Cashmere,
Broadcloths,
Assabet Suitings,
French Suitings,
Fouila Silks, etc.

Elegant line of Plushes and Braids. New Buttons, Kid Gloves, Ribbons, Hosiery, Gloves
and Underwear.

Our Cloak Department is fine this fall,
and should not be passed by purchasers.

Our Clothing and Shoe Departments are full of New Goods.

We think we are showing the best selected fall stock in this county, and you are invited to come and see us.

Respectfully,

KEMPFF & SCHENK.

HOAG'S BAZAAR.

Have you been in to see us this fall? We are loaded with choice new goods at rock bottom prices.

We can offer you no better argument why you should get our prices and see our goods than this: I have personally visited, and selected from the very best houses in this country, the most desirable stock of Lamps, Crockery, Glassware, House Furnishing Goods and Stoves, that can possibly be secured for spot cash, and have positively marked these goods to be sold at Bottom Prices.

It is our constant aim to add to our stock any new and desirable production that is offered, as in our stock of Wood and Willow Ware you will find many useful articles at a low price.
We have an Indian Hamper for soiled clothes that every housekeeper can at once see the value of. A folding Ironing Board that is extremely useful. A Flower Pot Stand, something nice for the winter season. Our Folding Tub and Wringer Stand is very convenient. The number of small and useful articles in this line is so large that we can only price you a few articles, that you may have some idea
that we are selling goods cheap.

3 dozen clothes pins, 5c
A good broom, 15c
Corn poppers, 15c
Cake turners, 5-10c

Crockery and Glassware.

We have said so much about these goods and still there remains much that could be said.
The fact is we are just loaded with choice novelties in China, Glass and Decorated Ware. Our Lamp assortment is by far the best we have ever shown, and prices away down this year.

Do not fail to see us before buying.

In Table Cutlery, Agate and Granite Tea and Coffee Pots, we have a very large assortment, from the very cheapest to the very best. What better or more useful gift can one make?

Tin Toilet Sets, Chamber
Pails, Bath Tubs, Cuspidors,
etc., in Japaned goods.

Jas. S. Gorman has been renominated
by the democrats for the office of State Senator in this district, comprising the counties of Monroe and Washtenaw. Mr.
Gorman served acceptably in the last legislature, and if we must have a democrat to represent us in that body, he can certainly do it creditably.—Courier.

Them's our sentiments too.

The "latest" in head dress is to bunch the hair on the back of the neck so that it will look as if it had not been combed in six months. The absurdity is offset among the men by wearing a table spread for a necktie and adding to the slovenly appearance by having three buttons sewed on the outside of the pantaloons legs at the bottom.—Ex.

It is well to know that there is an etiquette in regard to sofas and divans.
They are primarily for ladies, and no gentleman should occupy one while ladies are seated in chairs. Neither should a gentleman take a seat beside a lady unless asked to do so. The polite thing for a man to do is to take a chair near the sofa or stand while talking to the ladies who occupy it.

A man living in this county who owes over two years' subscription, put his paper back in the office last week marked "refused." We have heard of many mean men—there is a man who used the word on his neck for a collar button, the one who pastured a goat on his grandmother's grave, and the fellow who got rich by giving his children a nickel each to go to bed without their supper, and then stealing the nickel after the children were asleep, but for pure downright cussedness
the man who will take a paper two years, or any length of time, mark it "refused," and then stick it back in the postoffice, is entitled to the premium.

Obituary.

Darwin Downer was born at Manchester, Ontario Co., N. Y., Nov. 4th 1814. He came with his fathers family to Michigan in the spring of 1834, and located in Lima. He was married in February 1843 to Rebecca Randall, also of Lima, by Nathan Pierce, Esq., long since deceased, and in 1853 they settled on the farm which has been their home ever since.

To them were born six children, three of which survive him. Eleven years ago his health failed, and he grew worse until for several years he has been a helpless invalid. He bore his severe suffering with the utmost patience up to the last days of his stay on earth. His son and daughters were with him in his last illness, and his wife, who has faithfully cared for him these many years.

He was a loving father and a kind husband. On the 12th day of October, inst., just as the day was darkening into night, calmly and peacefully his spirit passed away.
His funeral was held at the Congregational church last Sunday at 2 o'clock p. m., and he was followed to his last resting place by a long procession of old friends and neighbors.

