VICTOR MARIE HUGO.

Victor Marie Hugo, who died May 22. 1885, one of the greatest writers of the present century was born in the little village of Besancon on the Rhine Canal, Feb., 26th 1802. His father was an officer of the French army whose duties led him a somewhat nomadic life, and the young Victor traveled extensively before he had reached his teens. In 1809 he was taken to Paris and under the supervision of his mother began his education. In 1817 he published his first poem and in 1822 his first volume of poems appeared under the title of "Odes and Ballads" and created such a sensation that he was granted an annuity by the king of France. The novels and essays from his pen were received with the greatest enthusiasm. In 1841 he was elected to the academy and in 1845 Hugo was made a peer by Louis Phiilippe. He was very active in the revolution of 1848, and in 1845 he was one of the deputies who vainly attempted to been requested to turn over about $20,000 due assert the rights of the assembly, and to preserve the constitution. For the position he took in this affair he was exiled and fled to the Island of Jersey in the British Channel. After the fall of the Empire he returned to Paris. Bis works have been translated into all of the civilized languages and are know to all classes. Almost to the last he retained his brilliant mental faculties, and for many days before the summons came he would sit bolstered up in bed, pencil in hand, correcting the manuscripts of some unpublished poems. Sorrow at his loss is universal.

TIMELY TOPICS.

THE annual meeting of the state pioneer association held in Lansing a few days since was in many respects one of the most interesting meetings ever held in the state. The programme prepared embraced historical and biographical sketches, reminscences of the early settlement of various localities in the state, recitations, music, etc. One of the papers deserving special mention was the one prepared by Hon. Peter White of Marquette on the early history of the upper peninsula. The history of that wonderful region was carefully reviewed from the time of the negotiations for the narrow strip of land on the southern border of the state for the upper peninsula, until the present time. All the papers showed careful preparation, and will form valuable acquisitions to the historical records of the state. 'Twas a pleasant sight to witness those hardy old pioneers "with faces turned toward the sunset," as they met together to recall the events of their early experiences, and reviewed with pride the grand achievements of the years that are gone. All honor to the hardy pioneers who have worked so long and well and given to the generation of to-day so godly a heritage. Be it ours to ever revere their memory, and hold in sacred trust the lessons aught by their early hardships and pri-

THE law, cheapening postage by increasing the weight of letters to one ounce for the single rate, to go into effect July 1, is already giving token of its influence in the orders that manufacturers are getting. Light weight writing papers have had the preference over the heavy ones to avoid double postage, but now the tendency is setting toward the heavy papers, and the heavy paper which, of course, are greatly to be preferred.

Boarding house keepers and other interested parties in New York, find comfort in the fact that the court of appeals has declared the law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine and other butter substitutes unconstitutional.

A SINGULAR MURDER CASE.

Twice Convicted and now Asks a New Trial

Jackson Marion has been convicted of the murder of John Cameron twice and twice sentenced to death, but each time reprieved and is now awaiting the decision of the supreme court of Nebraska for a new trial, this being the third application.

On the 24th of April, 1872, Marion and Cameron, both of whom were under 20 and boy Cameron, both of whom were under 20 and boy friends, started by wagon from Grasshopper Falls, Ks., for Southern Nebraska. About the middle of May they reached the house of Mrs. Rachel Warren, in Nebraska. Resting there a few days they went on. Four days later Marton returned to Mrs. Warren's alone, having all of Cameron's effects with him. He reported that Cameron had gone to Clay Co., Ks., and then started off himself towards the southeast. In the spring of 1873 the remains of Cameron were found on the banks of Indian Creek, fifteen miles from Beatrice. Three bullet holes in his skull told the story of his death, and the clothing enabled the witnesses, among whom was Marion's wife, to identify the body beyond doubt. Search was made for Marion, but he could not be found. Late in December, 1882, nearly eleven years after the murder, Marion was in jail at Sedan, after the murder, Marion was in jail at Sedan, Ks., for larceny. Sheriff Herron went there and arrested him, learning that for ten years he had been living in Indian Territory. In 1883 Marion was convicted, the chain of evidence being very strong. He was sentenced to be hanged September 10, 1883. The supreme court granted a new trial, because the jury under the old law had fixed the penalty. In April, 1885, Marion was again convicted and sentenced to be hanged June 25. Ever since his arrest three years ago Marion has strongly maintained his innocence, but has refused to give any particulars as to his relations with Cameron or his career since the murder.

the ship's arrival at Aukland. Some years ago a woman applied at a London hospital for treatment for a nervous affection. After listening to a recital of her symtoms, the doctor made her shut her lips upon a clinical thermometer. Upon removing it the patient exclaimed: "Why, I declare, it has done me good already." The doctor humored her delusion, and refrained from any other treatment than a few more applications of the magical glass tube. She was soon cured. A parallel case is now cited by the Philadelphia Medical News, an hysterical patient having been cured by magnetism. The magnet was of wood, but capped with metal; so as to seem cold to the touch.

