Register of deeds, Kerns, will remove from Dexter to Ann Arbor.

There will be three sweet girl graduates from the High School this year.

Have you had some of the creamery buttermilk? 'Tis good and cheap!

Mrs. Anna Kayser, of Ann Arbor, died of heart disease, last week, aged 58 years.

Let who can, contribute flowers with which to decorate the graves of the fallen heroes.

Ann Arbor's post office is said to pay the largest salary of any other in the second district.

Each child between 5 and 20 in this county is worth $1.24 in primary school money.

Prof. Parker has purchased six dozen geraniums with which to ornament the school yard.

The board of review was in session at the supervisor's office, the first three days of this week.

About a dozen members of R. P. Carpenter Post, G. A. R., attended a meeting of the post at Stockbridge, last Friday.

Soon the festive mosquito will go on a collecting tour with his little bill.—Milan Journal 'Tis seldom that an editor speaks of himself in such terms.

Unintentionally we omitted to state in our last issue that the social at Mr. C. H. Kempf's the Tuesday evening previous was a very pleasant affair.

The Milan Journal compliments the village board upon ordering sidewalks built. Wait brother, and see how many walks are built—then compliment.

Chelsea is a great place. Last Saturday they had a "ham" race at their rink. Cooked or raw?—Leader. Well we don't know. Probably some were "raw" when they got through!

In our first issue we called attention to the lack of protection against fire. We would do so in our last, and hope that ere long, Chelsea will have a full-forced fire department.

John E. Durand brought in the first gathering of cream for the creamery. The first churning occurred on Saturday, and the persons in charge experienced first-class "luck."

The next Sunday-school meeting takes place in the basement of the M. E. church next Sunday. It is hoped that every worker will be present, as a very interesting program has been arranged.

A heavy rain storm visited this place last Sunday afternoon. It was preceded by a small cyclone, which badly demoralized a lumber pile for John Hoover, and also twisted a barn, in process of construction.

ADA GORTON, Teacher.

A newspaper is a help to any community where it is published. It gives support and should receive support, especially from business men. Its columns are always open to be used for the interest of its own town and townspeople. It freely aids schools, churches, societies and all matters of local improvement. It is only a matter of self interest for people to patronize their local papers, not only when they seek advertisements but when they have job work to do, as well. We hope our readers will bear this in mind and give the "incoming administration" their heartiest support.

Let us as citizens, and comrades of the noble dead, so remember their resting places that we may instill in the hearts of the rising generation a love for their country that they too may strew our graves with flowers when the last soldier shall have passed away.

All members of R. P. Carpenter Post, No. 41, G. A. R. will assemble in basement of Town Hall at 12:30 o'clock P. M., sharp. J. D. SCHNAITMAN, A. N. MORTON, Adj., Com.

Our Farewell Words.

It is always a sad duty to speak parting words, and to us, at this time, it becomes doubly so. It is probably known to many of our esteemed readers that with this issue, we sever our connection with the HERALD, and also a very pleasant relationship with the hundreds of its readers. Before laying aside the pen and pencil we want to return our sincere thanks to all of those who from the first, tendered us their help and support. Among the business men we find H. S. Holmes, Jabez Bacon, Glazier, DePuy & Co., B. Parker & Co., E. G. Hoag, and many others. A class not to be overlooked is the number of our correspondents who, from week to week furnished us the news from their vicinity. Another class of people constituting the various church societies, deserve our unalloyed thanks for the many words of approval. Especial thanks would we tender to the Y. P. C. A. and to our Sunday-school class who, when the way seemed dreary, uttered words of encouragement.

In looking over our past record we find many words of criticisms and rebuke. None acquainted with us will doubt that the motive was an honest one, and intended for the good of the individual or the community. To those so offended we have no apologies to make, but hope the future "corrector of evil" will find nothing to cause him to use similar expressions.

To say we dislike to leave this community is putting it mild; for many acts of christian love, and neighborly deeds, have strewn our "pathway with roses." We can only hope that in years to come we may be kindly remembered.

Before closing, we thank the press of the county for their brotherly encouragement and help, for we feel under obligations to them.

The writer of this article may hereafter be addressed at Saline, where in connection with his father-in-law, Mr. Daniel Nissly, he will carry on a trade in boots, shoes, groceries, crockery etc. Our successor will be Mr. C. F. Overacker, now editor and proprietor of the Saline Observer, who takes charge of the paper next Monday. We trust our readers will suffer him the same assistance as they have us, and we think we can promise them a sheet they need not feel ashamed of.

Mr. Overacker assumes all income after June 1, and will furnish all who have paid for the HERALD, with the same. We hope all who are in arrears will help him along willingly.

WM. EMMERT, JR.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications for this paper should be accompanied by the name of the author, not necessarily for publication, but as an evidence of good faith on the part of the writer. Write only on one side of the paper. Be particularly careful about giving names and dates. Do not use the letters and figures plain and distinct. Proper names are often difficult to decipher because of the careless manner in which they are written.

MICHIGAN NEWS.

Kidd's Report.

Inspector-General Kidd's report of his tour of inspection will show a laudable interest exhibited by the 36 companies of the four regiments of state troops. The percentage of attendance at the inspection, compared with the number on the rolls, was as follows: Monroe 90 per cent; National Guard, Detroit 97; Scott Guard, Detroit 81; Adrian, 80; Grand Rapids, 80; Big Rapids, 77; Grand Haven, 75; Tecumseh, 75; Coldwater, 75; Manistee, 74; Light Infantry, Detroit, 69; Ionia, 67; Port Huron, 67; Lansing, 70; Ypsilanti, 61; Ann Arbor, 59; Three Rivers, 58; Custer Guard, Grand Rapids, 57; Flint, 53; East Saginaw, 56; Saginaw, 55; Bay City, 50; Mason, 53; Kalamazoo, 43. Gen. Kidd asserts that there are too many men on the rolls of each company, and that those who do no duty and join for the benefits of the annual encampment should be weeded out. Again, some men have been known to furnish substitutes who go to camp, answer to their names and draw pay, the same as though the men were present. About half of the men wear new clothing, and he recommends issuing new trousers to all the troops at once, and the old ones kept for future use. About 200 new uniforms coats, 500 new pair of trousers and 100 new helmets would equip the 23 companies. All the clothing and equipment of the Marquette company were burned, and it must be furnished new arms, uniforms, and accoutrements throughout. Among other recommendations the inspector-general favors the discontinuance of the Sharpe rifle and the issuing of the Springfield, caliber 45.

Twenty-one families had to camp out in a wheat field. The loss will approximate $20,000, with very little insurance.

M. Shelman, a farmer near Bellaire, Antrim county, has just finished digging about 100 bushels of potatoes, and pronounces them much better than any dug last fall at the usual time. Several farmers thereabouts have heretofore tried the plan of leaving their potatoes in the ground all winter, the deep snow so covering it that there has been no danger of freezing. The plan has not only worked well, but three crops have been raised from "volunteers."

potatoes missed in digging and remaining in the ground. These would grow, and in some cases have yielded 800 to 400 bushels to the acre for two years in succession. Just how long this freedom from the trouble of planting will continue cannot be said, but time will tell, as these farmers propose to try it again on the same ground this year.

Dr. Talmage will go to Lake Como, Italy, in June, where he will be joined by his family, already abroad.

PERISHED IN FIRE.

Seventeen Persons Burned to Death.

And Many Injured.

A fire broke out in a five-story building at the corner of Sixth and Walnut streets in Cincinnati, May 21, occupied by Sullivan & Co., printers. There is also a laundry in the building, in which a number of girls are employed. The flames spread so rapidly that it cut off their escape, and six girls jumped from the third-story windows and were instantly killed. It was at first thought that only the six women who jumped were killed, but when the fire was subdued so that the firemen could enter it was found that ten dead bodies lay in heaps on the fifth floor and one on the fourth. There were six who jumped from the window and were killed and one man, after saving the lives of two women by letting down a rope from the roof, was himself killed by the burning of the same rope before he reached the ground. This was Mr. Sullivan, brother of the proprietor of the printing works. The fire originated by the explosion of a gasoline stove on the second floor. The flames entered the elevator chute, which is next to the stairway, and all chance of escape was thus cut off. The killed were mostly employees of dye works which occupied a portion of the building. Looking over the scene after the event it is plain that every life could have been easily saved.

