HOAG & HOLMES.

Here and There.

Business is booming in all trades. Was it cold enough for you Sunday? Julius Klein is attending school at Ann Arbor.
Mr. Frank Brodick, of Jackson, was in town Sunday.
The monthly school report will be found in this issue.
Mr. Fred Freer, of Detroit, spent Sunday and Monday in town.
Judging from Glazier's prices, we should say the sugar trust had busted.
Wm. Dancer and wife, of Lima, left last Monday for Kingman, Kan.
Mr. Samuel Laird, principal of the East Tawas union schools, is in town.
Tommy McNamara attended the Stockbridge and Brighton fairs last week.
An unusually large quantity of apples are being secured by our apple buyers.
Mr. Thos. Speer, who has been in Detroit for some time, returned home Saturday.
F. S. Buckley, D. D. S., has had a handsome sign put up in front of his office.
Miss Amelia Girbach has accepted a position as clerk in Hoag & Holmes' bazaar.
The Whitney Family showed to a small audience here Monday, owing to the cold weather.
Mr. Hiram Lighthall erected a windmill for Mr. H. Pierce, south of town, last week.
Emanuel Jedele and wife, of Dexter, accompanied the Knight Templars to Washington.
Mr. Lorenzo Sawyer, who lives north of Chelsea, had a stack of straw consumed by fire Saturday.
Mrs. J. H. Osborne, of Bloom, Ill., visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Noyes, this week.
Hon. Ruben Kempf is dealing out the cash at the bank this week, while Mr. J. A. Palmer is in Washington.
Mr. A. Steger has had his stone building repaired, and is making preparations for his usual winter business.
Dr. Schmidt has rented rooms in the new Knapp & Hindelang building and will soon move his office there.
The M. C. R. R. Co. have erected a new semaphore east of the depot, which is much higher than the old one.
John Ryan and Otto Durlach, of the famous Lyndon sheep stealing case, plead guilty, and were fined $300 each.
More apples have been bought here this year than ever before. Up to Saturday night J. B. Beisel had sold 8,000 barrels.
D. C. McLaren is building a large barn on his farm in Lima, to replace the one consumed by fire last summer. Geo. Beckwith is the builder.
Died, Tuesday, Oct. 8th, 1889, Mrs. C. S. Laird, aged about 78 years. The funeral was held at 10 a. m. Thursday, and was largely attended.
J. M. Preston, of East Chatham, N. Y., has been in this vicinity for the past week, and has bought a car of "store" sheep which he will ship home.
Sir Knights A. F. Freeman and Frank Spaffard, together with their wives, of Manchester, are attending the Triennial Conclave at Washington this week.
Geo. P. Glazier, S. G. Ives, John R. Gates and Thos. Sears, left last Monday for Arkansas City, on a pleasure trip. They expect to be absent about ten days.
The Y. P. S. C. E., of the Congregational church, will hold a fair in the town hall, Dec. 4th and 5th, 1889, the object of which is to lessen the debt on the Parsonage.
The Grass Lake News entered upon its eleventh year last week. The News is one of the brightest, newest, local papers that comes to our desk. Success Bro. Carlton.
Maroney & VanRiper arrived home Friday evening from New York City, and report a very successful trip, selling their car of poultry the same day they arrived in the city.
The following Sir Knights, of Chelsea, are attending the Triennial Conclave at Washington this week: R. S. Armstrong, C. T. Conklin, W. J. Knapp, J. A. Palmer and Lathen Miller.
Maroney & VanRiper are building a store house on Railroad street for storing and dressing poultry in. They have also had their wagon repainted in fine style, and will commence business next week. Success boys.
The front elevation of the new stores being built by Messrs. Staffan and Wilkinson on the corner of Main and Park streets, is similar to the front of the Knapp & Hindelang and Sherry block just completed.
The old hotel on Jackson street is being repaired. Matt. Schwikierath has the contract for doing the carpenter work, and Frank Staffan has the contract for doing the plastering. When completed it will be used as a dwelling house.
The engine house is being remodeled this week. Doors are being cut on the west side, a tank is being placed overhead, and the room which contains the engines is being sheeted inside. A store will be placed in this room, and kept heated all winter.

