Chelsea Herald.

Rev. Thomas Holmes, Feb.

CHELSEA.

MICH.

Moody, the evangelist, is considering plans, which if carried to completion, will do much to make evangelism a recognized profession, being nothing less than the establishment in Chicago of a training school for evangelists. For this work over $250,000 have already been subscribed, and the returns are not all in yet. It's a grand undertaking, and one worthy of the man who is laboring for its success, but there are two sides to the question as to its usefulness. If the idea is to found a school which will supplement theological schools, and make evangelists of pastors, or if it is to fit persons for evangelistic work in districts and among people which the church does not reach then the work deserves the hearty support of all philanthropic persons. If on the other hand, it is designed to turn out a class of wandering evangelists to go from church to church doing the work of the pastor, the scheme cannot succeed and ought not to, for such methods of evangelistic work only detracts from the power of the pastor over his people and tends to minify his office.

The New York Herald suggests that Alaska be made a penal colony and that long-term convicts be sent there. According to the Herald's idea the consummation of such a plan would at least get them out of the way of competition with laboring men who are trying to earn an honest living. Besides, they might be made available in developing that far off portion of our national real estate by constructing highways, clearing forests and breaking ground, as they did in Australia, for instance, for future civilization. In the same issue of the Herald appear interviews with a number of prominent working men among the knights of labor, all of whom, without exception, favor the plan and offer the suggestion that the convicts be made to build railroads, etc., there, to be owned and operated by the general government.

George C. Gorham of Washington has been engaged by the surviving members of the family to write a biography of Edwin M. Stanton, the great war minister. All the private papers of the late secretary have been placed in Mr. Gorham's hands to aid him in the work, and Mr. Stanton obtaining from all available sources letters written by his father and interesting information concerning him. Secretary Stanton left a great deal of unpublished history of interest and importance, which will be given the world in this biography. Mr. Gorham hopes to complete the work in two years.

A writer in the current number of the Century says that the first step in village improvement is to promote its healthfulness. It is the imperfect drainage and foul cesspools that lie below the surface, that endangers the health and should receive early attention, leaving the adornment and decoration of door-yards and lawns; until later. Now is the time to begin to look well to these matters. The ounce of prevention is worth more than the pound of cure.

Prince Bismarck at seventy-one has entered the Reichstag as jauntily as he did twenty years ago, and enjoyed his political triumph as keenly as any of his parliamentary battles. He stops in the chamber beside Von Moltke's statue; the soldier is eighty-six, and the two veterans laugh heartily at each other's jokes; and behind them both is an emperor who is now four score and ten, and yet with all the anxieties of state has contrived to keep a youthful heart.

The law for the extermination of the English sparrow may result in either maiming for life or killing outright hundreds of Michigan's future citizens. One boy in the central part of the state has been maimed for life by the bursting of a gun, and there are a dozen recorded instances of others who will have to go through life with one eye because of the erring aim of the small boy with his sling shot.

Ex-Governor Foster of Ohio says the passage of the inter-state commerce law is the opening wedge toward complete government control and ownership of railroads and telegraph lines.

Mayor Harrison of Chicago predicts that the anarchists will shed more blood within two years; and for this reason he positively declines a renomination to the mayoralty of that city.

WOMEN OF GENIUS.

Serving the Government for Less Wages than Men get.

Mrs. John A. Logan in Chautauquan.

Mrs. Rosenberg, of the Treasury Department, is considered one of the very best counterfeit detectors in the world. Hundreds and thousands of dollars have been thrown out by her remarkable skill, after they had been passed by less astute detectors. She receives $1,800 per annum. If she were a man her salary would be much larger. Miss Mary Van Wranken, a graduate from Miss Porter's school at Farmington, Conn., is considered one of the very best law clerks in the internal revenue. A gentleman of high repute as a lawyer, says that she will take up a case, make a brief, and state the case more correctly and in less time than any one he ever saw. Miss Laura Mehan, daughter of Mr. Mehan, Mr. Spoford's predecessor as Librarian of Congress, has occupied a position in the Comptroller's office for many years, acting frequently as Deputy Comptroller. During Mr. Delano's service as Comptroller, she once filled his place for six months when he was absent. Her perfect knowledge of everything in this office has made her an authority whose decisions are never reversed by her superior officer.

In the Fifth Auditor's office there are many ladies into whose hands come all Consular reports, necessitating a thorough knowledge of banking and mathematics. What can be said of this department can be well said of the others, for women are found in all of them. In the days of competitive examinations many women passed triumphantly the severest tests that were given by the Government, and we have known instances when higher mathematics were as easily solved and rapidly passed over to the examiners as the simplest problems. These, perhaps are phenomenal cases; so it would be with men. The examiner in one instance said: "This woman deserves an $1,800 desk," she got a $1,200 one, while the male clerk beside her, receiving $1,800, often called her to the rescue.

There are over a thousand women employed in the various departments, from the wage women or "broom brigade" to those of the highest clerical class. There is no doubt that no other body of women workers in the land embodies so much culture and intelligence. Many of them are remarkable for literary and scientific attainments, and the departments are bettered for having them there, and women all over the land are reaping the benefit of the lessons learned of what women can and do accomplish in these departments. Socially their standard has ever been exactly what it was before they entered the department, barring the fact that ladies of eminent social position have not the time to devote to society that they had under sunnier skies; but they hold their places just the same whenever they have the time.

Miss Julian Gales, daughter of Joseph Gales, formerly editor and proprietor of the Nation Intelligencer, once a leader and belle in society, has been for many years a clerk in the State Department, commanding by her efficiency and refinement the confidence and highest esteem of all who knew her officially and socially. The distinguished names she bears is in no degree compromised by her, though her duties debar her from participating in society affairs as she was wont to do when fortune was kinder. Mrs. Sarah Magruder, widow of Mayor Magruder, filled a position in the Treasurer's office with such ability and fidelity that she added luster to the fame of the Magruders.

Miss N. B. Cummings, now the Librarian of the Department of Justice, is a daughter of a former Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and is regarded as one of the best authorities on law books in the country. She is literally an encyclopaedia of reports, rendering invaluable aid to the lawyers who use the extension library of that department.

Many ladies have stepped from the departments in the position of honored wives, luxurious homes and places of the highest social standing. Miss Camilla Webb, daughter of a former banker in Washington, one of the greatest beauties in this city, was a clerk in the office of the Comptroller of the Currency for some years. She married Baron von Haire, Ambassador from Netherlands, and is now one of the Queen's household. Mrs. B. H. Brewster, the daughter of Robert J. Walker, formerly Secretary of the Treasury, filled a position in the Treasury for a long time when the shadow of adversity came upon her and her aged and unfortunate father. Mr. Brewster, visiting the department on business, saw this beautiful and accomplished woman, sought an introduction, and offered her his hand and heart. During President Arthur's administration she returned to Washington as the wife of the Attorney-General, and no lady of that Cabinet was more beloved, or filled her station with more graciousness and dignity than did Mrs. Brewster, and no lady ever left behind her truer friends or more admirers. Her death a few months ago brought the tears to the eyes of many who mourned her as a benefactress.

Early in the days of women's employment in the departments a young and beautiful girl sought a position that she might aid her father in the support of the family. Daily she dispatched the duties assigned her, and out of office hours applied herself diligently to the acquisition of knowledge, mastering, almost unaided, French and Italian and other studies. Ere long a distinguished head of a bureau of one of the departments wooed and won her. For a long time during President Grant's administration she was prominent in society. After a while her husband died, and she removed to a great metropolis, but her beauty and accomplishments were not destined to be forever cloistered with grief. One even higher on the roll of official position sought her out, and to-day she is the much-admired and lovely wife of an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. And here in the same city, where, when but a lass in her teens, she carried out her fortune, aided only by her own genius and brains, she is destined to reign as a queen to whom all will be proud to pay homage.

Twice Defied Death.

Atlanta Constitution.

"I have been twice prepared for burial. My right arm was shot off and a shell took off a large slice of my chin and knocked out five front teeth," exclaimed an ex-confederate veteran recently.

The speaker was during the war an orderly sergeant in the Third Georgia regiment. He had just returned from New Orleans, where he attended the Mardi Gras festivities, and was on his way home in Wilkes county. Arriving in Atlanta he missed train connection, and was compelled to stop over. The thought of his pension occurred to him, and he walked into Governor Gordon's office about 5 o'clock. The veteran presented himself to Captain Harrison, the popular and genial clerk of the executive department, and showed that functionary his credentials. They proved to be correct, and a warrant was given him on the treasurer for forty dollars.

