no description of the variety and excellence of the viands that adorned and burdened it. At the same time the lively conversation of the guests plainly indicated that each one was enjoying still more "the feast of reason and the flow of soul."

Next, the numerous, beautiful and costly presents came under review; and many were the expressions of admiration both of the gifts themselves and of the generosity of their donors, that fell from the lips of the delighted beholders. Surely, we thought, it pays to get married. We wonder why some are so slow about it!

But time itself must have an end, so must all delightful occasions of this kind. At a late hour came partings, with good wishes and "good night."

"Sail forth into the sea of life, O gentle, loving, trusting wife, And, safe from all adversity, Upon the bosom of that sea Thy comings and thy goings be."

The HERALD extends to the newly wed couple its sincere and heartfelt well wishes. May your future abound with all that makes this life one of peace, happiness and prosperity.

Ascension Day to-day.

Remember the social at Mrs. J. P. Wood's next Wednesday afternoon.

We are in receipt of a lovely(?) May basket, "May" the life of the givers "Flo." peacefully onward.

What next! A "ham" race, (whatever that may be), takes place at the rink Saturday evening. Sport ahead.

A union temperance meeting takes place in the Baptist church next Sunday evening. Let there be a large attendance.

It may be a hard matter to convince the president of the village or the street committee that two-thirds of the money expended on East-st. is thrown away, but such is, no doubt, the case.

The proprietors of Glazier's Bank Drug Store announce to the public that they have just placed in stock a large line of the latest patterns in carpets, which they are selling from 20 to 85 cents per yard. Scan their advertisement on last page carefully.

Mr. Perry P. Palmer, of Lyndon, and Miss Ann Eliza Stephens of Lima, were married at the residence of the bride's mother, May 7th, 1885, by Rev. Thomas Holmes, D. D., of Chelsea. This was a very pleasant social event, attended by a goodly number of agreeable guests, who manifested their interest in the parties by numerous, beautiful and appropriate souvenirs of the occasion.

To the Public.

I have taken the agency for the sale of the Walker buggies and platform wagons, manufactured at Ann Arbor, Mich. And I solicit all parties desiring anything in that line to call at my shop and see the work and get prices before going elsewhere.

MICHIGAN NEWS.

Our Life Charges.

Detroit Post.

Of the first ten life convicts sent to Jackson, beginning with March, 1847, Wayne county furnished five. Of the 136 whose names appear in the last annual report as life convicts sent to Jackson since the above date, Wayne county has sent twenty-six. Of the sixty-two committed during the past ten years, Wayne county has sent twelve.

James Hitchcock, a life convict in the state prison at Jackson, from Ingham county, has served the state continuously since 1853—a period of thirty-two years, or just one half of his life, having been 32 years old at the time of his sentence; a longer period of continuous service by some five years than that served by any other convict. He is safely trusted outside of the walls without a keeper, showing no desire of escape. He was the tenth life convict sent to Jackson.

More Suggestions.

Gov. Alger sent the following message to both houses the other day:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
LANSING, MICH., May 5, 1885.
Should the legislature decide to create a pardoning board, in accordance with my message of the 30th ult., I would suggest that the law be so framed as not to permit the sittings of the board to exceed six months during the gubernatorial term, and that the compensation be regulated accordingly, leaving the portions of the six months which the board should sit discretionary with the executive. I do not think a secretary other than a stenographer would be essential.

ENGLAND EXCITED.

GEN. LUMSDEN AND STAFF RECALLED.

Foreign News in Brief.

Gen. Lumsden and the majority of his staff have been ordered to return to London. This is practically a recall, although Lumsden says it should not be so regarded. It is accepted throughout England as a humiliating surrender. It means that, so far from submitting the Pui-Khiang affair to investigation and arbitration upon which Mr. Gladstone laid so much stress in his recent speech, while England discredited, abandons and dishonors her agent in the matter, before any investigation has been made, and while all the information at hand fully justifies him.

TERRIBLE CALAMITY.

A TENEMENT HOUSE FIRE—A COLLAPSED BUILDING BURNS.

Several Lives Lost.

About 9 o'clock on the morning of May 5, building in Brooklyn, N. Y., fell in.

A dozen manufacturing firms had portions of the building and employed altogether several hundred hands, chiefly young women, all of whom were at work in some of the five stories of the building. As soon as the crash was heard and before an alarm could be sounded the inflammable, tinder-like woodwork of the exterior was ablaze, and the first firemen who arrived found many of the panic-stricken female operatives crowding and shrieking wildly at the windows which opened upon the interior area of the works. Their retreat had been cut off and the firemen quickly ran up the ladders, but the girls were hemmed in and many fell back into the flames before help could reach them. The inflammable character of the building hindered the efforts of the firemen. It was ascertained that the engineer of the factory, Daniel J. Lowry, was one of the victims. He was killed by the falling of the west wall of the middle wing on Atlantic-ave.

The cause of the fire was the overturning of the boilers of a soap factory on the second floor. The west wall of the middle wing, on Atlantic-ave., had settled; workmen were screwing it up with jacks; the middle jack had been screwed up too high and it was lowered, when the whole weight of the wall came upon the two jacks at the end, and it fell with a crash.

It is not now known how many lives were lost, but it is believed that 30 persons perished.

GENERAL NEWS.

SOME POSTAL FIGURES.

Third Assistant Postmaster-General has made a report of the effect during the first year of the reduction of letter postage from three cents to two. He says that the actual revenue for the year ended September 30, 1884 (the first year during which the reduced rate prevailed), was $42,184,800, or $7,467,899 less than the estimated revenue upon a three-cent rate, and the loss by the reduction of the rate to two cents was $523,100 less than the estimated loss. The immediate falling off in the issue of postal cards was 18.06 per cent., amounting to 83,041,287 cards. Crediting the extra revenue on letters from the loss on postal cards with $880,342 of the beneficial results of two-cent postage would leave $1,967,592 to be divided between the benefits growing out of the increased number of letters and the substitution of sealed circulars for open ones. He thinks the actual loss in revenue even less than this. In conclusion, Mr. Hazen says: "I will only add that the results of two-cent postage have more than realized the most sanguine expectations of its warmest advocates." He thinks that when the law making the single rate weight limit one ounce instead of a half ounce goes into effect it will add to the revenues by inducing persons sending light packages to send them in letter seal instead of parcel rates.

BAD FOR THE FARMERS.

Terrible hail storm passed over Virginia the other afternoon and extended into North Carolina. All the growing cotton, corn and vegetables were destroyed, and the farmers will be compelled to plant again. The hail fell to the depth of twelve inches and a whirlwind prevailed along the center of the storm, blowing down barns, fences and sheds. In some places in Surrey county, Virginia, the hail fell to the depth of eighteen inches and in some spots was drifted to the depth of four feet.

CARELESS WORKMEN TO BLAME.

Careless workmen making repairs on the house 171 Eldridge street, New York, allowed a large cornice to fall into the street, and several children playing there were struck by the falling mass. Joseph Koponowitz, 6 years old, and Theodore Neumiller, aged 7, received fatal injuries. Anna Salsky was so badly hurt that she will probably die. The police arrested six of the workmen.

A BATTLE WITH INDIANS.

