REV. THOMAS HOLMES, Pub.

CHELSEA.

MICH.

The Pall Mall Gazette has been printing the views of eminent educators and literary men on the teaching of English in the universities. Mr. Ruskin rushes into the discussion in his usual contradictory and free lance fashion: "I have been watching with great interest all you've been saying lately, and getting said on academies and universities, and literature, and the like infinities of subject; and I merely write to relieve my mind a little, feeling more than usually lazy, by observing that I entirely dissent from everything you've been saying and everything that everybody has said, particularly your Plebiscite—and that the university's business in any country in Europe is to teach its youths as much Latin, Greek, mathematics and astronomy as they can quietly learn in the time they're at it—and nothing else—that is if they don't learn their own language at home, they can't learn it at a university—that if they want to learn Chinese they should go to China—and if they want to learn Dutch to Amsterdam—and after they've learned all they want, learn wholesomely to hold their tongues, except on extreme occasions, in all languages whatsoever."

Ralph Waldo Emerson's son is a man of many tastes. He was once a physician in Concord, but abandoned the profession of medicine for that of art. His paintings show his hereditary love of nature, and his landscapes are well done. He is now lecturing on anatomy in the art school of the Boston museum. He also has a fancy for military matters and used to ride resplendent as an artillery sergeant at the head of one of the platoons of the Concord battery.

Upon John B. Gough's tombstone, at his request, has been carved this inscription: "I can desire nothing better for the great country than that a barrier high as heaven should be raised between the unpolluted lips of the children and the intoxicating cup; that everywhere men and women should raise strong and determined hands against whatever will defile the body, pollute the mind, or harden the heart against God and his truth."

Gossip having been started that Mr. John Ruskin had become a Roman Catholic, the illustrious art critic recently wrote to the Christian Leader: "I was, am and can only be a Christian—catholic in the wide and eternal sense. I have been that these five-and-twenty years at least. Heaven keep me from being less as I grow older; but I am no more likely to become a Roman Catholic than a Quaker, Evangelical or Turk."

The author of a penny cook book in England calls upon the people to do honor to the Queen in this jubilee year "by cooking well and economically," and thus help "to lift up the heavy weight of depression that lies on the country by vigorous economy in household matters." DANENHOWER SUICIDES.

The Tragedy Occurs at the Annapolis Military Academy.

Lieut. John W. Danenhower of Arctic fame, committed suicide at the naval academy in Annapolis on the morning of the 20th.

Deceased was about 37 years of age and entered the naval service in 1866 from Illinois, in which state he was born. The lieutenant was on duty on board the United States steamer Vandavia when that vessel conveyed Gen. Grant to Egypt, and in this way he made the acquaintance and gained the high esteem and admiration of the general. So favorably was Gen. Grant impressed that when James Gordon Bennett proposed the Jeannette Arctic expedition, Grant strongly urged Lieut. Danenhower as a fearless and capable officer for such service. Lieut. Danenhower volunteered and was appointed as navigating officer of that expedition, sailing in 1879 and passing with credit through the terrible hardships of that voyage and the loss of the Jeannette.

Naval officers have conceded to Danenhower the credit for saving his party. Upon his return in 1882, with Melville as the only other surviving officer, Lieut. Danenhower was a sufferer from eye trouble, the result of arctic privations, exposure, etc. When sufficiently recovered Danenhower was detailed to the naval academy at Annapolis as instructor, and subsequently as assistant commandant, in which positions he has been very popular with the cadets.

Some days before the suicide he went to Norfolk to superintend the fitting out of the practice ship "Constellation," and during this service manifested such depression of spirits that several of his fellow officers believed his mind was unsettled. Before his arctic expedition he was at one time confined in the asylum near Annapolis. It is generally admitted that he must have been temporarily insane when he committed suicide. The lieutenant's personal and domestic affairs were of the most happy character. A few years ago he married, in New York, a daughter of State Senator Sloane of that state. His widow is left with two infant children, who are absent on a visit.

WHY IS IT?
That rheumatism and neuralgia are so prevalent? This question has not been satisfactorily answered, but it is certain that these diseases are not only the most painful but among the most common, and some member of nearly every family in the land is the victim of one of these dread tormentors. Ladies seem to be peculiarly liable to neuralgic attacks, which, in the form of neuralgic headache, pain in the back, or nervous pains are of constant occurrence. Not until the discovery of Athlophoros had any remedy been found for either rheumatism, neuralgia or nervous headache, and they were generally conceded to be incurable, but Athlophoros has been proved to be not only a certain cure for these diseases, in all their varied forms, but a safe remedy. If, in the use of Athlophoros, the bowels are kept freely open, its success is certain, and to aid this, Athlophoros Pills are recommended, which, while providing the necessary cathartic, will be found to be a valuable aid to the action of the medicine. Athlophoros is no experiment, it has been tested and has proved its wonderful efficacy.

The Athlophoros Pills were originally prepared as a remedy for use in connection with Athlophoros, for rheumatism and neuralgia and kindred complaints. Used in connection with that remedy, they are a certain cure for either of these very common and distressing diseases. They have also been found to be an invaluable remedy for any and all diseases arising from vitiated blood or general debility. They are especially valuable for nervous debility, blood poisoning, dyspepsia, distress after eating, headache, constipation, loss of appetite, and all stomach or liver troubles. For diseases of women they are invaluable. These pills are perfectly harmless and may be safely used by adults or children.

Testimonials of those who have been cured will be sent free on application.

Every druggist should keep Athlophoros and Athlophoros Pills, but where they cannot be bought of the druggist, the Athlophoros Co., 112 Wall St., New York, will send either (carriage paid) on receipt of regular price, which is $1.00 per bottle for Athlophoros and 50c. for Pills.

STRUCK BY A CYCLONE.

A Number of Persons Killed—Much Property Destroyed.

A terrible cyclone swept over the northern part of Vernon county, Missouri, on the night of April 22d at about 8 o'clock. The clouds were plainly visible, passing only about eight miles from Nevada, Mo. The cyclone seemed to come down the Marmaton river from the Kansas line, dealing death and destruction wherever it struck.

So far as can be learned the first place it touched was in Metz township, passing through Metz, Osage and Blue Mound townships. Fences, houses, barns and everything in the line of the storm, which was about half a mile wide, were picked up, sent into splinters and cast down hundreds of yards away. Trees were torn up by the roots, over thirty houses were destroyed and about fifteen persons killed. There were five members of the Miller family, four of whom were killed. The baby, aged 2 years, was dropped in the yard and was found unhurt the next morning. Parts of the Miller house and furniture were found strewn over the fields for a mile from where the house formerly stood.

A strong wind blew over Nevada, Mo., but did no damage aside from the overthrow of a few chimneys and small out-buildings. The heavy rain at that hour was attended by an interesting phenomenon in the northern part of the city. Balls of fire seemed to be falling at an angle of 45 degrees. They struck the ground and burst into myriads of fiery flakes rebounded several hundred feet toward the east and died away. The exhibition continued for several minutes.

Several Kansas towns suffered from the cyclone at the same time. Prescott was literally wiped out of existence, not a single building being left standing to mark the site of a once prosperous and thriving place. Reports are coming in from all over the country of damage by the terrible storm. Fifteen persons were killed, and many others so badly injured that they will die.

At about the same hour that the cloud-terror was setting in its work in Kansas and Missouri a tornado originated in the Indian Territory and moving almost due east, passed through the country in the vicinity of Little Rock, Ark., along the line of the Little Rock & Fort Smith railroad. It was near Ozark, Franklin county, that it began doing great damage to trees, houses and fences. Farther east, near Coal Hill and Clarksville, Johnson county, the damage was very serious and many persons were injured.

Four miles from Clarksville, Ark., four persons were killed. A man near Ozark was seriously injured by falling timbers. The loss to farmers and buildings, fences, stock and growing crops is very heavy, but it cannot now be estimated. A track 200 yards wide was laid almost entirely bare.

AFTER OUR JOHN.

An Attempt to Kidnap John Sherman.

