The game between "the young ladies' ball club" and a picked nine at the fair grounds Saturday was popularly characterized as a snide affair. The girls were as ignorant of base ball as a hen of water; it was with difficulty that the second baseman could throw a ball to the pitcheress and a great shout went up when one of the "ladies" caught a ball. The boys played the worst ball they could and it was impossible to get the girls to beat them. The spectators, cheated out of a good ball game, got their money's worth by shouting derisive things at the playing. The costumes were rather immodest and altogether the whole affair was decidedly "off-color." The man living knows what the story was.—Register.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

On hearing the sad news of the death of Gen. Grant, the G. A. R. Post at once set about making arrangements for a memorial service to be held at the Town Hall on last Sabbath morning at the usual hour of service. At the time appointed the bell of the Congregational Church tolled, and the people wended their way to the place of meeting. A large company gathered to pay their respects to the great General.

The services were opened with a dirge by the Chelsea Cornet Band. The low beat of the drum brought sad thoughts to many a true heart. Then came some services by the G. A. R. Post, after which Rev. J. A. Kaley led in prayer. Next came singing by the choir, followed by the reading of the 19th Psalm by Rev. H. M. Gallup, and then another song. The three ministers then spoke. Rev. J. A. McIlwain gave an outline of the career of Gen. Grant with comments. Rev. J. A. Kaley thought that Grant killed the rebellion by cutting the confederacy in two. Rev. H. M. Gallup closed the exercises with a glowing tribute and an appeal against hero worship.

The services were useful as reminding us of a sad era in our history and the rich blessing it brought us.

AROUND A GREAT STATE.

Poissonous Cheese.

At the meeting of the state board of health, July 14, Dr. Vaughan presented a report of his investigations on poisonous cheese...

KINDS OF CHEESE THAT ARE POISONOUS.

A German author says: "The numerous kinds of soft cheese, prepared in small families, or on small farms, are generally the cause of the symptoms..."

EFFECTS OF THE CHEESE.

The symptoms produced by "sick" cheese, as reported by German and American physicians, agree quite closely and are as follows: Dryness of the mouth and throat...

HOW TO RECOGNIZE POISONOUS CHEESE.

There is no certain means aside from a chemical examination by which a poisonous cheese can be distinguished from a wholesome one. The most reliable ready method is probably that proposed by Dr. Vaughan a year ago...

NATURE OF THE POISON.

Dr. Vaughan has succeeded in isolating the poison, to which he has given the name tyrotoxin (from two Greek words which mean cheese and poison). It is a product of slight putrefaction in the cheese which probably occurs in the vat, as the curd has been known to poison a person...

Mill Owners' Ultimatum.

A joint conference of mill owners from Bay City, West Bay City, Saginaw and East Saginaw was held in East Saginaw on the 23rd. Of the eighty-eight mills on the river seventy were represented either by the owners or by proxy...

As efforts are being constantly made by designing men to convey the impression to the employes that it is the intention of the mill owners to soon start their mills and salt works on various plans as to hours of running and the scale of wages...

First—The wages which prevailed in the various mills and salt works at the time the men were compelled to quit work, were fully as high, and in some cases higher than the employes could afford to pay without actual pecuniary loss...

Third—In view of the fact that the wages paid were as high as we could afford to pay and the hours for labor satisfactory to our employes until interference by professional agitators, therefore we hereby determine not to start our mills and salt works until the men are willing to return to work on the same basis as they were when the works were shut down by an armed mob...

ROACH'S RUIN. John Roach, the well-known ship builder, has made an assignment. The liabilities are not known, but are well up in the millions. The failure is said to be due to the decision of the attorney-general on the Dolphin matter. The particularly unpleasant feature of this failure is the throwing out of employment of about 3,000 men at a time when business is dull.

ENROLLMENT OF INDIANS. A late enrollment of the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians shows a falling off since last census in 1874 of 2,495 people. The Cheyennes then numbered 3,005 and Arapahoes 2,300, while the present count shows the former to have only 2,369 and the latter 1,300, or a total of 3,669. By this count the government will gain annually $90,000 in issuance of beef.

MULLETT PROTESTS. H. B. Mullett, formerly supervising architect of the treasury, has written a vigorous protest against employing convict labor in government buildings, which has been laid before Secretary Manning. down to the ford a few minutes later. In the second wagon were Mr. and Mrs. Koots and Mr. Jay Carman. They drove into the stream and were swept down also. Only Anson Carman was rescued alive.

A PLUCKY WARDEN. For several days there has been serious trouble in the Brooklyn penitentiary, which culminated in a riot by several convicts to kill the warden. Learning of this the warden, with eight assistants armed with revolvers, went into the ward. The cells are so arranged that to open one, all must be opened. Stationing an officer at each cell, with an order to shoot the first convict who left his cell, the warden took the ringleader of the revolt and gave him 15 lashes on the bare back. This promptness on the part of the warden effectually quelled the revolt.

