A Trip to Pittsburg.

You can also see the various lines of railways, particularly the Pennsylvania, where the riots of ten years ago occurred, and also the old earthworks made during the war. Now we descend by inclined railways near Point bridge, and walk about town. We walk until tired then take a street car. We visit numerous iron works, see them make of iron and steel almost anything from railroad iron to a common nail. We see all sorts of things made of glass, resolve to write a description, get bewildered as well as delighted and give up writing a description, and seek rest in our friend the doctor's office, on Penn. Avenue. We observe numerous M. D. offices on the first floor on this street, and ask as to their number, and learn that there are only 700 doctors on Pennsylvania Avenue naturally leads to the cemetery, and the doctor hastily remarks that after all the mortality of Pittsburg is less than most cities. We resume our walk and after glancing across narrow and roughly paved streets, among loaded wagons and street cars, we are suddenly seized with an ambition to "get up in the world," and now for a walk to east end heights. We observe the smoky look of buildings. Some of the churches look as though they were 200 years old. We now notice how natural gas is used at the "works," then in homes. It is conducted by pipes into grate, stoves and ranges, and when lighted blazes up through what appears to be coals but is only broken pieces of brick. It is cheap, convenient and cleanly and has really produced a revolution as to fuel supply in the city. We see the magnificent hill residences of the oakland portion of the city, the new stone court house not yet finished, and returning, turn into Lafayette Hall to see what the Bankers' Association are doing. Here are big men in a moneyed sense at least, and the convention is a big thing, too big and thick for most people to understand or get interested in. Many get tired of listening to statements of figures, and suggestions as to what congress ought to do and go out for a stroll, and so do we. Now we cross the Allegheny and are soon among the pleasant scenes of Allegheny city, among which is its famous park. This park is right in the heart of the city and is most charming and easy of access. Its beautiful walks amid fountains and monuments are traversed by thousands every day. It has a large green-house, the gift of Henry Phipps, and an immense library building is going up that will cost a quarter of a million, the gift of Andrew Carnegie. Allegheny is a most charming city. We spend a Sabbath here, worshipping in the Butler st. M. E. church, in the morning and attending a Sunday school in the afternoon of 717. This is the church of Rev W. H. Pearce, who a few years ago preached in Adrian. We attended church on Arch st. in the evening. We "take in" the cyclorama on Battle of Gettysburg, have a most enjoyable time with Post 3, G. A. R., the largest Post in Pennsylvania, say good bye to our host and go home glad to have visited Pittsburg.