GENERAL NEWS.

HELLO CENTRAL!

The Illinois legislature has passed a bill providing that no telephone company shall charge more than $3 per month when one telephone is used, and $2.50 when more than one is used, and fixing the toll on messages from one town to another at 10 cents.

GRANT'S DEDICATION.

Gen. Grant has written the dedication for his forthcoming work. The dedication is as follows: "To the officers and soldiers engaged in the war of the rebellion and also those engaged in the war in Mexico these volumes are dedicated."

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

Judge French of the circuit court of Muscatine, Iowa, holds that the first injunction proceeding against a saloon has priority to any other injunction proceedings against the same saloon. This is regarded as a great victory for the saloons, as many injunction proceedings have been instituted by friends of saloons against nearly every saloon in Muscatine. The temperance alliance will appeal the case to the supreme court.

WILL DEFEND RIEL.

F. X. Lemieux, M. P. P., and Chas. Fitzpatrick of Quebec, have been retained as counsel to defend Louis Riel in his coming trial in the northwest, they having been sent for by prominent French Canadian gentlemen who volunteered to meet all expenses incurred by counsel in his defense.

EVADING DUTIES.

It has been ascertained that large quantities of goods manufactured in Europe have been reexported from Canada at ports upon their frontier which were involved in Canada at original European values, and which have been passed at United States custom houses without addition being made to raise invoice prices to the market value of goods in Canadian markets. These goods, it is understood, were not destined for the United States at time of shipment from the European company of manufacturing, but were imported into Canada for the purpose of being sold in that country either for consumption or export, as circumstances might require. The Secretary of the Treasury has issued a circular calling attention to the matter.

EX-SECRETARY FRELINGHUYSEN DEAD.

Ex-Secretary of State Frelinghuysen died at his home in Newark, N. J., on the 20th inst. His mind had been a partial blank for six weeks, and he died without recognizing any member of his family. Frederick Theodore Frelinghuysen belonged to the distinguished New Jersey family of Frelinghuysens. He was born in 1817, graduated at Rutgers' college, and was admitted to the bar in 1839. His grandfather was a soldier of the revolutionary war, a delegate to the continental congress, and a United States senator. His uncle Theodore was the Whig candidate for the vice-presidency in 1844, when Henry Clay was the candidate for president. Frederick Theodore was appointed attorney-general of New Jersey in 1861, and was reappointed in 1863. In the latter year he was appointed to fill a vacancy in the United States senate. In 1870 he was regularly elected to the full term. December 12, 1881, he was appointed by President Arthur secretary of state to succeed Mr. Blaine, and held that office until the term of the president expired. He has been sick most of the time since he retired from the state department.

OF INTEREST TO LAND HOLDERS.

The commissioner of the general land office has issued a circular regarding suspension of final action on timber culture and land claims in a number of western states and territories, which is causing a great controversy and engaged opposition from agents and attorneys engaged in securing patents for claimants. It is claimed to be a great hardship to settlers wishing to prove up land and borrow money to continue improvements. Commissioner Sparks says the order was intended for what he called "infected districts." He has dozens of letters from residents of such districts approving the order. They say in many regions not one entry in fifty is bona fide. He says: "Timber entries are almost uniformly fraudulent. Now it is to catch these people that I have said that we would suspend final action on claims. I believe fully one-half of them were fraudulent. In this way I believe I have saved to the public domain fully 1,000,000 acres since April 3. The charge has been made that the order was political and geographical in character—that the South was excepted. What we are really after is to prevent the public domain from going into the hands of ranchmen and speculators. A bona fide settler can borrow just as much money on his certificate of entry or his duplicate papers as he can upon a patent. The South was excepted because the bulk of fraud is not in the south. There is less time as much territory in the north that is not included in the order. Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, nearly all Minnesota, Nebraska and Kansas are not included, and in two of those states, Michigan and Wisconsin, I know there is fraud that we ought to look after. When I am satisfied that there is good faith on the part of a settler there will be no difficulty in his getting a patent. I shall satisfy myself by means of special agents and detectives whom I can thoroughly trust and upon them I shall put such checks and counter detection as will make it absolutely certain that no false swearing or fraud can secure a patent."

Grant's Farewell Message.

A farewell message from Gen. Grant to the soldiers who fought under his command was dictated by him recently to Lieut. J. Holbrook, of G. A. R. Post No. 8, of Boston, who in company with several other gentlemen were calling upon the general. Just before the gentlemen took their departure Gen. Grant arose, and shaking hands with them, sent a message to the boys in blue to be delivered to them at the annual encampment in Portland, Me., in June. He said: "Tell the boys that they probably will never look into my face again, nor hear my voice, but they are engraved on my heart and I love them as my children. What the good Lord has spared me for is more than I can tell, but it is, perhaps, to finish up my book, which I shall leave to the boys in blue, and in which they can not only see me, but follow me in the acts which they helped me."

Oliver Wendell Holmes has written a new poem, eulogistic of Dr. Benjamin Gould, the astronomer.

FOREIGN FLASHES.

Personal Political and General Foreign News.

Briefly Told.

Gen. Sir Charles Wilson, who succeeded Gen. Sir Herbert Stewart in command of the advance corps of the Khartoum relief expedition, has sent in his official report in response to the charge that Gen. Gordon might have been rescued alive if the troops under command of Sir Charles had not been unnecessarily halted at Gubat for three days. The report explains this three days' delay in starting up the Nile to relieve Gen. Gordon by the necessity of securing the small force at Gubat against an attack, then threatened, from Berber on the north and from Omairman on the south. The report further states that after the arrival of the troops at Gubat it required a good deal of time to select the crews and prepare the steamers for the advance to Khartoum.

Reports of a battle in Mexico have been received. Three hundred Yaquis are reported killed, and the Mexican loss is 30 killed and wounded. Four Americans were killed.

El Mahdi is retiring his troops everywhere. Spain has removed the fixed duty on wheat. Victor Hugo, the famous French poet and author, is dead.

The railroad plant now at Suakim is to be sent to England.

The British House of Commons has adjourned until June 4.

Natives fear a general massacre by El Mahdi after evacuation of the Sudan by the British.

A rupture has occurred in the negotiations for a commercial treaty between England and Spain.

Turkish officers are still busily engaged in planting torpedoes in the straits of the Dardanelles.

Mr. Phelps, United States minister to England, has been formally presented to Queen Victoria.

Victor Hugo the brilliant French author, is ill with heart disease and congestion of the lungs, and not expected to live.

The Sultan of Turkey tendered Gen. Lew Wallace, ex-United States minister, a high position in the Turkish service. The general declined.

Mr. Lowell, late United States minister to England, will leave for the United States about June 10. Mr. Phelps, the new minister, was warmly welcomed.

The two men, Cunningham and Burton, who were arrested and held for trial on a charge of treason-felony, for complicity in the late explosions in London, have been sentenced to imprisonment for life.

A great battle is expected to be fought soon at Khartoum, between El Mahdi and the rival False Prophet. The latter has collected an immense force of followers and they are now advancing to attack the Mahdi.

Gen. Wolseley has issued a farewell address in which he announces the withdrawal of the British troops from the Sudan and highly praises the conduct of all the departments of the service during the campaign.

All the leading English journals congratulate Canada on what they deem the practical suppression of the rebellion in the northwest. They compliment the troops on their skill and the courage displayed by the commanders and men. In most quarters the hope is expressed that the government will not repeat the previous error of showing leniency to Riel.

