Rev. Thomas Holmes, Pub.

CHELSEA, MICH.

For many years the December issues of Harper's Magazine have been distinguished by an unusual wealth of choice reading and pictures, with a special emphasis upon Christmas subjects. Rich as have been the previous numbers, the one about to be published stands easily at the head of all the goodly company that for nearly forty years have entertained and enlightened innumerable readers. It is a royal banquet of refreshing variety, with sturdy staples, rare novelties, and delicious dainties worthy of the generous holiday saint. Everything is complete in itself, the serials being omitted from this number. Besides the strongest attraction of "The Boyhood of Christ," by the author of "Ben-Hur," the Howells farce, "The Mouse-Trap," Gibson's delightful "Wood Notes," and the bounteous departments of confidential discourse, of literary judgment, and of overflowing humor, presided over by the geniuses of G. W. Curtis, W. D. Howells, and C. D. Warner, we are regaled with six short stories (four of them beautifully illustrated), and five illustrated poems. Of the abundant cuts, twenty-five occupy full pages, and four are printed separately on plate paper. Notwithstanding the unparalleled richness of this number, we are assured by the publishers that it is only a Christmas form of the exalted standard which will be uniformly maintained throughout the year; and the magnificent prospectus detailing the coming treasures gives a splendid promise to the volume begun by this number.

James McMillan of Detroit reports that after five years of hard work arrangements have been completed by which a number of roads will center at St. Ignace, and the Straits of Mackinac be crossed by solid trains from or bound to the northwest. This means a direct air line route between the east and the northwest, and the side-tracking of Chicago with all its railroad facilities and gigantic business monopolies, and a consequent large increase of Detroit business and wealth. The Michigan Central road is prominent in the combination; an immense transfer steamer is to be built, and certain railroad extensions provided for—the whole at a cost of ten million dollars. The development of these gigantic plans, which now seem assured, will be watched with intense eagerness by all lovers of Michigan and admirers of the wonderfully great movements of the age, and we of "Michigan, my Michigan," can boast as we have not boasted before.

Julian Hawthorne, who has found himself in very hot water since the publication of his spy interviews with Mr. Lowell, is a man of a good deal of nerve. When visiting once in Dresden he had been driven from the sidewalk many and many a time by the German officers, till finally one day, coming over the Elbe on one of the bridges with a friend, he vowed that the next German officer he met should at least give him half of the sidewalk. He soon met one, and, neither being willing to give way, they walked directly into one another. Neither would give way. At last the officer whipped out his sword, but before he had time to use it Hawthorne knocked him down, snatched his sword out of his hand, broke it in two and threw it into the river. The officer was so disgraced by losing his sword that he never mentioned it, which saved the American from a heavy fine and imprisonment.

One of the most successful counterfeiters of the past decade has just been arrested in New England. The prisoner is a woman 40 years of age, and the Transcript says she melted the metal and made her own cast of tolerably well refined bogus silver. She had put out thousands of dollars without discovery, when a bogus quarter which she attempted to pass on a reporter caused her downfall. If she ever gets out of prison she will hate newspapers.

When some one went to the office of the Herald the other day and inquired for James Gordon Bennett the manager had to have half an hour to find whether he was in England, France, China, Australia, Russia or the Canary Islands. He had just answered that Mr. Bennett was at the letter place when that gentleman walked up stairs with his grip, having landed only fifteen minutes before.

MAY JEW AND GENTILE WED?

Views of a Hebrew Divine Upon the Subject—A Difference of Opinion Among Rabbis.

"Did you ever notice how many Jewish young men marry Christian girls?" remarked a young Hebrew divine to a reporter for The Cincinnati Star.

The two sat pleasantly chatting in the comfortable pews of a West-end cathedral, which the large congregation had just deserted after the morning service, and the newsman replied with interest:

"And how many Jewesses take unto themselves Christian husbands? Yes, I have noticed it. Is the custom of intermarriage growing?"

"Indeed it is sir," said the reverend gentleman. "The fact is that to-day more than ever do Jews marry Christians and Christians Jews. But less excitement and comment are now made about such wedlocks than in former times. A few years ago the marriage of a Jew to a Christian would create quite a sensation. The papers would regard such a bit of news as very entertaining reading matter, and journals of other cities would invariably copy such reports, even though the parties interested were neither known to them nor enjoyed celebrity in their own city. To-day things have changed. Intermarriages are of frequent occurrence, and no more is said about a union between a Jew and gentile than between gentile and gentile."

"How do the Jews and Jewish divines regard such marriages?" the writer asked.

"There are two answers to the question," was the reply. "First comes the real orthodox—good Jew. The old-fashioned believer in the letter of the law, and not in the spirit of the law. These, without considering the matter, regard intermarriage as a crime, and as a very great crime at that. The more enlightened Hebrew thinks it no sin to look at the question from both sides. The reformed Israelite looks more at the spirit of the law than the letter of the law. The verse on which the prohibition of intermarriage is based is found in Deuteronomy, the fifth book of Moses, where it is said in the seventh chapter that with certain seven nations, the Hittites, the Canaanites, etc., 'Thou shalt make no marriages with them, thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son. For they will turn away thy sons from following Me, that they may serve other gods.' This verse again admits of two explanations: Looking at the letter of the law the Jew was prohibited from marrying these seven nations. No other nation was ever mentioned but these seven, and hence it is no sin to intermarry with others than these. The ancient rabbis, however, went further and took into consideration the spirit of such a commandment. 'For they will turn away thy sons from following Me, that they may serve other gods.' Hence they said, by analogical conclusion, as these seven will turn away thy sons from following God, so will other idolatrous nations turn them away from serving the true God."

"In later generations, when the Christian religion had been established, the question was raised among the learned sages whether Christianity was another form of Judaism or whether it was a pagan belief. While some held that the church of Christ was but a branch of the Jewish faith, with but one God and immortal soul, others held that the theory of Father, Son and Holy Ghost implied more than one God, and refused to look at Christianity or a monotheism. As in ancient times to-day the Hebrew divines are divided in their views on intermarriage. Divided as they are and have been, intermarriages have occurred from time to time. Even in the days of Ezra and Nehemiah there are records of intermarriages, as found in Ezra, chapter ix., and Nehemiah, chapter xiii. King Solomon married strange women, and even the great-giver, Moses, took unto himself the daughter of Yethro, a heathen. Although it may be argued that this occurred before the giving of the law, still it is claimed that Moses knew the law before it was given to the children of Israel."