A BETRAYED FATE. Ida Kimball, aged 15, the beautiful and accomplished daughter of Hiram Kimball, the banker of Bedford, Ind., shot and killed T. M. Giles. Miss Kimball called on Giles at his music store and after a few moments conversation suddenly drew a revolver from her dress and fired two shots into his head. Giles died within an hour. After the shooting the girl walked swiftly to her home. She told her mother that Giles had betrayed her two years before and that she could bear it no longer. On hearing her daughter's confession Mrs. Kimball fell insensible and has remained unconscious ever since. Mr. Kimball is nearly crazy with grief, but the girl remains apparently free from any deep emotion. She has not been arrested. Giles' wife is completely prostrated by the blow.

GRANT'S RESTING PLACE. Central Park, New York city, has been chosen as the burial place for Gen. Grant and Mrs. Grant. Mr. W. J. Arkell has arranged the following time table for the removal of the remains from Mt. McGregor: Tuesday, Aug. 4, leave Mt. McGregor at 1 p. m.; leave Saratoga 2:30 p. m.; arrive in Albany 4:30 p. m.; leave Albany at 12 o'clock noon, Wednesday, August 5, and arrive about 4:30 p. m. in New York. In the interval from 4:30 p. m. Tuesday to noon of Wednesday, August 5, the remains will lie in state at the Capitol, and from the time of arrival in New York on Wednesday afternoon until Saturday, Aug. 8, the body will lie in state at the city hall. The public obsequies will take place on Saturday at such time as the civic authorities may arrange, and the interment will then follow in Central Park.

OSTENDING THE WHITES. After mature consideration, the President and his Cabinet have reached the conclusion that the leases of lands in Indian Territory held by cattlemen are invalid and it has been determined to take steps to have them set aside. Gen. Sheridan has reported that no permanent settlement of the Indian troubles in the Territory can be effected while the cattlemen are in possession of the best lands and it is the intention of the President to remove the disturbing element and reserve Indian Territory for the exclusive occupation of the Indians. The method of procedure has not yet been determined. A Presidential proclamation may be issued, but it is regarded by well informed persons as more probable that actions will be begun in the United States courts of the Western Division of Kansas having jurisdiction over the Territory looking to a declaration of the invalidity of the leases.

AN OLD-TIME "OBSERVER" GONE. The Rev. Samuel Irenaeus Prime, D. D., editor of the New York Observer, for the past 45 years, died at Manchester, Vt., a few days ago aged 73 years. Dr. Prime was attacked by paralysis last Sunday and since then he has been steadily sinking. He was born at Ballston, N. Y., 1812, graduated at Williams college when 17 and immediately began his studies for the ministry at Princeton, entering the ministry of the Presbyterian church. He preached for several years, but in 1840 gave up the ministry to become editor of the New York Observer, in which he has written as "Irenaeus." He has written upwards of 40 books. He was made a D. D. by Hampden Sidney college, Va. He comes of a brilliant family, his brother Edward D. Griffin Prime, being associate editor of the Observer, while another brother, Wm. Cooper Prime, was for many years editor of the New York Journal of Commerce.

DIED AT HIS POST. An express train running between Atlantic City and Philadelphia ran through an open switch at Frankville and struck a lumber car. The Pullman car which was next to the engine, turned around, its hind trucks being left on the track. Its occupants were badly shaken but none seriously hurt. The passengers of the smoking car were compelled to climb out of the window. The rest of the train remained on the track. Geo. Murphy, engineer, had ample time to jump and save his life, but he bravely remained at his post, put on the brake reversed, and threw open the throttle. The engine crashed into the lumber car and with the tender turned completely over burying Murphy under it. Murphy died in a few moments after the accident. There were about 150 passengers on the train, who say their lives were saved by the bravery of the engineer. A rigid investigation will be made to ascertain the responsibility for the misplaced switch.

A LIFE FOR A LIFE. The huge elephant Albert, belonging to the Barnum show, killed his keeper, James B. McCormick at Keene, N. H., a few days ago. During the afternoon performance James B. Hutchinson, one of the managers, announced that as the elephant had taken human life it would have to be shot. He requested any member of the Keene Light Guard who were present to report to their captain at the door of the museum canvas. At 4:30 p. m. the elephant, escorted by two keepers and 33 riflemen and nearly all the members of the show, was taken down a deep ravine and securely chained to several large trees. Geo. Arstingstall, the trainer, drew a chalk line around the animal's head and one around the brain, as targets for the sharpshooters. At a given signal the soldiers fired, and the elephant fell dead in his chains without a struggle. He is next in size to Jumbo, and was valued at $10,000.

FOREIGN NEWS. A DEAD MAHDI. The report of the death of El Mahdi has been confirmed. SAME AS BUDDENSHIEK. Forty-five persons are reported killed by the fall of a row of tenement houses in Cologne. ITALIAN LIGHTNING. There has been a terrific storm at Torre Cajetan, in Italy. Thirteen persons were killed and twenty-two injured by lightning. DROWNED. A life-boat which put out from London to rescue the crew of a stranded vessel ran upon a sunken wreck and sank in a few minutes. Eight persons were drowned. MARRIAGE OF ROYALTY. Queen Victoria's youngest daughter Beatrice was married on the 23rd inst. to Prince Henry of Batt-nberg. The marriage took place at St. Mildred's chapel, six miles from Osborne. The queen gave the bride away. REPELLED AND CAPTURED. Interest in affairs in the Sudan is revived by news from Kassala to the effect that a large force of rebels attacked that place and made several desperate attempts to carry it by assault. They were finally repulsed and the garrison at Kassala following up their victory captured the rebel camp with 2,000 oxen and sheep and 700 rifles. The enemy lost 8,000 men killed and wounded, while the garrison's casualties were small.

