Laura Bridgman, the deaf, dumb and blind woman, is now over sixty, tall, spare, full of nervous action, with a sensitive, eager face, a delicate profile, finely shaped head and the dignified demeanor of a woman of refinement and character. She knows more of modern literature than most women in full possession of their senses and is fastidious in her friendships, invariably selecting bright and agreeable people and showing a marked aversion to persons of inferior intellect. She has wonderfully delicate hands and her gestures are strangely expressive. She is deft in movement and not only dresses herself and takes dainty care of her room but is skillful in some kinds of fancy work. She chooses delicate and soft material for her clothing, and likes the dress of her friends to be of smooth and fine texture. She is now at the home in Boston provided for her by Dr. Howe, through whose skill and treatment she has been enabled to hold converse with those around her, by the one sense spared her - that of feeling.

Sir Andrew Clarke, one of the highest English authorities on coast defences, says the costly plan projected by the United States board of fortifications belongs to an old system falling into disuse. "Instead of alleged invulnerability my principle is invisibility of defenses. When you erect enormous fortifications you offer a target for the enemy's shots. With Lieut. Maxim of the United States I have worked out what I call a disappearing gun system, which can be applied to the heaviest guns made. This renders fortifications unnecessary. The gun occupies a hole in the ground. When in action it is raised by a sort of hydraulic elevator, and after firing sinks into the pit again to be reloaded. Thus it is exposed for only a few seconds."

Frank C. Haddock, the only surviv ing son of the late Rev. George C. Haddock, whose death at Sioux City, Ia., is remembered by all, has entered the ministry and accepted a call to the pastorate of the Methodist church of Bagley, Ia. He was a graduate from Lawrence university with high rank and entered the legal profession, in which he gained considerable repute, especially as a law writer, The tragic death of his father developed the latent religious fervor of his nature, and materially changed his plans of life-work. He intends now to devote himself to the cause in which his father suffered martyrdom, and it has been suggested that he should be called to the pulpit in Sioux City.

Francis B. Stockbridge, United States senator-elect from Michigan, was born in Bath, Me., the city of ship-building, April 9, 1826. His father was a physician, who followed the practice of his profession fifty years at Bath; his mother was a daughter of the Hop. Ben. Russell of the Boston Sentinel. At the age of 16 Frank Stockbridge went to Boston as a clerk, remaining five years. till 1847, when he went to Chicago and opened a lumber yard, having mills at Saugatuck in this state. In 1850 he removed to Sangatuck and took personal charge of the mills, remaining there till 1874 when he moved to Kalamazoo, where he has since resided.

There are some disadvantages in be longing to a distinguished family, particularly when it tends to obscure all personal distinctions. At a political meeting where Charles Francis Adams was introduced as the son of John Adams and the grandson of the great John Quincy Adams, he began his own address by remarking: "The fact of my times during the evening. I am proud of my father and grandfather, but I wish it distinctly understood that I appear before you as myself, and not as the son and grandson of any man." He then proceeded to deliver an oration of marked brilliancy.

Farm and Household.

General Farm Nofes. Always fatten a fowl as quickly as possible. Ten days is long enough to get a fowl fat, and it should be confined either in a coop or a number in a small yard. Give plenty of fresh water and feed four times a day, beginning early and giving the last meal late. A mixture of cornmeal three parts, ground oats one part, shorts one part, scalded, is best for the first three meals, with all the corn and wheat that can be eaten up clean at

A veteran horticulturist Marshall P. Wilder-once said when asked what he considered the three most important things necessary to success in fruit culture, "Well, I would first stir the soil, then I would secondly stir the soil, and it is my experience that the next thing I would do would be to stir the soil."

Thistles in a garden and door yard are easily destroyed by cutting them and pouring a little sulphuric acid (oil of vitriol) into the hollow stems. A strong solution of sulphate of iron (common copperas) is also fatal to any plants when it is poured about their roots. In the field the thistles may be killed by plowing the land two or three inches deep now and leaving it until spring, when it is cross-plowed five or six inches deep, and then planted with corn or potatoes. No kind of thistle will survive one year of thorough cultivation.