"Yes, I saw some pretty tough fighting during the war," continued the ex-confederate veteran, "and had many hair-breadth escapes. I was engaged in a hand-to-hand conflict with a yank at the battle of Gettysburg, who had succeeded in putting a bullet in my right side. It was a fierce struggle, but I got the drop on him and he fell in his tracks with a ball in his heart. I was taken to the hospital afterward, and dropped into a comatose condition, and reported dead. I was all ready for burial when I awoke and convinced the attendants of their error. My sister had been previously advised of my death and she went into mourning.

"My second perilous adventure was at the battle of Spotsylvania. I had been offered the captaincy of the company but declined, having a much better position. Well, as it happened, the captain had been killed, and I took the lead. We found our path obstructed by a line of federals, the leader of which picked me out as a target. His aim was unerring, for my right arm was shattered from the elbow down by three minnie balls. I felt mad, you may be sure, and with my left I blazed away at him putting a bullet right square between his eyes. Just then a shell exploded within a few feet of where I was standing, tearing away part of my chin and some front teeth. Once more I was taken to the hospital, remained unconscious for a whole day, and when I awoke found myself about to be thrown into a ditch that had been dug as a receptacle for the dead.

"It has been said that a soldier in battle is never sure of his aim, but those two federals I shot and killed when within a few feet of me."

Senatorial Literary Tastes.

Senator Ingalls likes old English novels and is well up in scientific literature.

Senator Hoar is regarded as the best authority on American history in the body.

Senator Hale has one of the finest libraries in Maine, and is well read in general literature.

Senator Eustis speaks and reads French like a native, and is fond of yellow-covered novels.

Senator Ransom runs to Latin and dates, especially in Horace, whom he is fond of quoting in his speeches.

Senator Beck is fond of poetry and can repeat the "Lady of the Lake" without a slip from beginning to end. Senator Joe Brown of Georgia spends most of his time perusing musty volumes of public records and documents.

Among the Senators who write for magazines or other periodicals are Sherman, Hoar, Ingalls, Ransom, and Hale.

Senator Vest is a great reader of the Bible and knows whole chapters by heart. All Scriptural facts in dispute are referred to him.

Senator Sherman is a classical scholar and reads French. He scans the newspapers but does not believe in reading a book until time has tried it.

Senator Joe Blackburn is well informed in sporting matters and can tell the record and pedigree of every fast horse in Kentucky without looking it up.

Senator Payne is not noted for his literary attainments, but he is fond of biography and travel and has more reminiscences to tell than most any man in the Senate.

ABUSED WIVES.

Or maiden ladies suffering from any form of female complaint, sick or nervous headache, liver or kidney troubles, can be restored to perfect health by Prof. Curtis' "IOZONE TREATMENT," which is the greatest boon for women ever discovered. It makes no difference what you have taken, or who has failed to cure you, one trial of this Treatment will always convince an entire community. The more desperate the case, the more convincing are its merits. During the next thirty days one $5 Treatment will be delivered to any lady in the United States free, who sends both express and postoffice address, and 50 cents to cover charges, boxing and delivery. CATARRH CURED.

Prof. Curtis has thoroughly demonstrated by his great discovery of "IOZONE," that this dreadful disease can be quickly and permanently cured. It makes no difference if the case has become chronic, or medicines have failed, the "IOZONE TREATMENT" will cure it every time. It is neither drugs nor snuff, and should not be classed with patent nostrums. To introduce this new treatment, we will deliver, charges prepaid, one regular $5 Treatment free to any catarrh sufferer in the United States, who sends us at once both express and postoffice address, and 50 cents to cover charges, boxing and delivery. In ordering ask for Treatment "C." Address, Curtis Iozone Co., Wieting Block, Syracuse, N. Y.

A STARTLING FACT.

It is not commonly known that a large proportion of the rheumatism and neuralgia extant is traceable directly to the diseased condition or imperfect action of the kidneys and liver; therefore a remedy which cures the resulting disease must have found and smitten the first cause. Many persons using Athlophoros for rheumatism and neuralgia have been surprised to find that chronic disorders of the liver and kidneys have also been greatly relieved and they have written for an explanation. The fact is, that the remedy acts directly on these organs, cleansing them from all irritating substances and regulating their action. Taken in connection with Athlophoros Pills this is, without exception, the most valuable kidney and liver remedy in the world, and will cure a large proportion of those who have these diseases.

Madison, Wisconsin.

My wife was seriously afflicted with rheumatism, principally in her arm, she has now used two bottles of Athlophoros and is well and free from pain.

T. R. LUTZOW,

121 N. Butler Street.

Detroit, Mich.

About March 21st my wife was taken with a severe attack of rheumatism, upper and lower limbs swollen badly; suffered intense pain, and part of time was obliged to remain in bed. Tried various remedies with no relief; was induced to try Athlophoros. May 1st, after taking six doses, the pain was entirely gone and swelling all reduced. The medicine has worked like a charm, and I feel assured that another bottle or two will give positive cure.

Yours truly,

R. B. WATSON, 181 18th Street.

Every druggist should keep Athlophoros and Athlophoros Pills, but where they cannot be bought of the druggist the Athlophoros Co., 112 Wall St., New York, will send either (carriage paid) on receipt of regular price, which is $1.00 per bottle for Athlophoros and 50c. for Pills.

For liver and kidney diseases, dyspepsia, indigestion, weakness, nervous debility, diseases of women, constipation, headache, impure blood, etc., Athlophoros Pills are unequalled.

THIS GOOD OLD STAND-BY accomplishes for everybody exactly what is claimed for it. One of the reasons for the great popularity of the Mustang Liniment is found in its universal applicability. Everybody needs such a medicine. The Lumberman needs it in case of accident. The Housewife needs it for general family use. The Cannibal needs it for his teams and his men. The Mechanic needs it always on his work bench. The Miner needs it in case of emergency. The Plowman needs it—can't get along without it. The Farmer needs it in his house, his stable, and his stock yard. The Steamboat man or the Boatman needs it in liberal supply afloat and ashore. The Horse-fancier needs it—it is his best friend and safest reliance. The Stock-grower needs it—it will save him thousands of dollars and a world of trouble. The Railroad man needs it and will need it so long as his life is a round of accidents and dangers. The Backwoodsman needs it. There is nothing like it as an antidote for the dangers of life, limb and comfort which surround the pioneer. The Merchant needs it about his store among his employees. Accidents will happen, and when these come the Mustang Liniment is wanted at once. Keep a Bottle in the House. 'Tis the best of economy. Keep a Bottle in the Factory. Its immediate use in case of accident saves pain and loss of wages. Keep a Bottle Always in the Stable for use when wanted. We have Thousands of Testimonials to the Fact that

The city of Stockton, Kansas, has nominated but one ticket for the municipal election, the candidates for all the offices from Mayor down, being women. [Depend upon it, the liquor law will be executed in Stockton. Ed.]

OUR NORTH LAKE correspondent says, "April fool day has come and gone, but the fools remain." We believe it when editors show the shallowness of their brains and the wickedness of their hearts by ridiculing the virtues and applauding the vices of men. Solomon has said of such, "As a madman who casteth fire brands, arrows and death, so is the man that deceiveth his neighbor, and saith, Am not I in sport?"

LOST.

At a late hour, too late for comment this week, we are constrained to concede that the prohibitory amendment is undoubtedly lost. The Free Press of this morning gives the following: In favor of the amendment 52,329; against it 55,493—majority against, 3,164. The Tribune reports 55,430 against and 50,539 for—majority against, 4,891. Three small counties remain to be heard from, but their vote cannot reverse the vote as it now stands.

The constitutional amendment is lost, but the cause is not lost. The fight against the liquor traffic has just begun, but it is begun in earnest, and there will be no relaxation of effort until truth, righteousness, sobriety, domestic felicity and national prosperity triumph.

James L. Gilbeat may very properly be called the popular supervisor of Sylvan. He has just been elected for the sixth successive year, and that too by the largest majority ever given any officer in the township. Out of 588 votes cast, he received 399, a majority of 210, which is 21 votes more than the whole number cast for G. W. Turnbull, his opponent. It ought to be said, however, in justice to Mr. Turnbull, that he did not want the office and made no effort whatever to influence voters in his favor.