"Oh, teach us from our hearts to say,
Thy will be done."

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE

FOR SALE BY

Geo. F. Glazier's Loan and Real Estate
Agency, Chelsea, Mich.

Farm No. 1—270 acres, located 2 miles south of Franciscus, 5 miles west from Chelsea, 5 miles east of Grass Lake, adjoining Michael Schenk's farm on the south, known as the Wales Riggs farm. One of the best soil farms in Michigan. There is a comfortable frame house, a large frame barn 114 feet long, 2 small barns, 2 good wells of water, wind mill, corn house, hennery and tool house, orchard and a fine vineyard of one acre. 180 acres of land fit for the plow, besides ample woodland. In all it is one of the best grain and stock farms in Michigan to make money from.

Farm No. 38—Consisting of four separate 40 acre tracts of Beech and Maple timber land, in Cheboygan county, Michigan, near Surgeon River. Price $12.50 per acre. The owner will accept in part payment, good property in southern Michigan. A good chance to trade for desirable farm land.

Farm No. 5—236 acres, located 2 1/2 miles
from Chelsea, on prominent road, in good neighborhood, near church and school house and blacksmith shop. 175 acres of plow land, 25 acres of timber, 20 acres good mowing marsh, 16 acres of low pasture with living stream of water through it. The northwest corner of this farm is the highest, gently sloping to southeast, protecting wheat from winter winds. It has a fine young orchard of grafted fruit just coming into bearing. The buildings are unusually good, consisting of a frame dwelling house, upright and wing each 18x26, two stories, kitchen 15x18, wood shed 15x20. A fine basement barn 26x80 with gambrel roof, built in 1885, also hog house and kettle room, corn crib, carriage house and workshop attached, hen house 16x20, tool shed, and a good well.
Sandy loam about buildings but most of farm is a clay loam and is a superior grain and stock farm in excellent condition. The owner was offered four years ago, $70 per acre, but will now sell at a sacrifice that he may remove to California. Price, $60 per acre.

The longest through-car service of any railroad line in the world is said to be on the Southern Pacific road, between New Orleans and San Francisco, 2,495 miles. The fastest through train on this road is timed at 113 hours 25 minutes, or at the rate of twenty-two miles an hour.

CAPTAIN DEAKEN, of the steamer City of Alexandria, reports that after the recent hurricane in the tropics a new island appeared on the south side of Blanquilla reef, latitude 19 deg. 6 min. north, longitude 96 deg. 5 min. west. The island is seventy-six metres long and ten wide, and rises about four feet above sea level. The sudden appearance of this island was most probably due to elevation of the sea bed by plutonic and cyclonic forces.

DURING the eight months ended with August there came to the United States, $2,437, immigrants, or about 30,000 more than in the first eight months of last year. While England and Wales sent us 2,000 less than last year and Ireland only 700 more, Scotland sent 2,100 more. The Germans were slightly less, but in all other nationalities there was an increase. Of the total every 100 was made up substantially as follows: British, 31; German, 19; Bohemian, Austrian, Hungarian, Polish and Russian, 18; Scandinavian, 15; Italian, 10; other countries, 7.

Mrs. RUTH HULL, of Wallingford, Conn., whose greatest wish was to be buried in a coffin made from the cradle in which she was rocked when a babe, died recently at the age of seventy-four years. The coffin was made from the cradle two weeks before and taken to her residence while she was confined to her bed. Since then she had it kept in her room. She seemed to take much pleasure in it. It was her idea to have the coffin made a number of years ago and use it as a lounge. Her dying wish was that no funeral services be held nor any minister attend.

The New York Sun wishes that it knew the name and address of a certain young girl in Mississippi, for they ought to be known. Someone gave her five cents. With it she bought a yard of calico and made it into a sun-bonnet, which she sold for forty cents. She invested the forty cents in calico, made more bonnets, sold them, reinvested, made other garments, and pretty soon had ten dollars. She put this money into potatoes, planted them, paid for the cultivation, harvesting and marketing of her crop, and made a clear profit of forty dollars.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Result of Planting Whitefish.