From private letters from Havana it is learned that a party of kidnapers or outlaws, comprising much of the dangerous elements of Cuban banditti, had arranged to capture Senator John Sherman on his recent visit to Cuba. The project only failed by a difference in time. The plot was well arranged and the banditti were in sufficient force to capture Sherman's party, but fortunately for the distinguished gentleman's safety they left the plantation selected as the scene of the outrage just five minutes before the outlaws appeared. It is thought the owner of the plantation was a party to the scheme. The foregoing appears in a New York paper.

While in Havana Mr. Sherman took occasion to congratulate the captain-general on the peace prevailing throughout the islands. When the senator, however, expressed a desire to visit the sugar plantations in the interior, the military guard was sent as an escort and the entire party barely escaped an unpleasant surprise.

The letter referred to above, after mentioning several wealthy Spaniards recently captured and held for ransom, says: "I also learn that a few minutes after the visit of Sherman, Manderson, McCook and the Spanish officials to the plantations of Pedro Lambert Fernandez, at Colon, the Matagas arrived in search of the Americans. Upon being told by the overseer that the party had left he was severely punished to make him divulge their hiding place. The bandits satisfied themselves by searching the plantation immediately, and then retired. Matagas was in full uniform, and his band was well mounted and armed to receive such distinguished visitors."

Will Probably be Repealed.

One of the oldest democratic congressmen from Illinois, who had much to do with creating the commerce law, and who for that reason says he does not want to be quoted, gives it as his opinion that this law will be repealed at the next session of congress. He says that there will be twice as many petitions from the people by December praying for its repeal as were received in its favor in years past. He thinks it too complicated, and that it gives too much authority to the commission and too little benefit to shippers and travelers.

Quite a number of statesmen who were prominent in bringing this law into existence make the same prediction. They think a substitute bill should be passed simply prohibiting discriminations, doing away with the commission, and giving state courts jurisdiction. Already thousands of letters making this suggestion have been received.

It is said that the commissioners have put in a claim for payment from the 1st of January last, although they were only commissioned in the last days of March. The ground of the claim is that their respective terms of office will end with the calendar year and the presumption must be that they began with the year 1887. The claim is probably a sound one and it is shown that the commissioners will in their own affairs prefer "long haul" to "short haul" every time.

Gen. Boulanger's wife is a rabid hater of England and everything English.

DEATH OF DAVID PRESTON.

Close of a Noble and Useful Career.

David Preston, the prominent banker of Detroit, died at his home in that city Sunday morning, April 24, of heart disease. For a year or two past, he had not been strong and vigorous, but was not considered to be in a dangerous condition. Last year he went abroad for his health, and returned apparently greatly benefited. Since his return he has given his time to the management of his vast business interests, and to the charitable, benevolent and political reforms for which he was known. He was at his office as usual only the day before the summons came, and returned at tea time feeling as well as usual.

David Preston was born in Harmony, Chautauque county, N. Y., Sept. 20, 1826. He received a liberal education in the public schools, taught four years in the county of his birth, and came to Detroit in the fall of 1848. He was married May 5, 1852, to Jane B. Hawk of Connecticut, Ohio. Seven children and his widow survive. Of the children one daughter and two sons are married.

Mr. Preston first engaged in the banking business in Detroit in 1849, as a clerk for G. F. Lewis, a private banker. In 1852 he started in business for himself under the firm name of David Preston & Co., and continued as a private banker until July 25, 1855. In the meantime he established the firm of Preston, Keane & Co., in Chicago, and both firms were very successful in the conduct of their business.

On account of Mr. Preston's failing health the business in Chicago was finally organized into the Metropolitan national bank, in which Mr. Preston retained a large interest and remained a director to the time of his death. In 1855 the Detroit business was incorporated under the general banking law of Michigan, and the incorporated bank was named the Preston bank of Detroit, of which Mr. Preston was president. F. W. Hayes vice-president, and W. A. Berry cashier.

Mr. Preston was the son of the Rev. David Preston, a Methodist minister, and came to Detroit a poor boy, but by his own efforts accumulated a fortune, and although during his lifetime having devoted to charitable purposes more than $100,000, he died in the possession of an ample competency. Mr. Preston's life was insured in several companies, the aggregate sum footing up to about $50,000.

Mr. Preston was almost lavish in his gifts to religious, charitable and educational causes, having distributed in his way more than $100,000 within ten years past. He was from his youth a devout and consistent member of the M. E. church. In Detroit he was first a member of the First M. E. church and, upon the union of that society with the Congress street M. E. church as the Central M. E. church, was one of the committee which had charge of the building of the beautiful church of that society at the corner of Woodward avenue and Adams avenue east, and a very liberal giver to the building fund.

He purchased the lot upon which the Simpson M. E. church was built and largely aided in the organization and securing the success of that church, as also of the Cass avenue M. E. church.

In 1873 he raised $60,000 in aid of the endowment fund of Albion college giving a large sum himself and securing the remainder by a personal canvass among the Methodists of the state. He had just returned from the journey when the financial storm of 1873 struck his bank.

During the war Mr. Preston was an active worker in the Union cause and a member and officer of the Michigan branch of the United States Christian commission. The only public office he ever held was that of member of the board of aldermen from the fifth ward in 1872 and 1873.

He was a strong republican until prohibition took a political turn, when he followed his convictions into the new party and from it accepted the only nomination for other than local office which he ever received.

He had no political ambition and these nominations were accepted without any hope of election and with no other desire than to strengthen the party which he believed would ultimately fulfill the purpose of its founders.

THAT UNFORTUNATE VETO.

There is an almost unanimous burst of disapproval and indignation from the newspapers of the state against the penny wise policy of Gov. Luce, in vetoing the bill providing that the county board of Supervisors should publish their proceedings in at least one paper in the county. If it is the privilege of the people to know what their representatives do, and it is the duty of such representatives to place the record of their transactions in the hands of the people that they may know them, this provision was a very important and a very wise one, and as the public press is the great conservator of the liberties of the people, it is its duty to speak out in unmistakable terms whenever such occasions arise.

OUR VILLAGE BOARD.

Following the narrow policy of Gov. Luce in vetoing the bill requiring boards of supervisors to publish their proceedings in some county paper, have given our village printing for the coming year to the Echo, because Mr. Allison offered to do it for $25 and we wanted $40. Now, if the object of publishing these minutes is to inform the people of the doings of the Board, and, if $40 is not an exorbitant price for the service required, this was, manifestly, unjustifiable. If on the other hand the publication of these minutes is only to satisfy a form of law, without regard to the object of the law, then posting a copy of the minutes on the back door of the Clerk's horse barn might be made to answer every purpose, and the law should be so changed. It would probably cost the village nothing at all.

There is a widespread sentiment in this "free country" of ours that self-preservation is more important than the dulcet melody of the Hutchinson family, "Come from every nation, come from every way. Our lands, they are broad enough, don't be alarmed; And Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm." This idea of self preservation has found expression in an act of Congress against the immigration of the Chinese into this country, because their habits of life are such as to enable them to drive American and other foreign labor out of the country. In other words, this sentiment is based upon the idea that the welfare of the whole people, which always means the welfare of each individual separately, is best promoted by first giving to labor full remuneration, and then regulating the prices of articles of commerce accordingly; thus making labor the standard of values. Now, this is undoubtedly sound political economy, and it is just as applicable in a village of 1500 inhabitants as it is in a nation of 50,000,000. The destructive doctrine that the capitalist should get his material and labor at the very cheapest rate possible, responded to by the equally destructive sentiment on the part of the laborer, that he should get the largest pay possible for the least labor possible, has resulted in the great conflict, whose disastrous effects are now cursing labor and capitalist alike, throughout the length and breadth of our fair land. Manifestly this principle must be abandoned, before we can have peace, and there is no better place to begin the reformation than for city and village corporations to set the example by awarding such jobs as village printing, attorneys' services, street grading, paving, sidewalk building, etc., to the parties who will do them best, and paying them a fair, not extravagant, remuneration for their service.

Now, we do not want any body to suppose that we have written this long article to relieve our crushing disappointment, because we did not get the village printing. We have, for a long time, been looking for a suitable occasion to express this train of thought, and are glad it has, at length, occurred. We hope it may do good, and lead to more enlightened action, not only on the part of the village Board, but on the part of every man, whether he be capitalist or wageworker, corporation or individual.