A dispatch from Battleford on the 6th inst. says: To-day a flying column under command of Col. Otter, numbering 300, comprising mounted police under Herschman, men from the Queen's Own Rifles, B battery, Ottawa foot guards, and C company, besides mounted volunteers from Battleford, had an engagement with Poundmaker and his reserve. It lasted from 5 in the morning till noon and was most hotly contested throughout. The losses on Otter's side were eight killed and twelve wounded. The Indian loss is estimated at fifty.

Poor Fellows.

Prostrated, debilitated, enfeebled, they feel as if they were hardly worth picking up. They would hardly give the toss of a bright penny for a chance of a choice between life and death. But even such forlorn people can be renewed by the use of Brown's Iron Bitters. It vitalizes the blood, tones the nerves, and renovates the system. Mr. Isaac C. Weed, Burr's Mills, O., says: "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for general weakness, and it helped me greatly."

Don't Skip This.

So many schemes are put before the public for the increase of newspaper circulation, which seem to be plausible and yet are fraudulent, that when a legitimate, honest effort is made to build up the circulation of a legitimate, honest paper, by legitimate, honest means, people who have been so many times duped, are very slow to respond to the genuine scheme. We are led to this train of thought by a perusal of the advertisement of THE AMERICAN RURAL HOME of Rochester N. Y., published in this issue of our paper, to which we call the attention of our readers. We are acquainted with both paper and publishers and take pleasure in recommending it as one of the very best farm and family journals in this country. Every person who sends one dollar for a year's subscription to the paper receives a handsome present which is donated by the advertising patrons of the paper. These premiums consist of Cattle, Land Reapers and Mowers, Plows, Books, Pictures, Organs and thousands of other valuable articles. The Rural Home Co. is endorsed by Hon. Cornelius R. Parsons, Mayor of Rochester, to whom you can write if you have any doubts as to its reliability. It will pay you to send for sample copy if nothing more than to get a look at this great twelve-page, sixty column illustrated paper. Address Rural Home Co. Limited, Rochester, N. Y.

A PHILOSOPHER.

Let all the mortals ever born Recount their every grief;
Their tales I treat with utter scorn,
And hear with unbelief.
There never dwelt a soul on earth Whom I was so unkind
To scold and scold to birth—
No matter. Never mind!

I sadly loved in early life,
Before I left my teens;
The lady with whom I was wed, Instead of Mr. Green's.
Twas sad enough the facts to tell,
But worse remains behind:
I can't get on with Mrs. L—
No matter. Never mind!

Retracked me once I had a turn For commerce or for trade;
I found a little safe concern Where money might be made.
But rack and ruin came to pass,
And I could only find
One shilling in the round, alas!
No matter. Never mind!

I thought the City life so hard
That, in a little time, Save I I saw, I'll be a bard,
And build the lofty rhyme.
Yet verse is not a merry task,
But one incessant grind;
Will genius ever pay? I ask—
No matter. Never mind!

I only steer a cranky craft Across a stormy sea;
To slowly starve aboard a raft Alone is left for me.
The waves are high, obscured the sky,
And bleakly blows the wind.
For help I loudly, vainly cry—No matter. Never mind!

—Henry S. Leigh.

THE GIFT.

An April day, the sky all dappled With silver-shining clouds, while bright sheets of rain seemed to braid themselves with the sunbeams, and every rust of southward-coming air seemed full of vague scents of violets and daffodils, and grass growing green on sunny hillsides.

Hiram Lacy sat by his city window, where the sweet air lifted the silver hair upon his forehead, and thought longingly of the departed days when he dwelt under his own vine and fig tree, and watched the dancing sunbeams with greedy eyes.

"Marian," he said, in his feeble, piping voice, "Marian, don't you think we might have a little walk in the park this afternoon? The air is so mild, and I'm so tired of these four walls."

Marian Lacy looked up from her desk at the farther end of the room.
She was a slender, pretty girl of seven or eight-and-twenty, with large, soft hazel eyes, brown hair, and pale cheeks.

"By and by, dear father," she said, gently, "when the sun gets a little lower."

And once more she eagerly resumed her writing, the pen flying swiftly over the smooth surface of the paper, as if it were winged with magic speed.

Hiram Lacy turned to his wife, who sat patiently sewing opposite him.

"Wife," said he, "the apple trees will be in blossom at the old farm soon.
Don't you remember how the white leaves used to shower down on the ground like a snowstorm? The old farm—if I could but have ended my days there?" he added, with a weary sigh. "Here I'm a poor, weakly old man, and nobody nurses me or cares for me in the city whirl—but there every tree is a friend of mine, and the very wind among the branches sounds familiar in my ears!"

"It's no use thinking about old times, dear," said his wife, sighing almost inaudibly.

"If I could only have been contented to let those oil speculations alone," resumed Hiram, eagerly, "or if I could have bought them a month—only a month—earlier! But I was mad —and we are ruined! The landlord was here this morning, persecuting us because the rent of the room was not paid. I never thought I should come to this, Huldah!"

His wife made no reply. Marian still wrote on, her brow slightly contracted.

"Still, we should have done well enough," went on poor old Lacy, "if Marian could have made up her mind to marry young Deforest! He is well off; we old folks could have had a home with him, with our feet on the green grass, and God's pure, clear sky above our heads. It's not too late yet, lass. Deforest was here yesterday when you and mother were gone down to those musty old newspaper offices. You'd better think of it, my girl!"

"Marian looked up, tossing back the drooping hair from her brow.

"Father," she said, pitifully, "I have told you that I do not love him!"
"Love! love!" echoed the old man sneeringly. "Love won't boil the kettle nor buy a gown! I thought you had outgrown the age of school girl sentiment!"

"I hope I shall never outgrow it, father!" answered Marian in a low voice.

"And while you are waiting for love to grow up in your heart your poor old father and mother may pine their lives out in this city-smelling den!"

"I have not, father," said Marian.

"My writing—"

"I don't want to hear another word of your writing," interrupted Mr.
Lacy. "If it hadn't been for your ridiculous ink that you were a genius, you'd have settled down quietly to be John Deforest's wife five years ago!"

Marian pursued the argument no further, but her mother's gentle, encouraging glance, as she looked up, naturally testified that she had at least one tender sympathizer.

And the blue-eyed April violets blossomed and died; and hung her chap-lets of bloom on tree and glen and forest, and still Marian toiled on, early and late.

Her father's words often occurred to her at times of fatigue or despondency. "A genius." Was she, indeed, a genius? If she were—O bright, impossible if—every sacred fire of her nature was burning on the altar of this book, into which she was inter-weaving the tenderest fancies of her soul or brain; oh, if!

And Marian grew paler and more absorbed day by day; and her mother watched her with wistful, silent care, and old Hiram fretted on with the incoherent plaints of old age, and the summer ripened into golden fulness, under beamy moonlight nights and the glow of tropic days.

"It's getting warm weather," groaned old Hiram, "and this Croton water isn't fit for a dog to drink, let alone a Christian. Oh, if I could only have a drink of water out of the old well under the garden wall! It used to be as cold as ice when the sun was at its hottest. I dreamed last night of standing beside that well with the old bucket brimming over and the wild roses hanging over the curl, all in a tangle, as they used to grow!"

"Father," said Marian, who had just come in, with cheeks unwontedly rosy and a light sparkling deep down in her eyes, "shall we all go, you and I and mother, for a nice, long drive in the country this afternoon?"

The old man's face lighted up for an instant, but it fell again.

"We can't afford it," he said, testily.
"We are poor. Carriage drives costs money."