Apples are very fair in quality this year.
Paring bees are very popular over in Sharon now.
Rain is badly needed, for but little wheat is up yet.
You can read the book of Nature now for autumn turns the leaves.
Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hawley attended the fair at Stockbridge last week.
Drs. Schmidt and Bush attended the Stockbridge fair one day last week.
Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Gorton, of Waterloo, left last week for Los Angeles, Cal.
Will Conlin leaves for Ann Arbor next Monday, where he has accepted a position with Bach & Abel of that city.
Miss Minnie Howe and Miss Fanny Hinkley leave next week for Traverse City, where they will open dressmaking rooms.
Lansing dudes are alleged to get stupidly drunk on chloroform. The story is too thin. They are stupid without the chloroform.
Mr. Hugh Sherry places his card in the HERALD this week, and invites you to visit his new store. He has a fine line of goods, and it will be worth your time to inspect them.
C. G. Lehman, of Sharon, was coming to town Wednesday with a load of apples, and when near the Baptist church on Main street he had occasion to leave his team a few minutes, when they ran down Main and were stopped at Glazier's corner, with but slight damage being done.

Roll of Honor of the Chelsea Union Schools.

The following is the roll of honor in the different departments for the month ending Sept. 27th, 1889. It includes all those whose average standing in scholarship, attendance and deportment is 90 or above. The star indicates that the pupil has neither been absent nor tardy.

VALUABLE REAL ESTATE

FOR SALE BY

Geo. P. Glazier's Loan and Real Estate Agency, Chelsea, Mich.

Farm No. 1—270 acres, located 2 miles south of Frimison, 6 miles west from Chelsea, 5 miles east of Grass Lake, adjoining Michael Schenk's farm on the south, known as the Wals' Ridges farm. One of the best soil farms in Michigan. There is a comfortable frame house, a large frame barn 114 feet long, 2 small barns, 2 good wells of water, wind mill, corn house, henry and tool house, orchard and a fine vineyard of one acre, 180 acres of land fit for the plow, besides applewoodland. In all it is one of the best grain and stock farms in Michigan to make money from.

Farm No. 15—103 68-100 acres, situated 3 miles from Chelsea, near school, on good road, and in an excellent neighborhood of Eastern people. There is a frame dwelling house of 20 rooms (large and small), a frame barn 28x36, also a stock barn 100 feet long, wagon house 20x30, brick smoke house and fruit dryer, 2 good wells of excellent water, medium sized orchard, 90 acres of plow land, remainder good timber land. No waste land whatever. This is a superior located farm, under high state of cultivation. The owner desires to retire from active work and will sell for $35 per acre.

Farm No. 22—280 acres, 5 miles from Chelsea and 5 miles from Dexter. Large frame house near school house, barn 40x30 also one 30x20, 2 sheds 20x30 each, two wells, a windmill, conducting water into house and barn, orchard with plenty of small fruits, and other improvements, 180 acres of plow land, 30 acres of timber and 20 acres of marsh. Soil, gravel and sandy loam. Very productive. A farm to make money both in cropping and as an investment.

Farm No. 38—Consisting of four separate 40 acre tracts, of Beech and Maple timber land, in Cheboygan county, Michigan, near Sturgeon River. Price $15.50 per acre. The owner will accept in part payment, good property in southern Michigan. A good chance to trade for desirable farm land.

INTERESTING NEWS COMPILATION.

FROM WASHINGTON.

DURING the last fiscal year 520 steamers and 193 sailing vessels reached Mexican ports from the United States. This represents a fair amount of trade between the two countries.

MR. EDISON says that "in a few years the world will be just like one big ear; it will be unsafe to speak in a house until one has examined the walls and furniture for concealed phonographs."