A house 10x7x8 will hold about 14 tons of ice if filled to the walls, and the eaves. When the walls are double and filled in with sawdust, no inside packing is needed and the ice may be laid close to the inner wall. But the crevices between the ice must be quite filled up with fine brokenice well packed in with a thin rammer made of a piece of board. An ice house floor should be perfectly air tight; a wooden floor through which the air can penetrate, will cause the ice to melt

It would do farmers a service to visit some large killing and packingestablishments and note how easily. quickly and successfully every operation can be performed when every convenience for killing hogs is employed. Few farmers have many conveniences for killing hogs and, being themselves unused to the work, the killing of five or six often occupies the entire day and then the work may not be done in first-class style Wherever an expert can be procured to take the lead in this business it will pay to employ him. His skill will give greater efficiency to the operations of the inexperienced.

By a new process of getting the sugar out of cane, tried by Prof. Wiley at Fort Scott, Kan., the product is 134 pounds of sugar to the ton of cane, against eighty pounds by the old process. In the old process the juice is pressed out; in the new the cane is soaked, and the sugar is diffused in the water. This latter process has been tried for some years in India, with a gain in the sugar product of 43 per cent. The improvement may lead to important results in sugar culture from cane in Louisiana and Florida, as well as from sorghum in the north-variety in their feed, and thus eat more and keep in better condition than they otherwise would. So far as possible this or even greater variety should be given, in winter feeding. As cheap as grain now is some can be afforded to any kind of stock worth keeping. In fact, farmers who complain that they cannot afford to leed grain are only accusing themselves of keeping animals of very interior character. Besides the gain to the stock it is the grain which mainly gives value to the manure heap. Thus good feeding during the winter is the basis of good farming the following season. -Monroe County, N. Y.

The Cruel Check.

A Rural Canadian writer thinks, with good reason, that if those who use upon horses that abominable deancestry has been referred to several vice, the over-tight check-rein, could have a similar appliance attached to themselves they would be convinced in a few minutes that it is about the most cruel species of torture which could be invented:

"Can there be anything more barthan injurious to the sight, By the dren motherless and make life not use of the overhead checks the head worth living. Every woman had her for, instead, the animal, to remove the pressure of the bit, carries its mouth up in the air, the neck being like an inverted bow, and soon becomes ewe-necked, and the opposite of the idea of a carriage horse. Would any sane horseman ride an animal across country, or, indeed, ride a horse at all, if its head were fastened up by the overhead check? We think not else they would soon come to grief Then is it not just as necessary for a driving horse to see where it is going as one that is ridden? A horse that has been kindly broken in is seldom frightened when it can see all that is going on aroud it."

A Great Poultry Farm.

There is a poultry farm of 8,000 Plymouth Rocks at Lancaster, Mass. Mr. Hawkins, its owner, calculates to have about 8,000 fowls every fall, and carries over 2,500 laying hens through the winter. His farm contains 25 acres and his poultry buildings an acre and a half. These comprise six or seven sheds 200 feet in length. Each shed is divided into apartments of twelve by 20 feet, and about 25 hens are kept in each division. A yard is made in front of each apartment.

Mr. H. believes that if confined poultry have their wants attended to tney will do as well as if allowed free range. He bases this belief on several actual tests. In hatching time he sets 200 hens in one day, and puts five hundred eggs in an incubator, which is due to hatch on the same day, the chickens from which will be distributed among 200 hens. His sales of fowls and eggs for hatching at fancy prices are large, about 90 per cent. being profit. He also has a standing order for sixty to ninety dozen of eggs daily, for which he gets the biggest market price. Mr. Hawkins began at the age of 21 with 100 hens, and by careful management and economy his business has enlarged so that at the age of 29 he has a very handsome income. The poultry manure is quite an item. He sold last year 500 barrels at $1.50 per barrel .- Farm and Fireside.

Live and Dead Weight of Pigs.

A fat, well-proportioned pig will dress a larger proportion of his carcase in valuable meat than any other farm animal. The loss in killing, blood, with the breed besides individual peculiarities. Small-boned hogs like Essex, fully grown and fattened all their lives, dress away a surprisingly small proportion. Harris tells of one which after sticking weighed 445 pounds, and weighed next day, after drying out all night, 409 pounds. This is a loss of only 8 percent. Sows that have borne a litter, however well fattened, lose most proprotionably in dressing. They have always a very large digestive apparatus. It is good practice when killing to put the pig on the scales alive and after dressing. The guessing of weights alive and dressed will be one of the best exercises for farmers, and the experience this will give them may prove a valuable aid in future buying or selling. It is a great thing when fat stock is for sale that its owner should know how much to ask for it.

