The wrecked boat that was washed shore the other day at Mullet Lake; Cheboygan County, proved to have telonged to a party of three young men, consisting of James Dean, of Petosky, Lyman Morey, of St. Johns, and a Mr. Bell. The men left Battle Creek about three weeks ago for a camping season in the vicinity of Indian river. In the boat was found a coat which contained a letter from Battle Creek to Morey which revealed their identity. Near by was found a tent, provisio photographer's camera, and a sachel as they had left them. It was supposed that they were drowned during the recent storm that swept over Northern Michigan.

Rats Carry Off Money. The other night Jacob Geanesiv, of Lansing, placed twenty dollars in bills in his money drawer while he went to attend a meeting of the Arbeiter Society. Later when he returned the bills were missing, and a hole in othe rear of the drawer caused him to "smell a rat." He moved the counter forward, and three very healthy rodents appeared and disappeared nearly at the same instant. They left their nest behind, however, and in that was discovered the missing money. Luckily the bills were but slightly damaged.

A Mystery Cleared Up. The body of George Campbell, aged twenty-four years, was dug up from an abandoned well near Battle Creek a few days ago by a party of neighbors. Campbell disappeared in August of last year and was reported to have gone West. Frank House, who had claimed that he had bought a team and other effects from Campbell, and in other ways excited suspicions that caused the search, was arrested and neld for trial without bail. Threats of lynching w re made.

A Woman and a Burglar. A burglar the other night attempted to enter the residence of Abel Matthews, a wealthy citizen of Marquette. Mr. Matthews was absent and Mrs. Matthews was sick. Mrs. Robinson, the nurse, took a large ore specimen and struck the thief on the head. She then rushed for him with a lamp, when he cut her on the arm and escaped. New York, Aug. 17.—The steamship Geiser, of the Thingvalla line, which left here last Saturday, August 11, was run into off Cape Race Tuesday by the steam-ship Thingvalla, of the same line. Her was stove in and she sank rapidly. The panic-stricken people were got into boats as rapidly as possible, the Thingval la's boats being also used in the work of rescue. The Geiser sank so fast, he wever, hat before the boats returned from the Thingvalla after their first trip the disabled steamer had gone down, leaving scores of people struggling in The collision occurred off Sable Island,

The Geiser sank in five minutes. The Thingvalla passengers, 455 in number, were transferred to the Wieland and brought here with the fourteen passengers and seventeen of the crew of the Geiser. All the others on the Geiser, seventy-two passengers and thirty-t ree of the crew. were dr wned. The Thingvalla is trying to reach Halifax The exact extent of her injuries is unknown. The Thingvalla left Stett n July 26 and Copenhaven August 4 fr New York. She is commanded by Capta n Laub. She is 1 841 tons register. The Geiser was of 1.871 tons. The collision occurred about 4 o'clock

Tuesday morning. First mate Henry Brown had been in charge, the captain having retared at 11 o'clock p. m., the night being perfectly clear and no danger ar prehende l. About 4 o'clock Capta n Moder was awakened by a call from the chief officer on the bridge, was said there was danger of a collision. A moment later there was shrill blowing of whistles, which swakened the passengers, but before they could get on deck or seize life-preservers there was a terrible shock and the vessel's side was crushed in. Some of the watertight compartments were broken into and the ship began at once to sink. Tho e on board were thrown into confusion and panic. Captain Moller continues: The passengers had now been awakened and were scrambling over each other in wild confusion n an eff rt to reach the upper decks. They forgot the first rule on board ship in case of accident, to se ze life preservers. I called to them to do so, but they paid no heed. I gave orders to man the boats, and the small boat | the people on both ships. I immediately was lowered, but the settling of the steamer aft at this moment sank the boat. In less than two minutes from the time I reached the bridge we were struck; and within the same length of t me there after the vessel was partly under water. I had hard y given orders to man the life and small poats when I was swept from the bridge. The panic-stricken passengers made a jump for the few boats that were launched, and the boats were immediately caps'zed. As soon as came to the surface I began to swim. I saw nothing in the darkness but the masts of the ship, but I heard the awful cries of those who were struggling in the water or sinking to death. I suppose I had been in the water five minutes when I came near a row-boat om the Thingvalla and was picked up. The officers and crew of the Thingvalla d d every. thing that bumans could do to save the lives of those who went down with the Geiser." Other accounts corroborate the captain's statement as to the panic of the passengers and the swamping of the boats. The passengers were mostly farmers from the Northwest, who had by years of industry and economy accumulated a competence in-law, returned to their homes in Lan- land. Many were especially attracted the reality. Above the gurgling noise of the thither at this time by the great exposition at Copenhagen. Those who were saved clothing except their night wear. The panic aboard the Thingvilla when the shock occurred was almost as great as that of the Geiser, but as it was soon apparent that there was no danger of the vessel sinking immediately the officers succeeded in calming the excited people. Captain Laub's crew were under excellent discipline. A few moments later, however, when it was learned that water was pouring in at the forward bu khead; the passengers again became excited crowded around the boats. cries of the struggling people from the Geiser added to the excitement. The officers retained their composure and forced the people back from the vessel's side. The Thingvalla, after taking aboard the thirty five rescued persons, had over 590 passengers beside a crew of sixty men. She was badly disabled, and when after five hours of slow and careful sailing the Wieland was sighted, arrangements were quickly made by which every one except officers and crew were transferred to the latter steamship. Captain Laub and his crew refused to abandon the Thingvalla. though she could only make two knots an hour. She was 150 miles from Halifax when the Wieland left her. THE OCEAN HORROR.