George D. Mussey, secretary of the State Fish Commission, returned to Detroit recently from a two weeks' tour of inspection around the State. He visited all the prominent fishing stations on Lake Huron and Lake Michigan, the object of his visit being to ascertain the effect of the years' planting of whitefish in the large lakes. Mr. Mussey said that all the fishermen he had talked with heartily endorsed the planting by the State Board, and many assured him that had it not been for the planting of the whitefish in the various localities at present would amount to nothing. He said the result of his investigation was that the planting of whitefish fry had had the effect of saving the whitefish industry at many important points.

Good Time to Sell.

A Tuscola County farmer stated a few days ago that he knew of a number of farmers in that county who had in their granaries the yield from their wheat fields for the past five years, some having as much as five thousand bushels. Another farmer stated that he had a number of wheat growers in Frankenthum who had done the same thing. These men are all wealthy, and not being pushed for money, preferred to keep the wheat rather than to sell it at the prices that have prevailed for several years. They will now, doubtless, sell as soon as they believe the boom has reached the highest point.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the State Board of Health by fifty six observers in different parts of the State for the week ended on the 6th indicated typho-malarial fever, intermittent fever, bronchitis, erysipelas and inflammation of the brain increased, and dysentery, remittent fever, consumption of the lungs and diphtheria decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at eleven places, scarlet fever at fourteen, typhoid fever at twenty-two and measles at three places.

A Gas Well Abandoned.

After long and persistent but futile efforts to recover the several hundred dollar worth of tools at the bottom of the Coldwater gas well, the project has been abandoned so far as gas is concerned, but $300 has been raised to case the hole and plug it just below where a vein of mineral water was struck in boring. Experts have pronounced it a water greatly superior to the water of the Lake Michigan, and will probably be built to utilize it. The well cost about $6,000.

Smothered to Death.

Katie Phillips, the twelve-year-old daughter of George Phillips, an engineer at Detroit's electric car plant, was playing around a scute used for unloading grain from cars a few mornings ago, when she made a mistake and fell in, and was smothered to death before she could be released from under the grain.

An Imposter Arrested.

A young man representing himself to be a son of Fred B. Riker, the millionaire pork packer of Fort Wayne, Ind., was arrested at Detroit the other morning for obtaining money under false pretenses. A dispatch from Mr. Riker said: "He is an imposter and should be prosecuted."

John Harris committed suicide at Ishpeming recently because of an incurable disease.

AT AN END.

Termination of the Street-Car Strike at Chicago—Both Employer and Employee Make Concessions—How the Affair Was Settled.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—The street-car strike is over. After a conference between President Yerkes and the strikers' committee, which lasted from 10 o'clock yesterday morning until seven o'clock in the afternoon, a compromise was agreed upon, and this morning all the cars on the West and North sides will be running with their old crews in all probability.

After fruitless negotiations on Saturday afternoon and evening it was thought that the all-night meeting of the men would decide to resume the strike early this morning without waiting to hear from President Yerkes at 10 o'clock, at which hour he had agreed to give his final answer. The men were disposed to regard the frequent postponements as a device on the part of the company to gain time, and when the meeting opened at midnight there was a practical unanimity of sentiment that no cars should be run to-day until the answer of the company should be received.

All the speeches tended in that direction, and had it not been for the efforts of the Citizens' Committee, who were present, and who were sustained by the letter from Mayor Roche requesting the men to remain at work until President Yerkes had given his final decision, it is probable that yesterday's negotiations would have terminated, if not, indeed, they had been held at all.

These conservative counsels prevailed, however, and at 10 o'clock, when the Executive Committee called upon Mr. Yerkes, all the West side cars were running as usual. As President Yerkes had made the first proposition Saturday the men opened the negotiations yesterday. They offered, on behalf of the North side men, to resume work at an advance of 8 per cent, the "set car" system to be abolished and the pay to be by the hour instead of by the trip as heretofore. Mr. Yerkes, on his part, offered to advance the rate of 4 per cent. Then the men offered to "split" the difference and accept 6 per cent. Mr. Yerkes promptly offered to give 5 per cent. Then there was a long and animated discussion, which terminated in Mr. Yerkes accepting 6 per cent. advance. As there was no friction between the men in ascertaining just what the 6 per cent. rate should be, owing to the changes from the system of paying by the trip to that of payment by the hour, Mr. Lyman J. Gago was mutually agreed upon as an arbitrator to fix the rate per hour to be paid on the different kinds of cars. In addition to the advance in wages the men were to be guaranteed ten hours work per day.