Never make apologies. They are in bad taste, and only make your friend feel ill at ease. Make up for any deficiency in luxury, incomfort even, by the heartiness of your welcome. Allow a guest to amuse him or herself and they will be happier than if too closely looked after. It is a good plan in small house-holds, where a guest is expected, to see that there is a sufficient supply of fresh table linen to last through the allotted visit; have the silver newly polished, and extra plates and glassnot attempt to provide for a style of living greatly different to what you are accustomed in your everyday life. It can only result in discomfort to your-selfe and visitors. The Great Guns of England.

England's big guns are made of bars such as that just described, coiled spirally, and welded into a solid mass by the hammer. These red hot furnaces contain a straight bar; at a word the door is slightly raised, and with huge nippers its head is seized by loops made for the purpose. A steam which draws out the glowing mass, and brings it to a horizontal capstan fixed before the door. A water hose is turned upon the loop, and while it blackens under the chill a stalwart tellow, wielding a heavy sledge, fixes the loop on a nut projecting from the capstan wheel. Then the machine revolves with resistless force, curling the hot metal round and round on its drum neatly and smoothly, and as easily as one of Jordan Marsh's girls would wind ribbon. So the coil is formed, whether for the breech piece or the body of the gun, or for its jacket. This again is cooled, and after a while is refined for welding under the ham-You ought to see this Woolwich hammer. It weighs forty tons sheer weight, and when it drops it falls forty feet on to a block that rests on spiles,

quantities of iron. Between two great shafts this hammer is suspended, a solid block, which, driven from above by steam, and gathering impetus as it fall, strikes with a force of many hundred tons. A veteran workman has charge of this massive hammer. He starts and drops it by a touch of his thumb and finger. I saw an open face watch laid down on the' block; then he dropped the hammer, and he stopped it just in time to break the crystal-and nothing more. They call this last operation of the furnace the "great heat," and about every monarch there is in Europe has seen it just as I did. While I am wondering what they thought about it, the furnace to be emptied is flaring with impatience. Through the enterstices of its great door blue, red and purple flames are leaping out. A huge crane swings around a pair of pincers, at the end of which a dozen Britons cluster. The door rises a little, the white light blinds us, and, although I am at least twenty yards away, the heat burns my face uncomfortably. Water is thrown into the awful gap, and then hair and offal, varies considerable the men perceive their prey. The huge arms part and firmly close, the door rises to its fullest extent, a mail securely sealed, my Book giving full dithe men and out it comes, easiy and softly, a monstrous coil. The crane swings about and strictly confidential. places it on end upon the anvil. Then he hammer falls, shaking the solid floor beneath us, crushing the red-hot mass inches down at a blow, welding its coils together so that they can never part. But the inside hollow has been knocked out of shape by this process, so, when the tube has been reduced to its proper length, a solid mandril is deftly slipped betwixt the hammer and the iron. For two or three blows the contracted coil attempts resistance, but it gives way, and the mandril slips to its base, as into butter. Then the great pincers are used again, and it drops the mass on its side, where again it is battered and struck all around. The irregularities caused by all this hammering are afterward removed by the plane, as I have already mentioned, and then the gun is made by other machinery.—

Kentucky Boys Now and Fifty Years Ago.

Correspondence Boston Herald.

From the Spirit of the Times.

Uncle Grip, one of the old landmarks of Lexington, explains the difference in both appearance and conversation of the young men fifty years ago and now. "Yes," says he, "fifty years ago us young men often met in our Kentucky jeans and cowhide boots, and some barefooted, with 'Howdy, Jack, how is all the folks at home? Father well? Mother well? Your crops good this year?' 'Oh, yes; the crops are fair to middlin' this year. Our work es at hand, on or in the sideboard. Do is about done, but we must all go over and give Sam Anderson a day's work to help him out, for he has been sick and away behind.' So, you see, us boys sort of talked about farming, possum hunting,&c.

"Now, when young men meet, it's 'Halloo, there! Where did you get that breech-loading gun aud that Irish setter?' 'Why, Col. Thompkins brought this gun from England; he bought it for my birthday present. Only cost $250, and the dog I gave £450 for, and he is worth three times that price.' Well, here comes Maj. Jone's youngest son, Tommy. Halloo, Tommy! Did your brother's horse win at Saratoga yesterday?' 'Yes, he won, but I have a young Hindoo, out of Col. Clay's best mare (here he repeats the pedigree of dam and sire thirty generations back), which I am going to enter in the Kentucky and American Derbies.' Yes, and here comes Gen. Smith's boy Willie, with a trotter bred at Ash-

ANOTHER SUDDEN DEATH Hardly a week passes without the men-tion by the newspapers of sudden deaths, and of late the alarming frequency of the state-ment that death was caused by rheumatism or neuralgia of the heart cannot fail to have been noticed. In all probability many deaths attributed to heart disease are caused by these terrible diseases, which are far more dangerous than is generally considered. Is there any positive cure? The best answer to such a question is given by those who have been cured by the use of Athlophoros.

Mrs. Carrie Lee, Kenosha, Wis., says: "I don't believe any one ever suffered with rheumatism as I did and lived; in fact neither I nor my people expected to see me walk about again, and at times despaired of my life. I was stricken during the month of January. I had taken a severe cold in the cars on my way to Chicago; I had returned home, when one evening I was taken so suddenly that in a few minutes from its first expects. few minutes from its first appearance I was so prostrated that I had to be carried to my bed-room, where I remained until the following May. During the interval of January and May the suffering I bore could not be described. I was treated by the best physicians, also had different ones in consultation without any material change. My arms and limbs were drawn in such shape that I could not lie down, and was helpless to assist myself in any way. I was in the constant care of a nurse both night and day. One of the nurses I had applied magnetism, but that was a failure. I commenced taking Athlophoros, and could feel its effects upon me as soon as I commenced taking it. It was certainly marvelous. I was soon able to straighten my limbs, and when I had taken five bottles I was free from rheumatism."

Every druggist should keep Athlophoros and Athlophoros Pills, but where they cannot be bought of the druggist the Athlophoros Co., 112 Wall St., New York, will send either (carriage paid) on receipt of regular price, which is $1.00 per bottle mer

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan 14, 1887.

In the report of the house committee on the senate bill to admit Washington territory as a state, the statement is made that the territory, together with that portion of Idaho proposed to be annexed to the new state, contains 25,000 more inhabitants than the established figure of representation. The committee also shows that Montana also has all the requirements of a new state, and recommends that the constitution of both proposed states shall include a provision forbidding polygamy. Senator Sherman submitted a lengthy memorial from the legislative assembly of Idaho protesting against the proposition to annex a portion of Idaho to Washington Territory.

The president's dinner to his cabinet this week was a notable society event. Every member of the cabinet was present, and the toilets of the ladies are said to have been dazzlingly beautiful, and as they wandered among the brilliantly lighted rooms, filled with choice cut flowers and tropical plants, the place seemed transformed into fairyland.

Gen. Hazen's funeral took place on the 19th. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Leonard, rector of St. John's P. E. Church. A throng of distinguished people attended, including Secretary Endicot,t Gen. Sheridan, and many prominent officers of the army and navy. The interment was made in Oak Hill cemetery with military honors. The escort consisted of a battalion and battery, a company of marines and a detachment of enlisted men from the signal corps. By direction of the president the war department was closed at noon as a mark of respect to the de-

The bill appropriating $20,000 to complete the monument to Mary Washington has been reported back to the house. A similar bill was also reported back in the senate and placed on the calendar. The corner stone of the monument was laid by President Jackson nearly 54 years ago. Work was continued for four years, but nothing has been done on it since.

At a recent session of the senate that body decided in favor of a renewal of the Hawaiian treaty. As there is some question as to whether the senate can act independently of the house in this matter, considerable interest is felt as to what action the house will take. The opinion is joint committee of five senators and eight freely expressed in congressional circles representatives to consider the expediency that the house will vote for the total abrogation of the treaty.

A number of petitions have been received this session asking temporary aid for common schools to be disbursed on the basis of illiteracy. It is a noticable fact that a number of these petitions come from some states whose educational facilities and methods are regarded as models.

The union veterans have elected M. Dil-S. Ayres of Maine chaptain-in-chief, H. A. J. Brown of New York and Edward Hughes of Massachusetts were elected members of this bill the executive committee. The badge adopted for the order consists of a red, white and blue ribbon, with a head-piece of brass, representing two clasped hands, and a shield with a pair of muskets engraved thereon pendant to it. Around the rim of the shield are the characters "U. V. U.,1861-1865." In the center of the shield are crossed cannon and sabres with the letters "F. C. L."

The division was made on party lines, strictly. The only precedents for passing such bills are found in the cases of the widows and families of Admiral Parragut. Generals Hancock, I hom-as and Grant, and the majority of the committee believe that it would be bad policy to follow those precedents in view of the fact that there are about 100 surviving widows of officers who would then be entitled to pensions, who are now excluded by the general law. Notwithstanding this action of the committee the friends of the bill are confident that when it is put on its final passage, it will have a very unanimous support.