ELECTRICITY has been put to driving drills. One is in use on the warship Maine, building at the Brooklyn navy yard. A three-quarter inch hole in a three-quarter inch plate can be drilled in less than a minute. But beware of the current.

THE recent order of the Secretary of the Navy directing that a bank account be opened for all enlisted men by navy paymasters, and granting interest at 4 per cent. per annum, is looked upon by navy officers as promising good results.

THE mackerel catch is almost a failure this year—10,000 barrels against 26,511 last year and 56,919 in 1887. That row with Canada over the fisheries seems to have frightened the mackerel out into deep water where they can't be caught.

MRS. AMANDA NEDSON WILLIAMS, the last of the Pequot race, is dead. She has been living on the reservation set apart by the State of Connecticut for the Mohegan and Pequot Indians for many years, and was the only full-blooded one on it.

THE new Inter-State Commerce Commissioner from Vermont has already achieved fame, after the Lord Byron method. He has had his name spelled three or four ways in the newspapers. The latest and most correct way, we believe, is Yeazey.

A man named William J. Haines, one hundred and two years old, has just been converted and has joined a Methodist church in St. Louis. He says he was never sick a day in his life. He was an orderly on General Jackson's staff in the war of 1812.

THE only pensioner on the State of Missouri is Charles Tarwater, who since 1841 has drawn annually $300, and will continue to do so "as long as he shall continue unable, by reason of wounds received in the Mormon war, to make a support by manual labor."

THE new steel cruiser Baltimore, built for the United States navy, which has just been tested in unusually rough seas, is pronounced a thorough success—the fastest man-of-war afloat and in every way perfect in fittings and equipment. She had no difficulty whatever in making twenty knots an hour, and with both wind and waves against her at that.

MRS. HARRIET BEECHER STOWE was poor when she wrote "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The last chapter was written in the office of her publisher in Boston. It was a cold winter morning, and she arrived at the store half-frozen. She stood over the stove half an hour before she was sufficiently thawed to hold her pen. Three months from that time she received a check for $10,000 as the first payment on the sale of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

DEATH came recently in a strangely pathetic way to Mr. and Mrs. George Simmons, prominent citizens of Belvidere, N. J. In the afternoon Mr. Simmons died suddenly, and though Mrs. Simmons was in good health at the time death also gathered her to her father's arms five minutes after she knew of her husband's demise. An aged couple, they had never been separated for a day since their marriage and were greatly attached to each other. And in death they were not divided.

THE construction of a railway between Joppa and Jerusalem has been begun. The foot, foot and the flash of the headlight of the locomotive will send Palestine ahead many a century in the twinkling of the eye. Who knows but that Jerusalem will become a great railroad center. How would Omar's mosque do for a union depot, trains leaving every hour for Jericho, Bethlehem and Hebron and three times a day for Damascus and the valley of the Euphrates. It is one of the missions of the progressive Occident to stir up the East with enterprise.

A DISTINGUISHED ex-Confederate seafighter died at Carlsbad, Tex., recently in the person of Commodore Isaac N. Brown. He first commanded the Mississippi iron-clad Arkansas, and afterward the Charleston. He entered the United States navy as a midshipman March 15, 1834. There are but two officers in active service at present who entered the service before him—Admiral D. D. Porter and Vice-Admiral S. C. Rowan. The oldest Rear-Admiral now on the active list in the navy entered the service seven years later than Commodore Brown.

REURNS from the recent elections in the new States showed on the 4th that in North Dakota the Republicans elected all the members of the Legislature, and a large majority of the Congressmen, and that prohibition was successful. In South Dakota the Republican ticket was elected by about 2,000 majority, and prohibition carried by about 5,000 majority. The Republican majority in the Legislature would be at least 60, in the Congressmen, and that prohibition was successful. In North Dakota the Republican ticket was elected by about 2,000 majority, and prohibition carried by about 5,000 majority. The Republican majority in the Legislature would be at least 60, in the Congressmen, and that prohibition was successful.