On the side of the company Mr. Yerkes reserved the right to retain all the new men he had hired for the North side lines. They will, however, be placed on one of the minor routes by themselves, so that there will be no friction between them and the returning strikers, all of whom will get their old places with the exception of a few who made themselves conspicuous by stoning the cars and creating disturbances.

At the termination of the conference the strikers committee issued an order to the men to report for duty as usual to-morrow morning, and President Yerkes ordered the North side cars, which were being run by imported men under police protection, to be returned to the

THEY ARE SEVEN.

"How many roses are there, dear?"
I asked a little maid.
"Seven," she answered, counting them
With eyes downcast and staid.
"Why, no, dear; one has fallen down
Here on the shelf, you see;
And standing in the pretty vase
Together there are three.
"The other three are in the glass,
Only collected there."
She looked and nodded in assent,
That little maiden fair.
"There is the vase, one fallen down,
And in the mirror three;
Add them together, sweetie dear;
There will be seven, you see."
I took the vase down from the shelf.
"Now, Annie, come, look here;
Only four roses with them all Together—that is clear."
And, after all, is she not right?
It's just the point of view;
A grateful heart knows how to make
One blossom seem like two.

OLD CORBIN.

A Tragic Story of Early Days
in Hoosierdom.

[Written for This Paper.]

N the bluffs that towered high above the turbulent, but yet romantic Wild-Cat, stood old Corbin's cabin. For miles around it was a landmark; not because it was a conspicuous object, but because of the mystery which enshrouded it and its eccentric owner. For old Corbin was a mystery, and therefore a character the discussion of which was always a ready and interesting topic among the country folks far and near; of these there were, among the older people, those who had known old Corbin for twenty years, and yet they really knew no more about him than did the most recent newcomer in the neighborhood. Some twenty years had he lived alone in the little cabin on the bluffs. Indeed, he was one of the pioneer settlers of the locality; for when he had first come to the settlement, the whole country was an almost unbroken forest; here and there, at intervals of several miles, stood the cabins of a few hardy settlers who had migrated to the then new State, the far West of those days, and among these was Corbin, then a man of middle age, and in strength and physical vigor a magnificent specimen of manhood.

On his arrival he had at once entered a claim for a quarter section of land extending along the creek bluffs, and building his little cabin set about clearing up a patch of ground immediately adjoining. This was accomplished in a year or two, and with it ended all his efforts towards making a farm. He, however, was no idler; and when not engaged in working his little truck-patch was busy with his traps, and with gun and dogs, roamed the woods in search of game. And so the years went by; the country settling up until cultivated farms surrounded Corbin on every side.

He had closer neighbors and more of them, but beyond exchanging the barest civilities when he met them old Corbin went on his way and about his own affairs in a manner that plainly showed he wanted to be let alone.

Naturally enough such conduct excited the wonder of the settlers, and in time, their distrust and suspicion. With them, for a man to be so unsocial was of itself a crime, and as old Corbin steadily refused their advances to be friendly and neighborly, their suspicions soon became settled into convictions that there was something wrong with him. To this general impression there was one single exception. Uncle Archibald Wilson always had a good word to say for old Corbin. Uncle Archie, as he was called, was one of those kind-hearted old men who never speak of any one. He seemed to be always full of sympathy for any of his fellow-creatures when ill was spoken of in his presence. He used to frankly admit that he knew no more of Corbin's history than did any of his neighbors. "But," he would say, "it's plain to my mind that he's had trouble on a heap of it; so don't let's be too harsh on him. He ain't done any of us any harm; nor ain't likely to; an' not knowing why he don't want to be sociable an' friendly, we've no right to judge him as a bad man."

But one day there came a sensation to the community. Old Corbin was dead. A party of hunters had stopped at his cabin and made the horrible discovery that the old fellow had evidently been murdered. On the floor of his little cabin his body was found cold and stark and with several gnastly knife wounds in the region of the heart, any one of which would have caused death. There were also evidences of a terrible struggle having taken place; the few articles of furniture in the room showing that the two men—it was of course assumed that a man had been his assailant—had fought all over it before the fatal afay had ended.