HENRY WARD BEECHER

The following is an extract from a letter, written by Henry Ward Beecher, to a personal friend in this country, in 1863, just after his great triumph in England in the defence and advocacy of our national cause. As a revelation of his inward self as well as of the great secret of his power and usefulness in the world, nothing with in the reach of man is probably so significant and so reliable, except the wonderful utterances that were accustomed to fall from his lips at such times (which were not infrequent) as he seemed to rise into that spiritual atmosphere that baptizes even human utterances with a divine inspiration. Every man knows his inward self better than others can know him. This is Mr. Beecher's revelation of himself.

"God awakened in me a desire to be a full and true Christian toward England the moment I put my foot on her shores, and He has answered the prayers which he inspired. God has kept me in perfect peace. I stood in Liverpool and looked on the demoniac scene without a thought that it was I who was present. It seemed rather like a storm raging in the trees of the forests, that roared and impeded my progress, yet had no matters personal or willful in it against me. You know how, when we are lifted by the inspiration of a great subject, and by the almost visible presence and vivid sympathy with Christ, the mind forgets the sediments and dregs of trouble and sails serenely in an upper realm of peace as untouched by the noise below as is a bird that flies across the battlefield. Just so I had at Liverpool and Glasgow as much an inward peace as ever I did in the loving meeting of dear old Plymouth Church. And again and again, when the uproar raged, and I could not speak, my heart seemed to be taking of the infinite fulness of the Savior's pity, and breathing it out on those poor troubled men. I never had so much the spirit of continuing unconscious prayer, or rather, of communion with Christ. . . . And I have been able to commit all to him, myself, my family, my friends, and in a special manner the cause of my country. O, my friend, I have felt an inexpressible wonder that God should give it to me to do something for the dear land. When sometimes the idea of being clothed with the power to stand up in this great kingdom against an inconceivable violence of prejudice and mistake, and clear the name of my dishonored country, and let her brow shine forth, crowned with liberty, glowing with love to man, Oh, I have seemed unable to live, almost! It almost took my breath away! I have not in a single instance gone to the speaking halls without all the way breathing to God unutterable desires for inspiration, guidance and success; and I have had no disturbance of personality. I have been willing, yea, with eagerness, to be myself contemptible in man's sight if my disgrace might be to the honor of that cause which is entrusted to our own thrice dear country.

I have asked of God nothing but this—and this with uninterrupted heart-flow of yearning request—"Make me worthy to speak for God and for man." I never felt my ignorance so painfully nor my great want of moral purity and nobility of soul, as when approaching my task of defending liberty in this her hour of trial. I have an ideal of what a man should be that labors for such a cause that constantly rebukes my real condition and makes me feel painfully how little I am. Yet that is hardly painful. There passes before me a view of God's glory so pure, so serene, uplifted, filling the ages, and more and more to be revealed, that I almost wish to lose my own identity, to be like a drop of dew that falls into the sea, and becomes a part of the sublime whole that glows under every line of latitude and sounds on every shore, 'That God may be in all'—that is not a prayer only a personal experience.

And in all this time I have not had one unkind feeling toward a single human being. Even those who are opposers I have pitied with undying compassion. . . . God be thanked who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

My dear friend, when I sat down to write I did it under this impulse that I wanted somebody to know the secret of my life. I am in a noisy spectacle and seem to thousands as one employing merely worldly implements and acting under secular motives. But should I die on land or sea I wanted to say to you, who have been so near and dear to me, that as God's own very truth "the life I have lived in the flesh I have lived by the faith of the Son of God." I wanted to leave it with some one to say for me that it was not in natural gifts nor in great opportunities, nor in personal ambition, that I have been able to endure and labor, but that the secret and spring of my outward life has been an inward, complete and all-possessing faith of God's truth and God's own self-working in me to will and to do of his good pleasure.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON, April 1, 1887.

The Secretary of War and the Commander-in-Chief of the army have never seemed to be in harmony, and conflicts of authority between them are becoming common occurrences. While Secretary Endicott was away a short time since, several adjutant appointments were made by colonels, with the approval of General Sheridan, of lieutenants serving with light batteries. The Secretary thought that the adjutants should be selected from among the lieutenants doing actual service with their regiments, in justice to the officers of the regiments. An order was forthwith issued to this effect, and the objectionable appointments were revoked. Gen. Sheridan was out West at the time. No correspondence has taken place between the two officers, and probably none will, but it all goes to show that they do not work well together in administering the affairs of the army.

Speaking of Gen. Sheridan reminds me of the lecturers, Gen. Geo. A. Sheridan, not "Little Phil," the Lieutenant General, who, on Wednesday evening, at the Congregational church in this city, took the platform to refute the dogmas of that moral anarchist, Col. Bob. Ingersoll. Wit, sarcasm, invective, pathos and eloquence were brought into play with a force and effect that provoked laughter and tears alternately.

"The Modern Pagan" was the lecturer's subject and he opened with a tribute to the fascinating personality of Col. Ingersoll, who, he said, was a fine domestic character, a staunch friend, a loyal citizen, a brilliant lawyer, a wonderful orator, charming by the splendor of his imagination, but who, when he approaches the subject of religion, drops the mantle of his genial personality, and becomes the loudest of boasters and the most abject of intellectual cowards.

One of the hardest blows dealt the distinguished Pagan was through a quotation from one of his own lectures. "The concurrent judgment of mankind," said the General, "is that the belief in God is the foundation of all truth, and that a man will not call upon his Creator to bear witness to a falsehood." Col. Ingersoll takes another view of it. He "thanks Mother Nature that she has planted sufficient ingenuity in the brain of a child to throw up against the violence of a brutal parent the little breast-work of a lie."

Speaking of the growth of this country and its institutions, of which Col. Ingersoll is one of the beneficiaries, Gen. Sheridan said: "The history of America is simply a grand poem, sounding in immortal numbers the praises of Christianity. The country was discovered by Christians, settled by Christians, Christians declared its independence, fought the battles which established it, formed its institutions, and gave it its universities and hospitals and homes"—and all else that is good.

The fears expressed by a Washington physician, that President Cleveland is liable to die from apoplexy before the end of his term unless he changes his habits of life, are not shared by the President's private secretary. Col. Lamont thinks that Dr. Sowers' warning is based entirely on the assumption that the President is gaining flesh and taking no exercise. This, he says, is not the case. Mr. Cleveland weighs less than when he first came to Washington and takes as much exercise as most men. He does not walk about the streets of the city, but he walks about his little farm late in the afternoon when the weather permits. Then the Colonel suggests mysteriously that the President has other ways of taking exercise, which, it would seem, he thinks it would not be dignified to mention. Can it be that the President has a gymnasium in some corner of the White House which the world knows not of? It must be so. At any rate Col. Lamont says he keeps himself in good condition by physical exercise and that there is no occasion for apprehension in regard to his health.

The National Drill which will commence in this city on the 23rd of May, will end on the 30th of that month, Decoration Day, with a grand combination parade of the National Guardsmen and the Grand Army of the Republic. There will be $26,500 in cash distributed in prizes, besides stands of colors, gold, silver and bronze medals, special medals and plate trophies.

The grounds of the camp are those lying around the Washington Monument; and the drill ground is the level ellipse lying just south of the Presidential mansion, known as the White Lot. This level plain, which is one half mile in circumference, will be fenced in, and stands sufficient to seat from 30,000 to 35,000 will be erected. The grounds were granted by the Secretary of War, on approval of General Sheridan, and the committee have given bonds for their return in perfect order after the drill.

Daily contests will here be held to prove the excellence of the citizen soldiery and infantry, artillery, cavalry, and zouave tactics. Cadet corps of military schools will drill for prizes as well as the champion companies from thirty-six states, and bands and drum corps will be in attendance from East, South and West. Each evening there will be a grand dress parade, and on Governor's Day and on Memorial Day the entire army corps from Camp George Washington will parade on the broad asphalt avenues of the city.

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years, has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung Troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by Physicians, as it does not dry up a Cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when these diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75 cents, for large bottles.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Solt, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, Druggist, Belleville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at R. S. Armstrong's.

Sucklin's Arnica Salve.

Get the Best of the Doctor.