"Speaking of the giving of the law," the entertaining divine continued, "a pretty legend is recorded in the rabbinical writings. It is this: A disciple once asked his teacher whether the heathen would be punished in the future world for not observing the law; 'for,' said the pupil, 'the law was given to the children of Israel and not to the heathen, hence the latter ought to be exempt from punishment for not keeping it.' To this the learned teacher replied: 'When the law was given we find that there was thunder and lightning in heaven and the mountain was all in smoke. This was done for the purpose of communicating to all nations and tribes that God was about to hand down His law. There was thunder for those who could not see, so that they could at least hear, and lightning and smoke for those who could not hear, so that they could at least see. It was publicly announced to all that all who wished to accept the law should come and receive it. The nations of the earth will, therefore, have no excuse when they appear before the great tribunal, for the law was offered them and refused.'

"Most of the modern rabbis of reformed congregations are very reluctant in expressing their views publicly on intermarriage. Some hold that although they see no objection against such unions, they would nevertheless refuse to unite the couple in their office."

cial capacity. The Jewish minister can hardly perform the ceremony, they say, according to the Jewish rite and custom when one of the contracting parties does not believe in it. Those more liberal do not hesitate in officiating at such a marriage, for, say they, two loving hearts when refused to be united by a divine will find their way to a justice of the peace and become husband and wife."

THE AFTER-DINNER NAP.

A Luxury About Which Opinions Differ.

There is much difference of opinion concerning the desirability of an after-dinner nap. Those who advocate it cite the example of animals, but these gorge themselves with food whenever opportunity offers, and are heavy and drowsy in consequence. A short rest is, however, different from lethargic sleep, and often appears to do good. Brain work should certainly be forbidden after dinner; the intervals between it and bedtime should be devoted to recreation and amusement. In the case of elderly people a short nap after a late dinner often aids digestion, but as a general rule it is better for such persons to make their principal meal at 2 P. M. The digestive powers of most elderly people are at a low ebb in the evening. When sleeplessness is troublesome relief should be sought for in the discovery and removal of the cause whenever possible. The condition is often due to indigestion, and when this is the case the ordinary remedies for inducing sleep are worse than useless. The nervous relations between the brain and the stomach are so intimate that disorder of the one organ is almost certain to affect the other. Excitement, worry, and anxiety, which have their seat in the brain, interfere with the functions of the stomach, and in like manner anything that unduly taxes the power of or irritates the stomach disorders the circulation and nutrition of the brain. The sleeplessness often complained of by gouty persons is due to the poisonous effect of the morbid material upon the nervous system. Excessive smoking, too much alcohol, tea, and coffee, often resorted to by over-worked persons, are frequent causes of sleeplessness. In all these cases the cause is removable, while the effect may be counteracted by appropriate treatment. Nothing is more mischievous, however, than to continue the habits and to have recourse to drugs to combat the effects. A due amount of exercise tends to induce normal sleep, and such exercise need not be of a violent character. A walk of two or three miles daily is sufficient, and is, perhaps, as much as a busy man can find time for. A ride on horseback, the Palmerstonian cure for gout, is probably the best form of exercise for those whose minds are constantly at work. It has been well said that a man must come out of himself when in the saddle; he is forced to attend to his horse and to notice the objects he meets. Walking may be a merely automatic process, and afford little, if any, relief to the mind, and carriage exercise may be practically valueless if the mind is not diverted from what had previously occupied it.—Fortnightly Review.

Fattening Swine.

Mr. A. B. Allen, who founded the American Agriculturist nearly fifty years ago, and was for many years its editor, is now spending the evening of his days on his farm near Toms River, N. J. As in early years, he is devoting very much of his attention to stock raising, and in the November number he gives the following advice about fattening swine.

Swine should be pushed forward now in mild weather as fast possible, as they will gain flesh much more rapid on the same quantity of food than in freezing weather. During the fattening process it has been found highly beneficial to feed a moderate quantity of pumpkins, for when this is done they assist the digestion of the grain or meal given the swine, and enables them to more perfectly and economically turn it into flesh, thus saving a considerable percentage in the consumption of food. Pumpkins, or, what are richer and better, winter squashes, ought to be grown especially for this purpose by all swine keepers. Aside from this, they are excellent for the store stock, as they will do well if fed alone on these—that is, provided they are of a good, quiet breed.

When pumpkins are not on hand a few roots may be given raw, of which beets and carrots are better than potatoes, ruta-bagas, or common turnips. The last are very poor feed for this purpose, being better for cattle. Grass, and especially clover, is an excellent substitute for roots, so long as it remains green and growing in autumn, but when turned out to this, the swine ought to have a warm shed, into which they can come when fed and to protect themselves from dew and frost during the night as well as from storms.

To make superior hams and bacon, corn should be mixed with oats or barley, or perhaps rye might answer, at the rate of one-half to a third of one of the latter to the former, and ground thus together. Such feed increases the proportion of tender, juicy, lean streaking the fat, which is essential to produce a fine quality of hams and bacon. If fat pork for salting and barreling alone is wanted, then pure corn, whole or ground into coarse meal, is the best feed, joined with some pumpkin or roots, barley or rye, as recommended above.

SLAVERY IN CUBA.

Two Hundred Thousand Bondmen Freed by a Royal Decree.

Friends of humanity all over the world will bear with interest, with pleasure, and with gratitude that the queen regent of Spain has signed a decree freeing the slaves in Cuba from the remainder of their term of servitude. The reform thus consummated by a graceful and, let us add, womanly act of generosity began more than fifteen years ago in the law of Feb. 10, 1880, which provided for the conditional liberation of certain classes of slaves in Cuba and for the payment of recompense to the owners of the men and women freed. In 1879 a bill was passed by the cortes for the gradual abolition of Cuban slavery. This law at once liberated slaves from 55 years old and upward. Slaves from 45 to 55 were set free in 1880; from 35 to 45 in 1882; from 25 to 35 in 1884; and from 15 to 25 in 1886. The intention of the law was to set free those from 10 to 35 years old in 1888, and those under 30 in 1890.

The recompensing of owners has gone on from the first, but since 1880 a sum of 100,000 piastres has been set annually apart in the Cuban budget for defraying the expenses of the emancipation, each owner receiving recompense at the rate of 350 piastres per slave.

That the abolition policy has been moderately successful is fairly indicated by the statistics of emancipation. In the seven years between 1870 and 1877 the number of slaves in Cuba was decreased by 136,000, but the population showed a falling off in the same period of 20,500. In December, 1878, Cuba still had 227,902 negro slaves.

We may conclude, therefore, that Queen Christina has bestowed upon upward of 200,000 slaves the rights and privileges of freemen, and the act is none the less magnanimous because it has anticipated by four years the emancipation in 1890 contemplated by the cortes itself. Spain has long been the only European state permitting the existence of slavery in its colonies; that, impatient of the slow justifications of legislative enactment, she has at last rid herself of the reproach by an act as noble as it was well timed offers one more promise of the new and vigorous life which seems to be returning to the later years of her existence as a European state.—New York Herald.