The news was quickly circulated from neighbor to neighbor, and before the coroner, who had to be summoned from the county seat twelve miles distant, had arrived, the male population of the entire settlement were present, and in little groups sat around and discussed in subdued tones the terrible tragedy.

Various were the theories advanced to account for the crime which had evidently been committed. Some said that they had always believed old Corbin was a fugitive from justice; that he had done something for which he was in hiding, and which accounted for his strange disposition and his unsocial ways.

"Tenny rate," said old Squire Chittick, "I'll bet a ham-string that the fellow who killed old Corbin has bin a huntin' of him all these years. To my mind," the old fellow continued, as he climbed up on the top of the rail fence and seated himself as comfortably as the nature of the seat he had chosen would admit, "to my mind it's the settlin' of an old grudge; and when that's said it's all said. That's my idee."

To the little group that stood about him this view of the case seemed conclusive enough, and was received with approval. The old Squire, however, was something of a Hawkshaw in his way, besides being a man looked up to in the community, was bound to preserve the reputation he had so long held for his depth of judgment and soundness of opinion on matters generally. So, after his first views had been unhesitatingly acquiesced in, he hedged inly added: "Course he might have bin robbed—he might a had money in there," jerking his thumb over toward the cabin, "but taint hardly likely. Still, it might be. But," he added, conclusively, "its either one or t'other, an' I know it as well as if old Corbin himself had told me just how it happened."

Finally the coroner, himself a physician, arrived, and soon impeding a jury from those present, entered into an investigation of the mystery. With the meager facts bearing upon the tragedy and which have already been stated, the jury was not long in reaching the only verdict possible under the circumstances, which was that the man had been killed or came to his death by wounds inflicted by a person or persons to the jury unknown.

Uncle Archibald Wilson, by virtue of his acquaintance with the deceased, was given charge of the remains, and, with the assistance of his neighbors, had them conveyed to his own home and in due time decently interred in the neighborhood burying ground. He was also made, or appointed by the court, administrator of the estate. As the murdered man had no legal heirs in that country, it became the duty of Mr. Wilson to advertise, so as to, if possible, find any who might be living in other parts of the United States. To this end he inserted the usual notices in the leading papers, and a month or so afterward received the following letter. The epistle bore the post-mark of a small village in Western New York, and was dated July 5, 1854. It ran as follows:

"MR. WILSON—Dear Sir: I have just seen your ad in a New York paper, and replying thereto think I can give you the information you desire as to the heirs of James Corbin; and also throw some light on the mysterious manner in which he met his death. It is a long story and I must begin at the beginning."

"Thirty years ago James Corbin and myself were friends and schoolmates. His father's farm joined ours. He was an only child, while I was the youngest of a family of five. In the village where we both attended school in the winter, and where we went to church every Sabbath with our parents for years, lived Mary Dean, a beautiful girl and the only daughter of Rev. Mr. Dean, pastor of the little church where our families both worshipped. Mary, as I have said, was a beautiful girl, and as good as she was beautiful."

"James and I, both then entering upon manhood, became rivals for Mary's hand and affections. "It was not long until it became apparent that I was the favorite one, and from that time the intimacy which had existed between us from our earliest boyhood ceased. James never made any threats either toward Mary or myself. He simply cut our acquaintance, refusing to speak to either of us when chance threw us together; beyond that he showed no evidences of the hatred he bore us."

"A year later we were married, and happy in the love of one of the truest and best wives, I began life in earnest. One night (would to God I had never survived it) my wife and I were returning from her parents in the village, where we had been to spend the day, to our own home on my little farm in the neighborhood of my father's. The country was rather new, and a goodly portion of our road lay through the woods. We were driving slowly along, trusting mainly to our good horse to pilot us safely in the road, when, of a sudden, a man on horseback darted from the roadside and struck me a heavy blow on the head. I heard my poor wife scream, and that is all I remember until the next day when I came to in my father's house. And, O God, what an awakening that was!"

"I will not harrow you with the terrible details of a story which is so painful. Suffice it to say my darling wife had been murdered. Her dead body was found lying close to where I had fallen unconscious from the blow he had dealt me."

"Yes; James Corbin committed the deed. He confessed it to me that night when after nearly twenty years of searching I had found him and in his own cabin confronted him with my proofs."