ON the 4th a negro named Stark, supposed to be the man who recently shot at a church at Moss Point, Miss., with fatal result, was shot dead by a posse near there. DIPLOMATS MEET.

First Session of the International Congress—Secretary Blaine's Welcoming Address. The Main Question Elected President of the Conference—A Lunch at the White House.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The International Congress was formally opened in the diplomatic chamber of the State Department yesterday. All the members of the United States and foreign delegations were present. A cordial address of welcome was delivered by Secretary Blaine. He said:

"Gentlemen of the International Conference: Speaking for the Government of the United States, I bid you welcome to this capital. Speaking for the people of the United States, I bid you welcome to every section and to every State in the Union. You come in response to an invitation extended by the President on the special authorization of Congress. Your presence here is no ordinary event. It signifies much to the people of all America to-day. It may signify far more in the days to come. No conference has ever assembled to consider the welfare of territorial possessions so vast and to contemplate the possibilities of a future so great and so inspiring. Those now sitting within these walls are representatives of the nations of the world. They are on hand to speak for nations whose borders are on both the east and west coasts of the Atlantic, and whose northern limits are touched by the Arctic waters for 1,000 miles beyond the equator. They are on hand to speak for nations whose southern limits are touched by the equator. They are on hand to speak for nations whose borders are on both the east and west coasts of the Atlantic, and whose northern limits are touched by the Arctic waters for 1,000 miles beyond the equator. They are on hand to speak for nations whose southern limits are touched by the equator. They are on hand to speak for nations whose borders are on both the east and west coasts of the Atlantic, and whose northern limits are touched by the Arctic waters for 1,000 miles beyond the equator. They are on hand to speak for nations whose southern limits are touched by the equator. They are on hand to speak for nations whose borders are on both the east and west coasts of the Atlantic, and whose northern limits are touched by the Arctic waters for 1,000 miles beyond the equator. WALF WILLIE.

It had a faint remembrance of home, this little walf, although he could have scarcely put it into words, so dimly did it come to him.

Like the faint sunshine in the deep summer woods, thoughts of a sweet-faced mother stole across his lonely life, and through the silent night-watches came a voice tenderly calling: "Willie, son, come home."

Stolen from his widowed mother by a band of gypsies in a distant State, when a few years old, he had wandered hither with them.

And then, forsaken by them in a fit of illness, he had been left on the steps of Mr. Balfour's palatial house.

His life had been hard and loveless when with his captors; but since Hiram Balfour took him in for "what he could do," and the kind, motherly wife had died, his life had been full of bitterness.

"No lively there, or you'll repent it!" shouted a rough voice from the doorway, and the little fellow bent lower over his ear while the great tears dropped down on the heavy cap stock he was cutting in twain.

Then the man in the doorway came out and measuring off a heap of sticks said: "These you must convert into wood to-day. And if, when I return to-night, it is not completed I'll whip you within an inch of your life!"

He went away and Willie was left alone with his little heart ready to break with the weight of his loneliness.

"I know I shall fail," he sobbed. "O, I wish I might die! Why can't I!" he moaned.

"Other children do; little boys with rich, loving parents, too, while I have to live to be beaten by Mr. Balfour. O, dear! I wonder why God took Aunt Balfour away from me; she loved me and was kind!"

At the end of an hour the weary hands let go the saw and Willie crept away into the corner of the garden and nestled down in the cold grass to rest. Closing his eyes he lay quite still, thinking. There were strange thoughts flitting through his little brain. He sat up and looked about him cautiously; possibilities which had never dawned to him before came to him now, and he caught his breath at the bold idea.

"An going-going to run-away!" he whispered, hoarsely. "Maybe I can find mamma!" And through the sultry summer air floated something like an inspiration; sweetly, tenderly it came, "O, son!"

"What if Jennifer sees me," he murmured, frightened at the thought as he beheld the gardener busy with his tools a few yards away.