The Stepmother of Abraham Lincoln.

Among the illustrations for "The Life of Lincoln," in The Century for November, will be a fine portrait of Sarah Bush Lincoln (stepmother of Abraham Lincoln) at the age of seventy-six. This portrait explains the most important influence of the President's early life. It will be remembered that Mrs. Lincoln said of Abraham: "I can say—what scarcely one mother in a thousand can say—Abraham never gave me a cross word or look, and never refused in fact or appearance to do anything I asked him. His mind and mine—what little I had—seemed to run together. * * * I had a son John who was raised with Abe. Both were good boys, but I must say, both now being dead, that Abe was the best boy I ever saw and ever expect to see."

S. S. CONOVER

Rejoicing Over His Late Great Success.

I have been afflicted with rheumatism twenty years. For the last ten years have been obliged to use crutches. Often my left hip and knee would entirely give out. Have expended a large amount of money for remedies recommended as a cure for that terrible disease, have used the most powerful liniments on my hip and knee to soothe the pain, that I might get a little sleep. My hip and knee had lost nearly all strength by the use of the liniments, and I could get no help. I saw an advertisement of half a dozen bottles of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, took them and received some relief, ordered another dozen. Have taken seven of the last dozen, and I am happy in saying that I know I am being cured. Have not used any liniments since I commenced taking your syrup. When I began taking your syrup I could not take a step without the use of a cane; neither could I turn myself in bed without aid; can now turn in bed without any trouble; can walk about my house and office without the use of my cane. After losing track of it, for the reason when I take a long walk I take it along. My office is four blocks from my house; I have not walked to or from it in over a year until last Thursday a week. Since that time I have walked to and from it every day, except Sunday. I am truly rejoicing that I am fast being relieved from such a terrible affliction.

Wishing that I might herald to all who are afflicted with disease the merits of your wonderful medicine, I write you of the benefits which I have derived from its use. Send me one half dozen bottles syrup and one-third dozen plasters by express C. O. D. This I want for a friend in the northern part of this county. He is a great sufferer with rheumatism.

Very truly,
S. S. Conover.

Special Notice.

GREENVILLE, MICH., Oct. 23, 1886.
Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup Co., Jackson, Mich.

DEAR SIR:—In reply to your letter, I am glad to grant your request. In nature my disease was a severe case of inflammatory rheumatism. It had been running five years and affected me in all parts of my body from my head to my feet. I was at times so crippled in my hands and limbs as to be unable to help myself. I have used your medicine about six weeks; in all about three bottles. I am now able to do my own work in better spirits, no pains, and continually improving. My age is 63, and my condition a year ago and now, speaks very highly of what your medicine has done for me.

Am happy indeed to recommend its true merits. It is the best remedy we have ever used.

Respectfully,
MRS. A. W. CALDWELL.

Jackson and the Veteran.

From "Perley's Reminiscences of Sixty Years in the National Metropolis."

Removals from office that places might be provided for Jackson men were the order of the day, but President Jackson was not disposed to displace any veteran soldier. Among other victims designated for removal by the politicians was Gen. Solomon Van Rensselaer, whose gallant services against Great Britain in the war of 1812 had been rewarded by an election to the House of Representatives, followed by his appointment as postmaster of Albany. He was a decided federalist, and the petition for his removal was headed by Martin Van Buren and Silas Wright. Visiting Washington, Gen. Van Rensselaer received a cordial greeting from Gen. Jackson at a public reception, and then, taking a seat in a corner, he waited until the room was cleared, when he again approached the president, saying: "Gen. Jackson, I have come here to talk to you about my office. The politicians want to take it from me, and they know I have nothing else to live upon." The president made no reply, till the aged postmaster began to take off his coat in the most excited manner, when Old Hickory broke out with the inquiry: "What in heaven's name are you going to do? Why do you take off your coat here?" "Well, sir, I am going to show you my wounds, which I received in fighting for my country against the English!" "Put it on at once, sir!" was the reply; "I am surprised that a man of your age should make such an exhibition of himself," and the eyes of the iron president were suffused with tears as, without another word, he bade his ancient foe good evening.

The next day Messrs Van Buren and Wright called at the White House and were shown up into the president's room, where they found him smoking a clay pipe. Mr. Wright soon commenced to solicit the removal of Gen. Van Rensselaer, asserting that he had been known as a very active advocate of John Quincy Adams; that he had literally forfeited his place by his earnest opposition to the Jackson men, and that if he were not removed the new administration would be seriously injured. He had hardly finished the last sentence when Jackson sprang to his feet, flung his pipe into the fire, and exclaimed with great vehemence: "I take the consequences, sir! I take the consequences! By the Eternal! I will not remove the old man! I cannot remove him! Why Mr. Wright, do you know that he carries more than a pound of British lead in his body?" That settled the question, and Gen. Van Rensselaer remained undisturbed as postmaster at Albany through the Jackson administration, although Martin Van Buren, when he came into power, promptly "bounced" him.

A Glimpse of Heaven.

From the Boston Herald.

Miss Melinda Bailey, a young unmarried lady, has been for some time a resident in the family of Ralph Sargent, at what is known as the "Lower Corner," nearly half way between Merimac and Amesbury. Since her residence with Mr. Sargent, Miss Bailey, who had just lost her mother, whose nurse she had been through a long and lingering sickness has been very ill from complete nervous prostration, and has been under the charge of a physician in Amesbury, who considered her situation as extremely critical. The Haverhill Gazette says, she appeared to grow rapidly worse, and at her request a clergyman was sent for, with whom she conversed for some time, appearing perfectly conscious of her critical condition. Soon after she grew rapidly weaker, and at last lay peacefully back on her bed, and to all appearances seemed to be dead. As the doctor lived nearly six miles off, and her dissolution was somewhat expected, no attempt was made to summon medical aid. The limbs grew stiff, and except for the fact that the flesh retained its natural color to some extent, there was no unusual appearance. After the body had lain in this state some time, neighbors coming in, the grave clothes were brought out and preparations made to prepare for the last sad rites. Soon a slight perspiration broke out on the body, and a long-drawn respiration the vital spark, which seemingly had long been exhausted, flamed up once more, and, to the surprise and horror of those gathered there, the supposed corpse sat up in her bed and surveyed with half-dazed eyes the mourners gathered around.

According to one of the neighbors the first word uttered by any of the party came from the dead-alive, who with tremulous accents, said: "Ah! heaven is a beautiful place, and I should have been so happy to have staid there, but I so longed to see my brother and sister once more." As soon as possible the room was cleared of the wondering spectators and the doctor sent for, who found his patient rather better than on his previous visit the day before, and since that time she has to all appearances steadily improved.