As regards the doings of the Board, we propose to give our readers a full report of them all, as they occur, as matter of news in which they are all interested.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Michigan Manual, recently sent us by the Secretary of State, has been received and is very highly prized. It is an elegant and very useful book, and the legislature has done well in putting one in every printing office in the state.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR MAY.

Prominent among all the attractive features of the May number of St. Nicholas, are General Adam Badeau's story of that greatest of all adventures, of ancient or modern times, "Sherman's March to the Sea." Every boy who whistles "Marching through Georgia" should read it. It is illustrated by Theodore Davis, who was with Gen. Sherman on the march, and E. W. Kemple, W. L. Sheppard, and W. Tabor. There is also begun in this number a three part story of life at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, by a recent graduate. It is entitled "Winning a Commission" and shows how the future Shermans are being turned out.

"PERLEY'S Reminiscences of Sixty years in the National Metropolis, Illustrating the Wit, Humor, Genius, Eccentricities and Intrigues of the Brilliant Statesmen, Ladies, Officers, Diplomats, Lobbyists and other noted Celebrities of the World, that gather at the Center of the Nation; describing imposing inauguration ceremonies, Gala Day Festivities, Army Reviews, Etc., Etc., Etc., by Ben: Perley Poore, The Veteran Journalist, Clerk of the Senate Printing Records, Editor of the Congressional Directory, and author of Various Works. Hubbard Brothers, Publishers, Philadelphia, Pa."

The above is the imposing title, in full length, of a very entertaining and instructive work, recently issued. The style of the work is beyond criticism—paper, typography, illustrations, binding, being simply elegant. It is bound in two volumes of 544 pages each, fit to lie upon the center table of the most stylish sitting room in the land. The character of the contents is sufficiently described by its title; but its value as a history of amusing and instructive incidents, occurring among the most distinguished characters that congregate and figure at the very heart of our nation, can only be understood by its perusal.

We give the following—the first our eyes fell upon when we opened the first volume for the first time—as a sample of what the reader may expect nearly every time he opens it:

"When 'the solid men of Boston' ascertained that General Jackson had actually signed the order for the removal of the deposits from the Bank of the United States while enjoying their hospitalities they were very angry. Not long afterwards they learned that the United States Frigate Constitution, a Boston-built vessel, which was being repaired at the Charleston Navy Yard, was to be ornamented with a full-length figure of General Jackson as a figure-head. This was regarded as an insult, and the carver who was at work on the figure was requested to stop work on it. This he declined to do, and had his half-carved block of wood taken to the Navy Yard, where he completed his task under the protection of a guard of marines. When the figure-head was completed it was securely bolted to the cutwater of the Constitution, which was then hauled out to her anchorage, and a vessel was stationed on either side of her.

The Bostonians grew more and more indignant, and finally a daring young mariner from Cape Cod, Captain Samuel Dewey, determined that he would decapitate the obnoxious image. The night which he selected was eminently propitious as a severe rain storm raged, accompanied by heavy thunder and sharp lightning. Dewey sculled his boat with a muffled oar to the bow of the frigate, where he made it fast, and climbed up, protected by the head boards, only placed on the vessel the previous day. Then, with a finely tempered saw, he cut off the head, and returned with it to Boston, where a party of his friends were anxiously waiting for him at Gallagher's Hotel. He was at once made a lion of by the Whigs, and Commodore Elliot was almost frantic with rage over the insult thus offered to his chief.

Dewey soon afterward went to Washington, where he exhibited the grim features of the head to several leading Whigs, and finally carried it, tied up in a bandana handkerchief, to the Navy Department. Sending in his card to Mr. Mahlon Dickerson, then the Secretary of the Navy, he obtained an audience. He was a short, chunky sailor-man, with resolute blue-gray eyes, which twinkled as he said, 'Have I the honor of addressing the Secretary of the Navy?' 'You have,' replied Mr. Dickerson, 'and, as I am very busy, I will thank you to be brief.'

'Mr. Dickerson,' said the Captain, 'I am the man who removed the figure-head from the Constitution, and I have brought it here to restore it.' Secretary Dickerson threw himself back in his chair and looked with astonishment at the man who had cast such an indignity on the Administration.

'Well, sir,' said he, in an angry tone, 'you are the man who had the audacity to disfigure Old Ironsides?'

'Yes, sir, I took the responsibility.'

'Well, sir, I will have you arrested immediately,' and the Secretary reached toward his bell to summon his messenger.

'Stop, Mr. Secretary,' said Captain Dewey, 'you, as a lawyer, know that there is no statute against defacing a ship of war, and all you can do is to sue me for trespass, and that in the county where the offense was committed. If you desire it, I will go back to Middlesex county, Massachusetts, and stand my trial.'

Mr. Dickerson reflected a moment and said: 'You are right; and now tell me how you took away the head.'

Dewey told the story, and the story goes that Secretary Dickerson asked him to wait while he stepped over to the White House, followed by a messenger carrying the head. When General Jackson saw it, and heard the Secretary's story, he burst into a fit of uncontrollable laughter. 'Why, th it,' he cried at length—'why that is the most infernal gaven-

image I ever saw. The fellow did perfectly right. You've got him you say; well give him a kick and my compliments, and tell him to saw it off again.' Dewey was after this frequently at Washington, and he finally obtained the appointment of Postmaster in a small Virginia town. He used to have on his visiting cards the representation of a handsaw, under which was inscribed, 'I came, I saw, I conquered.'

WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON, April 22th, 1887.

Times are dull in Washington, not a breath of news stirring. The Lenten season having passed, Washington society, which is religious in form, has reverted with zest to gaiety. The most prominent social event of the week was the performance of the play of "Jim the Penman" at the National Theatre for the benefit of the Actors' fund.

It is evident that the Administration is disposed to pursue a very conservative course with reference to the powers rested in the President by the Retaliation bill. Secretary Bayard remarked during the week that he felt that the people outside of Mass. had never realized its importance, or appreciated the gravity of the alternative left to the Administration—a declaration of non-intercourse, if it failed to effect a peaceable adjustment of the differences between the United States and Great Britain respecting the construction of the treaty rights of our fishermen.

It is doubtful, he said, if the interests of San Francisco in maintaining her present source of coal supply from British Columbia, aside from the importance of the great Chicago business connections with Canada, and the vast trade that ebbs and flows across the 3000 miles of our Northern Boundary, do not exceed the interest of Mass. in the results of the application of such an alternative as commercial non-intercourse. The negotiations with England on this subject are progressing, and the Secretary hopes they will result in a harmonious and satisfactory understanding.

There is a probability of the Cabinet, or a part of it, taking a trip South soon. Efforts are being made to-day to organize a Cabinet party to go to Charleston, South Carolina, to hear Secretary Lamar's oration at the unveiling of the Calhoun monument. Secretary Fairchild has expressed his determination to go, and others are anxious to do so, while the orator of the occasion has extended a pressing invitation to all of his confreres to accompany him.

Some Washington newspaper men are in bad repute at the White House just now. At the President's reception in the East Room on Wednesday, while he was shaking hands with about three hundred people, mostly visitors in the city, who had come to the White House to see the President among the other sights, a group of these gentlemen took a position behind the Chief Executive and laughed and commented upon the persons as they filed by in line. The criticisms were audible, and the President was so much annoyed by the discourtesy shown the strangers that he turned more than once and looked reprovingly at the offenders.

These tri-weekly receptions to the public are, for the most part attended by strangers, as above remarked, who could not be expected to be as familiar with White House receptions as are the representatives of the press who make a business of attending them. Sometimes callers are a little awkward, and rather comical scenes occur, but this is the first time the President has ever taken occasion to complain to the ushers of downright ill-breeding on the part of the newspaper men.

Enjoy Life.
What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, plains and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower will make them free from disease as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Billiousness, Indigestion, Sick-Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cts. Try it.

What Is It? And What It Is.

Papillon (Clarke's extract of flax) Skin Cure, like many other estimable benefits to mankind, was discovered by accident. The proprietor, engaged in the preparation of certain plants, from time to time noticed the effect of working in the pulp vats on the skin. If there was present any cutaneous eruptions, warts, blemishes or scrofulous symptoms, all disappeared as if by magic. After experimenting ten years, it has become a scientific fact and a priceless boon to the human race. From giving away a few bottles, the demand has increased until the sale for the past two years amounts to 1,032,000 bottles. Large bottles only $1.00.