W. F. Boyer, Garrettsville, Ohio, says: "My wife has been troubled with Catarrh a long time, but have, with what remedies we had, and what the doctor could do, kept the upper hand of it until this fall, when everything failed. Her throat was raw as far as one could see, with an incessant cough, when I invested a dollar in a bottle of your Papillion Catarrh cure as a last resort. To day she is free from cough, throat all healed and entirely cured." Papillion (extract of flax) Catarrh cure effects cures when all others fail. Large bottles, $1.00, at all Drug Stores.

If you would enjoy your dinner and are prevented by Dyspepsia, use Acker's Dyspepsia Tablets. They are a positive cure for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Flatulency and Constipation. We guarantee them. 25 and 50 cents. R. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

The Best Physicians Outdone.

J. A. Crawford says: "I have had the worst form of Eczema two years, and found no relief from some of our best Physicians who have made this disease a specialty. I was persuaded to try Papillion (extract of flax). The relief I received was like a charm and I am well. I think papillion one of the blessings of the age." Try Papillion Skin Cure when all others fail. Large bottles $1.00 at all drug stores.

Broken Down Invalids.

Probably never in the history of cough medicines has any article met success equal to that which has been showered upon Dr. Pet's 35 cent Cough Cure. Thousands of hopeless cases of Coughs, Colds, and consumption have yielded to this truly miraculous discovery. For this reason we feel warranted in risking our reputation and money on its merits. Sold by R. S. Armstrong.

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless that he could not turn in bed or raise his head; everybody said he was dying of consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds. Trial bottles of this great Discovery for Consumption free at R. S. Armstrong's.

The reason why Acker's Blood Elixir is warranted, is because it is the best Blood Preparation known. It will positively cure all Blood Diseases, purifies the whole system, and thoroughly builds up the constitution. Remember, we guarantee it. R. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

Quite a ripple in society was caused by an announcement of the marriage of a Japanese student to a young lady of the city, last Wednesday. The names of the high contracting parties are June K. Kimura, of Alchi Ken, Japan, and Mary M. Gallagher of this city, formerly of East Saginaw. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Ryder, of the congregational church. The groom is son of a former royal physician of Japan, and is a very bright student attending the medical department. He speaks English fluently. For some reason he does not seem to be in good favor with the other Japanese here. The bride came here with relatives for treatment at the hospital, where she met Kimura, the meeting leading to the marriage. The couple will settle in this city.—Register.

At the funeral of Mrs. Dennis Warner, at Dexter, on Thursday, March 24th, Rev. Joseph Estabrook, of Olivet, preached the sermon and Rev. A. S. Kedzie, of Grand Haven, many years ago pastor of the church of which Mrs. Warner was a member, gave a sketch of her life and a tribute to her character and worth, of which the following is a part.

"My friends and fellow-mourners, in closing your places of business this afternoon, in paying this respect to one you have known so long and valued so highly; in these floral offerings, and in the tears you shed, you do yourselves honor in the respect you thus pay to cultivated and matured Christian womanhood. I find you mystified and awe-struck by the manner of her sudden call from the duties and relations of life, which she so well met in her home, her church, Sunday-school and neighborhood. I can't help you in this matter, except to share in the same wonder and awe. Her last Sabbath on earth she began with a heart overflowing with love and delight, which found utterance in frequent repetition of sacred song:

"This is the day of sacred rest,
No mortal care shall seize my breast,
O, may my heart in time be found
Like David's harp of solemn sound."

In this and similar utterances her heart went out in Christian gladness and delight. Her worship in the sanctuary that day, the instructions she gave her Sunday-school class and her reading at home lifted her to a level of spiritual exaltation, so that she seemed ready to be swept—as she was—in an instant, into the longed for and welcome presence of her loving Saviour. Had some exigency come, was there some suddenly created want in heavenly society calling for that service which her life qualified her to give, and for which that last Sabbath fitted her—an exigency and want which must be met without the delay of sickness—was there an exigency and want suddenly found in heavenly society justifying the swift summons that called her away? No, we don't know. We will find out when we meet her again. No, we don't know; but we know that life in this world has not the monotonous movement of clock-work. Best conditions for spiritual culture and development require exigencies, starting changes and surprising events which require quick discernment, new adjustment, the exercise of new powers and the lifting of the soul to a new level of thought and action. If so it be in this world, so we can conceive the condition of life to be in the world to come. We may even think that there is less monotony in the heavenly life than in this; room for changes, exigencies, new adjustments, the playing forth of other powers, and the introduction of new actors. And if the summons of such actors be sudden, admitting no delay for usual sickness, it comports with the normal conditions of spiritual life. Thus summoned, our departed sister echoes back to us the words of her Saviour: "What thou knowest not now thou shalt know hereafter."

PLATE GLASS.

How It Is Manufactured in the Principal Works of Europe.

Plate glass is only made in the very largest factories. The plate glass works at Ravenhead, England, are in a building 339x155 feet; the melting furnace is placed in the center of the building, with openings on two parallel sides for working purposes, while along two sides of the building are arranged the annealing ovens, which are often made very large to receive the immense plates that are made. The materials of which the best plate glass is made are pure silica or quartz sand, pure carbonate of soda, and flint lime and plate glass cullet, that is, bits of broken plate glass. These materials, in proper proportions, are put in the melting-pot, where they are allowed to remain from ten to sixteen hours, or even longer, until the whole has become fused and the soda is thoroughly volatilized. Toward the last the temperature is allowed to fall and the glass then acquires the viscidly suitable for casting. In some factories it is then transferred to another vessel, where it is allowed to stand at the same high temperature for some time before casting; but in many establishments it is poured directly from the melting-pot upon the casting-table. This table consists of a massive slab, usually of cast-iron, supported by a frame, and generally placed at the mouth of the annealing oven. On each side of the table are ribs or bars of metal, which keep the glass within proper limits, and by their height determine the thickness of the plate. A copper or bronze cylinder about a foot in diameter lies across the table upon the side bars. The table is heated by having hot coals placed upon it, and is then carefully cleaned. The pots of melted glass are then lifted from the furnace, skimmed with a large copper knife, conveyed on wheel-racks to the table, and being swung up by means of a crane, are emptied thereon. The cylinder now rolled across the viscid mass spreads the glass out in a sheet of uniform breadth and thickness. While the plate is still red hot it is turned up like a flange, and with a rake it is thrust into the annealing oven, which is heated to a dull red heat. Other plates are now immediately cast upon the hot table until the annealing oven is filled, when it is closed and slowly cooled for five days. Taken from the oven, the plates are ground smooth with sand and water, and afterward with emery paper. They are then polished with powder of red oxide of iron, under considerable pressure. This work of grinding and polishing is done by machinery, by means of which a most brilliant surface is readily secured.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

DETROIT NEWS.

Almost a Calamity.

Fire broke out in the paint shop of the Jackson prison about 10 o'clock on the night of March 26, and so rapidly did it burn that before it could be reached it was beyond control. The city fire department was called and promptly responded, but before the fire was under control the paint shop was burned, the adjoining buildings damaged, and cattle and sheep sheds on the fair ground destroyed.

But one theory has yet been advanced as to the origin of the fire, and that is spontaneous combustion. George Thompson, a watchman, states that he was all through the paint shop less than an hour before the fire broke out and then everything was in good shape.

The Webster company has as yet made no estimate of their loss, although it must be considerable, as the buildings were full of the different parts of wagons in a more or less unfinished state, and Mr. Webster states that most of the work was special orders which were needed immediately. The company carried some insurance.

The three-story building was really unfit for use, and its loss is considered rather in the light of a blessing. The walls have been bulged out for some time, and had the fire not occurred the building would have been torn down during the coming summer. The damage to the west building Warden Hatch estimates at $3,000, and it will probably cost in the neighborhood of $3,000 to repair the sheds and fences.

As soon as the alarm was given extra guards were placed in the cell blocks and every precaution taken to prevent trouble with the convicts. They were very restless, and it was feared there would be trouble, but as the fire was under control they quieted down.

The next annual session will be held in Howell, and begins the first Thursday in April, 1888.

The New Commander.