From an account in the June Century of John Brown at Harper's Ferry, written by one of his prisoners, who was in the engine-house during the insurrection, and afterward held the rank of captain in the Confederate army, we quote the following: "When Lieutenant Stuart came in the morning for the final reply to the demand to surrender? I got up and went to Brown's side to hear his answer.

"Stuart asked, 'Are you ready to surrender, and trust to the mercy of the Government?'"

prefer to die here.'"
"His manner did not betray the least fear.

On Reading Fiction.

The novelist contends against obstacles with which most literary producers do not concern themselves.

They do not clearly express ideas; goes contentedly into prosy passages because they relate to the subject in hand, and risks a broken neck in rising to the realms of poetry upon the latest Pegasus. But the story-writer commands no such attention. Immediately the dear public comes to fiction, it drops from an appreciative attitude toward the writer's work, and in judgment on the merits of the tale only prejudice and personal taste. The novelist does not appeal to a fair-minded jury. Nearly everyone endeavors, to a greater or less extent,

either to bring the story into his own atmosphere and experience, or regards
it as a bit of gossip or an idle hour.

The most grievous wrong done the poor author however, is this tendency to judge of the truth of fictitious characterization only as it agrees with life as seen or imagined by the reader. The novel written from a high-church

standpoint finds no low-church admirers. The cynic scoffs in public at Brown's last romance, because it is an idyllic love story, and the public goes its way firmly convinced that Brown's forte is blacksmithing.

We are too superficial in our criticisms. We are not just. We do not go deep enough into the novel-writer's motives. Nearly all the stories printed to-day have in them an attempt at something beyond the mere telling of a tale with trappings of scenery and puppets to bear out the illusion. But we do not examine this scenery to know if it is real, nor stick pins into these puppets to learn if they are merely stuffed dolls to play upon our fancy. In this we do ourselves an injustice, both losing the fine flavor of a good novel and failing to penetrate

the tinsel and stage effects of a poor one, in much the same way as a befuddled drinker swallows Ve. Cliquot and champagne cider with the same approval. Then, too, in order to catch a page or two of "conversation"

or "action" that is valued only as it carries forward the plot, we are prone to run hastily over descriptive writing that paints a vivid bit of landscape with cameo fidelity and beauty. Or a chapter filled with life and color is voted dreary and slow because only indirectly it aids in tangling the threads of the romance. It is the amount of bringing of stunts to our notice. We say it will have a bad moral effect and is unpleasant reading, and commonplace life and people, such as we meet in our own streets and houses, are called unattractive because we already know them. Truly, the novelist sails between a Scylla and Charybdis in his search for public approval.

For how many years have we been looking for the appearance of a fabled something, traditions of which have come down to us. This something which the critics have already analyzed and set bounds to and named the Great American Novel, has not yet materialized. Many times have we been startled by the proclamation that it has appeared, but disappointment always follows hard after the announcement. And, judging by the taste and discrimination shown in our own present reading of fiction, when this Great American Novel, which is to overshadow all other home products, does come, we will not know it,

but will leave to some future generation the task of discovering it. Not until there is a more general appreciation of the American novel as it is can a story appear which will be accepted as bearing the enduring imprints of our times and our people.

The novel is not rated at its true value. It is not properly read. We don't distinguish clearly enough between what is good and what is bad.

I do not wish to be understood as asserting that we cannot discriminate

between immoral and pernicious fiction and that which is proper and wholesome. The distinction I wish to clearly set forth does not intrinsecally

in this division. The merit of a novel does not depend on the class to which it belongs. Whether light or heavy, sombre or humorous, melo-dramatic or analytic, it may have positive merit,

and that merit can be decided by a single rule. Truth is the one law by which we can judge fairly of the value of a novel. It is not meant that the story must be founded in fact and told with conscientious attention to sober

detail, but it is meant that the genuinely good novel holds a mirror up to Nature; that, in its setting, it truly pictures the scene wherein its characters act; that its Ladies Vere de Vere are the ladies they represent, and its lovers and murderers and fools are, indeed, lovers and murderers and fools to the end of the chapter in thought and word and action. The wildest and most sensational romance might be a good novel, and to our sor-

Riel's Inspiration Racket.

A Canadian volunteer writing home
from Duck Lake after the recent collision with Riel's rebels tells how the half-breed leader plays the inspiration game on his Indian and French followers:

At the battle of Duck Lake he had a cross with him, and he scratched it in three places and showed it to the Indians, and told them the cross was struck three times with bullets from the enemy and he never got a scratch.

A few days before the late eclipse of the sun he called all the Indians together and had a council with them, and told them he was inspired by the Big Spirit. He told them that on a certain day and at or about a certain hour the sun would get dark. This was the eclipse, and he got his inspiration from the almanac.

