The Origin of the Check Rower

The Origin of the Check Rower. A chain, stretched across the field and anchored, to operate the mechanism of a corn-planter as drawn along, is an idea that was commonly known as far back as thirty-five years ago to those giving atten-tion to planting machinery. But the exper-iments made with it did not reach beyond the simple rudinients, and without much promise of successful results, owing to the great expense of a chain suitable and other seemingly insurmountable difficulties. To the inventor of the Haworth Check-Rower, however, is due the credit of combining the elements that constitute the completed and pract cal machine which has been of such inestimable benefit to the corn producer of the Week. he West the West. Geo. D. Haworth began experiments in the spring of 1867 with the idea of making a check-row attachment for the corn-planter then in general use, first trying iron wire for a check-line, jointed together so as to form knots at the proper intervals and run at the side of the machine. A movement to throw the slide-bar of the planter back and forth by the direct force of the check-line being necessary for an attachment the one first

After the trial of various plans, that embodied in the Haworth Check-Rower as now made was adopted as the best, and time has verified the correctness of that conclusion. When Bessemer Steel wire became avail-able as a cheap and durable material it was substituted in place of rope. This maciline is innegualled in its perfect adaptation to the use of a wire cheek fine. Mr. Haworth was the first to devise the means whereby a forward and re-usn move-ment was given to the dropper slides by the direct force of the knotted check line. The entirely eradicated fr

Planter, manufactured by Haworth & Sons, Decatür, Ill., are the outgrowth of thirty-five years experience in the invention, man-ufacture, introduction and use of planting machinery:
