Over Three Hundred Lives Lost in the Recent Fire at Vienna.

VIENNA, June 22.—Later particulars show that the recent ferry accident at Peks, on the Danube river, was much worse than at first reported. The boat was fearfully overloaded, having 400 persons aboard, and it is said that the boatmen were intoxicated. The panic on the boat was fearful. An abbé blessed the pilgrims, jumped overboard, and swam ashore with a child, but died an hour after from rupture of a blood-vessel.

The bodies recovered give evidence of fearful struggles. Their clothing, hats and distaffs were found. It is estimated that 300 bodies have been recovered. The recognition of bodies by friends on shore attended with heartrending scenes.

THE DANUBE DISASTER.

A NEWTON (La.) man was picking apples recently when an old cow ran up to him and then away, acting very strangely. Knowing that she was an unusually intelligent cow, he suspected that something must be the matter, and coming down from the tree followed her. She led him to a cow in another part of the orchard that was nearly choked to death with an apple.

After he had relieved her the old sufferer cried for joy and licked the sufferer profusely, and when the latter was driven into the barn-yard, where she would be out of danger, refused to leave her.—Chicago Herald.

Young Stayer (at 11:55 p. m.)—"What a charming song that was. I wish you would repeat it. What is it called?" Miss Bored—"I chose it because I thought it might be new to you. It's entitled 'Going.'"—The Times.

The other day a town crier took to charge a lost child and proceeded to hunt up its parents. On being asked by a lady what the matter was, he replied: "Here's an orphan child, and I'm trying to find its parents."

BIT THE DUST.

THE THIRIVING VILLAGES OF MARSHFIELD, Wis., Almost Entirely Destroyed by Fifteen Hundred People Homeless.

Marshallfield, Wis., June 25.—The city of Marshallfield, Sunday a busy, thriving town of 3,000 inhabitants and large manufacturing enterprises, was almost wiped out of existence by a fire yesterday.

By three o'clock it was seen that the entire business part of the town was decimated, and the flames were raging with unabated and restless fury.

There are 1,500 people homeless and the people of the town are in a state of panic. People with the household goods which they managed to save are scattered along the roads, and hundreds are left without shelter, except the friendly sky.