An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well." Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c. per box by R. S. Armstrong.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptions, and positively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by R. S. Armstrong.

Certainly the Best.

Papillon (Clarke's extract of flax) Catarrh Cure, from an experiment has grown to the acknowledged superior of any remedy for similar purposes. Purely vegetable and scientifically prepared, it is absolutely harmless, and effects cures where all other known remedies and the most learned medical talent fail. That it is a favorite with all classes is evidenced by the fact that during the past two years, 86,000 gallons have been sold. Positively cures Catarrh, Hay Fever, Colds, etc., etc. Large bottles $1.00.

Good Results in Every Case.

D. A. Bradford, wholesale paper dealer of Chattanooga, Tenn., writes that he was seriously afflicted with a severe cold that settled on his lungs, had tried many remedies without benefit. Being induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, did so and was entirely cured by use of a few bottles. Since which time he has used it in his family for all Coughs and Colds with best results. This is the experience of thousands whose lives have been saved by this Wonderful Discovery. Trial bottles free at R. S. Armstrong's Drug Store.

The People of Oakland County Wild with Excitement.

PONTIAC, MICH., March 16th, 1887.
On the 10th of December, 1886, I came from Orion to Pontiac, to visit my parents and was taken suddenly ill. Dr. Galbreith of this place was called, and after making a careful examination of my case, desired council, and named as councillor Dr. McGraw, of Detroit. They met in council December 15th, made a careful examination, and pronounced my disease as Cancer of the Liver, and stated that there was no hope for me. The pain was very severe and Dr. Galbreith continued his visits administering quieting powders. A swelling or bunch had formed under my right ribs almost as large as my head, and I had given up all hopes of recovery. But having heard of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, I sent, February 1st, 1887, and bought a bottle of the Syrup from Mr. Peter Schmitz, a druggist of this place, and took it as directed. About March 1st something broke and the swelling commenced to go down, until it has almost disappeared. Up to this date I have taken two and one half bottles of the Syrup, and have so far recovered as to be able to visit my neighbor, and am truly rejoicing that I am fast being relieved from such terrible pain, and desiring to acknowledge the benefit I have received in using your syrup, hoping that you will use it so that others who are afflicted may be benefited and relieved from pain as I have been. Very truly,
CHARLES A. SPIER,
Of Orion, Michigan.

Hobert Guild Hall, at Ann Arbor, has been dedicated and is now open for the use and amusement of young people, especially students.

The employees in the Register office have challenged "all other 'prints,' pressmen and binders" in the city to a friendly game of base ball to be played sometime in July or August.

The Perry Sun is a lively little sheet, just half the size of the HERALD, published 18 miles east of Lansing on the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railway, in a very busy bustling town of 500 inhabitants.

Speaking of Mr. Jasper Imus, one of the deputy fish wardens of this county, the Courier says, "Jass. is a quiet fellow, but he is a whole army when woke up, and is greatly interested in the protection of game and fish."

Prof. L. McLouth, formerly of the Normal, late of the State Agricultural College, was in Ann Arbor, last week, visiting his wife's brother, A. M. Doty, on the eve of his departure to the West, to enter upon his duties as President of the Dakota Agricultural College.

During a game of ball at Ypsilanti, a week ago last Saturday, a bat slipped from the hands of one of the players and struck a seventeen year old lad by the name of Don M. Seymour near the center of his forehead, fracturing his skull, from which injury he died the following Monday.

The Chronicle, a paper published by the University students, says, "Dr. Vaughan proposes to make experiments under authority of the state board of health, regarding pneumonia, and will probably get a lot of monkeys for that purpose."

Fred. S. Hubbard, one of Ann Arbor's bright young men, who has been in the employ of the Wabash R. R., at Chicago, of late, passed through the city last Friday on his way to Washington, to accept the office of private secretary to Judge Cooley on the Inter-State commerce commission. Many friends of Mr. Hubbard will rejoice at his good fortune.—Courier.

The editor of the Courier very kindly warns us that if we do not "leave off the 'y,'" in Judge Kinne's name, we will be brought before the new judge for contempt. All right. We want to make the judge's acquaintance and that would afford us a good opportunity. We announce beforehand that we will plead our own cause.

The statement that the legislature has passed and the governor has signed a bill attaching Livingstone county to this judicial circuit is quite pleasing to Judge elect Kinne, who will then be given sufficient labor to keep him busy. But few people can have extra honors cast upon them in such a bountiful manner.—Courier.

From the general appearance of affairs we are led to believe that the forerunner of the boom that people have waited for so long and patiently has at last arrived. All branches of business are livening up, and mechanics of all kinds are driven with work. The houses of the village are all occupied and several have been lately purchased by tenants to avoid being obliged to vacate, and one or two families have been obliged to leave the village because of lack of accommodations; rents are steadily increasing and the indications are of a prosperous future in spite of the croakings of a few disgruntled individuals whose continued whining has made them an eyesore to the community.—Leader. Go ahead, Dexter. Nothing suits us better than to have wide-awake neighbors.

James Hanna, of Dexter, has received an increase of his pension.

Sixteen of the Senior law students were admitted to the bar last week.

The remains of Jacob Stark, of Ann Arbor, who disappeared mysteriously on the 1st of November last, have been found in Heinzman's lake, not far from that city. Cause of the drowning unknown.

THE STATE.

A Verdict Against the Knights.

William W. Carter is one of a number of Maine ship builders who came to Detroit during a strike in the Detroit ship yards, to take the place of the strikers. The men from Maine were met by a delegation from the Detroit assembly of K. of L., and it was agreed that the former were to receive $35 each and leave Wayne county. The money was paid over but the men did not go home to Maine; on the contrary they went to Gibraltar in Wayne county and helped build a vessel there. Suit was brought in the Wayne circuit against Carter to recover the $35, and to make a test case. In his charge to the jury the judge cited the statute which provides that "if any person shall by threats, intimidation or otherwise, and without authority of law, interfere with or attempt to interfere with, or in any way molest or disturb any mechanic or laborer in the quiet and peaceful pursuit of his lawful associations, such person shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor." "The question in this case," continued the court, "is whether or not the contract made by the assembly with charter is a violation of the statute. I charge you that, if you believe the evidence in this case, then it was an unlawful attempt on the part of the plaintiff to prevent their men from carrying out their contracts with the dry dock company, and was therefore in violation of the statute. The defense of illegality is a peculiar one. The objection is rather made by the public, speaking through the court, than by the defendant as a party to the contract. It is therefore not a question of a moral duty on the part of defendant whether he went to Maine or not. The law condemns all proceedings regarding illegal contracts, not from any considerations of the moral obligations and rights of parties, but upon grounds of public policy. The jury conferred but a short time, and found a verdict for defendant.

STATE NEWS CONDENSED.

One of the largest pine deals in the history of the state has just been consummated in Bay City by the firm of McGraw & Co. The firm have just disposed of their Naubinway plant, which includes a small mill, docks, etc., 100,000,000 feet of standing pine, ninety per cent. of which is white pine, to J. T. Hurst of Wyandotte, for the consideration of $400,000, and it is reported that Mr. Hurst has refused $35,000 for his bargain. Three years ago McGraw & Co. purchased the property for a trifle less than $200,000. The firm will now turn their attention to the Dead River tract of pine in the Upper Peninsula.

Six weeks ago a 9-year old son of the Rev. R. Shorts of Traverse City, while at play, had the metal part and the rubber head of a lead pencil in his mouth, and accidentally swallowed it. The pencil stuck in his throat, causing much pain and irritation and threatening his life, and in order to relieve him a surgical operation had to be performed. Accordingly a couple of surgeons cut his throat open 2 1/2 inches, laying bare the windpipe, which was also cut open and forceps run down it some five inches, where the obstruction was caught by them and drawn out.

Clark Harrison and James McGurrier, living six miles east of Vicksburg, engaged in a little revolver practice between themselves at the home of the latter the other night, but neither received a scratch, although one shot made such a close call that McGurrier screamed and Harrison, thinking he had killed him, went home about half a mile distant, and told his wife that he had killed McGurrier and that he had taken a dose of morphine to kill himself. Dr. Pease was called but was unable to restore him and he died from the effects of the drug.