In the house of commons on the 15th inst., Lord Harrington, minister for war, stated that the government had definitely decided to abandon the plan of advance on Khartoum. The British troops would be concentrated at Wady Halfa and Assouan. Suakim could not be evacuated until an arrangement could be made to garrison the place by the troops of some civilized power. These changes in the original plan of operations in the Sudan would make it unnecessary to push forward the railway from Suakim toward Berber.

London advices of May 23 say: The Times fears that a hostile combination against British influence and interests in Egypt has been organized by the European powers. Their action in respect to the Egyptian convention and in forcing the khedive, by their protests, to refund five per cent which had been deducted from the coupons, has been clearly intended to show that they are determined to insist on every point against England. The latter has possession, however. The detention of the guards in Egypt need not be attributed to the difficulty with Russia. Affairs in Egypt are serious enough to enforce precaution, if not to justify uneasiness.

Michigan Take Head.

Prof. Kedzie of the agricultural college, has been making an analysis of the well and hydrant water which has been sent him from Plymouth, Pa., the village in which the malignant typhoid fever epidemic rages. He is positive that the disease is due to the water which has been consumed. Upon one side of a certain street where hydrant water is used the fever rages, while upon the opposite side where there are wells there is no fever. For a period this spring water was taken from the Susquehanna river, where the reservoirs of the water company were. This water held the sewerage of Wilkesbarre, Pittman and Scranton and also the sulphur water from several mines. The water which Prof. Kedzie analyzed was taken from a well and hydrant. The well was in a yard near a privy vault and seven children of the family which used the water have been ill. Both jars upon being opened emitted an offensive odor. The water was filled with white fleecy substances and both specimens, when experiments were made for nitrates, gave a marked precipitate. Both waters turned very dark. In the bottom of a test tube containing three inches of well water, there is a dark deposit of one inch deep. The microscope disclosed the fact that the water was full of low animal and vegetable life. The outline of one of the forms suggested a bed bug with a semi-transparent center, which moved rapidly through the drop in the slide or else swung around in a circle. Another form moved by alternately contracting and expanding itself. Many of the forms Prof. Kedzie had never seen before. He pronounced the water as unfit for even culinary use, and as being the worst he had ever analyzed. The hydrant water disclosed the same bad composition as the well water.

THE TIMES scribe had an interview with W. C. Parker of Windfall, last week. Mr. Parker held a one-fifth ticket in the Louisiana State Lottery, No. 59,975, which drew $15,000, one-fifth of the first capital prize of $75,000. E. Perry held a half interest in the ticket purchased by Mr. Parker. The two named gentlemen, in company with their attorney, R. B. Beauchamp, went to New Orleans to draw the money. When they arrived there they had no trouble at all in procuring the $15,000. They speak very highly of the company and say the people of New Orleans say that it is an honest, fair and reliable institution. It is recommended by the State Legislature, and that its check is good for a million dollars.—Yipon, Ind., Times, May 7.

A CURIOUS AFRICAN TRIBE.

A Unique Race with Many of the Virtues and of the Vices of Civilization.

From a lecture by Joseph Thompson: A more remarkable or unique race does not exist on the continent of Africa—indeed, I might safely say in the two hemispheres. In their physique, manners and customs and religious beliefs they are distinct alike from the true negroes and from the Galla and Somali. They are the most magnificently modeled savages I have seen or even read of. Beautifully proportioned, they are characterized by the smooth and rounded outline of the Apollo type, rarely showing the knotted and brawny muscles of the true athlete. The women are very decently dressed in bullock's hide. They wear, by the way of ornament, from twenty to thirty pounds of thick iron wire coiled round the limbs, arms and neck, besides a great assortment of beads and iron chains. The men wear only a small kidskin garment round the shoulders and breast, that being of somewhat more ample dimensions among the married men. The most remarkable distinctions characterize the various epochs in the life-history of the Masai. The boys and girls up to a certain age live with their parents, and feed upon curdled milk, meat and grain. At the age of 12, with the girls, and from 12 to 14 years with the boys, they are sent from the married men's kraal to one in which there are only young unmarried men and women. There they live till they are married. At this stage the men are warriors, and their sole occupation is cattle-lifting abroad and amusing themselves at home. The young women attend to the cattle, build the huts, and perform other necessary household duties. Both sexes are on the strictest diet. Absolutely nothing but milk and meat passes their lips. Spirits and beer, tobacco, or vegetable food are alike eschewed. So peculiar indeed are they in their notions, that they will not even eat the meat of any wild animal. Moreover, the meat and milk are never taken together. For several days the one is their sole diet, to be followed by the other after partaking of a powerful purgative. On killing a bullock they drink the blood raw, which doubtless supplies them with the necessary salts. In eating meat they always retire to the forests in small parties, accompanied by a young woman. So pleasant does the Masai warrior find this life that he seldom marries till he has passed the prime of life and begins to find his strength declining. The great war-spear and heavy buffalo-hide shield, the sword and the knoberry, are then laid aside. For a month he dons the dress of an unmarried woman, and then becomes a state and respectable member of Marai society. He goes no more to war, but devotes himself to the rearing of a breed of young warriors. His diet changes with his mode of life, and he may indulge in vegetable food, drink beer or spirits, and smoke or chew tobacco. At death the body is simply thrown out to the hyenas and vultures.

Why He Stopped Drinking.

"No, I won't drink with you to-day, boys," said a drummer to several others as they settled down in the smoking car and passed the bottle. "The fact is, boys, I have quit drinking; I've sworn off."

His words were greeted by shouts of laughter by the jolly crowd around him; they put the bottle under his nose and indulged in many jokes at his expense, but he refused to drink, and was rather serious about it.

"What is the matter with you, old boy?" sang out one. "If you've sworn off drinking, something is up; tell us what it is."

"Well, boys, I will, although I know you'll laugh at me. But I'll tell you all the same. I have been a drinking man all my life, ever since I was married; as you all know, I love whiskey—it is as sweet in my mouth as sugar—and God only knows how I'll quit it. For seven years not a day passed over my head that I didn't have at least one drink. But I am done. Yesterday I was in Chicago. On South Clark street a customer of mine keeps a pawnshop in connection with his other branches of business. Well, I called on him, and while I was there a young man of not more than twenty-five, wearing threadbare clothes, and looking as hard as if he hadn't seen a sober day for a month, came in with a little package in his hand. Tremblingly he unwrapped it, and handed the article to the pawnbroker, saying: 'Give me ten cents.'"

"And, boys, what do you suppose that it was? A pair of baby shoes, little things with the buttons only a trifle soiled, as if they had been worn only once or twice."

"Where did you get these?" asked the pawnbroker.

"Got 'em at home," replied the man who had an intelligent face and the manner of a gentleman, despite his sad condition. "My—my wife bought them for our baby. Give me ten cents for 'em—I want a drink."

"You had better take the shoes back to your wife; the baby will need them," said the pawnbroker.

"No, she won't, because—because she's dead. She's lying at home now—died last night."

"As he said this the poor fellow broke down, bowed his head on the show-case and cried like a child. Boys, said the drummer, you can laugh if you please, but I—I have a baby of my own at home, and I swear I'll never drink another drop."

Then he got up and went into another car. His companions glanced at each other in silence; no one laughed; the bottle disappeared, and soon each was sitting in a seat by himself, reading a newspaper.

Chirography vs. Phrenology.

"I tell you it is all humbug about an expert being able to tell all about a person's character by his handwriting," said Raymond Smythe.

"I don't agree with you. The bold man writes a bold, reckless hand. Just look at the signature of the great Napoleon. It looks more like a flash of lightning than a signature. The business man writes a business hand. The close, stingy man can be detected in his handwriting," replied Andrew Wells.

"That's what these experts all say. I gave the matter a practical test, and I am in a condition to say that is a fraud."