A Kentucky girl was too much for Tennesee dude. A Louisville damsel was visiting Memphis, and was sitting upon a sofa with a fresh young society man, who, as the conversation progressed, allowed his arm to gradually fall down until he had it around her waist. She arose very indignant and he made the following apology: "I hope you will not think anything of this. It is just a way I have. All the Memphis boys act the same way, and you will have to get used to it. I hope you will not take any offense at it as it's just my way." She left the room, but came back in a few minutes with a married friend, and sat down on the sofa again. Soon she began to yawn and give every indication of being bored. Finally she said: "I'm dread-fully sleepy, and I hope you will go home. You must not take any offense at this. All the Louisville girls act the same way. You are exceedingly tiresome, and you had better go home at once. Don't be offended at this. It is simply a way I have." He didn't linger. ASINGULAR BOOK.

Chap. II. "Overworked;" goes to

Chap. I. "Has Malaria;" goes to Europe. Chap. III. "Has Rheumatisn;" goes to Ems. Chap. IV. Has a row with his Doctor!

The above chapters, Mr. Editor, 1 find in a book recently published by an anonymous author. I have read a deal of sarcasm in my day, but I never read anything equal to the sarcasm herein contained. I suspect the experience portrayed is a personal one; in short, the author intimates as much on page 31. Let me give you a synopsis:

"Malaria" as it states, is the cloak with which superficial physicians cover up a multitude of ill feelings which they do not understand, and do not much care to investigate. It is also a cover for such diseases as they cannot cure. When they advise their patient to travel or that he is overworked and needs rest and is probably suffering from malaria, it is a confession of ignorance or of inability. The patient goes abroad. The change is a tonic and for a time he feels better. Comes home. Fickle appetite, frequent headaches, severe colds, cram's, sleeplessness, irritability, tired feelings, and general unfitness for business are succeeded in due time by alarming attacks of rheumatism which flit about his body regardless of all human fellings.

It is muscular, - in his back. Articular, - in his joints. Inflammatory, my! how he fears it will fly to his heart! Now off he goes to the springs. The doctor sends him there, of course, to get well; at the same time he does not really want him to die on his hands!

That would hurt his business! Better for a few days. Returns. After a while neuralgia transfixes him. He bloats; cannot breathe; has pneumonia; cannot walk; cannot sleep on his left side; is fretful; very nervous and irritable; is pale and flabby; has frequent chills and fevers; everything about him seems to go wrong; becomes suspicious: musters up strength and demands to know what is killing him!

"Great heaven!" he cries, "why have you kept me so long in ignorance? "Because," said the doctor, "I read our rate live years ago. I thought best to keep you comfortable and ignorant of the facts." He dismissed his d ctor, but too late! His fortune has all gone to fees.

But him, what becomes of him? The other day a well-known Wall Street banker said to me "it is really astonishing how general bright's disease is becoming. Two of my personal friends are now dying of it. But it is not incurable I am certain, for my nephew was recently cured when his physicians said recovery was impossible. The case s ems to me to be a wonderful one." This gentleman formerly represented his government in a preparation, tecause his nephew, who is a son of Danish Vice-Consul Schmidt, was pronounce! incurable when the remedy, Warner's safe cure, was begun "Yes," said his father, "I was very skeptical but since tak ng that remedy the boy is well."

I regret to note that ex-President Arthur is said to be a victim to this terrible disease. He ought to live, but the probabilities are that since authorized remedies cannot cure him, his physicians will not advise him to save his life, as so many thousands have done, by the use of Warner's safe cure which Gen. Christiansen, at Drexel, 'as a wonderful remedy.'

Well, I suspect the hero of the book cured himself by the same means. The internal evidence points very strongly to this conclusion. I cannot close my notice of this book better than by quoting his advice to his

"If, my friend, you have such an experience as I have portrayed, do not put your trust in physicians to the exclusison of other remedial agencies. They have no monoply over disease and personally know that many of them are so very 'conscientious' that they would far prefer that their patients should go to Heaven direct from their powerless hands than that they should be saved by the use of any 'unauthorzed' means. And that the author's condemnation s too true, how many thousands duped. and yet rescued, as he was, can personal y testify?

The total number of bushels reported marketed in the ten months, August-May is 8,017,784. This is 32 per cent of the crop 1884. In June, 1884, 39 per cent of the 1883 crop had been reported marketed.

equal the area planted in 1884. Ninetysix per cent of the seed used was grown in to stop the practice, and actually went Michigan, and eight per cent of the seed failed to grow.

The returns give the following percentage for other crops, the comparison being with 1884: Oats-acres sowed 101, condition 92; barley-acres sowed 96, condition 92; serghum-acres planted 92, number of farmers planting 91; meadows and pastures-condition 95; clover sowed this year-acres failed to grow 7, condition 95; prospects for an average crop of apples 77. In the southern four tiers of counties the wages of farm hands average with board, $16.49, and in the northern $16.46 per month; without board the average is $23.80 in southern counties, and $35.70 in the northern counties,

The first footings of the sheep and wool columns in the reports received from the supervisors of 743 townships show that there were 2,004.126 sheep sheared in 1884 yielding 11,357,839 pounds of wool, and that the number of sheep in the same townships the present year is 1,920,302, which is four and eighteen-hundredths per cent less than in 1884.