The bill granting a pension to Anna Ethridge Hooks, a celebrated Michigan woman, who acted as a field and hospital nurse during the war, has been passed by the senate. Mrs. Hook's service was with the second, third and fourth Michigan regiments. She was on the in the thickest of the fight once in Virginia, and when the commander fell mortally wounded she jumped upon his horse, rallied the soldiers and led the charge. In her papers for a pension is a letter from the late Gen. Hancock of a highly eulogistic nature. Mrs. Hooks is in bad health as the result of exposure and is poor, it is said:

The national board of trade met in this city on the 19th, and passed resolutions favoring laws preventing the importation of adulterated food and medicines; estab lishing a uniform grain standard for the United States, and creating an economical bankrupt law. A resolution favoring the passage of the inter-state commerce bill was lost, as the board thought any action on their part might endanger the passage of the bill.

Congressmen King and Jones of Louisiana had a quarrel in a barber shop the other night which, but for the interference of by-standers would have resulted in a murder. The cause of the quarrel is an old family feud between the Jones and Liddell families, two wealthy families on the Black river of Louisiana. During the course of the feud, Jones's grandfather was shot and killed by Mrs. Liddell, for circulating defamatory reports about her; Mrs. Liddell's son was killed by the Jones's; Gen. Liddell was murdered by the Jones's, father and son; and a party of Liddell's friends lynched the elder Jones and one son.

King, it seems, had taken up the Liddell's cause, and has several times called Jones an assassin. Jones has replied through the press, but contents himself with paper bullets.

The senate has also passed a joint resotion, providing for the appointment of a of holding in 1892 an international exhibition of the industries and productions of all countries, and the bill declarforfeited the lands granted to the New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Vicksburg railroad company, was passed.

The much mooted inter-state commerce bill, which has been the bone of contention in both branches of congress for a long time, is now ready for the president's signature, the bill having passed the house lon of Washington to be commader in chief by a vote of 219 years to 41 nays. The bill, as amended in conference and passed by both houses, prohibits railroad companies entering into pools or combinations, or charging more per mile for a short haul than a long haul. A petition has been presented to the senate from the W. C. T. SOUTHWARD.

Hammond, Louisiana, and Jackson, Mississippi.

The tide of emigration has already turned southward, and thousands of peole are asking the question, "Where can I locate South to best advantage." Every state has its peculiar attractions, but it is generally conceded that no locality in the South possesses so many advantages as HAMMOND, LOUISIANA. Here over 40 Northern families have located within the past year. The climate cannot be excelled. Water, clear and pure, only 52 miles north of New Orleans on the main line of the Illinois Central Railroad with direct market facilities to every important Northern market. Fruits and vegetables are grown with ease and great profit. Stock does well. A good school, beautiful church, public library, and is in every sense a Northern town. An Inter-State Dairymens' and Fruit Grower's Convention will be held at Jackson, Mississippi, February 16, 17 and 18. Northern and Southern lecturers and instructors of national reputation are upon the program. Mardi Gras Festival at New Orleans will take place Feb. 22. To accommodate all who desire to attend the Jackson Convention, visit Hammond and the New Orleans Mardi Gras the Illinois Central railroad will run a low rate excursion from all points on its Illinois and Iowa lines arriving at Jackson at 4:10 p. m. Feb. 16. Tickets will be sold to New Orleans and return with stop over priviliges at Jackson and Hammond. Parties residing at points off the line of the Illinois Central should ask their local ticket agents for round trip tickets to New Orleans and return and be sure they are routed via. the Illinois Central in order to visit Jackson and Hammond. For excursion circulars, programs of Jackson convention and printed matter concerning Hammond, apply to the undersigned at Manchester, Iowa.

A Michigan Scientist.