"How did you make the test?" "For more than six months I had been paying serious attention to Miss Birdie McGinnis, one of the belles of Austin. As far as I could judge, she was the right kind of a girl to make an excellent wife. She was mild and as gentle as a lamb whenever I called on her. I wanted a meek sort of a wife, for I have to have things my own way. She was, moreover, very industrious, which is a very desirable habit in a woman nowadays. She seemed to be very economical, which is another good thing to have in the family."

"You seem to have found a model woman."

"That is what I thought, but I had my doubts, for one day as I was riding past I saw her chase her grandmother through the yard with a broomstick, but I thought they were only playing, although she hit the old lady some pretty solid whacks."

"What did you do to verify your suspicions?"

"Well, just about that time I read in a New York paper that Professor Smith, on being furnished with a specimen of the handwriting of a person and six dollars in advance, would furnish a perfect analysis of the writer's character. I sent on the six dollars and one of Birdie's letters, and in a short time received an answer to the effect that the lady who wrote the lines was a female; that she was of a demure, quiet disposition, whose character could be easily moulded, that she was economical, and incapable of deceit. On the strength of this I dismissed my doubts. I proposed, was accepted, and we were married."

"Your wife turned out just as you expected?"

Smythe fixed a stony gaze on Wells, and then he yelled:

"No, she didn't by a blamed sight. Shakespeare's shrew was a lamb compared to her. She will fight a cross-cut saw. She has bankrupt me. And as for deceitfulness, she beats the mischief. Everything is false about her, from her hair down. That's how you can tell all about a person's character by handwriting."

"Why don't you put your foot down? Why don't you make her behave herself?"

"I did try it once. I'd rather go in to a cage full of tigers. No, sir; this finding out all about a person by the handwriting is a humbug. But I'll tell you how to find all about a person; by phrenology. I had my head examined, and the professor described my character to a dot."

"What sort of a man did the professor say you were?"

"He said I was a man of undoubted firmness—a born ruler of men; that I had a will that would break, but not bend, and that I was brave even to rashness."

"When did you have your head examined?"

"Shortly after I was married."

"That accounts for it. The phrenologist was deceived as to your character by the bumps raised on your head with the broomstick.—Texas Siftings.

Famous Old "Blues."

Many lovers of old London will regret that Christ's hospital, as a building on its present site, is doomed by the reorganization scheme of the charity commissioners. How many old blues, scattered throughout our colonies and serving her majesty in all quarters of the globe, will also hear with a pang that their time-honored school has come under the auctioneer's hammer, and vanished in the wake of the past, to be remembered hereafter only by antiquaries! Fifty years ago its requiem would have been sung in fitting verse by Coleridge, who loved the old school so dearly, or by Charles Lamb, whose "Recollections of Christ's Hospital" are among the most delightful of his papers. These two are not the only old blues who have made a name for themselves in the world. Of its earliest scholars, mention may be made of Joshua Barnes, the editor of Anacreon and Euripides; Jeremiah Markland, an eminent critic, particularly in Greek literature; Thomas Mitchell, the translator of Aristophanes, and Samuel Richardson, the author of "Clarissa Harlowe." Charles Lamb and Coleridge belonged to a later era, and were there in company with Leigh Hunt and Thomas Barnes, for many years editor of The Times newspaper. Actors of note may be mentioned in Leigh Murray and Wright, of the Adelphi, both old blues and in the same room. Of Anglo-Indian blues we can call to mind Sir Louis Cavag-nari and Gen. Cunningham, of The Saturday Review staff.—Whitehall Review.

powder and mixed with it, and lastly the saltpetre is added in the form of a saturated solution.

On April 15, an industrial convention will be held at Richmond, under the auspices of the Virginia State Agricultural society, to discuss the best and most practical means of furthering the general prosperity of the state. The executive committee of the society, Messrs. R. V. Gaines, W. C. Wickham, and A. S. Buford, in their address to the people of Virginia, call attention to the losses of the state by large emigration from it to other states. Good results are likely to arise from the proposed convention.

An Englishman is traveling through Kansas with two pairs of ferrets, with which he is making money by killing prairie dogs. He visits ranches where there are indications of prairie dogs, and offers to clean out the dog town for 1 cent per dog. The cost is so low that the ranchman doesn't hesitate to accept the offer. One ferret will clean out from one to fifty dogs before he tires out, and when one is tired out a fresh one is put into service, and so on until the place is rid of dogs.

A patron of the Edwards county, Kansas, creamery says he received in cash from the creamery for cream from twelve cows for eleven months ended Nov. 31, 1884, $288.93, and $75 cash for hogs made from the creamed milk, and also raised twenty calves which are worth, to him, as much as the cream brought, making in all $54 per cow for eleven months. He says he don't know how he could have made the same amount so easily.

The total values of the exports of domestic cattle and hogs, and of beef, pork, and dairy products during February were $7,421,588; February, 1884, $6,954,800; two months ended February, 1885, $19,387,136; 1884, $16,046,677. The beef and pork products for the four months ended Feb. 28, 1885, were $35,187,852; 1884, $33,199,422; dairy products for ten months ended Feb. 28, 1885, $13,643,420; 1884, $14,814,716.

Wire covered with good paint has been found to be much more lasting than galvanized wire, although farmers ordinarily pay a cent per pound more for the latter. The zinc coating on the galvanized wire becomes removed from places when the iron rusts very quickly in consequence of the electric currents that are developed by the two metals.

A prominent English agricultural society at a recent meeting decided in future to abandon the public dinner hitherto held in connection with the show, and to substitute an ordinary refreshment tent. The reasons assigned were that the dinner occupied too much valuable time, and that the speeches were either formal or political.

At the Farmers' institute, held at Pomona, Kan., Prof. Fairchild remarked that "What we do not know about the every day facts of crop-raising is more than what we do know; and every discussion between farmers reveals the absence of settled principles, while failures from poor judgment are numberless."

Industrial Pursuits in Paris.

Statistics show that more than half a million of Parisians are employed in commerce, trade and banking operations, while of the artisan class there are considerably more than a million and a quarter. The liberal professions seem to occupy but a small proportion of the population. All combined do not amount to 200,000. The great majority are in public service, which employs more than medicine, law and divinity combined. But after the public service it is art which gives employment and livelihood to the greatest number of Parisians. Forty-two thousand get their income from this branch of industry. The doctors come after, but a long way after. Medicine, in its branches, supports 18,000, the branches, of course, including chemists and all compounders and vendors of medicine. Then comes the law, with all its 16,000 votaries, from judges to crier. Literature figures very low on the list, for, grouped with science and journalism, it gives employment to only 11,000 people, while all the clergy of all the persuasions amount to but half that number. On the whole, Paris would seem to be more industrious, more artistic, less literary and less religious than the ordinary visitor would suppose, while the proportion in which the working class exceeds those who live on their own income is more remarkable, as Paris is the recognized center of expenditure and extravagance for all France.—Philadelphia Press.

Silurian Remains in Florida.

Some interesting discoveries have been made in Florida by Prof. Lawrence Johnson, of the United States Geological Survey. Just south of Alachua county line he found several specimens and skeletons of animals which relatively belong to a not far distant period. In piles, and somewhat mixed, there were the remains of a mastodon, two or three specimens of the rhinoceros, a large stag, a camel, fully as large as the Arabian camel but in structure more allied to the llama; also a tapir very much like the South American tapir, which lives in swampy places; two teeth of some carnivorous animal allied to the tiger and panther; one set of teeth and bones of a hippopotamus; several crocodiles or alligators, and innumerable other bones not identified. Apparently the territory south of Alachua was at one time a large fresh water lake.—Boston Journal.

THE HIRED GIRL.

Her Traits and Privileges—How Much It Costs to Keep Her.