The List of the Lost by the Geiser Catastrophe Now Piaced at 118 - The Thingvalla Reaches Halifax in Safety-Her

New York, Aug. 18.—The collision of the steamers Thingvilla and Geiser was discussed everywhere in maritime circles. The main question was as to who was to blame for the disaster. It is now certain that 118 persons perished when the Geiser went down. Here is the corrected list: Captain's Story. Total number of adult passengers 93 Passengers lost.....

000 and the loss on cargo about $120,000. The insurance is not yet fully known. The company, it is said, will, as far as in its power, indemnify the survivors.

Very few of those lost belonged in this city or vicinity; nearly all the passengers were from the West. Fortytwo tickets were issued by A.

Mortensen & Co., agents at Chicago, and the holders of six of these were saved. Fifteen tickets were issued by A. E. Johnson & Co., agents at St. Paul, Minn., of whom three were saved. Two were issued by Sven A. Hansa, agent at Worcester, Mass., both of whom were lost. One was issued by E. Wennstrom, agent at Philadelphia, and he was saved. Thirty-three tickets were issued at the New York office, of whom three were saved. THE THINGVALLA ARRIVES.

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 18.—The steamer Thingvalla, which collided with and sunk the steamer Geiser with such an appalling loss of life, arrived here yesterday. She presents a strange spectacle with nearly the whole of her bow torn away, leaving an immense hole exposed to view. No persons were allowed on board. Captain Lamb, of the Thingvalla, has imposed silence upon his seamen as to the disaster, but has himself prepared a statement of the details of the collision as he knew and saw. This is the captain's story: "I was in bed on the morning of the 14th.

The second officer relieved the first officer on the bridge at 4 o'clock in the morning. At 4:30 I was awakened by hearing the second officer 'Port helm!' A moment later the shout out: telegraph bell rang to reverse engines. I jumped out of bed and rushed on deck in my night-clothes. Just as I arrived on deck there was a tremendous crash. We had collided with a large steamer and struck her amidships just below the mainmast. For a moment all was confusion and there were loud shricks from ran aft and ordered my crew to pre pare boats for launching. By the time I returned to the bridge we had disentangled ourselves from the strange ship. found on the bridge the second officer of the vessel we had collided with. From him I learned that she was our sister ship, the Geiser, Captain Moller. The Thingvalla had cut into the Geiser clean to the mate's state-room That officer was asleep at the time. He rolled out of h.s bunk and grasped the chains of our anchor. My first duty was to look after my ship and qu'et my passengers. This I did. Daylight was just breaking, and there was no fog, but it was hazy and there was a slight "I went forward to see what damage we had sustained and set the pumps working. Very shortly after the collision the Geiser sank. I can't tell how long after, but it was within ten minutes. One of our boats was affoat when she went down. The Geiser had three boats out. She seemed to break into two and went down stern first with fearful suction. Her boats were doubtless all capsized by the suction. The scenes at that moment were indescr.bable. I have read thrilling romances of great disasters at sea, but nothing and were going on a visit to their native | I ever read can compare for a moment with suction rose the shrieks of 150 drown ing net and women. Oh, it was terrible lest all their effects, and even all their I can hear their dying shouts at this moment, and shall never forget the scene to my dying day, but it only lasted two minutes. The wildest cries for life began as the Geiser commenced to sink. Her living freight were draws down by her and the last cries died away as she disappeared from view. The final scene only lasted two minutes, then the carnival of death wifs succeeded by an appalling silence.