In perching myself, for the first time, upon the editorial tripod, it is but courteous to the readers of THE HERALD that we should make the accustomed editorial bow, and "make a few introductory remarks."

The work of the office will be divided between the proprietor and his youthful associate, Orrin Hoover, whose efficiency at case, galley and press has been tested and not found wanting, during the weeks that have elapsed since the sad day on which Mr. Emmert gave us the parting hand.

The paper will be made up every week with direct and emphatic regard to the best interests and highest welfare of Chelsea—her citizens and her enterprises. In our humble efforts in this direction, we desire and confidently expect the patronage and hearty co-operation of every citizen and every business firm in our happy and thriving town. Thus sustained and assisted, we hope to do much not only to post our readers on current local events, but to stimulate enterprise, and promote Chelsea's substantial welfare.

On questions of morals we propose to throw our whole weight on the side of right. On political questions, we do not propose to be "neutral" but silent. "Silence is golden." Please, everybody, do not provoke us.

On other questions no pledge or announcement is necessary. We are now at home and ready for business. Call and see us.

We are very late, this week, in getting out THE HERALD. It was late Wednesday P. M. when the transfer of the office to us was effected. Eight laboring hours would bring the usual time of going to press, and but a small portion of the matter now under the eye of the reader was even in copy, much less in type.

The utmost exertion has been necessary to get it out this week at all. For the errors that must of necessity exist, no apology is necessary, circumstances must fully excuse us.

We ask that our subscribers and especially our exchanges suspend severe criticism yet a week or two; after that we hope to compete successfully with the best of them.

—There were some severe laws in the world two centuries ago, but apparently no more morality than now. There was a time when a Bob Ingersoll would have been imprisoned for life, even if he escaped burning at the stake. By statute, in the time of Elizabeth, if any person in plays or songs or by casual conversation said anything in derogation of the book of common prayer, he was liable to suffer imprisonment for life.—Chicago Herald.

Farmers as Business Men.

It is popularly supposed by a large class of farmers that none but business men need to acquire a knowledge of business forms and rules. To their mind the business man occupies a position similar to the lawyer and the doctor; he hears his trade and proceeds to get a living by it. This class of men believe that business forms are unintelligible, whereas they are very simple. He is as respectful at the mention of the words "percentage," "drafts," "bill of lading," "invoice," as he is when he hears the family physician talk Latin. But every farmer is a business man. He has crops to go to market; he wants to sell to the best advantage; he has to sell oftentimes on credit, and he is continually buying. To all intents and purposes he is a business man. It would seem very desirable, however, that the younger men, who are one day to fill the places of the present generation, should learn how to handle with ease and accuracy the business form and methods which commercial men by long practice and experience have reduced to a system.—Boston Globe.

Alleged philanthropists are hot. Sunday a fellow named Perkins went berrying, and not returning the evening, a searching party was organized Monday, and the woods were scoured. After several hours of hard work, through the boiling sun, with the mercury at 135 degrees—in the sun of course, and that's where the men had to walk—they found Perkins, with his eyes set, his body erect, but pulling off the little berries just the same, wholly unconscious of the excitement he had caused. The next time Perkins gets lost he will not be hunted for until cold weather sets in.—Evening Journal.

Augustus Wheldt was only a poor old tramp last fall, but John Thorpe of Charlotte found him, gave him employment, and a home. Early in the spring Mr. Thorpe went west on business, leaving Wheldt to manage the farm. The ungrateful tramp made good use of his employer's absence, made love to Mrs. Thorpe, persuaded her to sell the household goods and fly with him. The goods were sold, the fly resorted to, and for several months the guilty pair have been living together at Owosso. When Mr. Thorpe returned from the west and discovered the trick that had been perpetrated upon him he got mad, and on Saturday he had Wheldt and Mrs. Thorpe arrested.—Evening Journal.

"Well, well!" said Mr. Jarphly. "Well, what?" asked his wife. "I'm just reading of the American missionaries' attempt to introduce the Bible in China, my dear," replied Mr. Jarphly. "What is strange about that?" inquired Mrs. Jarphly. "Oh, nothing particular, only I've seen it in calf and in Russia leather and in cloth and I thought I'd like to see it in China," and he innocently scratched his nose. "Jarphly, you're a fool," said Mrs. Jarphly.—Pittsburgh Telegraph.

The Tooth Factory.

The domain of the dentist is about to be disputed. A great discovery has been made which will revolutionize the whole business and emancipate the sufferers. A factory has been established, with plenty of capital to back it, for the purpose of making artificial teeth by machinery. All that any one who is troubled with his teeth will have to do will be to get them all pulled out. Then he can purchase a brand new, machine made set and be exempt from toothache all the rest of his life. There is, of course, nothing new in the making and using of artificial teeth, but it will be easily seen that the manufacture by machinery presents great advantages. When the making of watches by machinery was started there were many protests that the new way would never be as good as the old. But the exactness soon attained, and the convenience of having the parts interchangeable, brought about a revolution, and the factory watches now rank above the hand-made. The same advantages will be had in the factory teeth. If one set gets broken, or comes out, an exactly similar one can be ordered from the factory at very small cost. If the plate gets cracked it can be replaced in the same way. All that will be necessary will be to give the number of the plate, and a new one, precisely like the old, will be sent by return mail.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

ELIJAH'S ALTAR.