Gen. B. R. Pierce of Grand Rapids assumed the duties of manager of the soldiers' home April 1st. In his address to the inmates, Gen. Pierce said that all previous orders would be continued and he wanted to remind them that the people of our loyal state have established this institution as a home, and he hoped they would appreciate it. It is not to be a large hotel, with so many guests, who have a right to criticize what does not exactly suit them. It does not mean that the inmates are to take no further interest in the building; it does not mean that you are not to help adorn the grounds, or do what is desirable to make it cheerful and comfortable, for this is a soldiers' home, not a poor house or a prison. It means we want bravery and manly bearing shown, respect to authority and courtesy to each other, and above all things, discipline. He called special attention to the order which prohibited drunkenness, for he would feel it his duty to dismiss anyone so disobeying the rule.

Col. Wells, the retiring manager, remains at the home a few days in order to have time to arrange for his future duties.

A $35,000 Blaze.

Greenville was visited on the 1st inst. with the most disastrous fire it has ever experienced. At 7:45 fire was seen lighting up the rear of a row of wooden buildings on Mall street. The engine was delayed a few minutes in consequence of repairs being made on it, and in a very short time the buildings were a mass of flames. Business men saw their doom and began moving their goods to the street and other places of safety. The buildings were old and dry and in three quarters of an hour the light were in ashes.

About the time when the people thought all further danger was past a shout was heard, "The hotel is on fire!" and, sure enough, on looking that way a flame was seen rolling up from the roof of Keith's exchange, apparently beyond control. The firemen worked heroically, but the old landmark burned like tinder and was soon a bed of ashes. It caught fire from flying brands from the fire opposite. Luckily the wooden row and hotel were walled in by brick blocks or the whole street would have been swept. The losses foot up about $35,000.

Clarkston's Loss.

A destructive fire visited Clarkston, Oakland county, on the morning of March 25, and is believed to be the work of an incendiary. It destroyed five stores, Daniel Green, boots and shoes; John Clark, general merchandise and clothing; A. R. Carran, hardware; Beardsley & Ash, meat market; Frank Walters, general store. Green's loss is $1,500 nearly covered by insurance; Carran's loss $5,000, insured for $1,000; Clark's loss, $2,000 on building and $5,000 on contents, no insurance; Beardsley & Ash, loss $1,000, no insurance. Bower's drug store suffered about $1,000 damage in the removal of goods, and there are about half a dozen other minor losses from the same cause. The blow is a serious one to the village as there is little insurance. The village has no fire department and it was only by the hardest work that the flames were prevented from committing much greater destruction.

Shoe Manufactory Burned.

Not since the burning of Perry's seed store in January, 1886, has Detroit been visited by such a fire as destroyed Pingree & Smith's shoe manufacturing establishment on the night of March 30th. Property valued at upwards of $350,000 was soon consumed, in which the insurance was less than $200,000. Six hundred employees are thrown out of employment. Excepting slight damage to adjoining property the flames were kept within the limits of the structure in which they originated. The fire is supposed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion. Five firemen were considerably injured by falling walls. The proprietors will rebuild as soon as insurance matters have been satisfactorily adjusted.

Michigan's Representation.

It is thought that there will be six and possibly eight Michigan companies present at the national drill to be held in Washington some time in May. Among those whose officers have been writing with this object in view are the Detroit Greys, the Lansing company, the two Saginaw companies, and the Grand Rapids company. At one time Detroit was expected to send a battalion and compete for the prize, but it is said now that the young men find it difficult to leave home when the spring trade is active. There is every indication that the national drill will be a magnificent success.

Joined His Sweetheart.

Louis Ecklesdaffer, who murdered Lena Obitz of Belmont because she wouldn't marry him, died in the Kent county jail the other morning after lingering at death's door for several days. He was surrounded by the family and a few friends. Previous to passing away he was baptized by a Congregational minister. The immediate cause of his death was pneumonia, the wound made by his attempt to end his own life not proving detrimental. The statement that he had made a confession is denied by his aged mother.

STATE ITEMS.

Newspapers throughout the state will be interested in knowing the result of a conversation between W. H. Brearley, as representative of the press, and H. B. Ledyard, the president of the Michigan Central railroad. In it Mr. Ledyard stated that at a recent meeting of the presidents of the various Michigan railroads it was definitely decided by them to direct all conductors on all the roads to refuse to accept passes for transportation after April 4, and that after that date the railroads will contract for their time cards in such papers as they desire, but only on a cash basis. Mr. Ledyard claimed that this change was not the choice of the railroads, but that they were "compelled" to take this course by the inter-state commerce bill, which goes into effect April 4.

An Ypsilanti boy named Eddie Bradley aged 18, has been arrested near Eau Claire, Wis., on charge of train wrecking. Three Wisconsin trains have been wrecked there recently, and the other day a train was flagged by the boy, who informed the trainmen that he had seen some men putting logs and rails upon the track. A detective on the train thought the boy was at the bottom of it all, and held him. On his person were found letters addressed to 20 or 30 young ladies in Minneapolis each enclosing a lock of hair. It is thought the boy is crazy.

While services were in progress in the M. E. church at Holly the other evening, a dastardly attempt was made by some scoundrel to burn the building. A ball of cotton saturated with coal oil was lighted and thrust under the steps at the carriage entrance. A late comer noticed the smoke and gave an alarm. About 300 persons were in the building, which was quickly emptied without accident to anyone. One lady fainted and many others were badly frightened. A reward will be offered for the arrest of the incendiary.

Clyde Badgley, 20 years, of South Jackson, met with a terrible accident. He was feeding a power feed-cutter, when the knives becoming clogged, he used his left arm to remove the obstruction. His fingers were seized by the rolling knives and his arm drawn in. At each revolution of the knives a portion of his arm was chopped off, and before the horses could be stopped his arm was cut off 21 different times, the last amputation being at the elbow joint.

The necessary warrant ordering the surrender of Dr. Weir to the authorities of the state of Michigan on the charge of murdering Mable Clark at Oscoda has been issued by the department of justice at Ottawa, Ont. Weir will be handed over to the Michigan authorities as soon as demanded. Weir puts little faith in Michigan justice, and views his approaching trip to his old home with considerable alarm.

McGurran, Grand Rapids. The third regiment, Michigan militia, met in East Saginaw the same day and chose the following officers: Colonel, C. S. Brown, Flint; lieutenant-colonel, A. M. Donnelly, Alpena; major, C. R. Hawley, Bay City.

Jeremiah and Laura Ludington of Verona, Huron county, lived together for 60 years in affectionate companionship. They came to Michigan from Vermont in 1835. At the time of the famous fires in 1881 nearly all their property was swept away. Very recently the venerable husband passed away, and eleven days after his aged wife joined him in "the land that lieth beyond."

John Miller, a convict at Jackson, sent from Lenawee county, April 5, 1874, for 30 years for murder in the second degree, died at the prison hospital on the 31st ult. of pneumonia. Thos. Leslie, received at the prison from Detroit on a six years sentence for burglary December 10, 1885, died in the hospital the same day of consumption.

The Jackson prison report for the month of March is as follows: Number of convicts in prison March 1, 893; received during the month, 23; discharged during the month, 18; deaths, 2; transferred to the Louis asylum for insane convicts, 1; convicts in prison at close of month, 894. Total receipts during the month from visitors, $103.65.

The tunnel being driven under the river at Port Huron is dug eight feet in diameter and is then lined with blocks two feet long and one foot thick, cut beveling, so as to fill the circle, making a wall one foot thick. When this becomes soaked with water it will be very tight. The clay is soft, like putty, dark blue, and very sticky.

Matthew Lourtin, a nine-year-old boy, fell from the files in Hibbard's opera house in Jackson, where he had doubtless crawled to witness the performance, a distance of about 27 feet. He struck on his head on the stage back of the scenery, crushing his skull terribly. He died shortly after being picked up.

John G. Saxe Dead.

John G. Saxe, the poet, died in Albany, N. Y., April 1st.