MARK TWAIN AT WORK.

dis One Solace-Overwhelming Testimony

Against a Brand of Cigars. Mr. Clemens divides his year into two parts, which are not exactly for work and play respectively, but which differ. very much in the nature of their occupations. From the 1st of June to the middle of September the whole family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Clemens and their three little girls, are at Elmira, N. Y. They live there with Mr. T. W. Crane, whose wife is a sister of Mrs. Clemens. A summer-house has been built for Mr. Clemens within the Crane grounds, on a high peak, which stands six hundred feet above the valley which lies spread out before it. The house is built almost entirely of glass, and is modeled exactly on the plan of a Mississippi steamboat's pilot-house. Here, shut off from all outside communications, Mr. Clemens does the hard work of the year, or rather the confining and engrossing work of writing, which demands continuous application day after tance from the house. He goes there every morning about half-past eight and stays there until called to dinner by sort, and works without eating, while the rules are imperative not to disturb him during this working period. His only recreation is his cigar. He is an inveterate smoker, and smokes constantly while at work, and, indeed, all the time from half-past eight in the morning to half-past ten at night, stopping only when at his meals. A cigar lasts him about forty minutes, now that he has reduced to an exact science the art of reducing the weed to ashes. So The area planted to corn this year will he smokes from fifteen to twenty cigars

a day. Some time ago he was persuaded a year or more without tobacco, but he found himself unable to carry along important work which he undertook, and it was not until he resumed smoking that he could do it. Since then his faith in his eigar has not wavered. Like other American smokers, Mr. Clemens is unceasing in his search for a really satisfactory eigar at a really satisfac-tory price, and, first and last, has gathered a good deal of experience in the pursuit. It is related that, having entertained a party of gentlemen one win-ter evening in Hartford, he gave to each just before they left the house one of a new sort of cigar that he was trying to believe was the object of his search. He made each guest light it before starting. The next morning he found all that he had given away lying on the snow beside the pathway across his lawn. Each smoker had been polite enough to smoke until he got out of the house, but every one gaining his liberty had yielded to the instinct of self-preservation and tossed the cigar away, forgetting that it would be found there by daylight. The testimony of the next morning was overwhelming. and the verdict against the new brand was accepted .- Critic,

It is popularly suposed by a large class of farmers that none but business men need to acquire a knowledge of business forms and rules. To their mind the business man occupies a position similar to the lawyer and the doc-tor; he learns his trade and proceeds to get a living by it. This class of men believe that business forms are unintelreleased, his frogship stretched himself a few times to get limbered up and then hopped away as lively as ever, apparently none the worse for his frigid imprisonment.

—Major Laman Fontaine describes in thrilling language his trip to Vicksburg as the bearer of gun caps and dispatches during the siege in rebellion times. The seem very desirable, however, that the younger men, who are one day to fill the places of the present generation, should learn how to handle with ease and accuracy the business forms and methods which commercial men by long practice and experience have to-

THE TWO MEMBRANES.

Important Parts in the Human Economy Played by the Mucous and Serous Membranes.

Two of the membranes of the body are of pre-eminent importance from their extent, their work, and the diseases to which they give rise. Their chief office is to secrete fluids for the purpose of keeping the parts soft, lessening friction, and aiding in the passage of substances.

One is the mucous membrane, the other is the serous. The former lines every cavity of the body that has an external outlet-the nostrils, mouth, gullet, stomach, the ducts of the liver, the intestines, bladder, etc., and the bronchial tubes of the lungs.

The serous membrane lines the cavities of the chest and of the abdomen. and also covers—as the skin does the body-the brain, heart, lungs, liver, etc. It also forms a sac around the heart, which it encloses, and is called the pericardium. It moreover lines the heart must be sold within, where it is called the endocar-

It may aid the memory of some of our readers if we add that endo means within," and peri "around."

The brain also is enclosed with a second serous membrane, called the arachnoid. As the brain substance extends down through the spinal column. so the investing serous membrane fol-lows it. A similar membrane lines the smooth surfaces of the joints.

Coryza—a "cold in the head"—is an inflammation of the mucous membrane of the nostrils; pharyngitis is an in-flammation of the same membrane in the back part of the mouth; laryngitis, in the larynx, or vocal box; bronchitis. in the bronehial tubes.

So, too, the mucous membrane of the stomach may be inflamed, causing a large secretion of "phlegm"-mucous. Inflammation of the mucous membrane of the liver or gall ducts prevents the flow of bile, causing most agonizing pain and jaundice. A similar inflammation in the intestines gives inflammation of the bowels, or enteritis.

An inflammation of the serous membrane of the brain causes at first delirium, and then stupor, by the pressure of the accumulated fluid. This is cerebral meningitis. When the inflammation affects the membrane of the brain and the spinal cord, it is cerebro-spinal meningitis. Pleurisy is inflammation of the serons membrane of the chest and lungs; pericarditis, that of the heartsac; endocarditis, that of the inner membrane of the heart; peritonitis. that of the abdomen. - Youth's Companion.

The Tooth Factory.