Interesting Discovery on Mount Carmel, in Palestine.

We are approaching that spot celebrated in Bible story where Elijah sacrificed before the prophets of Baal, and here tradition has placed the altar where he called down the divine fire, and which commands one of the most extensive and interesting panoramic views in Palestine, including almost every point of note in Galilee. Within the last year the Carmelites have erected a church on the lofty bluff where this event is supposed to have occurred, and which, rising abruptly over the plain of Esdraelon to a height of one thousand six hundred feet, forms the southeast angle of the mountain, and is a conspicuous object from far and wide. But a moment's reflection will convince us that tradition is not correct in assigning this eminence as the scene of the occurrence, for we are told that the prophet "said to his servant, go up here, look towards the sea. And he got up and looked, and said there is nothing. And he said, go again seven times." Now there would have been occasion for Elijah to have given such directions to his servant had the altar been in the place supposed, the sea is in full view of it, from the summit to Caesarea; it is evident, therefore, from the words "Go up," that the altar was at a lower elevation. The late Dean Stanley has conjectured that the spot might have been a plateau a little lower down, where the sea is well on the south slope of the mountain; but it has seemed to me more likely that it was in a sort of amphitheater, which, on account of its greater area, would have been better adapted for so great a multitude as that which was assembled to witness the discomfiture of the false prophets, and which lies to the west and below Mahkraka, and completely enclosed from the sea view. There is a table within a few minutes of what is the center of this plane, from the sea is clearly visible. And, as it is well enough hidden away in the wood, I came here upon a mass of square slabs of stone, averaging eighteen inches square, eight or nine inches thick, which is on one another without cement, a rude table about twelve feet and four feet high.

It is not, of course, pretend that this is the original altar, which it is believed was destroyed at that time, but it is a loss to conjecture what purpose it could have served; and its position was so exactly that which has suited the occasion, that it was suggested to me by finding here, that it may be the remains of an erection put up in Jewish times to commemorate the event. A path leading from it directly to the margin of the brook, which owes its name to the tradition that it was the scene of the execution of the false prophets. This portion of the mountain was evidently the most populous and most richly cultivated former times, as it is to-day beautiful.—L. Oliphant, in Ocean.

BOOTS' ROMANCE.

A Mental Wreck Made So by Unrequited Love for Jenny Lind.

To see "Boots" Tar Steenburg, as he is called, with unkempt hair flying in the wind and his unshaven face decked in a suit of red, white and blue, with long streamers of all colors attached to his clothing, and a weather-beaten straw hat decked with ribbons, and asking a penny of each one he meets, as he wanders from place to place in the Hudson Valley, one would not think that a tender passion ever thrilled his rough breast, a maiden's glance had ever opened his sigh-valves, or drew forth one impassioned utterance of love. And yet it was no less a personage than the nightingale of song, Jenny Lind, who for a while listened to the man's avowals of undying affection only to tell him in the end that he loved his life a dreary waste.

A gentleman who knows of the incident related the following to a News-Press reporter: "Boots," as he is called, was an attractive young man, the idolized son of Ulster County parents, who never stinted him with money. He chanced to be in New York when Jenny Lind created a furore in the musical world, and went to hear her. He was smitten with her charms, sought an introduction, fell madly in love, and night after night sat in front of the footlights to applaud the songstress. He poured costly presents into her lap, and the story goes that thirty thousand dollars would not cover the cost of them. There is no doubt that his suit was encouraged; but she discarded him. He followed the songstress from place to place, in a vain endeavor to renew his suit, until his reason was partially destroyed. Since then he has lived the life of a wild man in the woods, near Kingston, occasionally making a trip up the Hudson to collect funds to start a bank. His collections in all these years have been large, but what he does with the money nobody knows or can ascertain. Some years ago I called at his place and found an old diary, and in it were words something like these: "Jenny may not be called beautiful, but I loved to look upon her face, and when she appeared upon the stage I stood until the great storm of applause had subsided. I was jealous, because she seemed to desire everyone to have the pleasure of seeing her. But then I suppose she thought the people had paid to see her, and didn't want anyone to be cheated. Her turning her head first to the left and then to the right was but the artless manifestation of a simple and beautiful character." On another leaf of the diary were these words: "And that song-bird sang of a summer coming night. Was it true?" Beneath these words were: "Diamond ornaments and a point lace fan completed her royal costume." "Boots" has always been perfectly harmless, and the boys in Kingston and other places never jeer him as he makes his rounds.

This queer mortal visits the city twice a year to deliver patriotic speeches and collect money. His usual speaking places are the court house steps and the opera house stepping block. His stereotyped speech, familiar to many, goes something like this: "Three cheers for George Washington and the great American eagle, and the goose hangs high!" He invariably closes his speech with a song so disconnected that the words can not be caught. It is stated that he collected between thirty and forty dollars on his last trip here. Notwithstanding his nonsensical talk and unintelligible songs he is always warmly greeted by the boys.—Poughkeepsie News-Press.