Having learned that it will be almost or quite impossible for all the counties to get their returns in by April 22, the secretary of state has decided to postpone his call for a meeting of the state board of canvassers, originally made for that date, and will probably have to put it off until nearly or quite the latest day allowed by law, unless he finds that all the returns are in earlier than they now seem likely to be. May 20 is the latest date that the initial meeting of the board can be held, but it can be adjourned, if necessary.

If you are a farmer, and a stranger proposes to buy all your spring chickens at a big price, when three months old, paying you a part down, just trot out your blunderbuss or invite the family bull dog to take a hand in the game, for you will be standing face to face with the latest swindle. The receipt of contract Mr. Sharper would ask you to sign is so arranged in the bank form that it is readily converted into a note.—Livingston County Republican.

The total output of iron ore from the Marquette mining range for 1887 will be as follows: Seven mines near Ishpeming, 1,085,000 tons; eight mines near Negaunee, 275,000 tons; sixteen scattering mines, including the famous Champion, 835,000 tons. This makes a total of 2,195,000 tons, and does not include the new mines to be opened this season.—Railroads are making great preparations for a heavy business, and the upper peninsula branch of the C. & N. W. road alone will run 118 trains daily.

Clay is the principal stockholder, has been seized by the United States marshal under a $10,000 execution in favor of a New York bank. Sanford could find no lawyer in the city who would defend him, and he had to put up with a law student, who undertook to defend him but failed to make any headway at it.

A great sensation has been created in Coldwater by the arrest of C. H. Thomas, proprietor of a variety store, on the serious charge of having hired Walter C. Cole for $200 to kill Chas. Davis, an old man on whom Thomas had a $2,000 grave-yard insurance. It is stated that John Kerns laid under the counter while the bargain was being made and heard the conversation.

A drill in the Detroit mine, near Ishpeming, tapped a subterranean lake or river, and the rush of water into the mine which ensued drove the miners out in a hurry, and, indeed, at imminent risk of drowning before they could get away. The mine is now flooded to a depth of 150 feet and three powerful pumps are not able to lower it an inch.

Peter Dostie, the veteran fisherman of Monterey, Allegan county, claims that the legislature should pass a law offering a bounty for the killing of dog and bill fish, as he says these voracious fish are increasing largely in our waters, and are eating up and driving out the edible fish. They are in fact the wolves of the water.

CHARGES OF BRIBERY.

Charges Preferred Against Representative Dakin.

General Legislative News.

There have been rumors of corruption in the legislature for some weeks past. These rumors have assumed definite form in the sworn statement laid before the house by Frederick L. Eaton of Saginaw City, who has been at the capital promoting an amendment to the original City charter. Representative Dakin, who is the party chiefly concerned, does not deny the substantial truth of the statement, but he told Eaton money would have to be used with the members to promote the desired measure; that he asked Eaton to supply him with it, and that he gave Eaton a written list of the members upon whom it would be used, with the specific sums required for each set down opposite their respective names. This list, in Dakin's handwriting, was affixed to the affidavit presented by Eaton to the speaker. The list is as follows: B. Baker, $5; Baldwin, $5; Bentley, $5; Burr, $5; Crocker, $5; Dieke, $5; Dunbar, $5; Engleman, $5; Harrington, $5; Manly, $5; McCormick, $5; O'Keefe, $5; Perkins, $5; Rumsey, $5; T. H. Williams, $5. Confronted with this list, Dakin acknowledged it to be his handwriting, and that the figures meant dollars, and that they were the sums he desired to get from Eaton to promote the bill with the members named.

In explanation Mr. Dakin says that he did not think of corrupting the gentlemen named by giving them the money; he only intended to invite them to a feast, and give them wherewith to eat, drink and smoke; he did not know that more than one of them—O'Keefe—drank, and he never saw more than two or three of them or he would not have intended to give a feast with the money; he told him that "he intended to get together with you boys and I wanted the money to buy cigars and buy something to drink."

The case was referred to a special committee who reported in favor of a bill of impeachment and a public trial. The report was unanimously adopted by the legislature. Mr. Dakin has engaged ex-representative Frank L. Dodge and Judge L. C. Holden of East Saginaw, to defend him in his trial for malfeasance and misfeasance in office.

The committee to investigate the cooperative insurance companies of the state—more particularly to look into the "graveyard" insurance—have completed their work and submitted their report to the legislature. In this report the methods of the different companies are disclosed, and other facts in connection with the business clearly set forth. The nefarious scheme of "graveyard" insurance is shown up in its entirety, and the foundation laid for the legislature to break up the business. The report is very exhaustive and complete.

Among the important bills passed by the house is one introduced by T. H. Williams of Jackson to protect children and prevent them from being educated in immorality and crime. It provides that if any child under 14 years of age, shall be bound out, apprenticed, or given away to his parents or either of them, or adopted by any person, and it shall be discovered that the person adopting such child, or the person to whom such child is bound out, apprenticed, or given, shall be the proprietor, keeper or manager of a house of prostitution, saloon or other place where intoxicating liquors or wine is sold, or if such persons shall become of such immoral habit and modes of life, or if any such person shall, as regards such child, violate the provisions of act 360 of 1881, or if such person shall by his or her care or education of such child be teaching or causing such child to lead an immoral or criminal life, in every such case such child shall be removed from the care and custody of such person and placed in the custody of its mother, if a suitable person, or in some state institution, or put into the custody of some other person.

This bill is the outgrowth of a singular case, in which a little girl was adopted from an institution in Detroit by a dissolute woman. The managers of the institution were imposed upon by forged references. As the child grew she began to exhibit talent as a mimic and was placed in a well known institution in Detroit to be educated. The good people of the institution became greatly attached to their pupil and were grievously wounded when the mother by adoption some months ago took the child away and surrendered her to a variety actor who is at the present time traveling about the country with her. The little girl whose age is between 3 and 4 years, attracted large audiences; the deplorable fact is that a child of such tender years should have fallen into unscrupulous hands. Since the introduction of the bill Mr. Williams has had information of seven other children who have been adopted by persons who lead immoral lives.

The bill to prevent combinations of fire or marine insurance companies by means of local boards of underwriters has passed the house.

Gov. Luce has approved the bill for printing 1,500 copies of the new manual. The act is thought to be unconstitutional because founded upon the title of another bill, altered for the purpose. Frank Goddard of the state printing office says he will have the book out in thirty days. It usually takes four months to do the work. The book consists of 750 pages and involves the setting of 4,000,000 ems of type.

A caucus of Republican members of the legislature was held the other night to consider bills bearing upon the liquor traffic. Senator Edmunds presided. A bill modifying the present tax law was read. It increased the tax, made no discrimination between beer and whisky, increased the bonds and put other restrictions upon the sale of liquor. This bill, though nominally under discussion, was really not much considered. It simply gave members an opportunity to air their views, which proved to be as various as the different speakers. Chapman of Hillsdale, appeared as an irreconcilable believer in local option. Rumsey of Ingham, a broader and more liberal man, thought the present tax law, with certain more stringent provisions and perhaps a state constabulary to enforce it, the better plan. Harry Watson of Montcalm, whom experience has taught that compromise is the true mission of politics, also favored the present tax law, but not to the same degree of stringency as some others proposed. Speaker Markey, though not adverse to the tax law, was somewhat inclined to high license. Mr. Diekema of Ottawa had views similar to those of Watson, but perhaps more clearly defined. W. I. Babcock of Berrien was inclined to hold with Diekema, and Bates of Allegan also expressed his opinion in favor of something not greatly variant from the present tax law. Abbott of Lawton, a clear-headed man, was rather sided with Rumsey and Watson, but was not strenuous for the bill that was presented. After a caucus adjourned about three hours the caucus adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

The governor has approved the bills for the organization of log and timber insurance companies, for the incorporation of societies of pharmacists, authorizing the trustees of Kalamazoo asylum, to convey certain land to Kalamazoo city, and one relative to cooperative savings associations.