"By this time our four boats were launched. The passengers and crew of the ill-fated suip came to the surface; we picked them up until fifteen of them were rescued and taken aboard the Thingvalla. We provided them with clothes and hot drinks. They were mostly all in their night-clothes, and many of them were exhausted. Meanwhite our beats were still cruis ng among the wreckage in the hope of saving even one more human life, but the rest had all been drowned. We only found the floating corpse of one wo nan. Our own passengers and crew behaved well. Some of the survivors had thrilling escapes. The first, second and third engineers were all together on a l fe raft. The third engineer had his arm broken during the collision yet the first two men were lost and the dis-

"After the Geiser disappeared we began jettisoning the cargo to keep the Thingvalla affoat. The crew and thep ssengers worked side by side, throwing overboard what was brought out of the hold. What was jettisoned consisted solely of woodrulp and provisions. There was not much wind, but a heavy swell. Between 9 and 10 o'clock we reached the forward ! ulkhead. Then we stopped throwing the cargo over and got to work shoring up the compartment. We were leaking badly in the fore hold, and kept the pumps going steadily, so that the water had not time to gain on us. At 11 o'clock the steamer Wieland for New York hove in sight and we transferred all the rescued passengers, as well as our own 450 passengers, to Captain Lamb does not express an opinion on the cause of the disaster, but save he will leave that to be found out by the official investigation. From h s statement, however, it would appear that the fault lay with the officers of the Geiser who put her to starboard instead of port. The Geiser s officer who was on the watch at the time of the disaster was among the lost. The Th ngvalla, after discharging her will probably require two months. She will then relead her cargo and proceed to New York. NORTHWESTERN PEOPLE LOST. ELGIN, Ill., Aug. 18 .- Among the passe gerslost off Sable Island were Mrs. John H. ohnson and infant, of this city.

queer little exclamation of mingled vexation and disappointment. A half sigh rose to her lips, and, with a slight contraction of her brow that was in reality indicative of impatience, she drew the curtain across the large square pane and walked abstractedly

Agatha West was peculiar in some ways. For a year and a half she had been on intimate terms with John Roswick, and in all that time never once had he been in her presence without feeling a deep sense of his own inferiority and dependence. Not that she was strong minded. No one would more quickly resent such an insinuation than she. True, she wore rimless eye-glasses, and at times affected a severe simplicity of dress that was decidedly becoming to her plump, brunette beauty. Nor was Roswick an effeminate creature. He was, however, a man that easily lost confidence in himself when in the presence of the opposite sex, and at such times was liable to become as awkward and helpless as a badly-jointed automaton endowed with only a monosyllabic power of speech. Roswick was a man of considerable wealth and possessed a strong love for mechanics. His life, for the past ten love, wealth and possessed a strong love for mechanics. His life, for the past ten love, were and the love regards her leading with the Society for the Prevention of subjects. The same paper continues: wealth and possessed a strong love for ears, had been spent in an elaborate workshop fitted out in the upper part of his house on Dousey street, where, day after day, and night after night, he hammered and filed and filed and hammered at some product of his handiwork. His great hobby was electricity, and with the advent of the telephone, electric lighting and kindred inventions, he became so infatuated with his chosen work that he scareely took time to eat and sleep.

It was through this devotion to his studies thathe become acquainted with Agatha West. Just bow this was brought about need not be detailed here, but suffice it to say that before the summer was gone his work began to be neglected, and his affections were. in part, transferred to the more complex and hopelessly confusing study of womankind.

Agotha was consumed by mighty aspirations when she left Wellesley. Her horizon was boundless. In the valedictory, which it was her honor to deliver, she advanced the customary platitudes regarding "the dawning life, adown whose shadowy vista we are now about to make tracks," or words to similar purport. In common with the multitudes of ladies who each year blossom simultaneously with the June roses into "the stern realities of life," as they are pleased to term it, Agatha was filled with the vague idea that she had a "mission;" that henceforth this old world, largely through her influence, was to run on different principles. With each succeeding year, however, this inner consciousness slowly died the death of inanition. until now, at twenty-six, little remained but a mild interest in the arts and sciences fostered by her intimate associations with John Roswick. To tell the truth, that evening was the third consecutive time Roswick had called on Miss West with the premeditated intention of declaring his affection and asking her to be his wife. For the third time he had failed ignominiously. How he had managed finally to bid her good-night he had not the remotest idea. A dozen times during the evening had the all-important declaration of love risen to his lips, and a dozen times had that dreadful choking embarrassment effectually silenced his intended utterance. On common-place topics he had managed to acquit himself fairly well, but with an air of abstraction that necessitated frequent apologies to the object of his blind worship.