"But I have earned a—little money from my book," began Marian eagerly.

"Book, indeed!" laughed old Hiram.
"A pretty book you'd write. But we'll go, if you can afford to squander the money of your old father. You've been very close with your money of late."

Marian's cheeks glowed at the underserved taunt, but she did not reply.

"Father's not well," she said to herself, "and he's old and irritable, and this hot weather frets him. He will be better when—"

And there Marian's reverie stopped.

The air was full of the sweet breath of new mown hay, when the open carriage rolled along the green country roads, under the rustling boughs of elm and beech and waving willow.
Hiram Lacy's eyes brightened, the blood seemed to leap with new impulses through his veins.

"Ah!" he cried, drawing a deep breath, "now I am beginning to live again! Why, this is the old road, with the gnarled oak hanging over the gate.
There are the fields that used to be ours. Daughter, why did you take this road?"

"I thought you would like to see the old place again, father."

"It isn't ours any longer!" he groaned. "See those clover fields—I always said it was the best ground in the country—and the tall corn, growing so loyally! and the house looks just as it used to look. I believe it is the very same robin singing in the poplar tree by the poarch."

His eyes were brimming over with tears; his voice faltered strangely as he spoke.

"Who lives here now?" he asked.

"You said Burke had sold it."

"Nobody just at present. Shall we go in and walk through the rooms?"

Hiram Lacy assented with a slight inclination of the head.

It was all the same—the old furniture undisturbed in its nooks and corners, the worn, familiar carpets, the same tinting of wall and wood-work.
Hiram Lacy could almost believe that it was but yesterday he quitted the threshold. He sat down in the old cushioned arm chair, which had once been his special chair.

"I shall be more contented, for having seen the dear old farmhouse once more!" he said in a broken voice.

"Father!" cried Marian, unable to restrain herself any longer, "you shall never leave it. It is home to you!"

"Home!" repeated old Hiram in a puzzled voice. "It was home once, I know, but—"

"And it is home now!" cried Marian, throwing her arms around his neck and bursting into tears. "Tell him, mother! I cannot."

"Marian is the one who has bought it, father," said the old lady, with fond, maternal pride. "Her book has been published, and it was a great success, and she took the money to buy the old farm back for her father and mother to end their days in."

Old Hiram was silent for an instant; then he laid his hand on Marian's bowed head.

"My daughter," said he, "you have kept the fourth commandment, and God will bless you for it in His own good time. I never dreamed of this —when I was so cross and unreasonable with you. But who is this?" as a shadow crossed the threshold, and a tall, noble-looking man entered from another door. "One of our new neighbors, perhaps; there have been many changes since I lived here."

"No, father," said Marian, growing as rosy as the elms pinks in the garden outside; "it is Mr. Arden, one of the publishers of the new book."

"I'm glad to see you, sir," said Hiram Lacy, with old-fashioned courtesies, "and I'm glad you like my girl's writings."

"I do, sir, very much," said Mr.
Arden. Frankly, "and, moreover, I like the girl—so well that I am here this afternoon to ask you to give her to me for my wife."

"What does Marian say?" asked the old man, after an instant of bewilderment.

"She says yes."

"Oh!" said Mr. Lacy dryly; "so this is the reason she wouldn't marry John Deforest?"

"It is one of the reasons, I believe," said Mr. Arden, laughing.

And thus, in striving to work out the happiness of her parents, Marian Lacy found the great gift and sunshine of her own life.

The Egyptian Fellah.

The fellah is not the owner of the soil, but merely a laborer under a master; just as the same class of men were three or four thousand years ago, under the mighty Pharaohs, so are they now. The fellah formed part of the estate, and if it were sold, then the serf, not as slave, went with it, for he was under direct protection of the law; his master had no power over his life, as formerly in American slavery. Each serf had the liberty to appeal to Pharaoh himself, whether the petitioners were workmen or tillers. Both were serfs, the tiller of the ground only bearing the name of "fellah." A papyrus, now in the British museum, thus describes the bitter life of the fellah: "Behold the humble farm laborer. His whole life is consumed amid the beasts of the field. His strength is spent in tending the vines and the hogs. He seeks his food in the fields.
If he is well, he is well among the cattle; if he is sick, he lies on the bare ground in the midst of the herds."

Before the days of Rameses the Great, supposed to be the Pharaoh of Joseph's time, regarding the husbandman the following is the treatment narrated by the scribe Amenemhat to the scribe Pentaur, the original being also in the British museum: "Consider the condition of the husbandman. Ere it is yet harvest time, the worms, the hogs, the locusts, the birds devour the growing corn; and if he is not vigilant the little that remains is stolen by thieves. The tax collector waits on the quay to claim the tithe of his harvest when reaped. The doorkeepers are there with their staves and the negroes with their palm-canes. They cry, 'Give up thy corn!' If it is lacking, he is flung down, bound, and dragged head downward through the canal. His wife is manacled before his eyes. His children are strangled; his neighbors, occupied in their own harvest, abandon him to his fate. This tyrannical mode of government is said to have originated with Cheops, the founder of the first and largest pyramid. Three thousand years have passed away, and still the same usage of the husbandman, or small farmer, remains. The tax-collector still awaits the corn-barge at the landing place, the bastinado is still wielded by his negro assistants, and the wretched defaulter is beaten, cast into prison, and tortured to this day. Three thousand years ago the weaver's fate was as bad as that of the husbandman.
The weaver, imprisoned inside the house, is more helpless than a woman.
He sits crouching, his knees higher than his heart. He tastes not the free air. If, for a single day, he fails to weave the prescribed length of stuff he is bound with cords, like a bundle of the marsh lotos. It is only by bribing the doorkeeper with gifts of bread that he gets to look out upon the light of day. There was one thing, however, that the oppressed workers of Egypt had in common with their task-masters of every rank. The dead bodies were mummified, although in a cheap and careless manner, 'sometimes inclosed in coarse basket-work, sometimes wrapped in palm fronds laced with palm-fiber, the only relics buried with them being a knotted cord, a pair of straw slippers, and a tool-punch; and with the fellah a pick and hoe; and these mummies of the humblest class are found lying side by side, layer above layer, in enormous common graves. The singular tuft of hair on the head of the Egyptian men and children of the present day professing to be followers of Mohammed is described by Josephus to have been the practice of the Phœnicians, who used to shave the head, leaving only a lock on the crown, but for what purpose is unknown.—Ladies' Treasury.

The Cost of Disinfecting Rags.

To disinfect rags costs about $5 per ton. It is done in an air-tight box, into which each bale of rags is drawn by means of five screws, which at the same time make five perforations from end to end of the bale. Super-heated steam is injected through the screws, which are hollow and perforated with holes which permit jets of steam to penetrate through the rags in every direction. An escape in the upper part of the box is provided with a bath intended to intercept the passage of any disease germ into the air.
Most germs of life are killed at a heat of 212 or 215 degrees, but the steam employed in this process is raised to 330. An exposure of four or five minutes here heats the bale so that it takes two hours for it to fall below the germicidic point of 212.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

He Took the Biscuit.

A fashionable young man of this beautiful village, who is of a very economical turn, has the habit when he sends a note to his girl of adding this postscript: "Give negro boy a biscuit for carrying this note." Recently the young lady promptly sent the young man quite a number of biscuits, informing him that he could henceforth prepay postage, and when the rations were exhausted to draw on her for more. A cold wave now blows between that young lady and the collect-on-delivery young man.—

THE EXODUS.