It is no overstatement, — E. B. Ball, druggist at Hiattsville, Md., has this to write about Allen's Lung Balm: "It is the best selling throat and lung remedy, and gives general satisfaction. I cheerfully recommend it." Buy the large $1.00 bottle for Lung Diseases.

We have received miniature copies of recent numbers of the Detroit Evening Journal, produced by photo-typography, that are certainly wonders of a very fine art. The whole paper is legible, even by the naked eye. The following occupies a space five-eighths of an inch square.

THE EVENING JOURNAL.

The Journal has already passed into its fourth year of existence. Evidence of its growing popularity among readers and of its increasing value to advertisers are constantly found upon its subscription books and its ledgers. It intends to provide a readable, newsy, enterprising, independent journal, edited without fear or prejudice; giving all the news in compact form; telling the truth, and furnishing besides a large amount of entertaining and informing reading matter for the family. Every number will thus do its own boasting and display its merits to its ever-increasing circle of friends, readers and advertisers.

THE Century will, undoubtedly, be the most popular magazine in America during the year 1887 and including November and December of 1886, on account of the serial history of Abraham Lincoln. No biography of any great ruler and statesman has ever been written under circumstances so favorable to completeness, authenticity and accuracy as this. Of the gentlemen who write it, of their familiarity with his whole life, of their thorough and patient research into every hiding place into which any interesting fact might have fallen, of the long period of time, sixteen years, devoted to the immense labor, and of the fitness and qualification in every particular of these gentlemen for the undertaking we have spoken heretofore. We write this in the interest of our readers, not of the publishers. All our obligations to them have already been fully discharged; but there must be several among our readers, who want to avail themselves of this history in this serial form, which will enable them to read it as its different portions arrive, from month to month. In these days, this is almost the only way readers find time to read such literature. To these readers, who will be sorry if they let the opportunity go by unimproved, we want to say once more, this work commenced with the November number of the Century, that being the beginning of the volume. Back numbers may, however, be obtained, if you do not delay too long to subscribe. What the price of the book will be when it is finally published in book form is not announced.

It must, however, be several times the subscription price of the Century. Thus, you see, this is the way to get it cheap, and get a great deal of valuable reading besides in the bargain. One thought more. Five dollars will pay for this $4 magazine and $1.35 HERALD one year, and we will obtain for you the back numbers of the Century, that is, the year for the Century will commence with Nov., 1886. If you want the Century without the HERALD, call and see us. We will do as well by you as we can.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

Washington, Nov. 26, 1886. Thanksgiving day in Washington was quiet, as it usually is. The only public demonstration contemplated was a parade by the fire department, but that was spoiled by the torrents of rain. There were family reunions and dinners that represented the highest culinary skill of each household; religious services at the churches; closed Government Departments and liberated clerks, while at orphan asylums and public institutions the inmates enjoyed additions to their ordinary bill of fare, through the generosity of the charitable.

The city has a sombre appearance on account of the Arthur mourning. Flags fly at half mast from hundreds of staffs, and public buildings are heavily draped in black. It is quite an item of expense to the Government to put up official mourning. It took twenty men three days to drape the patent office alone. Each of its big pillars, and there are forty-eight in all, required forty yards of bunting. All together about 6,000 yards were used for the Interior Department at a cost not far from $1,500. When this Department was draped for Gen. Grant it was nearly $1,700. But a great deal of new material was purchased at that time, some of which was utilized for Vice-President Hendricks, and some of which is now being used for the third time. Of course the expense of draping the Interior Department is greater than that of any other, because it includes the Patent Office, Pension Bureau, Bureau of Education, the Geological Survey, and others which are all in separate buildings.

The cost of draping other Departments is about $150 or $175 each. The Superintendent of the Post Office Department, for instance, is disposed to economize. He buys the bunting and employs his own men and carpenters to do the work, looking after it himself. The bunting costs thirty cents a yard. It remains up for thirty days and then it is taken down and such of it as is not tattered and faded by the wind and rain is packed away for the next occasion of public sorrow.

The President has completed portions of his message to Congress, and has read them to the Cabinet. The message will be shorter this year than last, which is a kind of reform that will be approved by everybody. The President's friends as well as his alleged enemies are kept busy denying what the newspapers accuse them of saying and thinking and planning and attempting. His old law partner, Mr. Bissell, who has just been here, denies ever having sought to influence the President in making appointments. He says Mr. Cleveland, whom he knew as Sheriff, Mayor, and Governor, always discharged the duties of these offices without much advice or assistance, and he believes he will be equally successful in his present trust. He also denies having advised the President to sell his country place as quickly as possible because of the gossip about the syndicate formed over his property to advance real estate in that direction.

And Senator Edmunds, the President's so called bitter foe, denies some things. He denies that he is preparing an attack to be made this winter upon the President's Civil Service policy, and he says the attempt to criticize Mr. Cleveland in connection with the purchase of his country home is unfair. The extensive improvements contemplated in the direction of "Oak View" have become a public necessity and the subject came before Congress long before the President ever saw the place.

One of Senator Edmunds' constituents is indignant at the allegation that the Senator intends to become a candidate for the Presidency in 1888. He says Mr. Edmunds has a loftier ambition, namely to represent Vermont in the United States Senate; and that the Green Mountain State will allow him that privilege as long as he lives. "Why" asked he "should a great statesman want a small position, like that of dispensing petty offices, to which the Presidency has degenerated?"

This reminds me of what Mr. Joseph Howard, Jr., says about journalism and politics. He thinks Mr. Cummings, the New York journalist recently elected to Congress, is taking a step in the wrong direction by forsaking an honorable position in that sphere in order to go Congress. Mr. Cummings explains his reasons for coming to Congress by saying that he simply wants to get behind the scenes in politics in order to make himself more competent and useful in journalism. He has no intention of giving up newspaper work. The experience will be of great advantage to Mr. Cummings, but it is not certain that his constituents will approve his motive.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS.

A THANKSGIVING STORY.

BY BEELE V. CHISHOLM.

Reed Lindsey was the black sheep in the family. I do not mean that he was an idiot, but that he was not handsome and quick to learn like his four brothers, and from childhood he had been a most consummate coward. The boys in school had always imposed upon him; for no matter how great the provocation he could not be induced to lift a finger in self defense. For this girlish trait they nicknamed him "Sis," and even after he had passed his majority this name seemed to be more familiar than the baptismal Reed.

When the news of the fall of Fort Sumpter reached the little settlement where he dwelt, his sturdy frame shook like an aspen leaf. At the very sound of the drum he would turn pale; and the evening that Col. Thomas visited the hamlet, for the purpose of securing volunteers, poor Reed lay hiding in the hay in the stable loft. He could hear the music and the cheering, and knew that two of his brothers were among the number who would march away at the next sunrise; but if he were to have been shot the next moment, he could not have been coaxed out of his hiding place.