A delegation from the state Pharmaceutical association was in attendance on the legislature the other day. It held a conference with the house committee on liquor traffic. The druggists object to being classed with saloon-keepers, and after very forcibly setting forth this fact to the committee, presented to the legislature the following as embodying succinctly their views on the liquor traffic: "Resolved, That the following measure, whereby it may be possible to reach and tax those pharmacists who are willing to degrade their profession by selling liquor for other than medicinal purposes and in direct violation of the laws of the state, be declared the sense of this meeting and be transmitted by the secretary thereof to the members of the legislature. That we consider the present law ample and sufficient; but as not being enforced, we recommend that a state constabulary be appointed for the enforcement of the said law. For the first violation thereof the person so convicted as a penalty to pay the amount of the regular saloon license; for the second violation the registration as a pharmacist to be ordered revoked by the state board of pharmacy, and the person so convicted shall be ineligible for registration in this state for a term of five years."

The senate has passed the bill appropriating $120,000 for the erection of a building for the mining school at Houghton.

The senate has passed the bill reincorporating Saginaw City, and adopted the amendment annexing the Carrolton strip.

The house has passed the bill to appropriate $18,000 for the purchase of land by the Kalamazoo asylum, the same to be paid out of the surplus money in the hands of the treasurer. The bill also authorizes the trustees to erect two buildings to accommodate thirty patients each at a cost not exceeding $5,000; and to build store-rooms, meat safe and refrigerator and rooms for manufacturing mattresses at a cost not exceeding $4,553, the whole to be paid out of the surplus accumulations of the asylum.

The railroad committees of the two houses held a meeting a few days ago. Ex-Gov. Alger appeared before them and spoke against any enactment that would bear hard upon the railroads. He claimed that the railroads were not remunerative, although some of them were becoming so. He explains that two cents per mile for passenger rates would be too low for the railroads; that none of the companies could make it pay at that rate, except possibly the Michigan Central or the Michigan Southern. The president of the Michigan Central has said that the legislature had no authority to fix rates, but the main line of his road, as the company worked by special charter, and that the governor did not see how it would be possible to establish a low rate for the other companies. He recommended that a committee examine the books of the railroad companies before taking any action looking to the fixing of passenger or freight rates.

The house has passed a bill reducing the legal rate of interest to six per cent, when no special contract is made.

The bill of Mr. Sharp of Jackson to repeal the act of 1886, levying a tax of $34,000, to be paid to the counties from which state swamp lands have been sold at five per cent, as arrears of interest at five per cent, upon fifty per cent of the gross receipts of such sales, to be divided among the counties in proportion to the number of acres sold in each county, has passed the senate. The other bill of Mr. Sharp upon the same subject also passed. The existing law provides that half of the proceeds from the sale of swamp lands shall go to the primary school fund, or rather that the interest at five per cent of the proceeds shall annually be paid to the school districts of the state upon a per capita basis. Mr. Sharp's bill amends this law and directs that the entire proceeds of the sales of swamp lands heretofore received and all hereafter received shall go to the primary school fund, and the interest at five per cent shall be distributed upon the old basis. This will materially increase the primary school interest fund.

The governor has signed the bill forbidding the unlawful use of the badge of the G. A. R., and Loyal Legion.

The ways and means committee of the house have reported in favor of cutting the appropriations asked for improving the soldiers' homes from $28,135 to $3,800, a reduction of $24,335. The item cut out are: Hospital, $18,000; dead house $400; barn $4,000; vegetable house, $700; disinfestation, $300. Some of these items were asked on the mildest pretext. For instance, the committee found that there was an average of 20 deaths per year at the home. The cemetery was near at hand, and interments were speedy. There was absolutely no necessity for the so-called "dead house." Other items were found equally extravagant.

The senate has passed the bill appropriating $2,250 to the university. The attempt to get an appropriation for the gymnasium failed.

The bill to give long term prisoners sentenced for first offenses to the Detroit house of correction has been amended by the senate to give them to either the local house of correction or the Detroit institution, at the option of the judge sentencing. The amendment has been concurred in by the house.

Under Water.

Montreal and the Valley of the St. Lawrence in the immediate vicinity have been again inundated. An ice gorge, caused by an immense field of lake ice, which, crashing into the basin immediately above Victoria bridge, caused a movement in front of the city. This soon becoming jammed at the head of St. Helen's Island caused the water to rise four feet in as many minutes, flooding all the low-lying portions of the city. Houses, barns and bridges were carried away, and a large amount of live stock was carried away, and the water was completely under water, and the water had to flee for their lives in their night clothes. Relief committees have been formed, and everything possible is being done for the destitute.

Passed its Second Reading.

The coercion bill passed its second reading in the British house of commons on the 15th inst. Sexton, Hartington, Gladstone and Parnell led in the debate and made forcible and effective speeches on the powerful measure for Ireland. The debate was rather tame, however, until Gladstone took the floor and made one of his grandest pleas in behalf of stricken Ireland.

SET IN DIAMONDS

"That is thanks for Ethel, who can thank you for herself," she said. Then Lord Stair took up the other diamond and chain. He examined them closely.

"I have never seen two things so perfectly alike as these two," he said; "and it is quite impossible to find one point which they differ. Let me fasten them round your neck, Marguerite."

She bent her graceful head, and her husband fastened the clasp of the chain. Then the diamonds shone on the pure breast of the young mother just as they shone on that of the little child. The August sun shone full upon them, and the light was dazzling. What the two gentlemen thought of the picture was to be seen in their eyes. Lady Perth felt quite tired of seeing another woman look so beautiful.

"You must look little Ethel's diamonds away," she said. They're too valuable to be left lying about in the nursery," and the amiable lady left them.

They sat out in the sunshine for some time longer; the gentlemen never tired of looking at the beautiful woman with the diamonds on her breast. That was how the two lockets, which were to play an important part in three lives, were given; and the memory of that August morning never died before them. Afterward, when Lady Stair took the locket and chain from the baby's neck—she placed it in a pretty little jewel-box. She wrote on the cover:

"For my daughter, Ethel, when she is old enough to recognize her father's name."

The sun was shining when she put away, and the whole fair land was laughing with its ripe fruit and golden grain. She noticed one thing that had not particularly struck her before. On the back of the lockets, in richly embossed gold were the initials "D. S.," and she was the true-lover's knots.

"No one could fail to recognize those lockets," she said to herself, "I must wear mine often; it will please Lord Stair."

And she did wear it often. Her husband was always delighted when he saw the gleam of diamonds on her white breast.

For a few days that warm, bright August Lord Stair made himself one of the household. He went out walking, driving, riding with his wife and Captain Este.

"You have done Lady Stair a great deal of good," he said one day to his woman. "She seems quite different; more lively and animated."

"She is a most charming companion," said the young soldier frankly. "I never knew how lovely and winsome a woman could be until I knew her."

"You must find a wife like her, Darcy," he said.

"I would if I could, but I do not believe there is one," he answered, and Lord Stair liked him all the better for his kind words.

Then the master of Oakcliffe Towers set back to his books. It was no longer the "History of Music," but the "Lives of the Eminent Musicians," work requiring more time, more study, more references.

He shut himself up once more to work, content with the state of things, the only difference was that as he wrote now he saw more frequently a vision of a beautiful, queenly girl with diamonds shining on her breast.

At very rare intervals his conscience reproached him about her. True she was happy enough, but he knew that she ought to go to court, that she should present, that she should take up her duties of her position; but he contented himself by saying:

"Next year, I will take her next year. She will be young then to run the rattle of fashion. Next year will be the time."

He did not notice that she grew more beautiful every day; that in her face a brightness, in her eyes a light, came to them; that her laughter was all white, her voice all sweetness.

He saw no danger, and in the meantime the shadow darkened and deepened. Even at this time, had the young girl been allowed free access to her bed, this story would never have been told.

It was simply the old story, told in other form; they were both young, beautiful—she, gifted with the best grace that ever woman wore, brave, courageous, and noble—what happens in such cases, the passionate heart of the girl woke at last, saw the meaning of the sunlight in the flowers, she knew the meaning of the birds' song, there was not one thought in her mind as she walked through the flowers to her doom.