Physical Conditions Brought Into Harmony with the Bible Narrative.

The quarterly statement of the Palestine exploration fund for April of this year, says The London Post, contains an interesting article by Prof.
Hull, of Dublin, on "The Relations of Land and Sea in the Isthmus of Suez at the Time of the Exodus," wherein he deals with the question of the actual position of the passage of the Red Sea by the children of Israel. Prof. Hull justly remarks that, according to the present position of land and water, there is a direct landway across into the wilderness of Etham, and he asks whether, if at the time of the exodus the physical conditions of the district north of Suez had been the same as they are now (of course he disregards for the moment the existence of the Suez canal), there would have been cause for the cry of despair from the Israelites, or the necessity for the stupendous miracle of deliverance such as the bible narrative relates.
He then proceeds to show that the beds of sand and gravel containing shells, coral, and other marine forms now existing in the waters of the Gulf of Suez (which beds are found on either side of the gulf up to at least two hundred feet above the present sea level), form complete evidence of the elevation of the whole land area of that particular region, but that this elevation must have taken place at a time long antecedent to that of the exodus. He points out what is true, that if at the time of the exodus an elevation of not more than from twenty-five to thirty feet had remained to be effected, the land now forming the southern part of the Isthmus of Suez would have been submerged by the waters of the Red sea, and he regards it as in the highest degree probable that at the time "when the exodus took place the waters of the Red sea extended northward, up the valley at least as far as the Bitter lakes, producing a channel twenty to thirty feet in depth, and perhaps a mile in breadth; a terrible barrier to the Israelites, and sufficient to induce a cry of despair from the whole multitude." Having quite recently traversed the whole isthmus, making a special examination of the portion between Ismailiya and Suez, the following incident, which then occurred, appears to be worthy of notice, inasmuch as it is eminently corroborative of Dr.
Hull's view: While engaged with other members of the international commission upon the investigation of various matters connected with the question of improving the Suez canal, some of our party landed from time to time, and on one occasion at a point between what is now the north end of the Gulf of Suez and the south of Bitter lakes, not, in fact, very far to the north of the bridge of boats by which the pilgrims from Mecca cross the canal. Desiring to test for myself the character and hardness of the unbroken ground at this point, and a height of about twelve or fifteen feet above sea the first stroke of a pick turned up from three inches below the surface a thick cake of a dull white substance, which at the moment appeared to be gypsum, and, while stooping to take it up, I remarked accordingly, but simultaneously a colleague who was standing at my side exclaimed, "Salt!" On asking him how it came to pass that he so instantly arrived at this conclusion, he replied that the whole district thereabout was full of such salt.
When it is explained that this gentleman had the engineering charge of a considerable length of the Suez canal at the time work was in course of construction, and consequently had thus acquired an intimate knowledge of this district, and also that on testing the ground at other points thereabouts I found salt existing below a thin covering of sand at heights considerably above the sea level, there is ample warrant for saying, as I have done, that the extensive existence of salt in this form, and at such a height, can not be regarded otherwise than as a proof that the waters of the Red sea did at one time extend as far north as the Bitter lakes. A specimen nearly an inch thick is before me as I write.

Further evidence that at some period antecedent to the formation of the Suez canal the sea extended as far up the Isthmus as the Bitter lakes is found in a remarkable sample of salt which was cut from the bottom of the Bitter lakes by the engineers of the Suez Canal company before the sea was let in to effect the completion of the water communication between the northern and southern sections of the work.
This block of salt to which my attention was directed by M. de Lesseps, is preserved in the court-yard attached to the offices of the canal company at Ismailiya. It is fully seven feet in height, and, according to M. Vosnil Bey, who at the time it was taken out acted as the company's chief engineer in Egypt, salt certainly existed to a still greater depth, but to what precise extent is not known. I may here mention that, while passing over the 1,500 miles from the Strait of Bab el Mandeb to Suez, the water of the Red sea is so far changed by evaporation that samples taken from the surface at Suez have been proved to be nearly two parts in 1,000 saltier than those at Bab el Mandeb. It should be borne in mind, moreover, that an exceptionally great amount of evaporation would necessarily take place within such a comparatively shallow island basin as that of the Bitter lakes, having its surface swept by the hot, dry air of the Arabian desert, and shut in from the Mediterranean by the high banks of Sorapeum immediately to the north, or, at any rate, to the still higher ridge of country at El Guish. These conditions would obviously contribute to the formation of such a remarkable deposit of salt as is found in the specimen above described.

A peculiar feature in this specimen is the presence of a thin layer of sand, most probably caused during the prevalence of violent southerly winds, which, from time to time, raise the sea level of Suez nearly three feet above that of an ordinary spring tide in calm weather. The strong current to the northward on such occasions would be sure to carry a considerable quantity of sand into the Bitter lakes, sufficient, it may be assumed, to account for the layers of sand in question. The facts to which I have here called attention appear to me unquestionably to confirm the view entertained by Prof.
Hull. Feeling with him that, according to this view, the physical conditions at the time of the exodus will be brought into harmony with the bible narrative, and that the difficulty which has hitherto surrounded the subject of the passage of the Israelites through the Red sea will thus have been to a great extent removed. I have ventured to send you the result of my own recent personal observations, in the hope that the interest of the subject may secure a place for this letter in your columns.

Frost Preserves Them.

"If your garret or loft is only cold enough, there isn't any reason in the world why you shouldn't treat your friends with plump, full-flavored Rhode Island greenings, Baldwins, or any other choice apples, just as well next June as you did last Christmas," said a Washington street commission merchant. "I'll have last year's Bald-wins, and I don't know but last year's greenings, as sound as a knot, in my house next summer, in the same dish with this year's harvest apples; yet nine out of ten people would have thought these same apples were ruined two months ago, and would have treated them accordingly. Why? Simply because they were frozen."

"Doesn't the freezing of apples spoil them, then?" asked the reporter.

"The general opinion is," replied the merchant, "that after an apple freezes its value is gone; but the fact is that just the contrary is the truth.
Let a barrel of apples freeze in the fall, and keep them froze, or, rather, do not disturb them, and in the spring they will be in the very condition they were when taken from the tree. Bald-wins, and, in fact, all favorite eating apples, do not have their full flavor nor mellowness when packed in the fall. They ripen in the barrel, and are at their best in January. After that they begin to decay, and when March comes they are few and far between, those that are left being the result of especial good care and attention."

"If they are frozen in the fall, however, the ripening process is checked.
The vitality of the apple is simply suspended, and it only needs proper treatment to restore it to its natural action. The trouble has always been that when a barrel of apples was found to be frozen it was rolled off at once to a warm place and subjected to a rapid thawing. Some people take the apples out of the barrels and plunge them into cold water to draw the frost out. The result is a flabby, flavorless fruit, really not worth the room it occupies, and subject to speedy decay; all because of popular ignorance. A frozen apple is one of the most sensitive things in the world.
Touch your finger upon it, and when the frost is thawed from the apple the spot touched will be a mark of decay, which spreads rapidly over the fruit."