The discovery was made by a newspaper paragrapher some years ago that it takes three to make a pair—he, she, and the hired girl. This truth was suspected for a previous decade or more, but no mind had been discerning enough to emulate it. Since it has become an axiom of family life, it raises the party of the third part to an important rank in the domestic circle. That she is important no one who has ever hired her has failed to find out. Happy are they who meet in her a treasure. Twice happy are they who can get along without her. Here in Springfield the servant girls are Irish, and form two distinct classes, the natives of the realm of St. Patrick and those of American birth. As a rule the latter, having had at least the rudiments of a common school education, are to a marked degree more intelligent and capable than the former. The wages paid these domestics range from $2 to $4 a week, the former sum going to the least experienced and efficient, and the latter to the favorites of wealthy families and cooks in restaurants, whose work is especially hard. The average pay of the girl who can wash and iron and do part or the whole cooking for a family of reasonable size is $3; and it is a price which makes these girls one of the most independent classes in the community. Some business men would be glad in these times after paying all their bills for food, fuel, rent, washing and lights, to have $3 a week left for clothing and other purely personal comforts.

When the average domestic appears on the streets in her Sunday clothes she carries about her an air of comfort and respectability which is often painfully lacking among a crowd of shop girls. And there are some kitchen maids of whom it can truly be said, "she is very much of a lady." It is common to accuse this class of putting every cent they can earn on their backs, and that, too, in a fashion that will cause the most possible display. Still there are Springfield hired girls who are real estate owners, and "forehanded" in other respects.

Many of them have money laid by in the savings bank, and one local institution can count up more than a thousand depositors from this class. The amounts invested are also considerable, some of the books bearing credits of $1,000 and even $1,200. The usages of society are as firmly established in the kitchen as the parlor. Calls are made and returned with due formality. As a general thing, the domestic does not associate with the shop girl, the feeling of superiority of one over the other being mutual. And the domestic has a set of her own, into which not every servant need apply for admission. The standing of the employer's family is generally considered when a new-comer seeks to mingle in the highest circles, education, ability to do fancy work, and a few similar accomplishments being also regarded. Some of the Springfield domestics have married very well and maintain orderly and attractive homes to which they welcome their unmarried associates.

Others who were carefully brought up in our best families, have married poorly, and the places where they live are as untidy and fever-breeding as any in the city. The contrast between the knowledge of this class and their use of it is painful enough to sicken the most hopeful union relief visitor in the land. They hold themselves to step into any house to which they may be called on an emergency, and do up the work, whatever it may be, in excellent shape, and they teach their children to do the same, for a consideration. But in their own quarters they sometimes live with a very uncivilized fashion.

The hired girls' privileges vary considerably in different families. It is generally understood that after the Sunday dinner is out of the way she shall have the rest of the day to herself, even though the family are forced to be content with a bread-and-milk supper. Some housekeepers think they must be very strict with their help for the sake of maintaining discipline. They lay down the law that their girls can have only one afternoon and one evening out each week, while others allow their servants to be away whenever their absence does not inconvenience the family. And the contrast is kept up all along the scale. One woman was heard to remark a while since that when she caught the girls reading the daily paper she guessed they'd catch it. But other families are glad to keep help intelligent enough to care for the papers. These people are willing their domestics shall have a fire in their sleeping-rooms a part of the day, so that a place may be afforded for sewing and recreation, and they need not be tied down to the kitchen during all their working hours. The best girls are kept in the same families year after year, while the poor ones are constantly floating through the intelligence offices. A well-to-do family will do almost anything in order to keep a first-class girl. Cases have been known where they paid her full wages and also paid her board during their absence in California or Europe. It is probably more common to pay her half-wages in such cases.

How much it costs to keep a girl is a much mooted question. Some mistresses of experience put the amount as high as $10 a week, and claim that they have figured out this result carefully. They allow $3 for wages, $3 for board, $4 for waste, provided the servant is left to do about as she pleases. The last item seems a large one and doubtless it depends very much on the character of the "secretary of the interior" as the kitchen-maid is sometimes called and the amount of outside relief which she dispenses to the army of cousins with which any girl of self respect provides herself. There are a few American girls who still drift into house service, and of course there are Springfield kitchens which employ other nationalities, but the Irish Catholics almost monopolize the business. And most house-keepers will admit that on the whole they prefer Catholics, the restraints of the church being found to be salutary and more effective than those which usually rest on other servants. This whole subject has many possible ramifications, and the present article shall close with a reference to a glowing argument for protection, which a prominent Fourth ward manufacturer recently made at a New York hotel dinner-table, because of the prosperous condition of the Springfield hired girls. "Gentlemen," said he, "let me tell you that when my wife and I start for church Sunday morning from the front door there is just as much finery going out at the back door as my wife can support. This is a glorious country which pays its domestics so that they can afford to dress in that way, and help swell the demand for such goods. And protection has done it."—Springfield Republican.

A Wise Father.

"So you are going to start a humorous paper," said an old gentleman to his son.

"Yes, sir. Have you any advice to offer?"

"Don't start it."

"Why?"

"Oh, there are many reasons, some of which, in a most serious manner, I shall give you. The quality of humor is inborn, but the employment of its finer forces requires the most careful cultivation. The rough semi-vulgar sketch is not humor. It may create a laugh, but is not humor. Do you remember what Addison says of humor?"

"No, sir."

"Have you ever read Addison?"

"Very little."

"What have you read?"

"Oh, I don't know what all. It would take me some time to enumerate."

"I don't think it would. How is your imagination—very good?"

"No, sir, I can't say that it is."

"Ah, ha. I suppose that you will attempt to make people laugh?"

"Oh, yes, sir."

"A fatal error, young man. People can be drawn into mirth, but you cannot shove them into it. We can persuade men to weep, but we cannot force them. You no doubt have a good supply of original jokes."

"Yes, sir, I think so."

"Tell me a few?"

"I can't tell them."

"Well, sit down there and write me one."

The young man wrote the following: "Sebleson went to see his girl the other night. The old man was at the lodge. Sebleson enjoyed himself pretty well. The girl brought in some pie. The young fellow said it was first rate, and asked her if she made it. She said yes. 'Ah,' replied the young man, 'anybody who can make such pie ought to make a good wife.' Then they both laughed. 'Did you ever make any pie?' she asked. 'No,' said he, 'but I have killed a sight of it.'"

"Is that all?" asked the old gentleman when the humorist had, with eloquent effect, read the production.

"Yes, but I could make it longer."

"Don't do it."

"Father, I am afraid you don't like humor."

"I am afraid so."

"You didn't smile, but will you lend me two thousand dollars?"

"What do you want to pay people to laugh?"

"Oh, no, I want to buy material."

"Why, you intend to print the paper, eh?"

"Of course."

"Oh, no, I cannot let you have the money."

"I tell you what I thought, father. You have been suggested as a suitable candidate for congress. Well, nothing more than a good joke helps a man politically. I thought that you might get off several good jokes about yourself and that I could print them. Of course everything from you would be interesting. You have a great imagination, and have read Addison you—"

"Two thousand dollars, you say? Hand me that check-book, please. Of course I do not expect to be a candidate—but say, if I were elected, I could make the country laugh, couldn't I?"—Arkansas Traveler.

Walking Boots.

In the matter of walking boots the purists lead the van. Nothing could be simpler nor more absolutely undorned than the foot covering par excellence of to-day. No fancy work, embroidery, stitching, beading, or even irrelevant fancy buttons are visible. The boot is ornamented only in its quality, which is of kid, the finest and softest. The toe portion is roomy yet shapely. The heel with not a suggestion of "French bend" about it, is yet graceful, and the sole of the foot is broad enough to allow the girl of the period to "set down her foot" emphatically without a wince, or to promenade without having to stop at every other shop window, apparently, to admire the display within the glass-bound case, but in reality to give rest to the pinched and rebellious foot.—New York Post.

WHISPERINGS.

The contract for digging the drain from Freer's cat-hole and the one near Van-Riper's to the sewer has been let at $1.50 per rod. This is something that will be of lasting benefit to the village and has the heartiest approval.