But over the fence there was the road leading to the city, and it wasn't far there, and once in it he thought he could dodge anybody. Mr. Balfour and the other way, farther into the country, and he wouldn't meet him. Yes, he would run away!

Jennifer's back was toward him, and he knew where there was a board off the fence, and he could slip out and no one could see him. If he ever meant to go it might as well be now.

"God help me to get away from Mr. Balfour," prayed the child, as he crept slyly through the opening. "O, my!" he could do it! Yes, he could.

The blue sky smiled above him, the birds sang merrily in the trees by the wayside, and every thing seemed glad that he had gotten thus far.

On and on he trudged toward the city, the dew grew hot and a pain came into his temples. The city, it must be a hundred miles from Mr. Balfour's; he'd heard them say it was ten miles, but he believed he had gone further than that now. His head throbbed fearfully and he was so hungry, but after all it wasn't so bad as to be whipped at night.

A sound of wheels came to his ear. Was it Mr. Balfour coming after him? O, dear! But no; it was a kindly woman in a carriage who stopped beside him to ask: "Don't you wish to ride? You're tired to death, my little man."

"Yes, I'm most dead," said Willie, faintly; "but I must reach the city before night."

"Well, I'm going there," said the lady. "I live in the city."

He climbed into the carriage and she let the curtain down on his side to keep out the sun and make him comfortable.

After looking him over curiously for some minutes the woman asked: "Aren't you Willie?"

Running away from somebody, or has some one sent you adrift?"

The child began to cry. "I'm running away, yes," he confessed; "but Mr. Balfour whips me so I—I can't stay. O, I want my mamma!"

The woman put her arm about him, soothingly. "Never mind," she said, "don't cry. What does he whip you for?"

"Because I can't do enough of work," sobbed the boy.

"Who is Mr. Balfour; your uncle?" she asked.

"No, ma'am; he's the man I'm living with, and my mamma's way off somewhere. I don't know where. And, O, my! I've had a lot of trouble."

"It's an old villain!" muttered the woman; "but he won't see you again if I can help it. Here, lay your head in my lap and rest."

Willie put his hot, aching head down on her knee and soon fell asleep, while the kind-hearted woman smoothed his tangled curls and pondered.

Jennifer saw the child creep stealthily through the broken pane and went over to watch him. By his movements he divined the boy's intentions, and sighed as Willie's little straw hat bobbed out of sight. "Let him go," said he, "and may the good God keep old Balfour from ever hearing of him again. Father in Heaven, take him to a good home!"

The gardener went back to his work, and at night when Mr. Balfour came home the boy could not be found.

After storming around considerably, the old man said: "Well, let him go. Somebody will pick him up and get pestered to death with him as I have been. This picking up will always prove to be a thankless business."

When Willie awoke he was being lifted out of the carriage by a man with a pleasant face, and the woman was saying: "Take him in and give him something to eat. He's a little boy I found. An orphan without a home."

They were so kind to him, and the milk and strawberries with his bread and butter were delicious.

"Does your head ache now?" asked the lady, as she tucked him away in a soft, downy bed.

"No, ma'am. Won't you kiss me like mamma used to do bedtime?" he asked, wistfully.

"To be sure," said she. "I haven't had any little boys for so long that I forgot how to put them to bed." And her voice sounded tenderly and full of tears.

"What is your name?" she asked, as she kissed him and twined a stray curl around her finger while she sat beside the bed.

"Willie, I guess."

"You guess? Don't you know, child? What is your other name, your mamma's name?"

"I don't know," he replied, sleepily; "only Willie, I guess. Mamma called me 'Willie, son,' but when the ugly folks tied a cloth over my mouth and took me off into the woods, why, I forgot the rest."

"Took you off?" exclaimed the woman; "why, I thought Mr. Balfour kept you?"

"Yes; when I got sick they left me at Mr. Balfour's gate, and I've lived there two years."

A strange, perplexed look came into the motherly face looking down on the tired child who went to sleep with the last word on his lips.