"Need I say more? His parents are both dead. He has no living heirs. My wife has lain in her grave, and during all these years her innocent blood has called for vengeance. My folks have not known me nor seen me since I began my wanderings; immediately after regaining my health and recovering from the terrible shock of my poor wife's murder. I have no

"AND STRUCK ME A HEAVY BLOW."

complished my purpose, and now, having nothing more to live for as soon as I shall have posted this letter, I shall end forever all my troubles on earth. To you, then, as to a world which for me has been a most unhappy one, I say farewell.

"ROBERT WILGUS."

Mr. Wilson turned this remarkable letter over to the court, the judge of which took immediate steps to have the man apprehended and brought to justice. But he was too late. In answer to his letter directed to the county judge of the town from which the murderer of old Corbin had fled, the confession, he received a brief epistle stating that Wilgus had committed suicide some weeks before and was therefore beyond the reach or jurisdiction of all earthly courts and judges.

There is little more to add. Old Corbin's property reverted to the county in which it was situated. The farm was leased out until it was all cleared up and put in a fine state of cultivation and was then made the county poor farm. It was while I was visiting there recently that Mr. White, the superintendent, related to me the story of old Corbin's death. On my return to the county seat town I went to the court-house and searched among the old probate records until I found the final report of Archibald Wilson as administrator of the estate of James Corbin. In this was filed the strange letter already given, and which solved the mystery of old Corbin's life and death.

FRESH FASHION NOTES.

What Stylish Women Will Wear During the Coming Season.

Syrian velvet in two tones, like shot silk, is made up with faille Francaise and Victoria silk.

Tailor-made bodices, English redingotes, much cut away at the hips, over Louis XIV. waistcoats, elegantly decorated, and French polonaises, artistically draped and adjusted, divide favor almost evenly this season.

Dressy house jackets of almond-colored or Roman-red camel's hair, bordered with cashmere bands in finely wrought palm and arabesque designs in gold, silver and a mingling of bright hues, are imported. These are made to appear loose, yet are on a fitted lining with darts and side forms elegantly shaped to the figure.

Short visiting-wraps and small visiters, with cape sleeves that reach to the elbow only, are made of black Lyons velvet, rich-colored velvets, and also magnificent Oriental broche materials with gold threads interwoven. These are decorated with Persian lambkins, and also, for later wear, with many kinds of fur, with muffs and French toque to match.

The new hussar coat is very stylish, with its black silk pascamentaries flecked with gold on the jacket fabric of deep blue or Russian-green cloth. Sometimes they are decorated with aiguillettes, or tags, with gold or silver points. The peculiar style of these military coats consists in the superb fit of the shoulders, the majority of them being slightly wadded.

Among the new suitings are a number of rough shaggy tweeds, which are favored by those who like ultra-English effects in gowns. Preference, however, certainly lies on the side of fine, soft-surfaced woolsens, plain, striped and plaided. Most of the draped cloth skirts are made all in one piece, with the selvages at the belt and hem, the drapery cunningly lifted here and there to break the too great severity of style. The bodice is still like a tailor habit in appearance, being pressed and fitted to look as if molded on the figure.

Colored linen collars and cuffs of the finest quality are worn abroad with these stylish costumes, and some of the linen sets are exceeding neat and pretty. The color should be carefully selected so as to set off that of the dress, and the dainty little French "show handkerchiefs" should match the collar and cuffs in color. Trifles like these make a very great difference in the appearance, and a little attention to simple details is well repaid. The linen at the throat and wrists, the natty kerchief, the perfectly fitting glove, the carefully selected shoe and hose, all serve to stamp the wearer as a woman of culture and refinement.

THURMAN'S LETTER.

The "Old Roman" Writes His Acceptance of the Vice-Presidential Nomination—In Reply to the Address of COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 15.—Following is Judge Thurman's letter of acceptance:

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 15, 1888.—Hon. Patrick A. Collins and others, Committee—Gentlemen: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th inst., and in reply to inform you that I have accepted the nomination of the National Convention of the Democratic Party at St. Louis. When you did me the honor to call upon me at Columbus and offered me the nomination, I expressed to you my sense of obligation to the convention and stated that, although I had not been elected, I did not feel at liberty, under the circumstances, to decline it. I thought then, as I still think, that what ever could properly do to promote the re-election of President Cleveland I ought to do. His Administration had been marked by such integrity, good sense, manly courage and exalted patriotism, that I felt a great responsibility to call for his re-election. I am so strongly impressed with the belief that his re-election would powerfully tend to strengthen that feeling of fraternity among the American people that is so essential to their welfare, peace and happiness, and to the perpetuity of the Union and of our free institutions.