"Therefore, if you ever find that your barrel of Baldwins is frozen, heat it gently. If the apples are thoroughly frozen the barrel will not be full by nearly a peck, so much has the fruit contracted with the frost. It would be impossible now to move the barrel without ruining every apple in it. So, if it stands where it will not be subject to sudden warmth, and thus thawed out rapidly, let it stand. Cover the apples up where they will be kept dark.
Then go away and let them alone until spring comes and draws the frost out of everything. Then uncover your apples. It may startle you, but you will find the barrel full to the head with the plump fellows that were rolled into your house in the fall, and which were a sorry-looking lot of wrinkled, shrunk-up fruit the last time you saw them."

"If they were assorted apples when packed you need not pick them over, for they will be just as sound and hard as they were in November. By the middle of May or 1st of June they will be in the fragrant, mellow condition that they would have been in five months before if the frost hadn't stepped in and held it back. I've had apples frozen and thawed three times in one winter, owing to sudden changes in the weather, but they were all right when the final drawing of the frost took place. A barrel of apples might be kept frozen a thousand years, I believe, and the fruit would be just as sound and fine flavored when thawed out and ripened as it was the day it was packed."—New York Sun.

THURSDAY EVENINGS AT $1.40.

THURSDAY, MAY 14, 1885.

WHISPERINGS.

Two scissor grinders were in town at the same time last Thursday.

Only about 15,000 bushels of wheat were reported marketed in this county last month.

All kinds of goods are very low now, but bread and biscuit go higher and higher if you use DeLand's saleratus or soda, and it is just as cheap as any brand.

The great tragedian, Thomas Keene, in Hamlet, will appear at the Ann Arbor opera house next Thursday evening, May 21. Will any of our citizens go and see him?

John Kempf, of Pittsfield, while examining an old cartridge one day last week, lost the thumb and fore finger of his left hand by the premature explosion of the cartridge.

The Rev. W. H. Ryder completed his eighth year as pastor of the Congregational church at Ann Arbor last Sunday week. Twenty-one members joined the church on that day, mostly Sabbath school scholars.

Striking coincidence. The day Rev. C. A. Lamb was buried, Rev. Seth Hardy died, and both lived on the same street. The day that J. S. Jenness was buried, H. H. Brinkerhoff died, and both lived on the same street.—Commercial.

R. S. Armstrong would specially recommend to the ladies Acker's dyspepsia tablets. As a laxative they have no equal. They are guaranteed to cure chronic constipation, dyspepsia, and all disease arising from a deranged stomach. With a free use of the tablets, sick headache is impossible.

Rev. J. S. Smart, of Albion, preached in the Dexter M. E. Church last Sunday. Mr. Smart has been appointed to raise $20,000 to $30,000 to place Albion College on a firm and prosperous footing, and up to the present time he has secured $150,000. He says he intends to raise $1,000,000.—Dexter Leader. Smart man, indeed!

Our attention has been called to the frequency of the blockading of streets by trains of late. On Tuesday last, we were obliged to wait ten minutes before crossing (and the train had been there some ten minutes before), and at noon the same day a lady was made to wait twenty minutes. A little attention on the part of the village president would effectually remedy this evil.

William Whiteside, of Lancaster, Pa., writes: "For over six years I was afflicted with diarrhoea. Misher's herb bitters cured me and improved my general health. There is no remedy in the world that can show a similar record of cases, cover so large a range of disease as this household specific. Kidney and liver complaints, indigestion, foul stomach, dizziness, nausea, sick headache, etc., all yield to the magic of its treatment."

R. S. Armstrong wishes to make an assertion which he can back with a positive guarantee. It is all about Acker's blood elixir. He claims for its superior merits over all other remedies of its kind, and guarantees for it a positive and sure cure for rheumatism, syphilis and all blood disorders. It frees the skin from spots and leaves the complexion clear. Ask him about it.

The danger of using the telephone during a severe thunder storm was strikingly illustrated at the telephone exchange, Monday night. Robt. Campbell was in the exchange after the fire, and was using the instrument, when a bolt of electricity flashed over the wires giving him a severe shock. Had it not happened that a gas pipe served as a conductor before the full shock reached Mr. Campbell, the result might have been serious indeed. Telephone subscribers should not attempt to use their instruments during a thunder storm.—Ypsilantian.

To introduce our handsome new style pictures throughout the U. S. at once, we will send Four Dozen finely finished photographs of yourself, postpaid, upon receipt of $1.00 and sample photo. to copy from (cabinet size preferred), provided you will promise in your letter to show pictures and act as agent in case they are satisfactory. An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years, and my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used three bottles of Electric Bitters, and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well." Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c. per box by R. S. Armstrong.

R. S. Armstrong wishes to state that he has at last found an article he can sell on his merits. It is with pleasure he guarantees to the public Acker's English Remedy as a sure and never failing cure for asthma, cough, whooping cough, croup and all lung troubles. It is the standard remedy for consumption. He has never found its equal.

TRY IT YOURSELF.

The proof of the pudding is not in chewing the string, but in having an opportunity to try the article yourself. Glazier, DePuy & Co., the Druggists, have a free trial bottle of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup for every one who is afflicted with Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, or any Lung Affection.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulence, uncleanliness of stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration producing a very disagreeable itching after getting warm, is a very common attendant. Bleeding, and itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and affecting a permanent cure. ACHES! PAINS!

"I ache all over!" What a common expression; and how much it means to many a poor sufferer! These aches have a cause, and more frequently than is generally suspected, the cause is the Liver or Kidneys. No disease is more painful or serious than these, and no remedy is so prompt and effective as

MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS.

No remedy has yet been discovered that is so effective in all KIDNEY AND LIVER COMPLAINTS, MALARIA, DYSPEPSIA, etc., and yet it is simple and harmless. Science and medical skill have combined with wonderful success those herbs which nature has provided for the cure of disease. It strengthens and invigorates the whole system.

Hon. Theodore Stevens, the distinguished Congressman, once wrote to a fellow member who was suffering from indigestion and kidney disease: "Try Mishler's Herb Bitters. I believe it will cure you. I have used it for both indigestion and affection of the kidneys, and it is the most wonderful combination of medicinal herbs I ever saw."

John Wessles is very sick and his recovery is doubtful.

Married at the U. B. Parsonage by Rev. Weller, Mr. G. F. Snyder, of Lyndon, and Miss Edith Parks of this place. Happy may they ever be.

The funeral of Mrs. Addie Parks, who died at Detroit last Friday, while temporarily residing in that place, was held at the U. B. church in this place last Sunday, and the occasion will long be remembered as the saddest funeral ever held in this church. The house was full and extra seats were procured. There were scarcely a dozen persons that viewed the corpse but were moved to tears as they saw the young woman in the casket with her 11-months old child dead by her side. Mrs. Parks was about 25 years of age and was the eldest daughter of Chas. F. West.

A Walking Skeleton.

Mr. E. Springer, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., writes: "I was afflicted with lung fever and abscess on the lungs, and reduced to a walking skeleton. CURRENT TOPICS.

HERE is the entertaining prophecy of a Pittsburgh man: "In 50 years, or perhaps in half that time, coal will not be carried from the mines to its place of destination in bulk, but only its actual heat energy will be transported, and that by wire, a process which, he says, can be accomplished by converting the coal into heat, the heat into motion and the motion into electricity; a storage battery in Cincinnati would take it up as fast as generated at the mines, and from this battery it could be taken and converted back into motion and heat, or changed into light."