Poverty degrades no one. To be neat and clean costs but little. To be healthy is necessary, and DeLand's saleratus and soda will help you make fine bread and biscuit. Try it. It is pure and white, full strength, and always economical.

R. S. Armstrong would specially recommend to the ladies Acker's dyspepsia tablets. As a laxative they have no equal. They are guaranteed to cure chronic constipation, dyspepsia, and all disease arising from a deranged stomach. With a free use of the tablets, sick headache is impossible.

The great National camp meeting, which is to be held at Lansing June 13 to 21 under the auspices of the Methodists, promises to be a greater affair than last year when eighteen states were represented. Bishop Mallalieu, of New Orleans, has been engaged and will be present, also Rev. Drs. McDonald and Steele of Boston.

The University bill came up in committee of the whole in the house on Wednesday, and, after a long debate the appropriation was agreed to. As passed it appropriates $112,000 for the two years, 1885 and 1886. The gymnasium item of 10,000 was not offered; and the mechanical laboratory item of $25,000 asked for was reduced to $15,000.—Argus.

R. S. Armstrong wishes to make an assertion which he can back with a positive guarantee. It is all about Acker's blood elixir. He claims for it superior merits over all other remedies of its kind, and guarantees for it a positive and sure cure for rheumatism, syphilis and all blood disorders. It frees the skin from spots and and leaves the complexion clear. Ask him about it.

R. S. Armstrong wishes to state that he has at last found an article he can sell on its merits. It is with pleasure he guarantees to the public Acker's English remedy as a sure and never failing cure for asthma coughs, whooping cough, croup and all lung troubles. It is the standard remedy for consumption. He has never found its equal.

Old "Watch" the goodnatured New Foundland dog at the Babcock house, evidently does not believe in the baptism-by-immersion way to the happy land. While he pays no attention to the ringing of the other church bells he mournfully howls every time the Baptist bell peals forth.—Milan Journal. Readers may draw their own conclusions.

Carelessness is the true cause of a great many of our misfortunes. It was carelessness, according to the admission of Stephen W. Reynolds, of Coldwater, Mich., that brought on a severe attack of colic. "The pain was intensely acute," he writes. "I was cured in two hours by Misher's herb bitters." This great household remedy never fails when used as directed for colic, cramp, pain in the stomach, dysentery, diarrhoea, indigestion, or kidney and liver disorders.

St. Nicholas for June contains the opening chapters of "Sheep or Silver?" a new serial by the late W. M. Baker, author of "His Majesty, Myself." The story deals with and compares the experiences and final achievements of two brothers who seek their fortunes in the West,—one on a Texas sheep ranch; the other among the silver mines of Colorado. The illustrations will be furnished by James C. Monks and Henry Sandham. The other serials are carried on in interesting installments.

Demorest's Illustrated Monthly Magazine for June contains a great deal that will interest its readers. It opens with an admirable article, "Bryn Mawr College," which is profusely illustrated, and which fully describes this new college for women in Pennsylvania. "Old Antwerp," which is also illustrated, is another readable article and so is "Through Normandy by Diligence." The serial, "A Strange Girl," is concluded; and Jenny June contributes a paper on "Trained Nurses and Nursing." These articles, with others of a miscellaneous nature, poems, fashions and various departments make up a remarkably good number of this admirable magazine. The frontispiece is a fine oil picture, "Butterflies."

A Thunderstorm Theory.

At a recent Germany Scientific Congress Dr. S. Hoppe, of Hamburg, endeavors to prove the electricity of storms is generated by the friction of vapor particles. This view was strengthened by experiments in which compressed cold air was allowed to rush into a copper vessel containing warm moist air, a large amount of electricity being thus produced. He concludes that the rise of a column of warm, moist air into the colder atmosphere above will be followed by a thunderstorm if it acquires sufficient velocity to prevent neutralization of the electricity generated by the friction of the air. Hence, he regards open districts as more liable to thunderstorms than wooded regions, where the trees prevent the rapid rise of humid air currents.

The Last Confederate Charge at Gaines's Mill.

From Gen. Fitz John Porter's contribution to The Century Illustrated War Series in the June number we quote the following: "As if for a final effort, as the shades of evening were coming upon us, and the woods were filled with smoke, limiting the view therein to a few yards, the enemy again massed his fresher and re-formed regiments, and threw them in rapid succession against our thinned and wearied battalions, now almost without ammunition, and with guns so foul that they could not be loaded rapidly. In preparation for defeat, should it come, I had posted artillery in large force just in rear of our center and left, ready for any emergency—and especially to be used against a successful foe; even if his destruction involved firing upon some of our own retreating troops, as might have been necessary. The attacks, though coming like a series of apparently irresistible avalanches, had thus far made no inroads upon our firm and disciplined ranks. Even in this last attack we successfully resisted driving back our assailants with immense loss, or holding them beyond our lines, except in one instance, near the center of Morell's line, where by force of numbers and under cover of the smoke of battle our line was penetrated and broken; this at a point where I least expected it. This was naturally the weakest point of our line owing to the closer proximity of the woods held by the enemy. Under this cover they could form, and with less exposure in time and ground than elsewhere and launch their battalions in quick succession upon our men. I believed I had guarded against the danger by strongly and often reinforcing the troops holding this part of the line. Here the greater part of McCall's and Slocum's forces were used. Preceding this break, to my great surprise I saw cavalry which I recognized as ours, rushing in numbers through our lines on the left, and carrying off with sudden fright the limbers of our artillery, then prepared to pour their irresistible fire into a pursuing foe. With no infantry to support and with apparent disaster before them such of the remainder of these guns as could be moved were carried from the field; some deliberately, others in haste, but not in confusion."

Father, Mother, and Three Sisters Dead.
Mr. David Claypool, formerly Sergeant- at-Arms of the New Jersey Senate, and now Notary Public at Cedarville, Cumberland Co., N. J., makes the following startling statement: "My father, mother, and three sisters all died with consumption, and my lungs were so weak I raised blood. Nobody thought I could live. My work (ship- smithing) was very straining on my weak constitution, and I was rapidly going to the grave. While in this condition I commenced using Mischler's Herb Bitters, and it saved my life. Because it was so difficult to get it in this little place, and I had improved so much, I stopped taking it for a time, and the result is that I have commenced going rapidly down hill again. Somehow, Mischler's Herb Bitters gives appetite and strengthens and builds me up so nothing else does, and I must have a dozen bottles at once. Use this com- munication as you please, and if any one wants to be convinced of its truth, let them write me and I will make affidavit to it, for I owe my life to Mischler's Herb Bitters."
The secret of the almost invariable relief and cure of consumption, dysentery, diar- rhea, dyspepsia, indigestion, kidney and liver complaints, when Mischler's Herb Bitters is used, is that it contains simple, harmless, and yet powerful ingredients, that act on the blood, kidneys, and liver, and through them strengthen and invigor- ate the whole system. Purely vegetable in its composition; prepared by a regular physician; a standard medicinal prepara- tion; endorsed by physicians and drug- gists. These are four strong points in favor of Mischler's Herb Bitters. Mischler's Herb Bitters is sold by all druggists. Price $1.00 per large bottle. 6 bottles for $5.00.
Ask your druggist for Mischler's Herb Bitters. Do not keep it. Do not take anything else but send a postal card to Mischler's Herb Bitters Co., 308 Commerce Street, Philadelphia.