"I approve the platform of the St. Louis convention and I can not too strongly express my dissent from the heretical teachings of the monopolists that the welfare of a people can be promoted by a system of exorbitant taxation far in excess of the wants of the Government."

"The idea that a people can be enriched by heavy and unnecessary taxation, that a man's condition can be improved by taxing him on all his means, on all his life and children, and on all his tools and implements of industry, is an obvious absurdity."

"To all the wants of the Treasury with an surplus for which the Government has no legitimate use, and a thereby suggest that he of currency needed for their business and all wants, and to create a powerful and dangerous stimulus to extravagance and corruption of the Government, seems to me to be a policy that is in every sound principle of government and political economy."

"The necessity of reducing taxation to prevent such an accumulation of surplus revenue, and the consequent depletion of the circulating medium is so apparent that no party dares to deny it; but when we come to consider the means by which the reduction may be made we find a wide antagonism between our party and the monopolistic leaders of our political opponents."

"We seek to reduce taxes upon the necessities of life; our opponents seek to increase them. We say, give to the masses of the people cheap and good clothing, cheap blankets, cheap tools and cheap lumber. The Republicans, by their platform and their policy, support the tariff of protection to the manufacturers of the United States, and thereby prevent their obtaining these necessities at reasonable prices."

"Can an honest man doubt that if there should stand in this controversy? Can any well-informed man be deceived by the false pretense that a system so unreasonable and unjust is for the benefit of laboring men? Is it not the policy of American protection to the manufacturer of Europe; but does not every man who looks around him see and know that an immense majority of the laborers in America are engaged in what are called the protected industries? and as those who are employed in such industries, it is not undeniable that the duties proposed by the Democratic measure will be the farthest from the interests of the American and European wages, and that, therefore, if it were admitted that our workmen can be protected by tariffs against cheaper labor, we seek to make the cost of living less, and at the same time increase the share of the laboring man in the benefits of National prosperity and growth."

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant, ALFRED C. THURMAN."

THE LAST GAME PLAYED.

End of the National League Base-Ball Season—How the Clubs Stand—The Leading Batters.

The league season closed Saturday afternoon. New York has won the championship for the first time since the league was organized, and Chicago, who has taken the flag six times since '76, is a good second. The Detroit club, which took the championship last season, came fifth, and the Cleveland, the crack players of the club have, some of them, been sold to Boston, and others to Philadelphia. The eight League and the eight Association teams stand as follows:

LEAGUE.	Wins.	Losses.	Average.	AMERICAN.	Wins.	Losses.	Average.

KILLED AT CROSSINGS.

Several Lives Lost by Carelessness in Attempting to Cross Before Trains.

SANDWICH, Mass., Oct. 15.—A Boston-bound passenger train from the Cape on the Old Colony railroad struck a team near West Barnstable, containing Henry A. Cowell and wife and Howard M. Lovell and wife, all of Osterville. Cowell was instantly killed and Lovell is reported dying. The two ladies sustained severe injuries and were conveyed to Boston. It is not expected they will live. The party were on their way to attend a meeting of a Grand Army post to which the two gentlemen belonged.

New York, Oct. 15.—Two unknown men were struck and instantly killed near the foot of the crossing, Brooklyn, by a locomotive on the Manhattan Beach railroad.

Death of a Strong-Voiced Man.

CAMDEN, Me., Oct. 15.—Charles Hoal, aged 109 years, has just died at Beardsmont. Over forty years ago Hoal served in the Revolutionary war, and during the last twelve years he had not been out of the house. His long life was attributed in part to his powerful lungs, his voice being easily heard a mile.

"Q" Dynamites Indicted.

GENEVA, Ill., Oct. 15.—The six striking employees of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, who were arrested some weeks ago on the charge of plotting to destroy life and property by means of dynamite, have been indicted by the grand jury of this county.

Kansas Statistics for the Year.