Then she tiptoed out of the room into the next, and taking a key from the wall unlocked a drawer, all the while saying to herself: "If wonder if it's possible; I wonder if it is!"

After a few minutes' search she took up a carefully well-worn paper and went back to the bedside of the little stranger.

Turning to a paragraph she read: "Lost; a little boy four years old, with brown, curly hair and large black eyes, and bears a little mark just above the elbow a birth-mark—a little purple anchor. His name is Willie Vanfoster, and the only child of his widowed mother, his absence is doubly terrible."

"I forgot about the birth-mark," she gasped, breathlessly, kneeling by the couch, and unbuttoning the faded sleeve, rolled it down to reveal the dimpled elbow.

There, sure enough, just as described, was a little purple anchor. "God be praised!" she said, while the tears rolled down her face. "It's Winifred's child," and she kissed him hungrily.

He stirred in his sleep and whispered: "Mamma." "Yes, darling, you shall go to mamma to-morrow." And she went down stairs with a great joy shining in her face.

"Leonard! Leonard!" she cried, joyously, shaking the arm of the man doing in the arm-chair.

"What do you say, Elsie?" he asked, rubbing his eyes.

"I've found Winifred's boy," she said, joyously, and then in an incoherent way she told him all about the child.

Together they sought the unconscious Willie and rejoiced over him. Far into the night they sat by the sleeper and planned a joyful surprise for the widowed sister.

Two days later, in the evening, Elsie and her husband reached a little New England village, and with Willie between them they turned into a side street and walked toward a tiny cottage nearly embowered in vines.

There was a light burning low in the little bedroom, and peeping through the blinds they beheld the mother kneeling by the couch with her head buried in the pillows, evidently in prayer.

"Go to mamma," whispered Elsie Freedland between her sobs of joyful excitement, and she pushed Willie inside the humble door. Approaching the kneeling figure the little child stole his arms around the bowed neck and whispered: "Mamma!"

A pale, weary face looked up in fearful surprise for a moment; then a gleam of joy, bright in expression, came over the thin face, like the light of the Throne, and, clasping the child to her heart, she kissed him rapturously in silent happiness, the deepest and sweetest of all. Then raising her streaming eyes to Heaven she said: "Lord, I thank Thee; I know Thou wouldst in Thine own good time send my darling back to me!"

"Yes, mamma," said the child, "I am your own Willie. Aunt Elsie and Uncle Leonard brought me 'cause the Saviour wanted them to; there they are."

And clasping her child to her heart she turned to meet the happy countenances of her brother and his wife.

TWO GOOD STORIES.

They Illustrate An Amusing Side of Political Life.

A chief of division in the Treasury Department had recently died so under peculiar circumstances. He was a Democrat from New York. When he applied for the position four years ago he had Frank Hancock, William M. Evans and other prominent Republicans among his indorsements. Inasmuch as the place required a knowledge of law, either party might well have looked for a Democrat.

W. B. Cral, the captain of the schooner Daley, was held up by footpads at Muskogon the other night and relieved of his watch, cash and other valuables.

James Connors, one of the men who robbed the Calumet express and post-offices and escaped from Marquette jail last June, was returned there recently, having been captured at Detroit.

D. W. Richardson, the well-known watch manufacturer of Detroit, died there the other morning.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

GORO AND GHASTLY.

Employes of a Train Horror-Stricken at an Awful Experience.

Fireman Matthew Byrd had an experience recently that he will not soon forget. A brakeman named Thomas Higgins slipped from a train and fell from a moving train and was killed. The signal to stop was given, and another brakeman, who saw the fall, and the train stopped and backed up to where Higgins lay. Five cars had passed over his body, which was completely mangled. The head was completely severed from the trunk and lay several feet from the body. Fireman Byrd picked up the head and was horror-stricken to see the eyelids close and again open and partly close again. This was seen by Engineer William Whitney and the brakeman. All three were badly frightened. This sign of consciousness was given several minutes after the head was severed from the body. The three witnesses are reliable men.