As the war went on and repeated calls for new recruits kept flashing over the wires, the poor fellow grew thin and white at the bare thought of what might be in store for him. At last there came the dreaded time when volunteers did not respond in sufficient numbers to fill the quota, and in the draft that succeeded, his twin brothers name was drawn. Poor Ben was no coward, but he had a delicate wife and two little children depending upon his daily labor; and he was greatly perplexed about leaving them, for a substitute could not be procured without hundreds of dollars and he was poor.

It was in this extremity that the real heroism in the coward's nature asserted itself. It cost him a fearful struggle, but the end was crowned with victory. He had loved Alice, years ago, before Ben won her; but his heart failed him when he would have made his affection known, and so his favorite brother gained the prize, and Reed, burying his own sorrow, tried to rejoice over Ben's happiness, even though his own life had been shattered. "I must go in Ben's place," he said to himself after a desperate struggle with his quaking heart. "It would kill Alice if any harm should come to Ben. I have no one depending upon me, for Robert is old enough to look after the farm and care for father and mother. Besides, no one would miss me if I should be killed." "You go in my place!" exclaimed Ben, his grave face relaxing into a smile after listening to his brother's timid proposal. "You would faint at the smell of gunpowder and hurry away at the sight of a gun. No, no, Sis! As loth as I am to leave Alice and the babies without provider or protector, I would prefer a thousand deaths to the disgrace of having my brother shot as a deserter, for I am certain you would never stand fire."

"You shall never be ashamed of me, Ben. If I fall, it will be with my face to the enemy," Reed returned; but his face expressed the anguish that decision had caused him.

It was with doubting hearts that his friends saw him depart; but their anxieties were soon relieved by the good report that his comrades sent back.

Two years of good service he gave to his country, and then on that memorable Thanksgiving, on Look-out Mountain, "Sis" Lindsey, in spite of cowardice, undertook to plant the old, riddled flag, on a spot that only a hero could gain. He performed the daring feat, but when the the cleared away nothing but the the form of the color bearer be found, and a letter back to the old home rethe bravery of the dead it was not Reed's body that carried so tenderly back to his home on the beautiful Ohio, for found a far less restful sleep Southern prison. For months linguished in a hospital, and it there that he came across a north-paper, that in glowing terms, re-his own bravery and death, was not exchanged until the close the war, and then, believing that memory of the character he had seemed, would be more precious his friends than his cowardly pres-he determined that he would and deceive them, but make his among strangers in the sunny earth.

Twenty years after the bloody the had ceased, he was seized, with irresistible longing for a sight of old, familiar scenes, and the dear of his kindred. After a long struggle he determined to journey homeward, it only to look upon the of those he loved.
The little, straggling village he entered, had passed through but few changes during the years that had made him an old, gray-haired man.
Approaching quietly into the church were the Thanksgiving exercises in progress he scanned the congregation for familiar faces, but on-and there could he trace the features of an old acquaintance.
At the close of the service he stroi-into the graveyard, and the sight a new monument in the family graveyard, made him turn his steps that direction. Before he reached a spot a tall, bearded man and frail looking woman paused by the side of a solitary grave. As he drew near, the inscription on the stone startled him, for instead of the name of father or mother, he read his own epitaph:
"Reed Lindsey, member Company E.
O. V. I. Killed at Lookout Mountain, Nov. 24, 1863. Died at his post." In the couple by his side he recognized Ben and his wife, and from his mother's lips he heard again the story of Reed Lindsey's bravery.
With tears streaming over his sunken cheeks he exclaimed, "O, sir! the bullet that pierced his brave heart was meant for mine. We used to call him a coward, but he was the tallest hero that ever lived."
"Ben is it possible that you do not know me, your own brother Reed?"
He was carried to a far more dismal place than the grave when that memorable battle was over," and with his arms mingling with those of his kindred, he went on to rehearse the story of his sad, lonely life, since thanksgiving among the clouds, a score of years before, when he redeemed his name from the stigma of—a coward.
There was a real Thanksgiving in the old homestead that day over the and brother, lost and found, and that day forth no one ever dared to call Reed Lindsey a coward.

THE CENTURY
FOR 1886-87.
The Century is an illustrated monthly magazine, having a regular circulation of about two hundred thousand copies, often reaching and sometimes exceeding two hundred and twenty-five thousand. Chief among its many attractions for the coming year is a serial which has been in active preparation for sixteen years. It is a history of our own country in its most critical time, as set forth in THE LIFE OF LINCOLN,
BY HIS CONFIDENTIAL SECRETARIES, JOHN G. NICOLAY AND COL. JOHN HAY.
This great work, begun with the sanc-
under the authority of his son, the Hon.
Robert T. Lincoln, is the only full and authoritative record of the life of Abraham Lincoln. Its authors were friends of Lincoln before his presidency; they were most intimately associated with him as private secretaries throughout his term of office, and to them were transferred upon Lincoln's death all his private papers. Here will be told the inside history of the civil war and of President Lincoln's administration,—important details of which have heretofore remained unrevealed, that they might first appear in this authentic history.
By reason of the publication of this work,
THE WAR SERIES,
which has been followed with unflagging interest by a great audience, will occupy less space during the coming year. Gettysburg will be described by Gen. Hunt (Chief of the Union Artillery), Gen. Longstreet, Gen. E. M. Law, and others; Chick-amauga, by Gen. D. H. Hill; Sherman's March to the Sea, by Generals Howard and Slocum. Generals Q. A. Gillmore, Wm. F. Smith, John Gibbons, Horace Porter and John S. Mosby will describe special battles and incidents. Stories of naval engagements, prison life, etc., etc., will appear.

NOVELS AND STORIES.
"The Hundredth Man," a novel by Frank R. Stockton, author of "The Lady or the Tiger?" etc., begins in November.
Two Novellees by George Cable, stories by Mary Halleck Foote, "Uncle Remus," Julian Hawthorne, Edward Eggleston, and other prominent American authors will be printed during the year.
SPECIAL FEATURES
(with illustrations) include a series of articles on affairs in Russia and Siberia, by George Keenan, author of "Tent Life in Siberia," who has just returned from a most eventful visit to Siberian prisons; papers on the Food Question, with reference to its bearing on the Labor Problem; English Cathedrals; Dr. Eggleston's Religious Life in the American Colonies; Men and Women of Queen Anne's Reign; by Mrs. Oliphant; Clairvoyance, Spiritualism, Astrology, etc., by the Rev. J. M.
Buckley, D. D., editor of the Christian Advocate; astronomical papers; article throwing light on Bible history, etc.