A correspondent of the Detroit Tribune writing from Battle Creek, says:

Edward Bringham has been in this city several days visiting his parents, his name is known in scientific circles all over the American continent as one of the most conscientious and thorough of South American explorers. He left on his third and last expedition about fourteen months age and has been working in the interest of Hillsdale and Albion colleges and the Battle Creek public schools. Arriving on the South American coast, he started from the South American coast, he started from Bera, a point seventy-five miles up the south mouth of the Amazon and followed up that river, branching off into several of its tributaries and deviating from the usual path of tourists and explorers, discovering many relies of antiquity and a great many curiosities. He followed the Amazon to a point called Juramaguas by canoe, from that place he proceeded over land by a path never before followed by any explorer for three days: then struck what is known as "Orton's Path," on the Berana Na Bura. He traveled on that stream by canoe, all the cargo being carried on the backs of natives to the head of canoe navigation on that river. Then he cance navigation on that river. Then he went afoot accompanied only by peons and changing these often over the mountains, to Chachapoyas, Peru, visiting many important points on the route. He then wert on with mules and peons to Balsas, on the Maranon in the upper part of the Amazon, and thence walked over the mountains to Gelendin, a valley point about 500 miles from the Pacific coast. From there he proceeded with mules to Cjamarca. After remaining at this point for a time he went on to the coast, which he struck at Pascasmayo, Peru. He then went up the coast to Grayacuil in Fan went up the coast to Guayaquil, in Ecuador, and thence to Quito, the city which, until the occupation of Leadville, has always been called the highest in the world, located in the heart of the Andes. This terminated the expedition.

He has secured a large number of interesting specimens and curiosities, which will enrich the cabinets of the colleges in whose interest he went out.

Not Guilty. Capt. Duncan McCaig was shot dead by Emma Moore, his divorced wife, at Port Huron, at 2 o'clock on the morning of March 25, 1886. There had been quarreling in the family for years, and outside interference was often necessary, so there were many who were not surprised by the fatal culmination. They had been divorced for two years at the time of the shooting, but two years at the time of the shooting, but srouble between them continued to exist, Mrs. McCaig retaining charge of their little daughter. On the night of the murder McCaig, who was a lake captain for a number of years and had many convivial friends, had been drinking freely. His friends, had been drinking freely. His friends took him home, but he subsequent-ly made his way to his ex-wife's house and abused her until she procured a shot gun and fired a charge through his right eye, the brains oozing from the wound. Mrs. McCaig claimed he had a knife in his hand and threatened her life as well as the lives of her relatives. No tragedy ever before occurred in Port Huron which caused so profound a sensation.

The trial ended on the 15th inst. in a verdict of "not guilty."

Facts and Figures About Michigan.

With this title we have published for wo years a HAND-BOOK OF THE STATE OF MICHIGAN, compact and comprehensive, embracing in upwards of one hunared pages all possible information and statistics of the State, its population, agricul-tural and mineral productions, manufactures. Inances, trade, government, courts, educational and other institutions, county offices, cities, railroads, elections, etc., that could be packed into the space mentioned; in short, almost everything that any practical business man may require to know of the State, presented in such shape and so indexed as to be made most avail-

The work has been prepared and carefully revised by a writer of many year's experience in the fields of descriptive and statistical literature, and has been cordially received by the press and the public. Though small in size and printed in small but very clear type, the amount of matter was more than two hundred ordinary duodecimo pages. Such a work is kept at hand for reference on the desk of every business man receiving it and its value as an advertising medium may be inferred.

A new edition of not less than ten thousand copies, enlarged by the addition of new and valuable matter, and revised to the latest date, is now being prepared for issue as early as possible in 1887. A limited number of advertisements will be received (subject to approval) at $50 00 per page. O. W. RUGGLES.

In Defense of the Chinese.

Advices from British Columbia state that official notification has just been received by the provincial government of that province from the British government to the effect that the Chinese must be allowed to enjoy the same unrestricted liberties as other people in the province and must not be interfered with. Unless these wishes are carried out a threat is made that the imperial government will not grant a mail subsidy to the Canadian Pacific railway. The communication further states that it is the desire of Lord Salisbury to keep on the best possible terms with China, as in event of war with Russia it would be of the highest importance not to disturb the friendly feeling now existing between China and Great Britain. The same intimation was given to the Dominion government at the time they put the Chinese immigration bill through parliament.

The Unprotected South.

A circular has been issued by the coast defense association of southern coast cities. It is signed by prominent citizens of all the coast cities of the south and regards with alarm the unprotected condition of their cities. It recommends that a convention be held in February at De Funiak Springs, Fla., to be attended by delegates from coast states, besides cabinet officers and congressional committees.

LANSING LOGIC.

The Legislature Elects a Senator - Several Bills Passed General News from the

LANSING, January 24, 1:87.

The most important event in legis! circles the past week was the election of a United States senator. The vote was taken separately in each house In the senate Stockbridge received 22 votes, and 65 votes were cast for him in the house.