John Godfrey Saxe, LL. D., was born at Highgate, Vt., June 2, 1816, where he passed his youth. He was graduated at the age of 23 from Middlebury college with the degree of A. B. At the close of his collegiate career he began the study of law and practiced from 1843 to 1850. In the latter year he assumed the editorship of the Burlington (Vt.) Sentinel. In 1851 he was elected states attorney, and at one time was a democratic candidate for governor of Vermont, but was defeated. He forsook politics and from 1858 devoted himself to literature and the lecture platform. He was peculiarly successful in the writing of poems of a sparklingly witty and genial humorous character, and his writings attained great popularity. His first collection of poems was published in 1849, and enlarged editions appeared every few years up to five or six years ago. In addition to the various editions of his collected poems which have appeared, he published "The Money King," 1859; "Clever Stories of Many Nations," 1863; "Masquerade," 1866; "Fables and Legends of Many Countries," 1872; "Proud Miss McBride," 1873; and "Lecture Day Rhymes," 1875. About fifteen years ago Mr. Saxe was injured in a railroad accident, and never after fully recovered his health, although one of his best known poems, "Riding on the Rail," was inspired by the disaster. A few years ago Mr. Saxe lost by death several members of his family in rapid succession, and the bereavement left him in a state of pronounced melancholia. He went into retirement and slowly declined until his death.

Gen. Ripley is author of a "History of the War With Mexico," published in 1849.

A TRAGEDY OF THE SEA.

The Steamer Eagle Lost, and Men Perish.

Heartrending Scenes at St. John's.

It is reported from St. John's, N. F., that the steamer Eagle has been lost on the shoals near Funk Island, off Bonaville bay. Debris consisting of deck-ladders, forecastle deck and cooking gear, with the steamer's name, were found on the beach, and the inhabitants are on the outlook for bodies of the drowned.

The condition of the wreckage leads to the belief that the vessel was lost through a boiler explosion.

Most of the lost seamen lived in and about St. John's, and excitement and grief there are intense. Women and children are weeping at home or clamoring at telegraph or newspaper offices for further information.

The steamer Eagle was last seen on March 11th near Funk Island. A terrible sea was running at the time. The next morning the Aurora could find no trace of the Eagle, and nothing has been seen of the ill-fated vessel since. A message from Greycourt, about 100 miles from there, says that Light-house-keeper Cabot had boarded the sailing steamer Vanguard and Hector. Both vessels are reported passing near the spot where she was last seen.

Lighthouse-keeper Cabot is a reliable man, and from his knowledge of affairs there and the fact that the Eagle has been seen since the 11th, while the other vessels of the fleet have been spoken every few days, it is universally believed that the vessel with her 250 souls on board was driven on the terrible reefs so numerous inside Funk's island, that the sea broke her up and that she probably sank immediately with her fifty seamen on deck as 200 seal fishers below. The sea that swept the coast that night was the worst ever witnessed by the oldest seamen on board the other vessels. No ship, once pelted in those terrible breakers, could possibly escape.

Capt. Jackman, commander of the ill-fated vessel, was considered the bravest skipper Newfoundland ever produced. He was called the "King of the seal fleet," until 1855, when for the first time in his experience, he failed to secure a haul. Last year bad luck again overtook him and he lost the steamer Resolute near the same fatal Funk's island, but his crew escaped. Later the same season he took command of the Eagle, and with a few weeks she broke her shaft. She was refitted and a month ago started with the rest of the fleet on what is now her last voyage. This is the greatest calamity and most frightful loss of life the modern history of this unfortunate colony.

The Eagle was a large sealing steamer commanded by Capt. Jackman and owned by Messrs. Bowering Bros. The captain is one of the best and most successful commanders sailing out of Newfoundland ports, but it is said the steamer's boiler was in such condition that she should never have gone to sea. This was a peril about soon after she sailed for fisheries, and the report that the wreckage indicates a boiler explosion is taken evidence that all on board are lost.

SET IN DIAMONDS.

CHAPTER VIII.—CONCLUSION.

How many a scathing satire, how many a polished insult escaped her in his presence, and he did not even detect it.

Even the little Sunbeam, who should have been her one consolation in distress, was another source of unhappiness. Lady Perth had been so adroit; she had spoken confidentially to her brother, praying him to believe that all she said was in his wife's best interest and absolutely needful to the welfare of his child.

His beautiful Marguerite was so young, she said, and really ridiculous as it might seem, was more inclined to treat the child as a doll than a human being; indeed, Mrs. Mervin, the head nurse, had told her, so she said, that if any lady had her own way with the little Sunbeam, she would kill it with kindness in two days; and Lord Stair never doubting her, was seriously alarmed. She told him every absurd anecdote, invented on the spur of the moment, to prevent him that Lady Stair must have something to do with the baby.

He spoke to his wife, told her that she had better leave the entire control of the nursery to Mrs. Mervin and content herself with seeing the little one two or three times a day, and not to interfere with the rules and regulations laid down. He did not see the passionate pain on her face; he did not notice the quiver of pain in her voice.

"Do you mean," she said, "that I am not to be trusted with my own child?" He took her in his arms and kissed her.

"No my darling," he replied, "it is not that; it is that you do not know." She went away from him, and almost broke her heart with crying.

"I was happier at Inisfail," she said over and over again to herself.

She was too proud to complain, too proud to disobey her husband, but those who had charge of the little Sunbeam would have told of the passionate tears shed over the child, and they pitied her.

We all know what it is when a shadow falls between two people who should love each other well; how it deepens and darkens, how one cold word induces another; how quickly the habit of coldness and indifference is formed; this shadow had fallen between Lady Stair and her husband, the pity being that she knew it and felt it while he did not.

There was to be no season in town this year, for two reasons—one was that Lord Stair wished to finish his great work; the other, that Lady Stair was far too delicate. Doctor Aveling, the famous Cliffe physician, gave it as his deliberate opinion that a season in town would be very injurious to Lady Stair, and her husband was only too pleased to remain at home.

So when the month of June came and again a dead calm had settled over Oakcliff Towers, there was not much visiting, for most of the neighbors had gone either to the sea-side or the Continent; and no one knew the undercurrent of pain that shadowed what seemed outwardly the most happy and prosperous of lives.

"The shadow of fate," the words were weak, yet to how many of us that shadow is coming—stealing onward, cold, silent—while we laugh and eat, drink, and make merry, quite unconscious of its coming—quite unconscious of it. So the shadow crept to Lady Stair. The shadow of fate over her one morning—a lovely June day, when the sun was shining, and the birds were singing in the trees. She went out to meet it. She had been strolling in the gardens at Inisfail, and her heart ached for the fresh sweet air. Lady Perth had annoyed her. She had heard the sound of the Ethel crying in the nursery, and she went to see what was wrong. The nurse not intending any unkindness, told her it would be better not to see the little one.

"They treat me just like a child," said Lady Stair to herself, with a bitter thought of wounded pride and jealousy. The sweet wind was blowing, the fragrance of the newly mown hay came from the meadows, the birds were singing in the thick green boughs of the trees, the white daisies and golden dandelions studded the green grass; there was an old-fashioned sundial leading near the park gates, and Lady Stair always enjoyed watching it; she sat down now, and sat down among the daisies. It came creeping over the daisies, over the green grass, the shadow of fate—the shadow of a fair, handsome, young man, with a fair, debonair face and laughing eyes, slowly, surely, until it lay at her feet and darkened the grass. Then raised her eyes and saw the face—the face of Lord Stair's cousin, Captain Darcy, Este. The shadow fallen over her at last.

CHAPTER IX.

"UNDER THE OAK-TREES."

Captain Darcy Este walked straight to her. She looked at him, not knowing who he was. Lord Stair had never told her of him. He was a man in a manner as to impress her. She never thought of him. Once Lady Stair, on the look-out for something agreeable to say, had told her it was her property, which is entitled, to go to his next of kin, Captain Darcy Este, that had made little impression on her. She had hardly thought of him. She little knew what a lovely man she made sitting under the shade of the great oak-trees; their great branches spread out formed a canopy for her fair head; the sunlight came—filtered through them. It touched her golden hair and flower-like face; it touched the white hands that caressed the pretty daisies; it lay athwart the pale-blue dress. The sweet summer air had given her the fairest bloom.

"Beauty made for man's undoing," laughed the young soldier to himself. "Can this be my cousin's wife?"

He looked at her half shyly for a few minutes, then took courage, and, going up, stood before her bareheaded, the sun shining on his handsome face and clusters of fair hair.

"I beg pardon," he said, and his voice had something of the clearness and freshness of summer in it. "I beg pardon. I know that what I am doing is quite inexcusable, but the temptation is irresistible. May I ask if I am speaking to Lady Stair?"

"I am Lady Stair," she replied quietly, although a beautiful flush rose to her face. Why she should blush was a mystery even to herself.

"May I ask," he continued, "if you know me?"