THE president of the Manchester medical society, England, said recently that the number of deaths from cancer had increased from 4,807 in 1849 to 14,057 in 1882, the last return available. Mr. Whitehead did not compare deaths from cancer with population, but with the total number of deaths, and he found that whereas in 1849 out of the total mortality one death in 90 was due to cancer, in 1882 the proportion was one in 36. These figures do not represent the extent of the increase fully, because formerly fibroids, polypi, etc., were included under the term cancer. In 1882 twice as many females died from cancer as males, and the proportionate increase has been greater among women.

PEOPLE who enjoy shopping and getting bargains should go to Berlin and join in the scramble for "something to boot," which dealers in that city gladly give to attract trade. Thus, it is said: Confection houses give Chinese shawls, hats and satchels; grocers bribe cooks with gifts of soap; butchers give extra slices of ham, and dry goods dealers give dress patterns, valuable according as the value of the purchase is much or little. The practice is most general among booksellers, who give toys, dolls, games, pencils, and the like, and recently in one of the Berlin schools the police had actually to be called in, the pupils having got into a violent quarrel over some fire-crackers obtained by one of them as "boot" in a book-store purchase."

MR. W. D. HOWELLS is engaged upon a new serial story for The Century Magazine, to follow "The Rise of Silas Lapham," which will be finished in the August number. The publication of the new story will be begun possibly during the autumn, and will be completed in six numbers of the magazine. It is said to deal with the fortunes of a country boy in Boston, and with the perplexities, on his account, of the minister who has tried to help him with advice; and will therefore illustrate phases of one of the peculiar questions of American life. The situations will be fresh, and the characters a larger group than Mr. Howells usually brings upon the scene of a novel. In the minister, the readers of The Century will recognize one of the subordinate characters of "The Rise of Silas Lapham."

A fresh impetus to bible study will, no doubt, be given by the appearance of the new revised version of the old testament, which was to have been given to the public on the 1st inst., but is now promised for the 19th. As stated before, this has been 15 years in preparing, and all the profoundest learning of the age has been engaged upon it. The genuineness of the original manuscripts has been verified, their variations compared and weighed, and all the rules of interpretation developed by the highest scholarship applied. The Revised Version is perhaps the most perfect transcription of the sacred writings into the English vernacular that will ever be undertaken or accomplished. It will be the standard for all ages. If it differs but little from the old King James version the fact only shows the high merit of that translation. If it fails to supersede it in popular use it will only be because it has proved the substantial correctness of the old translation. In any event it will have accomplished its end, and a glorious and noble work it has been.

Some of the Singular Customs of the Aboriginal Residents of America.

When the Indians were great nations, instead broken, wandering tribes, their customs were more elaborate. Lawson, who wrote a history of the Carolinas in the first years of the last century, was struck with the care the Indians showed in keeping the corpses from contact with the soil. Their feeling was just the opposite of that expressed by "earth to earth." Old travelers give quaint wood-cuts of the quigozon or mausoleum, in which dead people of note were laid. It was lined as well as floored with mats, and had its sides secured from falling in by well-spliced poles, which supported an arched roof. If all this seems too much trouble for "savages" to take, we must remember that they were not savages—had many arts which they have lost through contact with the whites, and, from the unsparing way in which nowadays they give their best to their dead friends, we may argue that the Bry and Lafitau, and other explorers, simply depicted what they saw, and that the houses of the dead were, among some tribes, really far more sumptuous than those of the living. Here is an instance of this present-day unsparingness in a poor broken tribe in California. These Californians burn their dead, as do many Indians of the far west; and the scene at the chief's burning reminds one of the burials of the old Greek heroes. "In his mouth were placed two gold twenties, and smaller coins on his breast and in his hands and ears. All his finery—feather mantles, plumes, clothes, shell-money, bows, arrows—was heaped upon him; and as soon as the dirge and funeral dance were set going the Indian spectators began to lose their heads. One stripped off a brand-new broadcloth coat and flung it on the pyre, howling piteously. Another was just throwing on a pile of blankets, when a white man offered him $10 for them, jingling the bright coins before his eyes." The redman hurled him aside, and threw his offering with the rest. Women kept throwing on all they had in the world—their gayest dresses, their shell necklaces. Indeed, so furious got the excitement that some of them would themselves have leaped in had they not been prevented. The idea was that the souls of the things thus burned went off charioted in the smoke-wreaths along with the soul of the dead man. At this funeral the white men who were looking on calculated that at least $500 worth of goods were destroyed, and what surprised them most was that the Indians, at other times such close bargainers, wholly forgot their usual greed. "Why, he'd have cleared $8 if he'd sold me his blankets," said the man who had made the offer. "I only did it to try him, and precious glad I was when I saw he was too wild to snap at such a price."

Where they do not burn they are equally lavish. Dr. Sternberg, of the United States army, found in Kansas, among the Cheyennes, a burial-case raised some eight feet from the ground on four notched uprights. Seeing that it was carefully constructed, his "civilized" instinct prompted him at once to send it to the Army Medical museum at Washington, where it was found to consist of a box six feet long, three feet high, and three feet deep, of white willow branches, neatly united, with a floor of buffalo thongs, and straps fastened it to four twelve-foot ironwood poles, which had rested in the notched uprights. Outside were two buffalo robes of the largest size, and inside five more, each bound round with a bright sash, were successively removed. Then came five blankets—two red, two blue, one white; and next a white and gray striped sack, and inside that a United States infantry overcoat, like all the other wrappings nearly new. Then, on a pillow of rags, was the "medicine-bag" of the dead baby—of course it was a baby; all those wrappings left only room for a year-old child. The bag contained a parcel of red paint, some bits of deer-skin, along with straps, buckles, and other odds and ends. The inner wrappings were three splendid robes, each about four feet long, of buffalo calfskin, elaborately decorated with beadwork stripes—blue and white in the first, green and yellow in the next, blue and red in the innermost. The hoods, too, were richly ornamented with beadwork, and all round the robes little spherical brass bells were hung with strings of beads. Next was a gray woolen shawl, then five yards of blue cashmere, followed by six of red, and then again by six of brown calico, and in that last wrapping was the babe, with a beaver fur-cap and long wampum necklaces and strings of rare shells, among them that Hallitis from the California gulf, so valued by the tribes living east of the Rocky mountains. The dress was a red tunic, with beadwork frock, leggings, red and black stockings, deerskin moccasins with beadwork, and over all a red flannel cloak. All the little creature's toys—a china doll, a vase, a pair of mittens, etc.—were placed in the cloak. Think of the amount of self-denial in giving up all those blankets and all that mass of bead and wampum work! The New Yorkers are only acting like those who held the land before them, when they spend such fabulous sums as the newspapers tell us they do on coffin decoration. Other tribes, instead of plaited willow boxes, use regular wooden chests, wonderfully carved, usually with a lid like a gabled roof and always with an opening in the side through which food may be passed in, so that the soul may eat the souls of the good things provided by its friends.

Old travelers wondered at these coffins set up above ground; and the Spaniards—as little scrupulous as Dr. Sternberg about violating burial places—found in some of them a deal of wealth. The burial boxes of a tribe on the Talameco river, Oregon, are said to have furnished handfuls of pearls to a party of soldiers that were exploring the coast.

The Chinese, we remember, also keep their coffins above ground; and, ages ago, they used to be as reckless as the red men in their offerings to the dead. The Scythians—probably also belonging to the yellow race—seems to us to have been the most lavish because of the quantity of gold found in their tombs. But gold was common in the Ural; and to a Scythian king even the treasures found in such a tomb as Koul-Oba, near Kerteh, were not more valuable than all that calico, and those Buffalo robes and blankets, were to poor Cheyenne. All the Year Round.