The final formalities of the election

The final formalities of the election were concluded the day following the election in joint session of the two houses and the Hon. Francis B. Stockbridge officially declared to have been chosen for the full term of six years from the 4th of March, 1888. The result of the vote in each house was announced by President pro tem. Monroe of the senates who presided over the joint convention, and immediately thereafter the convention adjourned. tion adjourned.

One of the afternoon sessions of the house was devoted to the special order of memorial services in honor of the late Ovid N. Case of Detroit. Speeches eulogistic of the character and virtues of the deceased were made. Memorial resolutions were introduced and adopted, and the whole ordered printed in the journals of the house. A vert more substantial method of house. A yet more substantial method of testifying to the worth and usefulness of the deceased, was when the vote to pay to the window the deceased member's salary promptly prevailed. The sen-ate has set apart Friday, Jan. 28, for mem-orial services on the life and death of the ate representative.

The senate has passed the bill relating to the discharge of mortgages, one incorporating the village of Carsonville, and spent considerable time discussing the bill relating to the solemnization of marriages and he issuing of licenses therefor. The bill proposes radical changes in the marriage aws of the state, but in spite of its radical nature it is strongly endorsed by the clergy and legal fraternity of the state.

The house has passed bills to punish lrunk and intoxicated persons; to incorporate the village of Capac: to amend the act incorporating the city of Manistee; to amend section 2 of chapter 4 of act 326 of he session laws of 1883 to provide a charer for the city of Detroit; to amend the cts relative to offenses against property.

One measure which ilicited considerable liscussion and which was defeated by a arge majority, was that to require circuit and supreme court judges to transmit to the governor certain recommendations as to the amendment of the statutes.

The bill to repeal the act establishing standard time called forth an animated debate. It was very noticeable hat the division of sentiment was about n sectional lines as between the east and he west, although one of the members from Wayne county voted against the bill. When the roll was-called 49 members voted aye and 46 voted in the negative.

pouring in every day, asking for the pas-sage of the bill. The petitions all pray for the 18 year limit. The age limit is the pivo-Hogs-Market strong and 5@10c higher tal point of the measure, some favoring 16 years, and a not small constituency support the 18 year limit.

Lansing society is on the qui vive about the reception to Gov. and Mrs. Luce, Miss Luce and the new state officials, to be tendered by Ex-Gov. Alger at Detroit, on the 4th proximo.

In executive session the senate has considered and approved a number of the governors appointments.

In reply to the request upon Gov. Luce from the president of the southern forestry congress asking him to name some prominent person from Michigan to whose memory a tree might be dedicated in the the circle (around the great spring) representing the American union, the governor selected Zachariah Chandler and said, in his reply, that Michigan would be highly honored and complimented by this action of the southern forestry congress.

A resolution was introduced in the house during the week reciting that "whereas certain newspapers of the state contain intimations and charges against the good management of the soldiers' home at Grand Rapids; insinuating and charging that the institution is mismanaged; that its inmates are neglected and abused and used like dogs, and that it is a hell rather than a humane institution, therefore resolved (the senate concurring). that a select committee consisting of three members of the house and two of the senate be appointed to investigate the insinuations and charges of bad management at that institution.

In committee of the whole the house repassed the Breen bill for the suppression of the infamous dance houses of the upper peninsula. Mr. Breen, the author of the bill, made an eloquent and effective argument depicting the horrors of the system bounded into the dance houses of the mining camps under false representations, and then compelled to give themselves up to lives of shame, and very graphically described the method of chasing the unfortunate wretches who escaped, by putting dogs on their trails. The bill as passed by the house, punishes with five years' imprisonment, any person connected with these dens.

HOW A MISER WAS CURED.

Jonas Pray was born stingy; he dd

his sweetmeats from his little brothers when he was a child, and smoked his cigar alone when he was a young man. By the time he was forty he was a very rich man, though he lived as plainly as ever, and somehow about that age the first tender feelings he hadever known crept into his heart. He fell in love with a buxom, goodtempered young woman named Sara Woolwich, and offered himself to her. He was not an ill-looking man, and when he chose could make himself agreeable. Sara liked him and ac-

Jonas looked. There came a time afterward when it seemed to him that the faded tint of the shawl, its dingy palm leaves of yellow brown, and the wilted flowers and shabby ribbons of the bonnet that had seared into his brain. He looked at them long and lingeringly. He knew that his wife was reasonable, and that the things were, and long had been unfit for her to wear. But his winter more—just one."