The domain of the dentist is about to be disputed. A great discovery has been made which will revolutionize the whole business and emancipate the sufferers. A factory has been established, with plenty of capital to back it, for the purpose of making artificial teeth by machinery. All that any one who is troubled with his teeth will have to do will be to get them all pulled out. Then he can purchase a brand new, machine made set and be exempt from toothache all the rest of his life. There is, of course, nothing new in the making and using of artificial teeth, but it will be easily seen that the manufacture by machinery presents great advantages. When the making of watches by ma-chinery was started there were many protests that the new way would never be as good as the old. But the exactness soon attained, and the convenience of having the parts interchangeable, brought about a revolution, and the factory watches now rank above the hand-made. The same advantages will be had in the factory teeth. If one set gets broken, or comes out, an exactly similar one can be ordered from the factory at very small cost If the plate gets cracked it can be replaced in the same way All that will be necessary will be to give the number of the plate, and a new one, precisely like the old, will be sent by return mail. - N. good policy for persons who have passed the meridian of life to migrate to these places. The majority of them do not acclimate well and soon break down, The same is true with delicate children. The best time to make the change is in the summer when the temperatures of the two sections are nearest alike.

The Florida climate is moist and generally warm, although there are times when the air is decidedly chilly and disagreeable. It was the moisture of the atmosphere that first led physicians to send consumptives there to pass the winter months. Moist air is somewhat easier to breathe than dry, but medical scientists are not agreed as to its possessing any other advantage.

It is a significant fact that many physicians who formerly recommended a change of climate for their consumptive patients now order them to stay at home, or at most not to go far away.

The best results in the treatment of consumption and kindred pulmonary disorders have been obtained by keeping the patients at home, housing them in well-ventilated rooms and nourishing their wasting bodies with such food. meter shows this to be the warmer and only such, as they may need. Warm, poorly ventilated rooms and a dletary of nicknacks, soups and meat extracts, are better calculated to make a well person siek than a siek one well.

Here in our climate people can not be too careful about their dress, and it is about time they were beginning to understand that overdressing is just as detrimental to health as underdressing.

The human body is so constituted as to readily and safely adapt itself to any ordinary atmospheric changes that may take place. When the heat rises beyond a certain point, perspiration sets up and is followed by evaporation, which is the natural process of reducing the temperature. When the temperature falls below a given point, combustion is increased and heat enough generated to keep the warmth of the body up to the normal standard.

Nature can be aided in this work, but there is great danger of doing more harm than good. By dressing very warm she allows her fires to get quite low-in fact, many have to resort to the cooling process-or, by not wearing sufficient clothing, she may exhaust her supply of fuel in her efforts to keep up the necessary heat. Either extreme should be studiously avoided .- Pittsburgh Dispatch.

OLD-FASHIONED SCHOOLS.

Instance of the Schoolmaster's Tyranny. The children of to-day do not know half their happiness. Kind treatment and gentle methods of instruction are so much a matter of course, that the days when teachers were regarded as tyrants seem too remote to concern them at all. Yet it is but one generation since hundreds of unhappy scholars were unable to separate the thought of schoolmaster from the twin idea of flagellation.

The autobiography of the late Dr. Marion Sims recalls those times with singular vividness. As a little boy he was cruelly bullied and abused by his teachers, and his parents before him had received the same sort of treatment. He gives an amusing account of an accident which led to the escape of his mother, Mahaley Mackey, from the power of one such tyrant when she was a little girl.

The school which she attended was held in a log cabin, situated in the midst of a large tract of the pine woods of South Carolina. It was built of unpeeled logs, whose rough bark and numerous crevices afforded welcome shelter to many insects and other small creatures. One day, as little Mahala was sitting with her back to the teacher, upon the long bench of pine planks that extended across the room, a green lizard darted from the wall and ran close beside her. Too much startled to gain flesh, to acquire an appetite, to enjoy a think what she was doing, she seized regular habit of body, to obtain refreshing the intruder by the tip of its tail and sleep, to feel and know that every fibre flung it over her shoulder with a shriek and tissue of your system is being braced of terror. WEST INDIA PEPPER-POT.

A New Relish for the Table Coming Into

In a city restaurant the other day I came across a peculiar dish. While studying the menu, and experiencing the usual difficulty felt by men of vacillating mind in making choice of a plat for luncheon, the proprietor, with whom I had a slight acquaintance, came up and said: "Why don't you try our 'pepper-pot?" "What's pepper-pot?" I not unnaturally inquired, and was informed that it was a West India dish which could be obtained nowhere else in London. That settled the matter, and "pepper-pot" was ordered. It proved to be a savory stew, rather pep-pery, as its name denotes, with a peculiar aromatic flavor. While afterward discussing some celery and Stilton, the proprietor came up again, and was good enough to enlighten me concerning the peculiarities of "pepper-pot." His first statement rather startled me. "Our pepper-pot is only three years old," said he. "When it's kept another year or two it will be bet-ter." Mentally regretting that I had not been informed earlier as to the age of the delicacy, I inquired further concerning this wonderful dish, and gathered the following from the restauranteur: "I have lived many years in the West Indies, and while racking my brains one day to find some specialty with which this place would always be associated, I bethought me of 'pepper-pot.' No one in London had ever heard of or knew how to make it. The first requisite was a supply of 'cassareep'" (I won't guar-antee the spelling of the word), "and after some trouble I found a West Indian produce importer who got me a supply at half a guinea per bottle. Now cassareep is the juice pressed out of the cassava, and in its raw state is deadly poison. It is the basis, I believe, of the stuff the Carib Indians use to poison their arrows with. But when boiled it is perfectly harmless, and possesses the curious property of preserving meat for any length of time. ## A WONDERFUL REGION.