WYANDOTTE CAVE.
Description of Two Beautiful Crawford County (Ind.) Caverns.
The road to the cave winds around the base of high hills, where the foremost stands in all its primal beauty along the precipitous banks of Big Blue river, until it descends to a rocky hollow, and then climbs a high hill that slopes down to Blue river, three hundred yards away. Three miles from Leavenworth, to the left hand, a few yards from the road, lie great slabs of limestone with the imprint of horses' and mules' feet, deeply imbedded in the solid rock. A mile further on is a great pile of stones in a confused heap, as if some great building had fallen.
A little way from here is found a large of beautiful quartz. On the roadside, a mile from the cave, is a hole in the ground that was occupied for years by a hermit known as "Ground Hog Davis."
Along the roadside grow great bunches of lovely ferns, their graceful plumes shown in relief on the background of undergrowth. After two days spent in exploring the immense halls, corridors, passage-ways and great hills of the limestone cavern, an impression is made which is as impossible to render into language as it is to describe a summer sunrise on these eternal hills, the sublimity of a thunder storm or the translucent beauty of the rainbow. Our party extinguished lights and sat down at the base of Monument mountain, where the guide had reached the summit and made ready to illuminate with green fire. When the wied, unreal light was thrown over all, we gazed in speechless admiration up two hundred and forty-five feet to the bending arch of this great temple, until the spell was broken by one of our party exclaiming: "It is like a dream of paradise."
The temperature of the cave is fifty-six degrees the year round, and although the way is rugged, the pure, bracing atmosphere enables a delicate woman to endure the fatigue, while the mind is so engaged in admiring the chemical formations in nature's laboratory that time and all things else are forgotten.
In the Little Wyandotte the formations are even more wonderful than in the big cave. The stalactite and stalagmite unite and form huge fluted columns. The lesser formations are in fantastic shapes of great beauty. The Pari's prison windows, with bars of stalactites is like something we have seen in pictures of old castles, and when lighted by the fire works is startlingly real.—Leavenworth (Ind.) Cor.

TOUGH WORK.
Impressions of a Scribe Who Happened to See a Farmer Shave.
To witness a farmer shave is one of the most painful operations ever witnessed outside of downright butchery.
For some reason away beyond the depth of present knowledge, the man who breeds the country always has a beard like a new hair brush and he never could learn how to sharpen a razor.
He gets on the back stoop with his shaving utensils, and after rubbing the razor over the strap in an awkward fashion, until whatever trace of edge it may have had has been destroyed, he hangs up his broken glass and takes a position alongside of the kitchen door where the old lady will be sure to jostle his arm when she goes out to empty her dish-water.
With a brush that has but little handle remaining he manages somehow to stir up a lot of lather from soap that would raise a blister on the bottom of a boy's foot in dog days, with which he coats his face till nothing but his eyes and the back of his head are visible. With a cobdipped in warm water he goes over the stubble with a vigor that makes the flesh creep, until he feels that all the reasonable precautions for comfort in the subsequent operations have been taken.
Taking up the razor and looking at it suspiciously over the top of his glasses, he runs his thumb along the edge, fails to draw blood as he had hoped, and then with a sigh like leaving town in a hurry, he grabs himself by the nose, shuts his eyes and gives a scrape that makes his hair stand on end as a bunch of beard seems to come out by the roots.
But once at it a terrible desperation seems to nerve him, and with teeth set he goes right on with a determination to get the agony over as soon as possible. Howls of woe break from him now and then, as an expression that poisons life steals over his face and stays there till the last nerve has been pulled out of socket by that terrible razor, and the last bit of stubble has been laid low, when with a sigh of relief, he strikes up a hymn of thanksgiving, and joyfully throws his shaving paper into the will barrel near by.—

Peter Roux, of Mone Lake, took his family to Bodie, Cal., for a visit.
His six-year-old daughter wanted to go home and started on foot. She ought to have gone south, but went north among the mountains and canyons.
When the moon went down she crept under a sage bush and slept, but awoke at daylight and went on. In the meantime Bodie had offered one hundred dollars for her rescue, and a searching party with Indians started out. They found her next day trudging along, hungry, but undismayed. She had walked twenty-six miles. She said she wasn't afraid.—San Francisco Call.

STATE NEWS.

To Prison for Life

Chandler L. Wells, who murdered his wife near Ypsilanti a few weeks ago, has been convicted of murder in the first degree, and sentenced to hard labor in the state prison for life. A desperate effort was made to prove the man insane, but the attempt did not succeed. The verdict gives universal satisfaction.

The trial of Thomas Smith, charged with the murder of Niles P. Anderson in Marion last August, resulted in a verdict of guilty, and he has been sentenced to state prison for life. Smith was completely overcome when fate stared him in the face. He turned ghastly pale and shook as with an attack of ague.

The murder for which Smith was convicted grew out of a trouble between Anderson and Smith over a roadway. The road had been located through Smith's farm, and Smith fenced it up twice. Anderson each time removing the obstruction. One afternoon in August Anderson was at work in his field, when a rifle shot was heard from a clump of bushes a few yards distant, and Anderson fell dead in his tracks. The murderer escaped unseen, but threats made by Smith and other strong evidence of a circumstantial nature secured his conviction of the cowardly crime. Both men were farmers in substantial circumstances.

Weir Captured.

Dr. David H. Weir of Oscoda, was arrested in London, Ont., Nov. 23d for the murder of Mabel Clark, an inmate of his hospital, and will be held for extradition. Weir was watched and was caught as he was leaving the house of his brother. He had $700 on his person when arrested.

A reward of $1,000 part of which was raised by an indignation meeting of ladies at Oscoda, was offered for Weir's arrest, but he had left for parts unknown, though some two weeks ago reported to have been seen in Detroit and later in the Union depot at Toledo. The reward was only the other day increased to $2,000, and this sum, it is presumed, will go to the Canadian officers who were so fortunate as to capture the doctor, provided he is extradited, of which there is should be no question.

Terrible Accident.

At 10 o'clock on the morning of November 22d, while six men were working on a scaffold in the great cyclorama building on Larned street, corner of Bates street, Detroit, the scaffolding gave way with a crash throwing the men to the ground, 51 feet below. Michael Giger was killed instantly. John Austin had his legs broken, received injuries from which he died on his way to the hospital in the ambulance. William Raider and George Phillips had their legs broken and Benjamin Archer and Charles Kline escaped with slight injuries. Giger struck on his head and his brains were dashed out in the mud. The men were all together on the scaffold and their weight broke the support.

The L. J. Conway Lost.