She looked at him. Their eyes met, and she wondered again why her own eyes dropped and fell until the white lids covered them. She wondered what this strange new thrill at her heart was; she had never known it before. Then she answered.

"No, I do not know you. I have not seen you before."

"Unfortunately, no," he said; "but can you form no idea who I am?"

"I can not," she replied, and she wondered why her face was scorched with blushes.

"Then I must introduce myself to you Lady Stair," he said. "I am Captain Darcy Este, a cousin of Lord Stair, consequently a cousin of yours, and a very fortunate man I am."

Her face brightened. Youth always loves youth.

"Are you Captain Este?" she said. "I am glad to see you. Certainly my husband has often spoken of you. You are going, of course, to the Towers?"

"Yes, Lord Stair has always been very kind to me, and has insisted that I should make my home at the Towers. Indeed I have never had any other home."

"I did not know that," she said.

"Has my cousin never told you?" he asked.

"No," she replied; "I do not remember."

"I can not flatter myself that I have been much thought of," he said, and there was just enough of pain and bitterness in his voice to make her resolve upon being kind to him.

"I am very glad you are coming to stay with us," she said, cordially, and his face brightened.

He sat down by her side and looked around him with an air of pleasure.

"You are very good to me," he said. "My cousin wrote me when he was married, and I have often wondered what his wife would be like. What a lovely morning this is. How beautiful Oakcliff looks. I suppose you know why this place is called Oakcliff?"

"I have never heard," she replied.

"The finest oak-trees in England stand here," he said. "Some of them are hundreds of years old. Has my cousin shown you the king's oak and the giant oak?"

"No," she replied, blushing again that he had not done so. "Lord Stair is always so busy, always so engrossed."

"Ah, well! I will have plenty of spare time, and if you admire trees, and will enjoy it, I will show you every famous oak in the park."

"I have seen some very wonderful trees," she said, "but I did not know there was anything special about them. I shall enjoy it. I have a peculiar love for trees. There is nothing in nature I love so well."

He turned to her suddenly.

"Is Lady Perth still at the Towers?" he asked, with great energy. He saw how the beautiful face saddened as Lady Stair answered "Yes" her voice lost its cheerful ring and fell. "She will be there always, I suppose," she continued.

"I felt sure she would go when my cousin married," said Captain Este.

"If it be a fair question, how do you get on with her?"

"I do not get on at all," replied Lady Stair.

"It is no wonder," he said. "My aunt Thamer is the only person in the world whom I thoroughly dislike. I love the Towers, but she spoiled all my visits there. Why did she not leave when you came?"

"I suppose they thought I was too young."

"You do not mean to say that she is mistress?" he cried, interrupting her.

"To all intents and purposes," she answered, trying to laugh, while a scarlet flush betrayed her.

"What a monstrous idea," he said. "I must confess myself bitterly disappointed; I had anticipated 'The Towers,' without Lady Thamer."

He laughed as he added—

"Why my dear Lady Stair, how do you hold your own?"

"I do not hold it," she replied. "But I would rather not talk about Lady Perth. Tell me about yourself; where has your regiment been staying? what leave of absence have you?"

"We have been at Gibraltar for the last three years," he replied, "and I have six months' leave of absence."

"Six months," she repeated, dreamily. She was thinking to herself how pleasant it would be to have a companion during the long summer days; how pleasant to see that handsome young face and laughing eyes; how delightful to have some one her own age with whom she could talk at will, sing, dance, walk, quarrel at times, and make friends; above all, how charming to have some one with her who was not inclined to think Lady Perth infallible as her husband did; some one who would, perhaps, take up her defence against that illustrious lady, and would believe that she understood "Sunbeam,"

Her heart quite warmed to this newly found friend. She turned to him with a bright face.

"I am so glad you will be here all summer, it will be much more cheerful."

She did not know what an admission she had made in saying this. He looked at her keenly and guessed her story.

"I am very inhospitable," she said, "you must be tired and hungry, come with me to the Towers, Lord Stair, will be very pleased to see you."

They walked together through the park, and Lady Stair found herself talking to this young soldier as though she had known him all her life.

Another self, not the quiet girl who said little and laughed less, but a self full of high spirits, laughter and animation. She had been so very quiet lately that the sound of her own laughter startled her; why should she not laugh? the sun was shining, everything was fair and gay, she had not felt so happy for some long time.

Lord Stair had not much time for talking, or laughing. Lady Perth never laughed, for the simple reason that she saw little to laugh at.

"How bright the world seems to-day," she said, as they walked along the broad, white terraces, where great vases were filled with crimson flowers, and he looked at the beautiful unconscious face; she had not the least idea that he had brightened it for her.

"It is a grand old house," he said, as he gazed at the noble pile of buildings.

"I know what is the best, brightest, beautiful, and most precious thing in it," she said, gaily.

"What is that?" he asked.

"My little Sunbeam," she answered—

"My little daughter."

He looked at her with such kindly eyes.

"Have you a little daughter?" he asked. "I did not know; no one wrote to tell me. I am very glad. Heaven bless you, dear, and your little daughter, too," he added.

How beautiful it was to hear such kind words; she flushed again with genuine pleasure; her eyes beamed with happiness.

"You must come and see my Sunbeam!" she cried; "she is just like a little fairy; but she is surrounded by rules and regulations. I can hardly get near her."

And again his quick instinct told him, by the quiver in her voice, this was another thing that gave her pain.

"I suppose you see your own child how, and when, and where, you like?" he said, hastily.

She shook her head.

"Indeed I can not. Lady Perth regulates most things here, and she has decided that I should do my Sunbeam more harm than good if I were much with her."

"Lady Perth has no right to say or to think anything of the kind!" cried Captain Este. I should like to be master of the Towers—just for one day."

"Would you?" said Marguerite.

"What would you do?"

"Cause Lady Perth to vanish with the rapidity of an eclipse," he replied.

To himself he muttered:

"I can not imagine what my cousin is thinking of."

In his own heart he felt like a knight-errant who had come to fight all the difficulties that seemed to surround this young and beautiful Lady Stair.

They entered the house together.

"If you want to see Lord Stair, you will find him in the library; he shuts himself up there every morning. If you want Lady Perth you will find her in the white drawing room; she holds a committee there every morning—"

"And," he interrupted, "if I want to find Lady Stair, where shall I look?"

She laughed.

"In the nursery, if I dare make my way there; if not, as far from Lady Perth as possible."

"Rather a vague direction," he replied. "I shall go to Lord Stair first. I know he will be pleased to see me. Come with me Lady Stair."

Try It Once for the Cigars.

"The newest trick on the road," remarked a drummer, "is a pretty sleek one, and I know boys who have made all their cigars and drinks on it for several weeks. You go into the billiard-room of the hotel, pick up a cue, and begin practicing. You try some fancy shots. Of course, a lot of fellows will gather around to look on and make remarks and catch and spot the balls for you, and show you what they can do with the stick. In this way you soon get on easy terms with a number of young fellows. Then you inquire if any of them has ever noticed the peculiar optical delusion there is about a billiard table, and proceed to illustrate by placing two balls within a few inches of each other near the lower cushion. 'Now fix your eyes on those two balls,' you say to one of the bystanders, 'walk completely around the table, all the time with your gaze fixed on the balls, and as soon as you have completed the circuit of the table pick up a cue and try to shoot this ball so as to hit those two.' The shot is such an easy one, and the whole matter looks so simple that the bystander is quite ready to declare his ability to walk around the table a dozen times, if necessary, and make the carrom afterward. He is also ready to wager the cigars that your 'optical delusion' won't delude him. While he is walking about the table with his eyes fixed on the two balls, you, unobserved by him, wet the tip of a cue so that all of the chalk is washed off, and hand this cue to the better as he comes up. He blazes away, makes a miscue, of course, and loses the cigars."—Chicago Herald.

PONTIAC, Mich., March 16, 1887.