The Heredity of Alcohol.

It is of course fresh in the minds of the readers of The Health Monthly (and indeed there are reminded each month by the discussion that is going on in these columns) that Dr. George W. Keith, in October, presented some wonderful facts for the purpose of showing that intemperance was not transmissible from parent to child through the laws of inheritance. Those who have been replying to Dr. Keith have managed the subject so well we have been disposed to take a back seat and assume the part of spectator rather than that of a wide-awake disputant. We take the floor now only for a moment to remind both Dr. Keith and those who are discussing the subject with him that he has given the observations of only one physician. There is hardly any end of the list of those who observed the effects of Heredity and the observations are certainly quite in contrast with those given by Dr. Keith as coming under his eye. Dr. Howe, in his report on idioy in Massachusetts, stated that the habits of one or both parents of 300 idiots had been learned and that 145 of these unfortunate children were found to be the offspring of habitual drunkards. He presented the case of one drunkard who was the parent of seven idiots. Dr. Beach, medical superintendent of the Darentish Asylums at a meeting of the British Medical Association reported that an analysis of 430 cases under his own care showed 31.6 per cent. of idiotic children were the offsprings of intemperate parents and he remarked that in his private practice similar proofs were continually confronting him. Dr. Turner, of the New York State Inebriate Asylum, in his second annual report stated that out of 1406 cases of delirium tremens coming under his observation 980 had an inebriate parent or grand-parent, or both. He further expresses the belief that if the history of each patient's ancestors could be ascertained it would be discovered that eight out of ten of them were free users of alcoholic poison. A testimonial of a similar character comes to us from Norman Kerr, M. D., F. L. S., an eminent London physician, from Dr. Mitchell in his testimony before the British House of Commons, from Dr. Launier, of the French Medico-Psychological Society, Erasmus Darwin, M. D., F. R. S., from Dr. Elam, a London authority on physical degeneracy and from M. Roussel, M. Taquet, M. Laureaux and many other well-known authorities, last but not least of whom may be mentioned Dr. Richardson, the well-known writer on the abuse of alcohol. As remarked at the earlier stage of this discussion, Dr. Keith's paper was a welcome contribution, not only because it was calculated to lead to useful inquiry but because his facts were really quite remarkable. Dr. Keith's testimony is just as creditable as any that has been presented on the other side of the question and from our personal knowledge of the man we know that he has not taken the position that he has through any overweening love of the cup that inebriates.—Dr. Foote's Health Monthly.

Can't Keep Up With the Language. "After I have lived 100 years longer," said an old gentleman to a reporter, "I will not be able to understand the language used. In fact our language is being loaded down with affectation. A gentleman asked me the other night how I liked the game of polo. I told him I didn't know what kind of a game it was, and he insisted on my going to the rink to see the game played. I went and saw them playing shinny—plain, old-fashioned shinny, the only difference being that the players were on roller skates. Then you hear people talking of a 'sweet of rooms.' I didn't know what they meant by the word 'sweet,' and on making inquiries I was told that a suite of rooms was referred to. We are clear gone on shams."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

To Set Off the Mantlepiece.

Jim Wilson McCoy, of Dallas, is the fattest man in Northern Texas, weighing upwards of 200 pounds. He is in constant danger of dying suddenly of heart disease. Not long since Payne's stock of crockery was sold at auction, and Mrs. Jim Wilson McCoy attended the sale. When she returned her face was radiant with joy.

"You must join the cremation society," were the first words she said to her husband.

"What for?"

"I've bought such a lovely vase to hold your ashes. You have no idea how it will set off the mantlepiece."—Texas Siftings.

Sponges and Coral.

"Neptune's Cup" is to the world of sponges what Jumbo is to the elephant kingdom. The famous sponge was taken from the Pacific ocean. It stands about 2½ feet from the ground and has a bowl just about the right size for a baby's bath-tub. According to a legend which attaches to it, probably on account of its peculiar shape, Neptune formerly used the cup in drinking the health of the water nymphs. The sponge is among the many interesting and curious things in the American history, and yesterday it helped to illustrate the second of the spring course of lectures by Prof. Albert S. Bickmore to the public school teachers. About 350 school teachers of the gentler sex, all of them pert and a few of them pretty, and a dozen or more dignified principals, listened to the lecture in a little hall which has a capacity for less than three hundred. Erastus Brooks and Messrs. Gustav Schwab and William Wood, of the board of education, were also present.

"It is only the skeleton of a sponge that is commonly used in removing dirt," the lecturer said, "a substance that in the animal sponge is analogous to the finger-nails of a human hand. The sponges are found in various portions of the world, gathered in masses below the surface of the water. The youthful sponge first makes its appearance on the outer border of the adult in the form of cell, which gradually increases in size and complexity until it bursts through the maternal tissues and floats at freedom in the ocean. It is very minute, and for a time has an independent life. It is sowing its wild oats, so to speak, but as it increases in size it attaches itself to its more matured brothers and sisters and develops with them into adult form. Sponges are gathered by means of grappling hooks. They are floated to inclosed portions of the sea, where they are left until the exposure of the sun and the wash of the sea leaves nothing but the skeleton." The various classes and conditions of sponges were illustrated with views and drawings made upon her majesty's ship Challenger during a three years' voyage around the globe, and with photographs from the elaborate collection of sponges on exhibition at the museum.

From sponges the lecturer passed to corals, introducing his subject with a review of sea anemones, such as are found during the summer season left on rocky shores by a receding tide. These, he said, were found to be of tubular character, containing a series of radiating partitions which secrete carbonate of lime in the coral polyps, and form the denser mass known as coral. In speaking of an individual coral Prof. Bickmore said that people were led to a general belief that the animal was very minute. He corrected this impression by producing a piece of coral the size of a brick, which, he said was the body of a single individual. "We have them of all sizes," he added, "from the point of the finest needle to a foot and a half in length by five inches in width."

Some very beautiful specimens of coral were exhibited from a species that forms in domelike masses in deep water at the base of the coral reef, and from the madrepore variety, which have the branching forms of trees and live nearer the surface of the water. A fan-shaped leaf of coral, tinted a delicate pink, which was taken from a reef in the Bermudas, was among the specimens, in striking contrast to a black, ugly sprig of the same substance, which was eighteen inches long and had the appearance of a schoolmaster's rattan.—New York Times.

What They Become.

He shot his head in at the police station and asked, "Any smart men here?"

"Yes, sir," replied Officer Malloy, between Havana whiffs: "I am at your service."

"Oh, you are? Well, I want to ask you this question: Germans in Germany are Germans. When they come to California, what are they?"

"Germans still."

"And Italians?"

"Italians still."

"And French?"

"Still French."

"And Irishmen?"

"Irishmen still."

"I'll bet you a dollar they ain't!"

"Ain't? Well, then, what are they?"

"Policemen!" Officer Malloy whistled softly to himself and took a spin around the block.—Stockton Mail.

A Horrible Penalty.