And then Roswick's mind skipped gayly from one point to another as he formulated in his own way the conversation leading up to the allimportant question. He even went so far as to act it all out. How he should stand at such a moment, with bent head, waiting for her reply. He would go on thus and thus until, having in his lively imagination heard all she said, as he paused at different times, he would eventually throw one arm around her trim waist as he made the

The next evening he was unexpectedly called to the upper end of the city, and it was not until the following night that he once more found himself tete-a-tete with Agatha. Outwardly by electricity. he was quite self-possessed, but alas! the trepidation of his heart. It thumped away at such a rate that his power of speech seemed in danger of forsaking him at any moment.

Agatha, tantalizingly collected, sat she began, interrogatively, "that you were a great admirer of Ruskin?"

"Yes-that is, his 'Stones of Venice.' you know. Such works interest me greatly. By the way," and the very thought that he was about to begin the consummation of his plan caused his tongue to halt, "by the way, I want-I mean I would like to know more fully your theory in regard to sewer gas how to combat it, you know. I missed your last paper in the Architect's Assistant on the subject." This was a long speech for John, and he was a trifle flushed as he paused.

"It is very kind in you to ask my opinion," Agatha said, sweetly, "but I prefer to let you read it for yourself. I

Although Agatha was secretly proud of the fact that her dabbling in such topics had attracted some attention, she did not care to discuss these problems at this time. It was, therefore, with a touch of cool formality that she added: "I was not aware that you were interested in architecture, Mr. Roswick." "Oh, but I am!" he exclaimed, enthusiastically. "I have just let the contracts for a row of flats in Acton Square."

"Indeed? What a charming location!"

"I'm glad you like it."

This was spoken before he realized it. Now was his chance. The cognizance of the critical moment at once paralyzed his power of speech. Agatha, with eyes modestly downcast, was toying aimlessly with the various and seemed to offer as much encouragement as any man could ask.

"Miss West"-he began, nervously. Agatha did not look up. He could go no further. His speech absolutely failed him. It was with an inarticulate gasp that he heard what seemed to be his own voice; but oh, so much more clear and confident!

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT. Hanging Said to Produce Death Quicker

Than Electricity. At a recent meeting of the Medico-Legal Society, Dr. William A. Hammond, the eminent specialist and physiologist, discussed the subject of capital punishment by hanging and electricity. He and several of his colleagues were of the opinion that hanging was the more painless and certain of the two methods of inflicting legal death. As this State has changed its laws, substituting electricity for the classic rope, the subject was one of' great interest from a medico-legal point of view.

Their programme was: 1. Time required to produce death

How to Clean Books.

The proper way to clean books is to take two of the same size and strike their sides smartly together several times until all the dust is expeled; and not apply cloth, brush and duster, under any circumstance, to the gilt or leather. If treated this way, books will retain their original freshness for years. Books in cases without glass fronts retain their freshness longer than when put in closed cases. More dust will collect upon books exposed; but it's a dust which comes off readily. When put behind glass doors, or in cupboards, less dust settles upon them, but in localities where soft coal is used, "Dear Agatha," it continued (who it is a fine sooty dust, which, when be but a mild statement of facts. minates in a Fierce and Bloody Battle. NEW IRERIA, La., Aug. 18.-The better ment of this and neighboring parishes had found it impossible longer to tolerate a certain class of idle and immoral characters, and so had ordered them away from the various places. Many found refuge at Freetown, a small village composed entirely of negro families. There they told their stories to their friends and nursed their growing anger. On Monday last reports reached this place that the negroes were arming and congregating at Freetown. Their number was estimated at from 500 to 600 m unted men. On Tuesday they were reinforced suffi-ciently to double their number. On Thursd y matters had not improved a large number, of armed negroes quartered there. They demanded the surren der of the negroes' arms, promising that when they learned to behave themselves the arms would be returned. A great majority of them accepted the terms. The arms were loaded with ball or buckshot. Rev. H. Nora, a colored minister, left Freetown in the morning to attend a conference of ministers. During his absence his residence was taken possession of by fifteen armed negroes, who refused to surrender, returning word that they were there to be taken. The whites sent a messenger to the house, saying that they would give them twenty minutes in which to lay down their weapons. The negroes again refused. Before the time was up the door of the house was thrown open and a volley fired at them. Immediately firing became general. The door of the house was closed, but a constant fire was kept up from the windows, lasting nearly an hour. Finally E. P. Smith broke from the lines and made for the house. His comrades implored him to return, but, deaf to their entreaties, he went on to the louse. The door was forced and he fell. At his side was a comrade who had followed him on his fatal errand. When Smith fell his comrades retreated, escaping unburt. The negroes then became panic-stricken and attempted to flee the house. When the fright was over the bodies of eight negroes were found in the house and five others were found outside, It is reported that three or four more were