On the 10th of December, 1886, I came from Orion to Pontiac, to visit my parents, and was taken suddenly ill. Dr. Gelbreth of this place was called and after making a careful examination of my case, de livered council, and named as councilor, Dr. McGraw of Detroit. They met in council December 15th, made a careful examination, and pronounced my disease as: Cancer of the Liver, and stated that there was no hope for me, as it was impossible to cure me. The pain was very severe and Dr. Gelbreth continued his visits, administering quieting powders. A swelling of the liver had formed under my right ribs almost as large as my head, and I had given up all hopes of recovery. But having heard of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, I sent February 1st 1887, and bought a bottle of the syrup from Mr. Peter Schmitt, a druggist of this place, and took it as directed. About March 1st something broke and the swelling commenced to go down, until it had almost disappeared. Up to this date I have taken two and one-half bottles of the syrup and have so far recovered as to be able to visit my neighbors, and I am truly rejoicing that I am fast being relieved from such terrible pain, and desiring to acknowledge the benefit I have received in using your syrup. I send you this statement, hoping you will use it so that others who are afflicted may be benefited and relieved from pain as I have been. Very Truly,

"ONE BY ONE."

A DIREFUL AVALANCHE IN EVERY KNOWN ZONE.

And Thousands of People Crushed by its Pitiless Power.

Far up the dizzy Alpine heights, above the line of perpetual frost, where the brilliant glitter of the snow under the midday sun seems only to intensify the cold, the ice king would seem to hold undisputed sway. But even here there is at times a little humidity in the atmosphere of the more sheltered nooks.

The dry snow, often a little, the wind catches it up and tosses it about, and the star-like flakes are rolled into a tiny ball that the footstep of a child might easily crush. Then comes the rude blast from the mountain top and drive the ball up and down the high valley and across the vast trackless fields of snow and ice. It gathers size and strength at every turn; high rocky boulders and mountains of ice are imbedded in the now slowly moving avalanche, which sooner or later descends with frightful velocity to the valley below.

The luckless village in its pathway is doomed! The air is thick with the falling snow! An awful rush! A roar reverberates through the mountains, and the little Swiss hamlet is swept away!

The foregoing is so applicable that we use it as an illustration. As the wind catches up the snow particles on the mountain tops so the heart catches up the blood as it passes from the kidneys and other organs, and sends it coursing through the system. As it rushes along it drops the uric acid that the unhealthy kidneys have let in the blood in the form of insoluble crystals, causing enlargement of the joints and intense acute rheumatism. Eventually the joints enlarged by these crystals become stiff and painful. If these crystals are dropped in the liver they are called gallstones; if in the kidneys gravel, if in the bladder calculus or stone.

If this uric acid or kidney poison remains in solution in the blood it circulates throughout the system, causing irritation, which produces, according to the location of the irritation, pneumonia, consumption, hacking cough, heart disease, inflammation and fever, skin disorders, paralysis, apoplexy, and makes the system susceptible to colds, chills, and all the other common disorders of which uric acid is the principal cause.

The little child upon the mountain top can crush in its tiny hand the first formation of the rushing avalanche.

So, too, the elementary uric acid can be as readily prevented if the right means are used at the right time.

"But how?" our readers may ask.

Listen and we will tell you. It is a fact of medical science that the kidney are the chief blood purifiers of the system; the chief blood poisoner is uric acid which the kidneys alone can expel. If the thin and little hair like sewer tubes of the kidneys, through which the entire blood supply passes, the same as through the heart, are diseased they cannot separate and expel this poisonous waste matter from the blood.

Now, as another matter of scientific fact, disease of these little sewer tubes is more common than any other delicate part of the body, and it is because Warner's safe cure gently and natural in its action, has such wonderful power in preventing and curing disease of these all-important tubes, that it is recognized as a great scientific specific—a power possessed by no other such remedy on earth. When the kidneys, the only blood purifying organ, become inactive and diseased, any disorder to which the system is most liable may be expected.

Then it is that trouble begins, and the doctors fail miserably because they can only treat the effect—the cause is beyond their power! Hence it is that the proprietors of Warner's safe cure claim to cure so many apparently different diseases—it and it alone reaches and cures the cause, and then, of course, the effects disappear.

We incline to the belief that their theory is correct and so recognized by scientists who have given the subject much study.

This frightful disorder is depopulating our homes faster than we are aware of. Like the avalanche of the mountain, it is causing the death of all with whom it comes in contact. It does not sweep away an entire village or hamlet at once. It kills one by one the people succumb to its pitiless power. The final or terminating cause may be given another name and be so treated by various "experts," but the cause of all these effects, how many so ever they may be, is the same, and for that cause there is but one rational form of treatment.

If you do not crush the avalanche as it is forming, in the manner indicated, it will certainly crush you!

MORE WORDS OF PRAISE.

Rheumatism a Blood Disease entirely Cured.

ROCHESTER, April 1, 1886.

To the Pardee Medicine Co., Gents:—Allow me to say a few words in praise of Dr. Pardee's Rheumatic Remedy, and if what I have to say will induce others who are afflicted with neuralgia or rheumatism to use it, I shall feel that I have been the means of doing some little good to my fellow men. December 27, 1885, while at work in the shop, I was taken suddenly with sharp, piercing pains, and was compelled to leave the shop. The next morning I was unable to rise, and I grew worse daily although I was under the best medical treatment. But I obtained no relief until I began using Dr. Pardee's Remedy, which I did March 17th, and after using it three days, I could walk about the house. I continued to use it and improved rapidly every day. I am now at work and entirely free from pain, and have gained five pounds in weight, but I shall continue the remedy until I feel sure the poison is out of my blood, for I am certain that rheumatism is a blood disease. You are at liberty to use my name or refer any one to me, for I shall only be too glad to recommend it to any one who is suffering as I was. I know it will cure any case of rheumatism, if used as directed.

I am, very truly yours,

GEORGE DOANE.

Pain in the Side

Is a symptom of disease. It may be caused by Rheumatism, or by Neuralgia, but it usually indicates a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys. Ayer's Sarsaparilla corrects the action of the vital organs, and removes every trace of disease from the system.

Last fall and winter I suffered from a dull, heavy, pain in my side. I did not notice it much at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost unbearable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the Stomach and Liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared and I was completely cured.—Mrs. Augusta A. Forbush, Haverhill, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Mrs. Mary Cooley, mother of John L. Cooley of Lima, sister of Mrs. Charles Bachman of Sharon, aunt of Mr. Miranda Jewett and Mrs. Sophia Lefurgy of Mason, also of Alva, Lewis, Gabriel and Ira Freer and George and James Bachman of Chelsea and vicinity, died at the home of her son-in-law, J. T. Bachman, in West Lafayette, N. Y., on the 16th of March, 1887, aged 83 years, 7 months and 5 days. Mrs. Cooley was born in Northumberland county, Pa., and was taken by her parents when four years of age, into the state of New York, where she spent seventy-nine years in the counties of Ontario and Seneca. In 1826 she lost her husband, with whom she had lived fourteen years, and who left five small children, all of whom she reared to years of maturity. Mrs. Cooley was an exemplary member of the Baptist church for 47 years, was a good citizen, a faithful and affectionate mother, a noble woman, and died in the triumph of a living faith. She was buried on the 19th of March, her pastor preaching on the occasion from 2 Cor. 5:1.

It is reported that our saloon keepers have made a list of about twenty hard drinkers, who voted for the amendment, and have entered into an agreement to let them have no more liquor. Burglaries.

The homes of four of our citizens were entered, while the "wee sma' hours" of last Friday morning were passing. Circumstances indicated that the felonious act was an exhibition of "home talent," and we very much fear that a certain young man may be taken suddenly very ill, sometime, unless he obtains his living by more honorable means. An old maxim reads, "In the midst of life we are in death," and burglars as well as more honest people sometimes learn by experience its sad meaning.

A Warning.

Pain is given for the wise purpose of forming us of the presence of danger or disease. Any little excitement of an unusual nature disturbs the balance of the system, the nervous energies are exhausted and headache and a hundred other ailments are the result. Many of the ills of modern man and womanhood may be cured and prevented were they promptly heeded and resisted, having their origin in derangements of the liver and blood, dyspepsia, jaundice, indigestion, constipation and other unwholesome conditions. Evis of a diseased nature find a certain cure by the use of Golden Seal Bitters. In this medicine, nature, aided by art, has produced a rare combination of medicinal properties, widely adapted to the various diseases peculiar to mankind. The purifying principles embodied in Golden Seal Bitters will assuredly cure the broken down dyspeptic. Sold by R. S. Armstrong.

When, by reason of a cold or from any other cause, the secretory organs become disordered, they may be stimulated to healthy action by the use of Ayer's Cathartic Pills. Sold by all druggists.