The Thousands of Islands Off the Southern Coast of Florida.

In the St. Lawrence there are the Thousand Islands. Whether they fail by one or two that complete roundness of ten times one hundred I do not know. On the southern end of the Gulf State there may be seen on the map a stretch called the Ten Thousand Islands. He was a very unimaginative person, niggardly, having a dread of exaggeration, who named these wonderful islands. He skimped his nomenclature. There are not ten thousand islands, there must be a million of them, and more to spare, almost all of them covered with mangroves. To deacribe them were a difficult task. I idea of their number by asking the reader to think of one of those old mosaic floors the Romans delighted in. The infinite countless little bits of stone are the islands, the cement the water. Island after island appears emerging out of these blue bays. Some are but so narrow that a boat can not ING "EVERYBODY CHEWS NIM-pass, and then it expands to a ROD." SEND FOR SAMPLES. mile wide. Beautiful silent harbors are entered with peninsulas jutting into them, and behind comes labyrinth. It is an endless archipelago, all green and smiling. A man might hide himself here, providing he could only live, and nere, providing he could only live, and remain uncaught forever; tracking him would be impossible. Only here and there on some of the islands is there the appearance of land, percent ible by a thir ible by a thin ridge. You can tell it by the land wood growing on it. Centuries ago this island might have been on the sea-front, and some storm threw up the sea-bottom. Stretching then out in every direction, these in-tricate islands block the way. There may be eight, ten, or twenty miles to cross before the main-land would be reached, that is, if you had the wings of a man-of-war bird, and could fly. In a boat, working in and out through this maze, you would have to row maybe one hundred miles, then finally you might fetch up on Florida proper. This would be the hazy country which. little boys read about on their maps, spelling it out, "The Everglades," the "Ever" describing capitally the constant appearance of a great deal of water, occasionally hummocks, the true home of the alligator, a God-forsaken region, where the saw-grass impedes progress.—Barnet Phillips, in Harper's Magazine.

MICHIGAN NEWS.

Alger Disapproves.

Gov. Alger gives the following reasons for his disapproaal of the Eagan prison bill for the abolition of the contract labor system.

"In my inaugural message I recom-mended the abolition of the prison contract system. I admit that I omitted recommending that before the contract system was abolished another system should be substituted. It was a grave omission, and I suppose I will have to take the responsibility therefor. But whether this blame rests wholly on myself does not matter; my duty at present is very clear. In the Egan bill there is no provision for a working capial to carry on business, so that the convicts shall be kept in employment. Senator Belknap during the debate moved to appropriate $50,000, and Senator Brown moved to appropriate a larger sum-$250,000 L think, for a working capital. Both amendments were defeated and the bill passed without any appropriation. Under the bill about 400 men would go out of employment in Jackson and Ionia prisons by the ex-piration of contracts within the next two years, and this number would be constantly increasing. Now, to keep these men to work by the state under the new system, would require several branches of business to be created and put in working order, plants to be purchased, and in short all the processes and paraphernalia of two large manufacturing establishments. Until this is done the convicts would have to be shut up in their cells and exercised at intervals in the prison yards, to preserve them from sickness, which scope of liberty would be unsafe and dangerous and cannot be thought of. You see, the present contractors would necessarily remove their plant and machinery, so that money is needed at once. The only appropriation is a $10,000 appropriation on a separate bill for piece work at the Jackson prison. This is for the broom business. A contractor furnished all the material terial, and the convicts worked it up under the supervision of the prison authoities. But how long would this last under the Eagan bill? Not more than a few weeks. Not less than $200,-000 to $200,000 is necessary. I regretall this exceedingly, but I shall not sign the bill."

A Double Murder.

After the exhibition of 'Cole's circus at Houghton the other night, while Chas. Barry, a detective belonging to the show, was lying in bed in a sleeping car, one Lawrence, porter of the sleeper, came in, took Barry by the hand and fired and shot, the ball passing through his bedy. Barry returned the fire, the ball of his own pistol going thropub the porter's lung and severing an artery, causing almost instant death. Brs. Jones and Mason held a post mortem, finding the ball against the tack bone. Barry will also die. An old grudge existed between the parties. They had, had a fight at a former time. The manager and some others are detained as witnesses.

Can Michigan Raise Sugar?

Can Michigan produce good sugar at a profit? This question is now being solved in Lenawee county. Daniel Root of Hudson, one of the most extensive growers of sorghum in the state, believes that the manufacture of sugar can be made a success, and last year he erected buildings and machinery, and begun experimenting. He produced 6.000 pounds of nice sugar, which he readily disposes of, and it is of fine quality. Just the cost of production, however, we cannot learn, but Mr. Root is enthusisatic in the advocacy of the industry.