Conway, bound from Chicago to Muskegon, was wrecked on the beach near Flower Creek, seven miles north of White Lake, during the storm last week, and Capt. Thos. The case against Alex. G. Brown of Jackson for embezzling money from the military companies last July, has been taken from the jury by Judge Gridley, on the ground that the information was not properly made out. Postmaster J. C. Hendrix delivered the oration.

Death of H. M. Hoxie.

Henry M. Hoxie, first vice president of the Missouri Pacific railway, died in New York, Nov. 23. He had been ill for some time. His great labors during the strike on the Missouri Pacific railway broke him down, and he has been an invalid ever since. He suffered from gall stones, and underwent an operation on this account a few days ago.

Mr. Hoxie was a poor boy in Polk county, Ia. some 50 years ago, when immigration began pouring into that state. He became an hostler at a country hotel, and thus made the acquaintance of many prominent men who stopped there on their western way. About the time the war broke out he entered local politics, and soon became chairman of the republican state committee, where his executive abilities were demonstrated in majorities approximating 50,000. He was made a United States marshal as a reward for political services. Just after the reconstruction he moved to Palestine, Texas, and soon entered the railroad business and rapidly developed high qualities as a manager. When Gould bought a number of roads, consolidated them with the Wabash and established his great southwestern system, Mr. Hoxie was made vice president and general manager with headquarters at St. Louis. He came into national prominence in connection with the great strike on this system about a year ago. At the time of his death the congressional committee was waiting for him to recover sufficiently to testify before them.

The Mail Service.

Postmaster General Vilas, in his annual report, states that the mileage employed in the United States mail service equals that of all other countries combined. The post routes are more than those of any other single country. No other nation has one-third the number of post offices. The letters mailed in the United States last year exceed those of Great Britain by 100,000,000, and nearly that number more than Germany, France and Austria combined. With the exception of Germany this country carries more newspapers in her mail than any other nation. The proportion per capita of mail matter delivered last year in the United States was 66. On July 1, 1886, there was 53,614 postoffices in the United States, and 497 branch offices; number of presidential offices, 2,244; money order offices, 7,265. On Oct. 1 there were 2,291 presidential offices and 7,863 money order offices.

During the last fiscal year there were 22,747 appointments made. In the same time there were 7,940,302 domestic money orders issued, amounting to $114,000,000; 5,999,428 postal notes amounting to $11,718,000. To the end of September, the first full year of the special delivery system, there were 1,118,820 letters received. Nine-tenths of the foreign mails have been transmitted in foreign bottoms. In the financial exhibit the deficit shows $6,890,917.51. The estimated revenue for the current fiscal year is $47,312,710.83.

The Red River Valley Pouring Out Wheat.

The wheat crop of the Red River valley proves to be larger than the estimates. The elevators and warehouse along the line of the Manitoba road are all full to overflowing, and in some of the towns the farmers pile the sacks out of doors as the railroad is unable to furnish cars fast enough to haul it to market. The Manitoba road has 4,900 cars, but many of them are tied up at Duluth owing to the lack of facilities there to handle the grain. The railroads say the movement of grain from the Red River is unprecedented.

Postal Service no Self-Sustaining.

The third assistant postmaster general, in his annual report, says that for the next fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, he estimates the deficiency of revenue to be supplied out of the general treasury as $4,724,553, which is only $24,014 more than the amount charged to the treasury in the year ended June 30, 1884, and $5,175,612 less than for the year ended June 30, 1885. He thinks the day not far distant when the postal service will be self-sustaining.

ARTHUR'S FUNERAL.

The President and His Cabinet Attend the Services.

The Ceremonies Simple and Unostentatious.

The funeral of ex-President Chester A. Arthur took place in New York on the 22d inst., with ceremonies of the most simple nature. Excepting the crowd that blocked the streets in the vicinity of the family residence and along the route to the church, there was little to indicate that the man who had been the ruler of the nation was being laid away to his final resting place.

It had been the purpose of the family to adorn the casket with a single wreath, as a token of affection, but a tribute from President Cleveland, and that, together with a cross of laurel, a floral pillow inscribed "Requiescat in pace" and some palm leaves were placed about and on the coffin. The body had been attired in black, the coat being frock. The face was placid and wasted.

As the coffin was carried down the flight of stairs leading to the front hall, the pallbearers walked down the steps to the street and proceeded to the carriages. They walked two abreast and were led by President Arthur's secretaries, Walter Q. Gresham and Robert T. Lincoln. The others were ex-Secretaries William E. Chandler and Benj. H. Brewster, ex-Postmaster Gen. Frank Hatton, Gen. Phillip H. Sheridan, Gen. George H. Sharpe, Dr. Cornelius A. Agnew, Cornelius N. Bliss, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Robert G. Dun and Charles L. Tiffany. All wore scarfs of black and white extending over the shoulders and down to the waist.

After the casket had been placed in the hearse—a plumeless vehicle drawn by two black horses—the chief mourners came. In the first carriage were young Chester A. Arthur and his sister, Nellie. Following them came Mrs. McElroy, Gen. Arthur's sister, with an escort, and after her came Mrs. Carr and Mrs. Haynesworth, who are also sisters of the deceased. All were escorted down the steps by ex-Marshall McMichael, who had charge of the arrangements.

After the hearse had moved off a few paces President Cleveland took his place in the first carriage behind it. He was accompanied by Postmaster General Vilas and Secretaries Bayard and Whitney followed. Secretary Lamar and Gen. W. T. Sherman were next. The chief justice, Morrison R. Waite, and Justice Harlan and Blatchford took seats in the next carriage, and Senators Edmunds, Logan and Evans followed. Senators Hawley and Gorman were next in the line, and after them Gov. Hill. In other carriages were Surrogate Rollins, President Arthur's law partner, Mr. Knevals, Elihu Root, Wm. Dowd, Horace Russell and a few others.

Throughout the entire route people were massed in countless numbers. None but those who held cards were admitted to the church. The soldiers and sailors who were to escort the body from the church to the railroad station, were ranged along the west side of the avenue, from Forty-seventh to Forty-fifth streets. They stood in the position of salute as the hearse was driven past them, and their bright uniforms of blue and red presented an imposing appearance.

When the hearse drew up in front of the church the pallbearers alighted and marched as before, ahead of the casket, as it was carried up the low steps of the church to the entrance. Seldom was there such a distinguished congregation as was assembled within the sacred edifice. The church itself was most tastefully draped with black and purple cloth, while the portico of the edifice, which fronts on Fifth avenue, was hung with two American flags knotted with crape. The door posts of the vestibule were entwined with folds of black cloth. The casket was met at the door by the surpliced choir and clergymen, singing the processional hymn "Asleep in Jesus." The casket was covered with heavy black cloth, on which rested two palm branches and a simple wreath of roses. The pallbearers followed immediately after.