"The shawl is very thin," she said, "I shall catch cold again, as I did last winter."

"Poor girl," he said softly, and looked towards the desk where his check-book lay. But the grip of the fiend that rules a miser's soul nipped him sorely as he did so.

"They wear sacques a good deal, Sara, don't they?"he said. "Oh, they are very fashionable," rephed Sara.

"Then couldn't you make one out of that old billiard-cloth that is in the

"A madman,"thought the manager, "our costliest is $5,000," said he re-pressing a smile. "Have it put up for me," said Jo-

"Certainly mad," said the manager to himself.

But Jonas had taken a check from his pocket, and with trembling hands was filling up the blanks.

The manager looked it over carefully "Jonas Pray," he said more respectfully. Then it flash-ed upon him that he had read of a fatal accident to this man's wife that day. It was a strange proceeding, altogether. Secretly he called others to look at his customer. One knew him; financially he was all right.

"And the rest is none of our business," said the manager, as he saw the bundle of splendor carried down stairs after Jonas Pray. "They spoke of him as a miser, in the paper. That is a pretty purchase for a miser."

Meanwhile Jonas was driven home. From the door floated long streamers of black crape. No sweet face smiled a greeting. Carrying the shawl under his arm he went up stairs to the darkened room, where under straight folds of white drapery, seemed to lay the form of his wife. A watcher sat there; he sent her away; and then, alone in the room he knelt beside the bier.

"Sara," he said, "Sara, can you hear me? I loved you, Sara; but I was such a miser-such a miser; but I've bought you a shawl at last. Oh! Sara, Sara! I paid as much as I could for it, my dear. You shall be wrapped in it in your coffin-"

At that instant a voice cried: "Oh! Jonas, Jonas, dear! Oh, my poor Jonas!"

And turning he saw his wife, either in the spirit or in the flesh, standing behind him. His knees trembled under him. But the figure came closer, It was no ghost, but a living woman, and she took him in her arms.

"Oh, how ill you look," she said. "Did you really love me so? And this is all my lault. I went to my-sisterin-law's, and there in a fret-oh, I was so angry, Jonas-I gave away my dress, my shawl and my bonnet to a beggar woman, and vowed to sit in my sister's dressing gowns until you gave me decent clothes to come home in. And the poor woman, who was tipsy, too, my dear, was killed two hours afterwards, and Ineverknew that she had been taken for me until this morning. Oh, such a dirty creature, my dear, the papers described her. And for a little while I was glad you had a fright, but I am sorry now that I was."

For an answer he picked up the costly shawl and wrapped it about her, and took her, folded in it like a mummy, in his arms.

"The miser is dead, he said, "but Jonas Pray will show his wife how he can cherish her."

He did; and if afterwards Sara detected symptoms of a relapse, all she had to do was to wrap herself in the wonderful shawl. The sight of it inevitably recalled the moment when he learned how little, after all, is the value of money. He may, indeed, love his money yet, but he knows that he loves his Sara more.

Vitality and Color

Are restored to weak and gray hair, by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. Through its cleansing and healing properties, this preparation prevents the accumulation of Dandruff, and cures all scalp diseases.

When I commenced using Ayer's Hair Vigor my hair was weak, thin, and gray. My scalp was also full of dandruff, and itched incessantly. Two bottles of the Vigor removed the dandruff, stopped the irritation, restored my hair to its original color, and so stimulated its growth that I now have an abundance of long black hair. The occasional use of this remedy keeps my hair and scalp in perfect condition.—Florence J. Cannon, 759 Clinton st., Trenton, N. J.

Serious Runaway.

As John Humme!, with Mrs. Wesley Westfall and Mrs. Mark Ormsbp, was driving a pair of spirited horses, attached to a buggy, into town from the east, along Railroad street, Wednesday afternoon, the horses became frightened by locomotives and trains that were standing on the track, and, although still fairly under control, turned across the track into Main street at such speed as to upset the buggy, dashing its occupants upon the frozen earth with great violence All suffered abrasions of two miles south of town, in endeavoring to their faces; the ladies were taken up insensible; Mrs. Westfall has a broken forearm, and Mrs. Ormsbe received severe concussion of the brain. At this writing, all are inflicting an ugly wound, that will require improving and no serious results are anticipated. The team was soon disengaged from the dragging buggy, and were stopped opposite the McKone House by running astride a telegraph pole. Damage to horses, harness and buggy considerable.

Obituary.

Isaac Taylor, after a painful illness of has been visiting at G.