SPEARING SWORD-FISH.

Fishing Which Does not Grow Tiresome From Lack of Excitement.

The fish are always harpooned from the end of the bowsprit of a sailing vessel. All vessels regularly engaged in this fishery are supplied with an apparatus for the support of the harpooner, which consists of a wooden platform about two feet square, upon which the harpooner stands, and an upright bar of iron three feet high, rising from the tip of the bowsprit just in front of this platform. At the top of this bar is a bow of iron in nearly a circular form, to surround the waist of the harpooner. This structure is called the "rest" or the "pulpit." A man is always stationed at the mast-head, whence, with the keen eye which practice has given him, he can easily descry the tall-tale dorsal fins at a distance of two or three miles. When a fish has been sighted the watch "sings out," and the vessel is steered directly toward it. The skipper takes his place in the pulpit, holding the harpoon with both hands by the upper end, and directing the man at the wheel by voice and gesture from his post. When the fish is from six to ten feet in front of the vessel, it is struck. The harpoon is not thrown; the strong arm of the harpooner punches the dart into the back of the fish beside the dorsal fin, and the pole is withdrawn. The line is from fifty to one hundred and fifty fathoms long, and the end is either made fast on board the smack, or attached to a keg or some other form of buoy and thrown overboard. After the fish has exhausted himself by dragging the buoy through the water, it is picked up, the fish is hauled alongside, and killed with a lance. In the meantime several other fish may have been struck and left to tire themselves out in the same way.—P. A. Fernald, in Popular Science Monthly.

A romantic young waiter-girl at a hotel in Ontario, Canada, came near losing her life the other day by trying a foolish experiment. She had heard an old saying that any girl who swallowed a raw chicken's heart would have for a husband the first male person she shook hands with, and, believing the proverb, attempted to swallow a chicken's raw heart, but failed. The heart stuck in her throat and would not move either way, down or up. A doctor was called in and arrived only in season to save the deluded girl from an untimely death by choking.

Dyspepsia is the prevailing malady of civilized life. A weak, dyspeptic stomach acts very slowly or not at all on many kinds of food, gasses are extracted, acids are formed and become a source of pain and disease until discharged. To be dyspeptic is to be miserable, hopeless, depressed, confused in mind, forgetful, irresolute, drowsy, weak, languid and useless. It destroys the Teeth, Complexion, Strength, Peace of Mind and Bodily ease. It produces Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Gongs, Tightness of Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of Stomach, Bad Taste in Mouth, Bilious attacks, Palpitation of Heart, Inflammation of Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms. GRANT IS DEAD!

After Months of Terrible Suffering

THE SOLDIER AND PATRIOT PASSES AWAY.

A Sketch of His Life. Gen. Grant died at Mt. McGregor at 8:40 a. m., Thursday, July 23d.

Ulysses Simpson Grant was born at Point Pleasant, O., April 27, 1822. His ancestors were Scotch.

At the age of seventeen General Grant entered the Military Academy at West Point. He had been christened Hiram Ulysses, but the Congressman who procured his appointment, by mistake, wrote him down as Ulysses S. Grant.

On the 13th of April 1861, Fort Sumter fell. On the 15th President Lincoln made his call for troops, and on the 19th Grant was drilling a company of volunteers in Galena.

He took command of his regiment early in June and marched to Missouri. Reporting to Brigadier-General Pope, he was stationed at Mexico, about fifty miles north of the Missouri river.

General Grant was at once promoted to be Major-General and appointed commander of the district of West Tennessee. Immediately after the capture of Fort Donelson, Grant fell under General Halleck's displeasure.

In July, 1866, Gen. Grant was commissioned general of the army, a grade especially provided for him by act of Congress.

At the Republican national convention held in Chicago, May 21, 1868, Gen. Grant was nominated on the first ballot for president.

of nearly 80,000 votes over Horace Greeley, the Democratic nominee.

General Grant was a very prominent candidate before the Chicago National Republican convention in 1860.

His recent illness is known to all and does not need any extended mention.

A few weeks ago he was removed from the city to Mt. McGregor, in the hopes that the bracing mountain air would do much to strengthen him.

Does a Similar Danger Threaten Every one of Us?

Public Attention is Directed to Personal Perils.

Washington (N. Y.) Correspondence Indianapolis Sentinel.

"Judge," said a young lawyer to a very successful senior, "tell me the secret of your unimpaired success at the bar."

"Ah, young man, that secret is a life study, and I will give it to you on condition that you pay all my bills during this session of court."

"Agreed, sir," said the junior.

"Evidence, indisputable evidence."

At the end of the month the judge reminded him of his promise.

"I recall no such promise."

"Ah, but you made it."

"Your evidence, please!"

"And the judge, not having any witnesses, called a case for once."

The man who can produce indisputable evidence wins public favor. I had an interview yesterday with the most successful of American advertisers, whose advertising is most successful because always backed by evidence.

"What styles of advertising do you use?" I asked H. H. Warner, Esq.

"Display, reading matter and paragraphs of testimonials."

"Have you many testimonials?"