A Bitter Feeling Towards Her Aroused Among the Irish Because of Her Recent Contribution to the Constabulary

LONDON, Aug. 17 .- Many are the com nents that followed the Queen's act of contributing £50 to the Irish Constabulary fund. The Liberal journals deprecate the gift and consider that it will have a bad effect upon the Irish in general, as it accentuates in a disagreeable manner where the Queen's sympathies are placed. It also contrasts, in an unpleasant manner, her feelings toward a people who would be loyal to her if they could, and the very different feelings she entertains for the men who hound the Irish peasants from their homes and living. The Irish Nationalist journals take up the subject and comment upon it with extreme bitterness. One says that the fact in ttself would be as insignificant as the sum, were it not for the unmistakable indication that the gift affords of the amount of affection with which the Queen regards her Irish

Other papers declare that the Irish only need the love and sympathy which the Queen has willingly bestowed upon other parts of her kingdom to make them the most loyal of her subjects. A Terrific Storm Sweeps Over a Part of Canada-Many Lives Lost and Hundreds of Head of Live Stock Killed-The Damage Estimated at $1,500,000,

MONTREAL, Can., Aug. 18 .- A thunderstorm that passed over Eastern Ontario and the whole of Quebec Thursday night destroyed hundreds of houses and barns. Horses and cattle by the hundred have been killed and many people are lost. At a small village called St. Louis, De Gonzague, Captain Louis Sauve, his wife and son were killed instantly. A laborer, name unknown, on the Sauve farm, was also killed by a bolt that struck the barn half an hour after the house was struck. At St. Ignace George S. Lorimer was killed by a tree which had been struck by lightning alling upon him. In St. Hyacinthe the son of the proprietor of a small hotel was killed while closing the window of his room. A report comes from Chaudiere that two lumbermen were swept over the falls while they were crossing the river. Lightning struck their canoe and they were swept to death in the raging river. The hotel at Smith's Falls was set on fire, and it is reported that the wife of the proprietor died from fright. From all over Quebec come reports of houses being set on fire and whole families destitute, and at a small place called L'Original the parish church was struck by lightning. The place was full of people at the time-10 p. m.-praying for protection from the storm. A panic ensued, and many people were seriously injured by being trampled upon. It is estimated that the damage done by the storm 500,000. Later reports have just come in from Valley Field, Beauharnois County, stating that five men have been killed by lightning in that vicinity. This treachery was due to a desired for revenge upon the Emperor for killing the delegates sent by the insurgents t treat for peace, and for whom the Empero had promised a safe conduct.

So LITTLE is known of the personal or private history of Mollere that any detail now discovered attracts attention in French how discovered attracts attention in French literary society. There has recently been found at Fontainebleau a contract of sale signed by Moliere's father, Jean Poquellin—the name so spelled. It is dated May 29, 1631 (when Moliere was a little over nine years of age), and it has to do with the supply of furniture for the royal troops.

It consists of love songs of the fourteenth century, and there are 420 pages of parchment, richly ornamented, and containing 7,000 verses, by 140 poets. It was placed in the Bibliotheca Palatina, at Heidelberg, in 1607, having been purchased from a Swiss baron of Hohn-Sax, and was taken away by the French during the thirty years' war, and now, after the lapse of two centuries and a half, it has been recovered.

Them beautiful golden gates, Them beautiful golden gates. The time will come when you and all Will enter the golden gate. The friends that are waiting there below, In brightness or in sorrow, Shall surely see the triends they loved, That have left them long ago. Them beautiful golden gates, Them beautiful golden gates.

The dark clouds that are o'er you there Shall pass away to briglitness, And there you will see the friends you have loved That are waiting over yonder, And close beside them golden gates They will kindly bid you enter, And never shall there darkness come,

To shed its shadows o'er you. Them beautiful golden gates, Them beautiful golden gates.

There is many a friend that is waiting there That will kindly bid you enter, They have shared your grief and sorrow

there, In that dark world below, But all the sorrow and the care That you have now, and trouble, Will all be over, and glory then Shall shine on you for ever.

> Them beautiful golden gates, Them beautiful golden gates.

SUNG BY PHEBE FISK THROUGH EDNA FISK. To my mother here below, And a word to loving father Who has loved his children so. Now my dying days are over And I would not now come back To that dark and dreary world below. And my gentle loving sister

That I have left there now to mourn, And the kind and loving brothers That I soon shall meet above, In the bright and glorious Sunshine over here.