Before the barbarism of Hindostan had been subdued by English law and custom, the following mode of assassination was not uncommon: The murderer would kill one of a pair of cobras and drag the body of the snake along the ground into the bungalow, over the floor and into the very bed of the victim. After a few moments the dead snake, having accomplished the purpose of leaving a murderous trail to the sleeping couch of the victim, would be thrown away. The dead cobra's living mate would invariably follow the trail to the bed, when it would coil itself at rest, waiting to strike the sleeper.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A curious discovery was made recently when a lightning rod which had been in place fifteen years, embedded in soft clay, was removed. There was found attached to it a solid lump of iron ore weighing ninety six pounds, supposed to have been produced by the conversion of the clay by the action of electricity.

MR. GILL'S DAUGHTER.

Poor Katie! A great sufferer she was, and most patiently did she endure in the hope that at last her sufferings would come to an end. She was just budding into womanhood; a fine-looking girl of nearly nineteen, who had, previous to her attack of illness, enjoyed robust health.

Let her mother tell the story, as she told it to two of our editorial friends who recently spent an evening at the house.

"Katie's illness came on slowly, with great pain in her thigh and hip. For a while she kept on going to school, but the pains became so severe that she had to stay at home, and most of the time lie down on a little lounge here in the sitting-room. We tried the best physicians we could get. The disease baffled them all. One said it was ulceration of the thigh bone, and wanted to have the poor child undergo a terrible operation. It turned out to be sciatic rheumatism. Poor child! how she did suffer! About four o'clock in the afternoon she would begin screaming with pain. She couldn't help it. She would scream and moan till about four in the morning. Then she would fall asleep from weariness, and sleep for some hours. This went on for about eight months. During the nights neither she nor I could sleep.

"Katie was a great reader. One day, in a paper, she saw an advertisement of Athlaphora. She asked me to get it and see if it wouldn't cure her. We had tried a good many different things, but I thought we would try this. And I went and got a bottle. I gave her a dose of it towards evening. It was simply wonderful how it quieted the poor child's pain and put her into a gentle sleep. She slept nicely until ten. Then she was in a great perspiration. She waked, and I gave her another dose, for the first one had done her so much good. Then she fell asleep again and slept till morning. Her pain was gone. She had hardly any returns of it. The Athlaphora did the work for her most completely.

"But the terrible sciatica had drawn Katie's leg up, and made it shorter than it had been, by several inches. She was lame for life, although the rheumatism was all driven out of her. She had to walk on crutches. One day she fell down stairs and was so badly hurt that she had to be taken to the hospital. There she suffered a great deal, and after some weeks she died.

"Father Tschieder, of the Paulist Fathers, saw much of Katie during her illness, and knows all about us. Go and ask him, and he will tell you all about it.

Some time ago we gave a letter about Katie's case, and it was published. We have had numerous inquiries in reference to it, all of which we promptly answer.

"I must tell you," continued Mrs. Gill, "of our neighbor, Mrs. Summers, and her eleven-year old boy. The boy had one of the most terrible attacks of rheumatism I ever knew a boy to have. I had a little Athlaphora left in the bottle from which Katie had taken. I gave it to Mrs. Summers, and she gave it to the child who was screaming with pain. When Mr. Summers came home, he was surprised to find the boy sitting up, free from pain, and cheerfully singing. I wish you would go and see them. They live not far from here, on West 12th street, No. 905."

Mr. Gill added in his own behalf: "I have had a good deal of rheumatism myself, chiefly in my shoulders and arms. But I took Athlaphora and I got rid of the trouble. I did not have to take much either. I found the medicine acted very quickly."

The Rev. Father Tschieder, assistant pastor of the Church of the Holy Family, was found at his pastoral residence, No. 417 West 12th street, Chicago. Father Tschieder took pleasure in saying that he knew Mr. and Mrs. Gill, and that he esteemed them highly; also that he had seen Katie frequently during her illness, and knew all about her wonderful recovery from sciatica, and her subsequent injury and her illness at the hospital.

If you cannot get Athlaphora of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he can't, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us, as directed. Athlaphora Co., 113 Wall Street, New York.

The Uses of Fans.

Miss Lookabout, in a New York letter, tells of a new use to which fans are put: Did you suppose that clothes were always for warmth and fans for coolness? Well, then, you are mistaken. Your theory is sound in the main, but the ball belle now reverses it. She goes to the gay gatherings of dancers in the decolette fashion sanctioned by polite usage. It is as clear as can be that her garb has no reference to warmth. Every draught of air threatens her with pneumonia, and change from the temperature of a room to that of a cooler one menaces neuralgia or rheumatism. In this quandary she has bethought herself of making her fan a paradox. She employs that article of adornment, flirtation and refrigeration for still another purpose. She gets a big one, constructed of feathers on the outside, or else a lace affair, which looks as airy as her own corsage; but the inner surface is covered with swan's down or fur, under which is a thick wadding. Armed with that sort of a fan, like the shield of a Joan of Arc, she defends her breast against the darts of death. If a door is opened to let in cold air on her while she is engaged in a quadrille, she spreads the fan closely, and thereby is instantly as much dressed as though in a high necked gown. If in the circles of the wait she has to pass an open window, the fan is clapped into place. They are a great comfort during the ball and opera season, I assure you.

Trees have some characteristics in common with people: In the spring they begin to leave for the summer, although some will be unable to do so, because their trunks will be seized for board.

A female dentist in Oregon is said to have resorted to a novel device to obtain a husband. She had as patient a handsome man, and one day gave him a dose of ether that confused, but did not make him insensible. Then she sent for a clergyman, and while the subject was under the influence of the drug, the two were declared man and wife. When the man recovered his senses he expressed surprise and some disgust at what had occurred, owing to the fact, not before known to the fair dentist, that he already possessed a wife.

Many of the bitters and quack nostrums of the day are also advertised for consumption on the plan that the only thing the "stuff" won't cure is the avowed, ignoble greed of the proprietor. It has cured many cases where physicians had given up hope.

All Tired Out

The mild weather, following our long and severe winter, has such a depressing effect upon the body that one feels all tired out, and is completely prostrated, the appetite is lost, and there is no ability to do anything. The whole tendency of the system is downward. Hood's Sarsaparilla is just the medicine needed. It purifies the blood, sharpens the appetite, overcomes the tired feeling, and invigorates every function of the body.

"My daughter had been ailing some time with general debility, and Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended to us. After she had taken three bottles she was completely cured and built up. It is with great pleasure that I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. BEN M. MURKIN, Supt. Cincinnati & Louisville Mail Line Co., Cincinnati.

The Special School Meeting.

The school meeting called for Friday evening last was largely attended and considerable interest manifested. The meeting was called to order by Moderator Wood and the object of meeting stated by Director Woods. A statement was laid before the meeting that an addition to the main building of like character as the south wing would cost $2,500, and a new building similar to the wooden structure used for the primary scholars would cost $700. It was further stated that a heating and ventilating apparatus would probably cost from $825 to $1,200. Then, on motion, the district board was instructed to submit to the qualified electors of the district the proposition to borrow $2,500 for the purpose of building an addition to the main building. This motion was discussed pro and con, and finally was carried, and the meeting adjourned to meet in the Town Hall on Monday evening at 6 o'clock to vote upon the question.

At 6:25 Monday evening the polls were opened and ballots "For the Loan. Yes." "For the Loan. No." came pouring in until 8:25 when 131 votes were counted, showing the interest to be great. Upon counting it was found that 82 "yes" and 49 "no" votes had been deposited. As it requires a two-thirds vote to carry a question of this kind, the measure was lost by the slim number of six votes. What will be done next, can not be told at present, but clear it is that a suitable building should be soon voted for.