In answer he showed me a large cabinet chock full. "We have enough to fill Boston, New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Philadelphia morning papers."

"Do you publish many of them?"

"Not a title. Wonderful as are those we do publish, we have thousands like which we cannot use. 'Why not?' Let me tell you. 'Warner's safe cure' has probably been the most successful medicine for female disorders ever discovered. We have testimonials from ladies of the highest rank, but it would be indelicate to publish them. Likewise many statesmen, lawyers, army-men, doctors of world-wide fame have been cured, but we can only refer to such persons in the most guarded terms, as we do in our reading articles."

"Are these reading articles successful?"

"When read they make such an impression that when the 'evil days' of ill health draw nigh they are remembered, and Warner's safe cure is used."

"No, sir, it is not necessary now, as first, to do such constant and extensive advertising. A meritorious medicine sells itself after its merits are known. We need just evidence enough to disarm scepticism and to impress the merits of remedies upon new consumers. We will do our duty to do this. Hence, to accomplish our mission of health to the sick, we have to use the reading article style. People won't read plain testimonials."

"Yes, sir, thousands admit that had they not learned of Warner's safe cure through this clever style they would be alling and still impoverishing themselves in fees to unsuccessful practitioners." It would do your soul good to read the letters of thanksgiving that come from mothers grateful for the success which attend Warner's cure when used for children, and surprised gratification with which men and women of older years and improved vigor, testify to the youthful vigor restored to them by the same means.

"Are these good effects permanent?"

"Of all the cases of kidney, liver, and female diseases we have had, not two per cent of them return to their disorders. Who can show such a record?"

"What is the secret of Warner's safe cure permanently reaching so many women?"

"I will explain by an illustration: Little town of Plymouth, has been plague-stricken several months because water supply was carelessly poisoned. Kidneys and liver are the sources of physical well-being. If polluted by disease, all the blood becomes poisoned every organ is affected and this danger threatens every one who neglects to treat himself promptly. I nearly died myself of extreme kidney disease, but what is now Warner's safe cure cured me, and I know it is the only remedy in the world that cures such disorders for I tried nothing else in vain. Cured by it I bought it and, from a sense of duty, presented it to the world. By restoring the kidneys and liver to their normal condition, the blood and system are purified. The secret of the wonderful success of Warner's safe cure is that it is sovereign over kidney, liver and primary diseases, which primarily underlie nearly all the great troubles of our ailments. Like all great remedies it is remarkably simple."

"The house of H. H. Warner & Co., is deservedly high in Rochester, it is certainly matter of congratulation that merit has been recognized over the world, and that this success has been unqualifiedly deserved."

A Pious Feud.

The dispatches in Tuesday's papers tell of a terrible tragedy in Florida, the result of a "feud" between two families, the Longfords and the Wests. There were three Longfords and three Wests, and they were all pious men, teachers in Sunday school. They met last Sunday afternoon at a church where Sunday school was being held, and while the choir was singing "Nearer My God to Thee," the firing began on the green in front of the church. The little children that these pious men had been teaching the commandment, "Thou shalt not kill," were frightened and ran out of the church to see the fight, and to see their dear teachers desecrate the holy Sabbath day by filling their dear brothers with cold lead. An occasional corpse of a Sabbath school teacher would roll out of a wagon before the little children, and as the organ pealed forth the glad anthem one of the pious and God-fearing Brother Wests would take a knife and rip a basket full of bowels out of a brother Longford, and the scene beggared description. The truly good Christians who had gathered to listen to the interpretation of the scriptures by the Wests and the Longfords, as teachers of the little ones in the way they should go, to hear the children recite verses from the New Testament, and to hear the good teachers explain the meaning of sentences, and unite in prayer that the Good God would preserve them all from harm and finally bring them before Him at the great white throne to be judged of the deeds done on earth, got behind trees and wagons to escape the flying bullets that were filling the air on the Lords day, and they shoved the children behind the meeting house that they might not be murdered by their pious teachers with stray shots. A pious old deacon who was not interested in the fight, held up his hands and with his white hair streaming in the grateful breeze of the warm Southern Sabbath, prayed that the sanguinary brethren who were drawing beads on their Christian neighbors, might be turned from the error of their ways, and cease firing, and shake hands over the gory corpses already prepared. Then a spent ball took him in the groin, and he drew his own revolver and said he was a law-abiding citizen and a Christian, but he could everlastingly plug up the liver of any man that would shoot him in the groin when he was praying for peace, and he began to shoot at the combatants. The women and children became frightened and ran screaming to the pine woods, and after the Wests and Longfords had all been killed or mortally wounded, the fighting ceased, except that one pistol, in the hand of a dying Longford, kept going off at random, the dying man just having strength enough to keep pulling the trigger of his self-cocker, though his eyes were glazed in death from a quart of bullets through the liver and other foreign parts, at the hands of a brother Sunday school teacher. The school was dismissed for the day, and the women and children ran home screaming bloody murder, while the men gathered around the corpses and talked over the sad occurrence, and told stories of similar cases they had known during their lives, and finally the dead were loaded into wagons and conveyed to their homes, and as the sun went down on the beautiful Sabbath day, and the birds ceased their singing and went to their nests, all was quiet, and peace-while-winged peace, that had been a stranger to the time, hovered over the little city, and the Sunday-school children who had been so rudely interrupted in their study of the scriptures, and had seen their loved and pious teachers stretched out cold in death on the greensward in front of the church, went to bed and dreamed they were in hell. What a scene it must have been, and what an impression the horrible fight must have left on the young minds.—Pek's Sun.