Always together. He with the wine-face and laughing eyes; he with honey on his lips and the first stir of passion in his heart—she the glamour of first love falling over her, always together. Out in the woods while the morning sun shone, in to breakfast, out again until noon; long hours in the conservatory of the Herons' Pool, on the white terrace in the gloaming. Together until, without either knowing it, the two souls, the two lives had become one.

Lady Perth had ceased to speak, no longer called her brother's attention to the laughter and nonsense. She was perfectly silent, but she saw it. She knew the whole history long, even held up a finger to stop it. She was mute and silent, while the innocent, dreaming girl went to her doom. She never went out until she saw a darkening in the sky that ended always in a bitter

"Go your way beautiful Marguerite," she would say. "I will not put even a straw in your path."

There are many ways of committing murder; not the least cruel was the fashion in which Lady Perth helped to slay Marguerite Lady Stair.

CHAPTER XIII.

"IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN."

The gloaming of a beautiful September night, the sun seemed unwilling to set, and had left a warmth in the air, which deceived the flowers and kept them wide awake. The sky was full of lovely colors, the veil of blue spread slowly over it, and through that there were faint indications of pale, blue stars. Late roses were blooming, and tall sunflowers; birds were singing vespers in the leafy boughs, there was a sweet rippling wind, the grounds and the gardens lay fair and dream-like, the rush of the swift river could be faintly heard in the distance. The windows of the drawing-room at Oakcliffe were wide open. They all agreed that it would be a pity to shut out the sweet evening air.

Dinner was over at the Towers, the nursery where little Ethel slept was closed, the last visit had been paid, and baby lay in state for the night. The lovely shadows of evening were gathering; who does not know those beautiful lines—

"Evening dews are gently falling,
Evening shadows fill the west,
Birds with folded wings are calling
Home the wanderers to their nest.
Lengthening now across the meadows,
Here the flocks no longer stay,
Softly fall the evening shadows,
Or the steps of parting day."

A great silence reigned over that beautiful room, the marble Psyche seems to have fallen asleep, the rare exotics give out a sweet, subtle odor, the scented water of the little fountain has ceased to ripple, it was as though the silence of the gloaming was too sweet to be broken.

Lord Stair, who was busily engaged in collecting material for the life of Mozart, had gone to the library with orders that he was not to be disturbed about anything. Lady Perth had taken up a book, and seemed to have fallen asleep over it, but if the truth were known her ladyship could see perfectly well, and was very wide awake, indeed. Lady Stair wore an evening dress of white silk; a crimson passion-flower nestled in her white breast, and another shone in the coils of her golden hair. She looked lovely as a dream, and the young soldier never tired of looking at her.

Lady Perth saw it all; the gathering passion in his eyes, the exquisite tenderness on her beautiful face; and laughed to herself as she thought how it must all end.

"Sing to me, Lady Stair," said the young Captain.

He had been watching the fair beauty of her face in the quiet gloaming until it had dazed him.

"I wonder," he said to himself, "why Heaven has made women so fair?"

He was not the first man by any means who had asked themselves that question in utter bewilderment of spirit.

"Sing to me, will you? Lord Stair says you have the finest contralto voice in England; why do you never sing?"

Lady Perth does not like music," she replied, with a careless glance at the carefully arrayed figure. "The first time I sang she said it made her head ache; I have never sung since."

"You are very amiable," laughed Captain Este. "I am afraid that I should have sung much oftener for that. Do sing to me; this is the very night for music."

"I will with pleasure," said Lady Stair.

She needed no light, and no notes; the music seemed to trickle from her fingers. Who knows of what she had been thinking as she sat in the gloaming. Strange to say, the song she chose was called, "What might have been."

There rose in the silence of the twilight a voice so sweet, so rich, so clear, that it was almost unearthly in its beauty; a voice that went straight to the young soldier's heart, and took even the color from his face; each word felt distinct and clear, and seemed to die away over the flowers. He never forgot the words, and they were beautiful enough to remember.

"It might have been. Ah full of deep regret,
We murmur thus o'er days long past and fled,
It might have been—vain idle words, and yet
By mortal lips no sadder can be said."

"It might have been and yet it is no more
The dream of life that opened out so fair
When skies once cloudless slowly shaded o'er,
And hope's bright future melted into air."

"It might have been, perchance ourselves let slip
The fatal word that brought us all the ill;
The brimning cup just lifted to our lips
Shattered to earth our hand no more can fill."

"It might have been, but for that cruel word
That wrought such anguish past all loves repair;
It might have been, if only we had heard
The warning voice to save us from despair."

"It might have been—it might have been. In vain
The tortured heart may struggle to get free;
The iron 'never' brings not half such pain
As that which might have been, but may not be."

And Lady Perth listened to the song—listened to the faint whisper in which the beautiful voice died—listened to the sigh that came when the song was ended.

"A golden chance," she said to herself, as she quitted the room with noiseless step; let them make the best of it."

They did not notice her disappearance. Lady Perth did not exist in that moment for them. When Lady Stair left the piano, and went back to her place, she saw tears standing in the young soldier's eyes.

"I shall think of those words when I am far away," he said; "What might have been." "They told a great deal, Marguerite. 'What might have been if either you or I could have ordered our own lives."

She looked up at the stars that were peeping out in golden splendor. There was a far-off, dreamy expression in her eyes.

"What might have been?" she repeated, in a low sweet voice. "I do not see how anything could have been different with me. I should imagine all my life was planned and mapped out ready for me. I seem to have done nothing myself. I did the only thing it seemed possible for me to do."

"If you could order your own life over again," he said, "would you make it different?"

She raised her eyes to his face; they were as innocent as the eyes of a dreaming child.

"Yes, I should just make a little difference," she said. "I should like to spend it with Sunbeam and you."

"You would like to be with me always, Marguerite?"

"Yes," she replied, with innocent gaiety, "always, and with Sunbeam too."

"Will you tell me why?" he said, and there was a ring of infinite tenderness in his voice.

"I have a hundred reasons," she replied. "I like you; you are kind to me; you think of me always; you believe in me; you understand me; my character seems to blend well with yours; you laugh cheerily, and your voice has a hearty, genial ring that warms my heart when I hear it."

"Those are all good reasons," he says, gravely. "Is there no other?"

"I could find no more," she says; "I am afraid another reason is, that you dislike Lady Perth, and am sure another is, that you love Sunbeam."

"I am sure I do that," said the young officer, quickly. "Is there no other reason, Marguerite?"

"I think I have given you quite enough. I shall give you no more."

"Now, what is your 'might have been,' Darcy?"

"The iron 'Never,'" he replied. "If I had the ordering of my own life, I would have been the man who won you."

"That is not a great ambition," she replied.

"I think it the greatest and fairest ambition a man ever had. Let me see how the dream runs. If these fair lands were mine; if this grand old mansion were mine; if the fairest, brightest, sweetest, treasure in it—yourself—were mine; if you belonged to me; if I could call that golden head mine, that beautiful face, the violet eyes, the white hands, if they were mine—oh, Heaven, what am I dreaming?"

She looked up at him with such a frightened, innocent face that he stopped abruptly.

"All dreams are foolish and mad," he cried; "but this one has a charm for me. It might have been, had I seen you first—had we met—you might have been my wife, and I should have been the happiest man in the world."

"Are you not happy now?" she asked, gently. But he made no answer—only turned his head away to the fragrant starlit night.

"What a dream!" he continued, "If I were Douglas Lord Stair, master of Oakcliffe, and you my wife!" A sudden storm of passion seemed to sweep over him; he seized her hand. "Marguerite—Marguerite! come out into the moonlight—I want to talk to you."

She did not know why she trembled, why her hands grew cold in his clasp, why her face burned. She went out with him, as she had done often enough before.

They stood on the wide terrace where the crimson passion flowers grew. The stars were shining in the sky, the cool sweet wind shook the loose rose-leaves, and scattered them on the ground. A calm, great and solemn in its beauty came over them.

"I beg your pardon, Marguerite," said the young soldier. "My dream carried me away—I should not have spoken to you in that fashion."

"Dreams are all vain," she said, but she was trembling still.

It had suddenly dawned across her what a different thing life would be if Darcy Este were her husband instead of Lord Stair—if she had a husband young, fond of laughter, cheerful and gay, like the young captain, instead of the dark, cold, handsome man always wrapped up in his books. What a beautiful, happy life! The idea was quite new to her, and it frightened her.