SHOT BECAUSE HE WORKED. A horrible murder was committed at Barn-. hill, a small mining town in Tuscarawas county, Ohio, the other morning. Six weeks ago Arnold Abbahl, a "Swiss," came to this country with a wife and two children. He went to Barnhill to work in the mines, and being very poor lived in a tumbled down shanty of one room. Recently the miners and operators had trouble about wages and the miners cuit work. Abbahl continued, however. The night before the murder a committee waited on him and ordered him to quit also. He did not understand them, and started to the mine as usual. He got but a short distance when someone crept out of the bushes by the wayside and

High tide and sunrise on the sea,
Spring tide and day's first dawn:
A day like this once came to me In years forever gone.

The crimeon streak that light low
Above the ocean's breast,
Shone on that sea of long ago;
And memory may not rest.

Tis like the opening of a book
Whose leaves were closed by hands
Long cold. And dear dead faces look
In mine from slient lands; And in my heart awakes a thrill As of some gr at regret
So passion-strong that my proud will Must all its pride forget,
And hot tests fill my eyes until

My quivering tace is wet. High tide and sunrise on the sea, Spring tide and day's first dawn; The rosy light was gloom to me For all it rested on.

A dead hand clasped within my own-A dead face raised to mine, And on that face already shone A glory most divine; And far away uprose a moan From ocean's crimson line.

Sunrise, sunset, or ebb or flow--What matters it to me? And what if days of long ago Return upon the sea? The waves that foam in crimson strife Where sea and shore have met, And all these things with memories rife May come and go, and yet, They cannot bring the dead to life, Nor hush one great regret!

NOT WISELY BUT TOO WELL.

- Vivien Castane, in St. Louis Magazine.

It was a rainy day. A train was waiting at the Union Depot. A lady and gentleman stood near the door of the Ladies' Waiting-Room, while another muffled in a gossamer, sat on a bench in a corner.

"How you can call her pretty and lovable, passes my comprehension," the lady was saying, her tones indicative of extreme scorn and disgust.

"I own Jessica is somewhat under the weather to-day, figuratively and litterally," said the gentleman amusedly, giving a quizzical glance over at the lady in the corner. "Very few ladies look their best when they have a cold and when a chilly rain is doing its best to make it worse,"

"Well, trains wait for no one, so, if you will be so kind as to put me on mine, Brother Raymond, I'll leave vou to Jessica's tender mercies. Don't forget to tell Catharine that I utterly disapprove of her sister Jessica."

"Very well, I'll not forget to tell her," he retorted in a smothered voice. At which Mrs. Stenby looked at him suspiciously. Was it possible her brother was laughing at her? Herthe wealthy, the exclusive, the tasteful Mrs. Steuby, whose dicta was always considered :ufallible?

Very well, let him laugh! After putting his offended and uuwieldily plump-sister aboard the train and bidding her a hasty good-bye, Raymond La Bruce returned to the forlorn little figure sitting in its cor-

"Your sister did not like me-I know she did not!" said a plaintive voice hoarsely.

"Jessica, you must take off that ridiculous gossamer at once," Raymond authoritatively commanded, not replying to her complaint.

"Why? she asked, looking up innocently. "It is no longer necessary. Our train will soon be in, and we will not be exposed to any more rain. I will get you a cup of coffee at once, and you must wrap up well in this afghan."

"Thanks," she answered as well as she could between two sneezes.

Jessica Cler had not long been out of school, and had been visiting a school friend. She was now on her way to her married sister's house which was her home. Raymond's own sister, Mrs. Stenby, had been visiting him and he had come up from the country on an Eastern bound train with her to the Union Depot in Lwhere he also expected to meet Jessica Cler.

Jessica came and met Mrs. Stenby, who was not charmed with her, which was not after the fashion of other people, for Jessica made friends wherever she went. Raymond La Bruce and his wife Catherine, Jessica's sister, adored her and thought there were none like her. Perhaps it was because she heard the girl's praises so constantly sung. that Mrs. Stenby found no beauty in this girl's peachy complexion, wavy brown hair, and pellucid brown eyes.

Jessica stood up at Raymond's command and he divested her of the of; fending water-proof. When it was removed there was revealed a rounded girlish form clad in dark green serge, while her dark green Derby was adorned by a single iridescent wing.

"Now you look more like a civilized being," commented Raymond, as he wrauped a long soft afghan about her.

Then he went away for the coffee.
"You are very good," she said gratefully as she sipped the steaming cup. "And you have been very naughty, Now confess and tell me at once what you have been doing to contract that

When she laughingly related her conquests, at festivities, of masculine hearts-for she was very gay that winter-he found himself regarding her with gloomy brows.

"I really think Jessica is becoming serious over Tom Langtree's offer of marriage, and I hope that she will act like a sensible girl and take him."

"Why? Are you tired of your own sister?" asked Raymond, half savagely, but still going on with his shaving. Catherine sat by the cheery fire warming her pink palms. At Raymend's question she turned her blue eyes upon him wonderingly. "Why, Raymond, how absurd you are sometimes. I declare, you have changed lately and are not at all your agreeable self," she laughed.

Raymond smothered a sigh. "To tell the truth, Catherine, I am not well. I had thought to take you all a little trip-anywhere you wished to go-but I suppose Jessica's marriage will frustrate my plans." "Jessica's marriage! You ridiculous man! Who has said anything about Jessica marrying?" almost screamed Catherine.