The casket was placed upon the catafalque in front of the altar, near which stood a palm tree surrounded by a bank of roses and lilies. Following the pallbearers came the mourners. Then came the intimate friends and the presidential party. This included President Cleveland, who came in with ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes. The president and ex-president attracted great attention as they walked down the aisle side by side, and were shown to a pew directly in the rear of those reserved for the family. The president was followed by the members of the cabinet, judges of the supreme bench, the senatorial committee, consisting of Messrs. Edmunds, Logan, Allison, Butler, Cameron, Voorhees, Miller, Vest, Gorman, Hawley and Jones; the congressional delegation, comprising Messrs. Hewitt, Hisscock, Ermentrout, Kelley, Springer, Hitt, Reed, Welbourn, Phelps, Matson, Long, Wilkins and Heard.

The church seats 840 people and was filled to overflowing. Among the distinguished persons present were James G. Blaine, Henry Ward Beecher, Roscoe Conkling, Gen. B. F. Butler, Theodore Roosevelt, French minister, Senor Romero, Mexican minister, and other prominent people.

The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. D. Parker Morgan, rector of the church; Rev. E. W. Babcock, his assistant; Rev. Dr. W. A. Leonard of St. John's church, Washington, and Rev. Dr. Geo. Rainford of St. George's church. Rev. Dr. Leonard opened the services by reading from the fifth chapter of the first epistle of Paul to the Corinthians. The choir then sang the anthem "Let me know my end." After the reading of the hymn "Nearer my God to Thee," it was sung by the choir and was followed by the anthem "I heard a voice from heaven" and the hymn "Thou art weary." Rev. Dr. Morgan read the burial service and the exercises closed by the singing of the processional hymn "Abide with me."

The coffin was then lifted from the catafalque and was followed by the pallbearers, the mourners, and the congressional army and navy delegations to the hearse in waiting. The funeral escort of military and sailors at once fell into line and the band played a funeral dirge while the coffin was born from the church to the hearse. The procession from the church to the Grand Central depot then started.

Upon the arrival of the funeral train at Albany the remains were at once taken to the rural cemetery, where they were followed by the common council in a body, the Grand club, and other delegations. At the grave the Right Rev. Wm. Croswell Doane, bishop of Albany, in the full robes of his office, stepped to the evergreen-lined grave, and taking some earth from that thrown up from the opening, dropped three handfuls on the oaken board of the outer box, reciting the beautiful committal service of the Episcopal church.

The bishop offered prayer and pronounced the benediction. Earth was thrown in the grave and pressed down, and when the dusk of evening began to settle on forest and hill deft hands covered the newly-made mound with sheets of sod.

Suit to Settle a Title.

The attorney general has instituted a suit in the supreme court of the District of Columbia to settle the title of the Potomac flats and especially that portion of them which has been known for years as Kidwell meadows. The list of defendants is very long, numbering forty-nine, distributed over a wide range of territory. The bill to be filed deals only with the Kidwell claim, and it is charged that the patent is null and void for several reasons, the most important being that it was obtained through fraud and collusion between John Wilson, who was commissioner of the land office in 1869, when the patent was issued. The defendants are heirs of Chief Justice Marshall, who at the time of his death claimed to have vested in him the title of the Potomac river, its island, water, fish and everything else pertaining to it as grantee of Denny Martin Fairfax, devisee of Lord Fairfax, who became the owner of what is called "the grant from the British crown in 1700 to the northern neck of Virginia, comprising all the land between the Rappahannock and the Potomac rivers." The government will throw the burden of proof upon those and the other claimants, compelling them to come into court and show on what grounds they base their claims. The amount of land involved is forty-seven acres.

Terrible Mine Explosion.

Shortly after the miners and laborers entered the Conyngham shaft near Wilkes-Barre, Pa., the other morning, an explosion of gas took place. The explosion occurred in a shanty at the foot of the shaft which was occupied by the fire boss. No work was done the day before, and consequently there was a larger quantity of gas than usual in the shaft. The accident occurred at ten minutes past seven o'clock, while the men were getting ready to go to work. About fifty men, miners and laborers, were sitting at the foot of the shaft waiting for the inside boss when the terrible explosion took place.

The disaster was caused by Cornelius Boyle, a mine laborer, who stepped into a worked out chamber which was filled with gas with a lighted lamp upon his hat. Many mules were killed and wounded and the damage to the inside workings of the shaft is great. Fire bosses Wm. Williams and W. Evans are reported fatally burned. The explosion was the most serious that has occurred in the anthracite coal fields this year. It is now definitely known that forty-two men are severely burned and others slightly injured. Ten of the men will die of their injuries.

Doctors Prescribe

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, for three reasons:—it is perfectly safe for old or young,—can be relied upon in cases of emergency,—and possesses great curative powers.

I consider Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a medical success and a chemical triumph. I have found this medicine a powerful specific for Colds, Coughs, and Pulmonary Complaints. I use it in my own family and recommend it in my practice.—Parker Cleveland, M. D., Prof. of Chemistry and Materia Medica, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is an invaluable remedy for Colds, Coughs, and all Pulmonary diseases. I use it myself and prescribe it in my practice.—A. S.
Pettenger, M. D., Glen Gardner, N. J.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

The reason why Ayer's Blood Elixir
is warranted, is because it is the best Blood Preparation known. It will positively cure all Blood Diseases, purifies the whole system, and thoroughly builds up the constitution. Remember, we guarantee it.
R. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

Avoid the harsh, irritating, griping compounds so often sold as purgative medicine, and correct the irregularities of the bowels by the use of Ayer's Cathartic Pills.
They are invaluable as a family medicine.

By the kindness of Mr. John Hoover we have put up in our office a very singular freak of nature. It consists of two stalks of asparagus, about six feet in length and unusually large, but the central, pulpy por-flattened and spiral, similar to the pods of the honey locust.

Family Reunion.

Thanksgiving day being the fortieth anniversary of the wedding of J. K. Yocum and wife, their children, children's husbands, wives, grandchildren, and relatives —thirty-three in number— assembled at Father Yocum's to enjoy one of their old-fashioned reunions, and partake of the good things said to be in store. It is needless to say that all present seemed to vie with each other to make the day one long to be remembered. One of the happy incidents of the occasion was the presence of Mr. and Mrs. E. Skidmore, who were present forty years ago, when the contracting parties took each other for better or worse. At 2 o'clock all sat down to a sumptuous thanksgiving dinner, such an one as Mother Yocum knows how to provide, and satisfied the inner man.

A nice photographic group, consisting of C. A. Yocum and lady, Dell Yocum and lady, M. F. Yocum and lady, and Fred. Howlett and lady, was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Yocum for which the donors received many thanks.