THE DWARF'S HOUSE.
An Interesting Description of a Yucatan Mystery.
From afar is seen the Dwarf's House, on the summit of an artificial mound one hundred feet high. The ascent is on the east side, by a hundred narrow stone steps, so perpendicular that some of those who go up, when they have to descend wonder how they could have been so rash, and repent having made the attempt, as Father Cogolludo did, according to his own writings. The ascent is more tiresome than dangerous; when visitors think they must surely be near the top, they look up to find that they were only half-way.
Except where recently cut down, brush covers the sides of the mound. The building on the top consists of three rooms, very interesting, for they contain symbols pertaining to Masonic rites. To the west of these rooms some steps once existed that led down to a sanctu- ary of two very small but lofty rooms. The outer part of the sanctuary is mag- nificently ornamented with carved stones, and inscriptions that have puzzled the head of more than one wise man, but now have a fair chance of being deciphered, thanks to the persever- ance of Dr. Le Plongeon.
The portal of the sanctuary is the largest among all the ruins. The orna- ment above it is an immense mastodon head. Between this and the lintel of the doorway is a cornice that extends all round the sanctuary. On it are Masonic symbols, and on the under part of it rings are cut in the stone. A curtain was formerly suspended from them to inclose the house completely, and veil from public gaze the mysteries and ceremonies thereto performed. The tradition of the Dwarf's House is as follows:
During the reign of a certain Maya King there lived a woman who was both feared and respected, for she was a wonderful sorceress. A son was born to her, and he became a great favorite, for he was good and clever, though very small—in fact, a dwarf. Finally he be- came so popular—probably the people fawned on him, to please the formidable witch—that the King grew jealous, and sought his destruction by giving him difficult tasks, so that, failing, he might be accused of disobedience. But, thanks to his mother, the boy always succeed- ed. One day the King, out of patience, ordered the dwarf to build in one night a high mound and a house on the top. The youth was at his wife's end, but went as usual to seek maternal aid. "O, mother, mother, I shall surely die, for the King has ordered me to do more than I can possibly accomplish," and he told her his trouble. "Never mind, my child; don't be alarmed. In the morning the house will be there."
It was, and from that day to this has been called the Dwarf's House. The King was enraged. He sent for the dwarf. "I am greatly pleased with the house. Now I want to break six cocoyoles" (small and very hard cocoa-nuts, about the size of a walnut) "on your head, and then I will give you my daughter in marriage."
The dwarf declined to accept the honor upon those conditions. The mon- arch insisted. "I want you to marry my daughter and you must accept my conditions."
Again the poor dwarf sought his mother in despair. "There is no hope for me now."
"O, yes, there is," replied the clever witch. "You go back to his Majesty and tell him that you accede to his request, provided he afterward allows you to break six cocoyoles on his own head."
And to this the King publicly agreed, because he was determined to kill the dwarf with the first cocoyol.
Then the sorceress rubbed her son's head with something that made it so hard nothing could possibly hurt it.
The King arrived, and the dwarf, in presence of all the people, laid his head on a stone. With another the King broke the cocoyol on the head of his in- tended victim—broke all six of them—but the dwarf arose unhurt.
Then it was the turn of the monarch to lay his proud head down, and as his scalp was not prepared, the dwarf broke his skull, and thus got rid of his enemy. The agreement had been faithfully car- ried out, so the public had nothing to say. The dwarf then married the princess, and became King—Alice D le Plongeon, in Harper's Magazine.

Beards.
Most of the fathers of the Church wore and approved the beard. Clement, of Alexandria, says: "Nature adorned man, like a lion, with a beard, as the mark of strength and power." Lactan- tius, Theodoret, St. Augustine and St. Cyprian are all eloquent in praise of this characteristic feature, about which many discussions were raised in the early days of the Church, when matters of discipline engaged much of the at- tention of its leaders. To settle these disputes, at the Fourth Council of Car- thage—A. D. 252, Can. 44—it was en- acted "that a cleric shall not cherish his hair nor shave his beard." Bing- ham quotes an early letter in which it is said of one who from a layman had be- come a clergyman: "His habit, gait and modest countenance and discourse were all religious; and agreeably to these, his hair was short and his beard long." A source of dispute between the Roman and Greek Churches has been the subject of wearing and not wearing the beard. The Greek Church has adhered to the decision of the early Church, and refused to admit any shaven saint into its calendar, and thereby con- demning the Romish Church for the opposite conduct.—Detroit Post.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Prof. Ridgway of the Smithsonian Institute, holds to his belief, and reiterates it with emphasis, that the English sparrow in the United States is a national misfortune.

New Jersey now has a law to protect song birds from slaughter, which was threatened when the ladies of that and neighboring states began to wear birds' feathers and stuffed birds as ornaments.

The Old Testament Revision Company, which has just submitted its report to Convocation in England, held 85 sessions, and finished in June, 1884. These sessions, of about ten days each, comprised 792 days of six hours at a sitting.

The Wisconsin brewers have discovered that the new license law is so loosely drawn that a brewing company may retail its own beer without a license. The result is that new beer shops are springing up in the cities of that state.

A machine has been invented at Troy which will make 24,000 perfect matches in one minute. If it proves able to work many minutes in a day and doesn't demand too long vacations in the hot weather, it may revolutionize the match-making business.

The bravado and daring of the Rebel Riel have forsaken him in his captivity, and he is now playing the penitent dodge. He claims that he was not the instigator of the rebellion and that he is a greatly wronged man, which fact he expects to prove by papers at the trial, which is to be by martial law.

A CANADIAN volunteer writing home from Duck Lake of the recent collision with Riel's rebels there tells how the half-breed leader plays the inspiration game on his Indian and French followers. At the battle of Duck Lake he had a cross with him, and he scratched it in three places and showed it to the Indians, and told them the cross was struck three times with bullets from the enemy, and he never got a scratch. A few days before the late eclipse of the sun he called all the Indians together and had a council with them, and told them he was inspired by the Big Spirit. He told them that on a certain day and at or about a certain hour the sun would get dark. This was the eclipse, and he got his inspiration from the almanac.

On June 1, says the Philadelphia Times, the Pennsylvania railroad company will introduce a new air system of signals in their passenger trains, to take the place of the bell rope now in use. When the air brake was first used it was discovered that the pipes were too small, and larger ones were put in. These old pipes will now be used to signal from the conductor to the engineer when the former wishes to stop the train. The pipes will communicate with a small whistle in the engineer's cab, and the signal will be given by the conductor pulling a small rope, which will hang on one side of the car. The main advantage in this arrangement will be that it will be more difficult for the passengers to stop the train. Trains are quite often stopped by some excited or intoxicated passengers, and accidents are likely to occur when such a thing happens.

CONTENTMENT is one of the least cultivated virtues. We Americans are especially a restless, ambitious people. At no period of the world's history has there been a more general race for wealth, or more aspirants for political power and social status. It is one great strife to rise above our fellows and assume cares we know not the burden of. Perhaps, as the country becomes older, certainly as we become a more religious nation, we shall become wiser, and quiet contentment will be more cultivated. Wealth will come by years of honest and prudent accumulation, and not dishonestly, at the expense of our neighbors. Public position will seek the men, instead of the scramble for place that now prevails. People will move more in ruts, but they will be assured of better tried and safer paths. It will be called a rival of the old fogysm but what matters it if the people are better and happier!

A Fool Friend.

There is certainly a grim and comfortable joy in going in search of a bitter and implacable foe. There is an exciting hunger in the eye and in the heart as we follow him by day and camp on his trail at night. Then when we meet and mix him up with the green sward, and knock his front teeth loose and swell up his proud nose, and put an olive-green and cadet-blue daco over his eye and a cigarette pocket on his cheek, and erect little knobs all over him in places where nature did not design to have them, we walk away with the idea that we are taller and wider and draw more water and exert more influence than we did before. Even when we ask the police judge how much it will be if we pay it in advance, and we use up the funds in that way when we had intended to invest them in other channels, we cannot say that we regret it if the cause seemed just and the provocation great.

But what shall we do with the warm, personal friend who sets up nights to love us but hurts us in every corner by his discretion? We cannot whip him and throw him away. We cannot get him shut up in an insane asylum, as it was not designed for idiots. It was made for people who once had brains. It is a conundrum which more than one of us has given up.