"Didn't you?" "Why, no; I only said I hoped she would consider Tom Langtree's offer favorably. It is not her first offer, by any means, you must surely know." "I don't see what she wants to marry for anyway. Isn't she happy with

"Why should she?"

"O, my dear, how absurd you are! Why, if I had not desired some other home than aunt's, I should never have married you!"

Raymond put up shaving materials thoughtfully, while Catherine gazed into the fire with a placid smile of serene content.

She adored her husband and children, and envied no woman.

"Will you drive with me this afternoon, dear?" asked Raymond on his way out of the room.

"O, certainly," she responded with ready alacrity.

At the foot of the stairs Raymond met Jessica. "Is it true-this about your marriage?" he demanded. She laughingly freed her hands from his firm clasp. "Catherine has been babbling." "That is no answer. Tell me, are you to marry soon?" he persisted.

She shivered. "O, Bro. Raymond, don't you see I am cold? Let me go up to Cathie's room. She always has a good fire." "Tell me!" he insisted, placing one hand under her chin and raising her face to his. "I shall never marry!" Then she sped up-stairs while Raymond went out of the house with a cleared face.

"Jessica! You are shaking like a leaf! Have you a chill?" Catherine demanded as Jessica sank down on the rug, spreading out her hands to the fire, shivering audibly.

"O, I don't know-Catherine. I am going away!" Jessica exclaimed with chattering teeth.

"What nonsense!" "It is true! I think I shall visit auntie awhile." "And just now Raymond was planning a trip for us all-and I was thinking of Cuba." grumbled Catherine.

"And can't mamma and Katie come to!" cried the little boy, clasping his

The little ones soon tired and Jessica was ready to take them home.

"Jessie, you do not seem well, dear. I am afraid it was not prudent for any of us to come out to-day. The east wind is so raw and chilly, and you don't seem strong enough to row the boat," Catherine objected.

Jessica, with a smile, took her place, but Catherine said she would wait till Jessica took the children to the shore, then she would call Sam or Jim to come back for her. Jessica took the children safely over, and Catherine saw her kneel and kiss them, then giving them to their nurse who was waiting, Jessica once more propelled the boat toward the island. "Jessica, it is not like you to be so perverse. Why did you not call Sam to come after me, as I proposed?"

"Catherine, dear, don't scold, but kiss me, kiss me twice, once for brother Raymond, and tell him so when he comes home, won't you?"

"You can deliver your own kisses to him then," Catherine laughed. With a grave face Jessica rowed once more shoreward. "Catherine, write for Raymond to come home to-night!" "Jessica, what ails you? I really believe you love Raymond more than do," Catherine exclaimed teasingly. "I do!" said Jessica. There was no laughter in her face, no merriment in her voice, but Catherine only smiled absently. She was not thinking of Jessica's whims and moods. The boat grated on the shore and Catherine sprang out. But what was this?

Instead of following-instead of fastening the boat, Jessica retained her seat, the boat backed into the deep water, Jessica rose wildly, and the next moment the boat was drifting down the river-empty.

She was quite dead when they found her body. The hips would never again smile in jesting speech, the brown eyes never again sparkle with love and merriment. Raymond could come back to Catherine now .- Annabel B. White, in Chicago Ledger.

Ivy-Clad Walls.

The common belief that ivy trained against the walls of a dwelling house produces damp walls and general un-healthiness is fallacious. The very opposite is the case. If one will carefully examine an ivy-clad wall after a shower of rain, he will notice that while the overlapping leaves have conducted the water from point to point wall beneath is perfectly dry and dusty. More than this, the thirsty shoots which force their way into glance, "for you to impute evil motives to me is too much." will afford a firm hold, act like suckers in drawing out any particles of moisture for their own nourishment. Their or three cents more per pound than first knowledge of pigs was gained from white ones, and in their minds, white is the proper color for pigs. The number of so-called breeds of white pigs known in England, was at one time very large; a slight variation, such as we may expect in a strain, was given a distinctive local name, and called a breed. English breeders took a long step in simplifying pig nomenclature when they grouped pigs by their colors and sizes, and gave us large and small breeds of white pigs. In 1852, a well known English breeder exhibited at one of the important fairs, several pigs of extraordinary merit, but too large to be judged among the small white breed, and not large enough for the Large Whites. The animals were so remarkably fine that they could not be disqualified. The judges met the difficulty by making a third class, calling it the Middle White breed. Since then, while only the large and small black breeds have It was three days after Raymond's been admitted, the white pigs have enarture, and Jessica rowed the lit-Small White. How to Get Early Garden Crops.

There are many ways of getting early crops, or of trying to get them, such as starting the plants in the house or hot-bed, and covering them with glass, etc., after they are set out. But when these methods are not adopted, there is still a chance to have early vegetables and a good garden. It is simply to select the warmest and driest soil, and sow or plant early. It is not desirable or wise to sow or plant the main crops before the soil is in good working condition. But for a few early crops on a small scale, we can well afford to run a little risk of losing our seed by to early sowing. One thing however should not be overlooked. Do not depend on this early sowing, but sow or plant again a little later when the soil and weather are more favorable. If the first sowing succeeds, you are so much ahead; if it fails, you have lost only the seed and your labor. You can well afford to run this risk. There are some crops which can be sown the moment the frost is out of the soil, with little or no risk. Among these we mention peas, cabbage, cauliflower, spinach, onions, lettuce, celery, beet, carrot, parsnip, etc. It is seldom that these crops are hurt by early frost. Last year a frost in May destroyed many cabbage plants but this is a very unu-ual occurrence. Among the crops which we should resow without waiting to see if the first sowing will escape, are beets, radishes, cabbage, cauliflower, beans and sweet corn.

Farmers' Clubs.

Farmers' clubs are a great want. We have State and County Agricultural Societies, with their annual fairs, which are good as far as they go, but their meetings for discussions are generally but once a year, and these durthe fair week, when the attentions is ters. We have agricultural papers enough, but their circulation in many of the farming towns is very limited. What we want is a farmers' club inevery town or buiness center, where farmers come to market, or to get their supplies, that they may have opportunity for a conference, for an hour or two, on some topic previously announced, and occasional exhibitions of fruits and vegetables, during the summer and fall. In this way, the best farmers, with their reading, experiments and methods, would be brought in close contact with those who are in the back-ground, and the business of farming be made far more attractive and profitable. Our census statistics for the last thirty years show a steady "Why do you wish to pain us so, until it has reached the ground, the expense of the agricultural towns. The removal of drone comb, says Charles Dadant in the Bee Journal is worth many dollars to the bee keeper, for thirty:two drone cells occupy as much space as fifty worker cells, and one whole comb, or 150 square inches, would produce 5,000 drones instead of 7,500 workers. Hence he argues in favor of drone traps.

Putting printers' ink around the trees in the orchard this month will do more to keep the canker-worm moth from ascending them than it will later in the season. Especially is it needed where they were plenty last year, as the ground may be well filled with them. If there are any eggs of the tent caterpillar in the twigs, they will be swollen enough now to be readily seen, and should be cut off and the twigs burned.

A stone smoke house a few feet square and cheaply covered by boards is very convenient around farm houses. Besides its use for smoking meats, it is a convenient receptacle for wood ashes, or when not required as a smoke house may be stored with feed for pigs, to whose pen it will naturally be adjacent. On farms where stone is abundant the cost of such a building, aside from roofing, will be only lime, sand and labor.

Prof. L. B. Arnold says a dairy farm costs ten per cent less to operate than grain growing or mixed agriculture; second, the mean returns average a little mere than other branches; third, prices are nearer uniform and more reliable; fourth, dairying exhausts the soil less; fifth, it is more secure against changes in the season, since the dairying does not suffer so much from the wet and frost and varying seasons, and he can, if prudent, provide against. drought.

An Indiana farmer writes about the proper time to sow clover seed. He says: "For four successive years I sowed in March, when the ground was freezing and thawing, and failed in getting a stand worth leaving. For three successive years I have waited until my wheat had grown up to about eight to twelve inches high. By that time it was firmly rooted in the ground; then I dragged it with a light sharp tooth harrow or drag; then I sowed my seed while the ground was fresh. Then I sowed about thirty pounds of plaster per acre, and for these successive years I have had a good stand of clover and good crops of wheat."

Orchard grass is a robust grower and very tenacious of life. Spring operations will soon commence, and with these a demand for good farm hands. The general rule that is followed in this country is to put off the hiring of men to the last moment, and trust to chance for some one coming along, and then probably some inferior workman has to be taken, or none at all. Men who know their business on a farm will not wait, and are early picked up in the neighborhood in which they may reside. The trusting to men coming along just at the driftof our population toward the exact moment you are crowded is a cities and villages. These gain at the bad policy. There should always be commences, and it will pay any farmer to secure good farm hands early, and pay them good wages.

A little poltry manure around the early cucumbers will be appreciated by them. A very small quantity of salt and lime will keep the insects and borers from working on the roots of these plants.

No difference how much the season may crowd, it is foolishness for the farmer to break down by overwork; and the prudent husbandman will so manage his work as to always keep it from crowding him.

An ounce of nitrate of soda disolved in four gallons of water is said to make most excellent stimulant for bulbs; and it no doubt would be equally good for all kinds of flowers and plants. It should be applied twice a week after the plants send up their stalks,

It is well to remember at this time of the year that one early hoeing is worth several later ones, and that the wisest farmer never allows the weeds to get the start of him, but always keeps them very close to the ground.

One thing that should be kept prominently in mind is that plant life cannot be sustained without proper food, any more than animal life can, and that the growth of the patterns of plant will be directly in proportion to the amount and suitableness of the food furnish-

The great secret in making underdraining a permanent improvement is in securing uniform fall when laying the tile and maintaining a good outlet. When the outlet has been closed for a year or two, if there be a good fall, reopening will cause it to wash out obstructing sediment.

It is not generally known that the average value of an acre of celery in the region of Kalamazoo, Mich., is $600, and that the annual crop reaches 5,000 tons. An acre contains from 25,000 to 30,000 plants. The land was originally sandy marsh.

The tropical gooseberry, which is cultivated in Florida, grows on a handsome tree from ten to fifteen feet in hight.