"Yes," unhesitatingly.

"My relatives are all buried there, and when I am gone I wish to rest beside them. Will you grant me this one favor?"

"There will be considerable expense attached to it," musingly.

"Oh Robert! I will never rest easy in my grave anywhere else."

THE HERALD.

THURSDAY, JULY 30 1885

WATSON, KAS., July 24, '85.

ED. HERALD:—Eastern people have an idea that Kansas (the western part in particular) is a barren region suitable only for the raising of sage brush, rattlesnakes, prairie dogs etc., but that is a thing of the past. The time was, when that was about so, when no crops could be raised with any degree of success on account of the lack of rain and the hot, blistering winds from the south; but now as the country is being settled and improvements being made the annual rainfall increases proportionately, and I predict that it will not be many years before western Kansas will be the garden of the world. For the past twenty years or more the principal business was raising cattle and sheep. A stock company would start in with fifty or a hundred thousand head of cattle and lease of the government or take possession of two or three townships for a range. Some would fence in a large tract and there they can feed the year round. For the last two or three winters, however, they that have attempted to winter their cattle without hay have had a hard time of it. The buffalo grass is dying, out and every succeeding winter brings more snow than the preceding one. Some stockmen have lost as high as from 20 to 30 per cent of their stock. In a few years they will have to keep fewer cattle of a better grade, and have sheds and hay for them. Homesteads and timber claims are being taken up very rapidly around here, and all by a good class of people, many from Iowa, Ill. and other eastern states. Towns are springing up and business is booming everywhere. Watson, a year ago, was only a little place with two stores and 6 or 7 inhabitants; now it has a newspaper, the Lane Co. Herald, a blacksmith shop, two doctors, two drug stores and three or four general stores. Houses are going up all the time. There is a settlement of Russian Jews about thirty miles southeast of here. They have a head man, a rabbi who transacts all their business for them. They number about thirty families, and each family has an equal amount of land to take care of. As they attend to their own business and are good farmers they are a help to the community. Railroads are not very thick here as yet, the Atchison and Topeka road being south of us about fifty-five miles, and the Union Pacific north about fifty miles. There is one starting in the eastern part of the state that will without doubt pass through this place on to Denver.

Wheat and corn are the principal crops, wheat averaging from twenty to thirty bushels to the acre. Some of the farmers raise a great deal of sorghum for fodder, and the cattle take to it very readily. They like it better than hay as it is sweeter and more nutritious.

I will now close my letter by saying that if there is any young man in your section of the country that does not know what to do with himself, let him come out here and take up a homestead and he had better be lively about it or they will all be taken.

A new sign appears on the front window of Holmes & Co's clothing store. Look at it.

The Nursery for August comes to us looking as bright as ever. It is one of the best magazines published for children.

The Panorama of the Battle of Gettysburg, on exhibition in Chicago, is considered by everybody the greatest attraction in the Garden City. It is visited daily by hundreds of people, and everybody says it is the greatest exhibition they ever saw. We can only say that nobody should fail to visit it while in Chicago.

It is a fact worthy of note, that there is a great absence of that pest of the neat housewife and of the baldheaded man, the housefly. And according to all precedents, this is a sure precursor of the cholera. When the housefly is plenty, cholera never rages, it is said, but when that insect fails to make its appearance, and purify the air by absorbing its impurities, then the dread destroyer stalks forth boldly with the scythe of death, and mows down broad swaths of human beings.—Ex.

FARM NOTES.

The edelweiss, that Alpine flower which has been the desire of tourists and the frequent cause of accidents will no longer be the symbol of hardy adventure, since it now tamely grows in common garden earth mixed with a little lime. The seed is sown in a cold frame and the plant is transplanted with ease and safety.

An authority states that when fish manure is pure and dry it is rich in phosphates and nitrogen, containing from six to eight per cent of the former and five to seven of the latter. If spread on land in a crude state the phosphate is not immediately available because, being in the bones, it is not soluble until they decompose.

Quite a demand has sprung up for the butternut wood for making wooden shoes. These shoes are coming into extensive use in breweries and other industrial establishments where the floors are damp. They are much warmer than the best leather-soled shoes under such circumstances, and have not the oppressive condensation of moisture characteristic of gum.

A ham, western cured, has been submitted to a New York doctor to determine the nature of certain parasites that infest it. He decided that they were specimens of the acarus sacchari, or sugarmite, closely allied to the ordinary plant louse, and closely resembling it in all but color. The doctor gives it as his opinion that they probably would do no harm if eaten alive.

Don't buy what you have already. Some one truly says that commercial fertilizers are so concentrated and easily handled that many are tempted to use them when barnyard manure seems to be running short, instead of scraping up and utilizing every scrap of manure obtainable about the house or farm buildings.