If the fool friend could have his jaws locked with a time-lock, and then be fed by an attendant through the vest-pocket, we could then set the time-lock to open after election or just before breakfast on the day of judgment, or at such other date as we desired, and all would be well, but you cannot do that. The jaw of the fool friend wags on and on till the goose of the one he loves best on earth is cooked to a rich, deep brown.

An enemy may say mean things of you, but they lose force because people know at once by his bitterness that he is your enemy; but he who knows your inmost heart, who knows what salary you receive and how much it lacks of maintaining you, how mean you are in your family and how pleasant you are in other people's families, how you smile through the day and snore through the night, how earnest you are in your labors toward reform in everything except your own habits, and a thousand other little glimpses into your home life which none but a friend may know, when he has no brains to balance his warm affection for you, think what ruin he can furnish you at car-load rates.

In matters wholly political it is really safer to have the endorsement of one who is wise and wicked, sometimes, than the earnest but misguided efforts of the man whose motives are good but whose brains, in the hurry and confusion incident to creation, were bestowed upon a large mouse-colored mule.

When your friend forgets himself, forgets his business, forgets his own interests and his hopes of bright immortality beyond the grave, in order to go about and do you good, when he goes without sleep and food and rest that he may labor for you, and at last, when the campaign is drawing toward a close and all at once you come upon the wreck and ruin that mark the pathway of the hurricane, and you follow it in great bitterness for miles only at last to find that it is the work of your friend, what can you do? Can you take a club and mash his smiling face? Can you stab his warm heart whose every throb through life has been for you? Can you send the swift-winged bullet crashing through the massive skull of your friend, thus tearing the cobwebs loose from his cranium and allowing the gas to escape?

Ah no. Better far to accept defeat than to stain your hands with blood of one whose very devotion to you has snowed you under so deep that you will have to live on the leather ends of your suspenders till relief can come.

I sometimes think that if the fool killer would give a little more attention to his business and would try a little harder to earn his salary, there would be less complaint and less dissatisfaction on the part of the intelligent taxpayer. Now, for instance, suppose that he should, prior to each election, hold a kind of competitive examination of fools, to close with a grand tournament of fool-shot at thirty yards; or the fool could be made to pay each year for a license, the revenue to go to the government, partial fools to pay a fifty dollar license, chronic fools one hundred dollars, and hopeless fools two hundred dollars per year. I'd like to be instrumental in getting such a law passed, and then get out of the country before it went into effect.—Bill Nye in the Ingleside.

Foreign Owners of New York Property.

According to the correspondence of the Troy Times, the offerings of real estate in New York City this season are less than in former years. This arises from the general depreciation of stocks and railway bonds. Real estate is held with increased tenacity. The uncertainty prevailing in Europe leads to extensive purchases by foreign capitalists, including some of royal blood. Among these is an extensive landed estate owned by Eugene, and including some gilt-edged property whose rental is between $50,000 and $75,000 a year. The King of Sweden owns an estate valued at $500,000; the Grand Duke Alexis is also an extensive property-holder, and large purchases have been made for Queen Victoria. The titles are taken in other names, but the true ownership is well understood.

Early Peas.

There are some vegetables which we can buy in market as good as we can grow at home. Peas are not one of them. We get peas from the South, and they are very fair, but lack the delicacy of those from our own garden. It is desirable, therefore, to get peas as early as possible. The sweet, wrinkled peas are not, and never will be, as hardy as the smooth varieties. The same is true of sweet corn; the extra-early kinds are not as sweet as the later varieties; but, like peas, they are very good until we get something better. The small, hardy varieties of peas, like the Early Kent, will stand rough treatment. They can be sown the moment the frost is out of the surface soil, and after they are up, it is seldom, if ever, that they are seriously injured by frost. A warm, sandy soil is desirable, with a southern exposure, and if on the eastern or southern side of a wall or board fence or building, so much the better. The soil can hardly be too rich. It is a mistake to spade time, light, sandy land deep for early peas. The surface soil, which has been exposed to the sun is many degrees warmer than the soil below, which has only just thawed. The later varieties, planted when the soil is dry and warm, can be covered with two, three, four, or even five inches of soil, deeper or shallower as the soil is heavy or light; but the small, early peas should rarely be covered over two inches deep, and if the soil is wet and cold, an inch is sufficient. As soon as the peas appear, draw some earth up to the row with a hoe or rake, and if the soil is dry and light, half an inch or so of soil may be pulled between or over the peas. If the soil is moist and heavy, it may be well to scatter a little stable manure on the side and on the top of the row. A board placed edgewise on the north side of the row will reflect the rays of the sun.

Another method of hastening early peas is to soak them in warm water for twenty-four hours and then mix them with moss or light sand and keep them warm and moist until they sprout. Then sow them in the ordinary way—using plenty of seed. We have sown them when sprouted an inch long, but it is better, if the weather is not suitable, to check the growth of the peas in the house by placing them in a cellar or other cold place. If the land is rich, thick planting is desirable, as it favors early maturity. We make the row three or four inches wide and deep, and sow the peas in the rows, for their whole width, almost as thick as they will lie without touching each other.—American Agriculturist for April.

Forwarding Garden Vegetables.

When the gardener gives a plant a special advantage the result of which is to cause it to produce or mature earlier than it otherwise would, he is said to "forward" it. Tomatoes will bear long before frost, if the seeds are sown in the open ground. By sowing seeds in a hot-bed and raising the plants, the tomato is forwarded. If the seeds were sown last fall, and the plants kept in a hot-house to produce fruit in the early spring, that would be "forcing." Cucumbers are forced under glass, but they may also be forwarded. For illustration: to forward the cucumber, fill some four-inch pots with fine, rich soil, sow half a dozen cucumber seeds in each, and set the pots in a hot-bed, or stand them in a box which can be set on the sill of the kitchen window. Another method of starting the seeds, if a good piece of turf can be had, is this: Take up a thick, strong sod, and fit it to a shallow box with the grassy side down. The sides of the box need not be over three inches high. With a strong knife, cut the sod into squares, which should be according to the size of the box, three or four inches square. Cut quite down through the grass-roots and tops, to the bottom of the box, to make sure that the pieces can be separated readily. Sow several seeds in the earth of each piece of sod, which is of course bottom or earth-side up. Set this box of sods in the window or in a hot-bed, as directed for the pots. Either pots or sods must be watered as needed. When the seeds are up and the plants begin to show their rough leaves, remove all but two or three in each pot, or piece of sod. Do not pull out the extra plants, as it will disturb the roots of those which are to be left, but cut them off with a knife, or pinch them off with the thumb and finger nails, close to the ground.—American Agriculturist for April.

Live Stock in April.

The work horses now need an abundance of strengthening food. Keep the harness clean and soft. It is easier to prevent galls than to cure them, especially during this busy season, when a horse's labor is most constant and valuable. Many horses working upon soft ground are best shod when they are barefoot. Cows need careful watching during this season. When a cow's time approaches, the feed should be reduced. Look out for garget and use the simple remedies often mentioned in these columns. Ewes with lambs need abundance of food, otherwise the lambs as well as the dams will suffer. If ticks are troublesome use a dip of tobacco water, or some one of the several preparations sold in the shops. We elsewhere (page 000), give full instructions for the pig sty and pasture. Swine need a run, and may do much good in the orchard. If the poultry have vermin, use kerosene upon the roosts and walls of the house. A dust bath is enjoyed by fowls.—American Agriculturist for April.

THE Excitement AT DAY, CAMPBELL & CO

Great Bargain Sales,

Is without a parallel this season. We never have carried as large and complete an assortment and never have had as great advantages to buy goods far below regular values. First, we have all the money we could wish for on the spot to use, and secondly all know what a terrible depression there is in the market and the number of failures reported every day, the same throwing elegant stocks on the market from 40 to 60 cents on the dollar. Compare the two points and you will readily see how we can sell goods so much cheaper than other houses.