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 15.—Secretary Mohler, of the Board of Agriculture, has completed his compilation of statistics showing the population and valuation of the State. It shows the population of Kansas to be 1,515,522. The value of farms is $435,220,135, a decrease of $80,780,413 over last year. The crop yield for this year is as follows: Wheat, 10,724,717 bushels; corn, 108,734,087.

Big Fire in Glasgow.

GLASGOW, Oct. 15.—A flock of seven-story buildings, on Buchanan street, were burned last night. The loss is $500,000. Four firemen were injured.

BEFORE IT IS BORN.

Some Startling Statements of General Interest.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, on being asked when the training of a child should begin, replied, "A hundred years before it is born."

Are we to infer from this that this generation is responsible for the condition of the race a hundred years from now?

Is this wonderful generation the natural result of the proper diet and medicines of a hundred years ago?

It is conceded in other lands that most of the wonderful discoveries of the world in this century have come from this country. Our ancestors were reared in log cabins, and suffered hardships and trials.

But they lived and enjoyed health to a ripe old age. The women of those days would endure hardships without apparent fatigue that would startle those of the present age.

Why was it?

One of the proprietors of the popular remedy known as Warner's safe cure, has been faithfully investigating the cause, and has called to his aid scientists as well as medical men, impressing upon them the fact that there can not be an effect without a cause.

Their investigation has disclosed the fact that in the olden times simple remedies were administered, compounded of herbs and roots, which were gathered and stored in the lofts of the log cabins, and when sickness came on, these remedies from nature's laboratory were used with the best effects.

What were these remedies? What were they used for? After untiring and diligent search they have obtained the formulas so generally used for various disorders.

Now the question is, how will the olden time preparations affect the people of this age, who have been treated, under modern medical schools and codes, with poisonous and injurious drugs. This test has been carefully pursued, until they are convinced that the preparations they now call Warner's Log Cabin remedies are what our much abused system requires.

Among them is what is known as Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla, and they frankly announce that they do not consider the sarsaparilla of so much value in itself as it is in the combination of the various ingredients which together work marvelously upon the system. They also have preparations for other diseases, such as "Warner's Log Cabin cough and consumption remedy," "Log Cabin balm and buchu remedy," "Warner's Log Cabin hair tonic." They have great confidence that they have a cure for the common diseases of catarrh, which they give the name of "Log Cabin rose cream." Also a "Log Cabin plaster," which they are confident will supplant all others, and a liver pill, to be used separately or in connection with the other remedies.

We hope that the public will not be disappointed in these remedies, but will reap a benefit from the investigations, and that the proprietors will not be endeavoring to introduce by dealers trying to substitute remedies that have been so familiar to the shelves of our druggists. This line of remedies will be used instead of others. Insist upon your druggist getting them for you if he hasn't them yet in stock, and we feel confident that these new remedies will receive approbation at our readers' hands, as the formulators have used every care in their preparation.

WARNER'S LOG CABIN REMEDIES.—"Sarsaparilla," "Cough and Consumption Remedy," "Hops and Buchu," "Extract," "Liver Pills," "Plasters," (Porous-Electrical), "Rose Cream," for Catarrh. They are, like Warner's "Tippecanoe," the simple, effective remedies of the old Log Cabin days.

They Tell Me She Is Not Dead.

When all about seemed transcendently Cheerful. And hopes brightest star most resplendently shone, I never once dreamed that a storm so fearful Had gathered to fall upon me alone.

When we parted that eve you said till the morrow, And gaily that word to myself did repeat. Alas, that it came to bring me such sorrow, And thy form so lifeless to lay at my feet.

Oh! Loved one awoken, you surely can speak One word to my heart to allay my sad fears.

She is dead they tell me, and now I must seek To cover her grave with my heart bursting tears.

Bright, beautiful girl, may Angels caress thee, And let God pour his wrath upon me alone.

In my wildest anguish I will still bless thee, And suffer in silence thy wrongs to atone.

May thy mother again as fondly meet thee, And impress on thy cheek the token of love;

As from earth thy lover will gladly greet thee, Across death's portals up to Heaven above.

They tell me that sleep is the shadow of death, That life's but a link in eternitv's chain,

That dreams are but whispers from heaven to earth, That hereafter we meet in the spirit again.

If this be but true, oh, how pleasing the thought, That our meeting shall be on a happier shore.

That in the death of the Lamb, redemptions bought, And in regions of bliss we part never more.