"Marguerite, say you forgive me!" he cried.

"There is nothing to forgive—it was only a dream," she replied, "that comes of my song, 'What might have been.' Darcy, I must not sing to you. My father used to say that singing maddened some men—perhaps it has that effect upon you."

A Spaniel Rescues Kitty.

A spaniel, living on a farm in Flaners, had for a companion a beautiful young cat, whom the ruthless farmer had doomed to extermination. Tying a stone round her neck, he threw her into the river. But the spaniel "pre-empted himself resolutely" into the stream and brought her back in triumph to the house. Will it be believed that the heart of the farmer remained hardened? Again he threw poor puss into the Meuse; but again, like another Horatius, the spaniel—though without "his harness on his back"—that had been reserved for next market day—"plunged headlong in the tide." Not only so, but again he drew her safe to shore. And mark the print of the story—it was to the further shore of the Meuse; he would not trust his friend to the mercies of the home side again.

The daffodil is the flower of fashion at this season in London. Florists' windows are filled with yellow masses of the reigning favorite, and huge coral sage bouquets gleam from afar through fog and smoke.

Health Items.

The Ohio State Journal of Dental Science advises ladies wearing artificial teeth not to use their artificial or natural teeth for biting off threads. It will wear off the enamel of natural teeth and nick the outline of artificial teeth. Furthermore, thread often contains lead, and oft repeated biting off of threads has been known to result in lead poisoning.

People should be careful how they accept the prescriptions found in the daily papers. A sure cure for diphtheria published by some of the papers, prescribed a tablespoonful of turpentine for adults and a teaspoonful for children, frequently repeated—an excessive or poisonous dose of a substance which must in any case be administered with great caution.

M. Chevreul recently celebrated the centennial anniversary of his birth. A Paris letter tells us that he is receiving hundreds of letters from all parts of the continent inquiring after the secret of his strength and longevity. To these inquiries he says that the secret of his long life consists in two words—"good health." For this gift he says he is indebted to his parents.

John and Jacob are twins ten years old, having each a head and a chest, but only one abdomen and one pair of legs for the two. Jacob moves the right leg, John the left. They recently resided in Vienna, where they were being closely observed by physicians, according to the last report regarding them, John was very sick, and it was expected that if John died, Jacob would have to follow into the grave. It is reported that the twins were engaged to visit the United States under Earnum's control, but in the event of their death, the monstrosity will go to an anatomical museum.

A Glasgow physician reports a curious experience of a patient of his who was troubled seriously with foul eructations from the stomach. Early one morning he lighted a match to see the time and in blowing out the match his breath caught fire, burning his lips and giving him terrible surprise. Probably the gases formed in his stomach were chemically analogous to the inflammable gases formed in coal pits.

Nym Crinkle says he uses morphine girls who use this drug to drown mental trouble; belladonna girls who employ this powerful herb to dilate the pupil and give brightness to the eyes; the arsenic girl who employs this mineral to improve her complexion; the nitrate of silver girls who apply this poisonous wash to the hair to obliterate gray hairs; and the nicotine girl who smokes her cigarettes privately because she enjoys the habit. Nym Crinkle is right so far as the girl's are concerned, but how is it about the men?

A physician whose specialty is anal diseases has been studying the relation of anal fistula to consumption. It is an old idea that an anal fistula has a good effect in cases of consumption, but this physician says that any improvement in consumptive symptoms which follows the occurrence of a fistula is not permanent. He says: "As a general rule, these fistula greatly aggravate the pulmonary affection by impairing the constitutional powers, especially if attended by copious discharge of pus, and much irritation. The principal indication in such cases is to build up, not to deplete—Dr. Foote's Health Monthly."

Money Makers

Don't let golden opportunities pass unimproved: there are times in the lives of men when more money can be made rapidly and easily, than otherwise can be earned by years of labor. Write Hallett & Co., Portland, Maine, who will send you, free, full particulars about work that you can do, and live at home, wherever you are located, at a profit of at least from $5 to $25 daily. Some have made over $50 in a single day. All is new. You are started free. Capital not required. Either sex; all ages.

The Chinese are said to manufacture an anesthetic not unlike cocaine in its action, and claim that the anesthetic property is the juice of the eye of the frog.

Endurance of Society People.

A prominent society lady of Washington being asked by the Prince of Wales, "Why is it you people here manifest so little fatigue from dancing, receptions, etc.?" replied, "Why, you see, we Americans regain the vitality wasted in these dissipation by using Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic."

Miss Fortescue has returned to England. Her engagement in America was not so much of a financial success as her engagement with Lord Garmoyle.

"Said Aaron to Moses."

"Let's cut off our noses." Aaron must have been a sufferer from catarrh. The desperation which catarrh produces is often sufficient to make people say and do many rash things, and many continue suffering just as if no such cure as Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy existed. It cures every case from the simplest to the most complicated, and all the consequences of catarrh. Rheumatic Syrup Co.
Gentlemen:—About ten years ago my general health became impaired from my liver and kidneys becoming diseased. I have constantly failed in strength ever since, my whole system becoming prostrated. For years my nerves have been so weak and uncontrollable that I dare attempt to describe. The pain and stitches in my back and shoulders and twitchings and cramps of the muscles have been almost unbearable. I have taken everything I could learn or hear of, but never received the benefit which I have from Bissard's Rheumatic Syrup. It is a remarkable remedy. The Syrup has regulated my kidneys and liver, thereby removing the cause of my general ailment, aiding nature in restoring my impure blood to a healthy state, and the palsied condition of my whole nervous system is better than it has been for many years. The pains which I have been suffering for years have entirely left me. It will be gratifying on my part to answer any inquiries regarding the merits of your remedy as experienced by me.

I am very truly yours,

The Successful Remedy for Nasal Catarrh

Must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will, by its own action, reach all the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh during the past few years demonstrates that only one remedy has met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. The more distressing symptoms quickly yield to it, and a multitude of persons who have for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict, testify to radical and permanent cures wrought by it. Ely's Cream Balm is perfectly soothing, excites no dread, dissolves the hardened accumulations, lessens the extreme sensibility of the nerve centers to cold and all external irritants, and is followed by no reaction whatever.

BUCKEYE FOLDING BINDER

The folding device introduced with this admirable machine in the harvest of 1886 has added greatly to the popularity of the Buckeye Binder. No other Elevator Binder can so easily and quickly be put in shape to pass through gates and barn doors, and none requires so little space for storage as the Buckeye. It is a MARVEL OF LIGHTNESS AND STRENGTH. It has every desirable appliance to give the driver complete and easy control of the entire machine. For simplicity of construction, durability and perfection of work in any and all conditions of grain it is not surpassed by any other machine in existence.

The Buckeye requires LESS HORSE POWER than any other Binder in the world, and is the only Binder free from side draft. We have such entire confidence in the truth of these assertions, that we invite competitors to a friendly contest in the harvest of 1887, in which the actual draft of the various Binders contesting shall be accurately determined by dynamometer tests under the direction of such committees and under such rules, as may be agreed upon.

We do claim for the Buckeye Down Binder that its work is equal to that of any known machine.

to A. Allison of the Echo. The bonds of saloon keepers and druggists were fixed at $3,000. The petition of certain citizens that half of the expense of sprinkling the streets be paid from the village treasury was laid upon the table.

FRIGHTENED AT NOTHING.

A writer signing himself "Justice" asks, in the Echo, if we meant gambling, when we spoke last week of "money catching devices." In reply, we need only say, when we mean gambling we are not afraid to say gambling. Some parties, we understand, are very busy, endeavoring to make it appear that "money catching devices" as used by us, has some dreadful significance. To such it will undoubtedly be a great disappointment to learn that we had no idea nor intention of even gentle rebuke or disapproval by the remark. Every church fair or social or whatever it may be called is a device for raising money. I never heard of one got up for any other purpose. Protestant or Catholic, it is a money catching device, and each particular scheme, contrivance, arrangement, so numerous, amusing sometimes, and successful withal, is a "money catching device." If some people would study their dictionaries, or if they were looking for good instead of evil, they would not be so much like shying horses, taking fright at nothing at all.