Hanged Himself in His Cell.

George Doelle, night watchman of the Montague iron works, left work the other morning to kill his aged wife, who was not at home. He then attempted to kill his step-daughter with an axe, striking two cruel blows. But without deadly effect. Marshal Clinger arrived soon after. He received five severe cuts about the head, and at last took his man to jail. Both were covered with blood. When supper was sent to the prisoner the guard found him hanging to a cell bar cold and stiff.

Fortified Land Grants.

Governor Luce has relinquished to the United States all of the State's interest in 100,000 acres of land in the upper peninsula, they being held in trust, and the unearned portion of the grant to the Ontonagon and Brule River Railroad Company. Congress declared them forfeited last spring, throwing them open to homesteads. This action of the Governor removes a cloud upon the title, and was authorized by the last Legislature. Representatives of interested railroad companies vigorously and will contest their claims in court.

His First Dollar.

General R. A. Alger, now a millionaire, thus describes how he made his first dollar: "I worked more than a week to make it. In 1874, when I was fourteen years of age, I went to work for a farmer in Richfield, O., for $3 a month. That was the first money I ever earned. Next month I got $4, and the next four months I got $5. My earnings in the six months were $37.50. I put it down in my account book, and I have the book at home now. He was a hard task-master, and my bones often ached when I went to sleep."

A Fatal Fire.

Michael Erms, a paralytic, who occupied rooms over Keister's drug store at Somerset Center, was burned to death early this morning. A lamp overturned in the drug store and the place was soon in a blaze. Erms, being unable to move, was burned to a crisp. In addition to the drug store the rink used as a public hall, Werner's hardware store, Wetherwax's and Strong's drug-store, and the household goods of several families in rooms over the stores were destroyed.

An Old Barrel of Whisky.

Mrs. William McKay is one of the oldest pioneers of Attica, near Lapeer. The other day she discovered an old moss-covered barrel in Williams lake, near her house, and made an investigation. She found it to be a barrel filled with whisky, and said that forty years ago her husband ran a still and must have sunk the barrel there. The only thing that did not please some of the neighbors was that Mrs. McKay let all the fluid run away.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the State Board of Health by fifty-three observers in different parts of the State for the week ended September 23 indicated that remittent fever, pneumonia and typhoid fever (enteric) increased, and that cholera morbus and inflammation of the brain decreased, in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at eight places, scarlet fever at eleven, typhoid fever at thirty-one and measles at three places.

Broken Down.

The Jackson Citizen says a near relative of Irving Latimer, who murdered his mother, visited the convict lately, and says that he is much broken down and wasted, looking like a man who has been in his cell twenty-two days, and when asked what he had done to get such punishment, said "he did not know." He did not complain, nor did he express any hope.

An Inhuman Son.

James Applegate was once a well-to-do farmer of Port Huron township. He is now eighty-three years old, and a few years ago, on account of his old age, he decided his property to his son. The young man proved an ingrate and turned his father out. The old man is now a pauper but is trying to have the deed set aside.

LUCKLESS HUMANS.

A Large Number Lose Their Lives in Disasters on the Water—Forty-Six Killed by an Exploded Steamer Corona—Two Vessels Collide off Newfoundland and Fifteen Persons are Drowned—The British Ship Chesapeake Rammed and Sunk on the Coast of Greenland During a Cyclone at Sea.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 4.—The steamer Corona, of the Ouachita Consolidated line, which left here at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening for a trip to the Gulf of Mexico, was wrecked off the coast of Florida. The ship, which was carrying a large number of passengers, exploded her boilers at Palmar, nearly opposite Port Hudson, at 11:45 o'clock Thursday morning, causing the loss of the steamer and about forty-six lives. The Anchor Line ship of St. Louis, Captain James H. Neil, was near, and with her crew and boats crew were taken on board by Captain O'Neill and very kindly cared for by him and his crew. Following is the list of the lost, so far as known:

Dr. Atwell, a "corn doctor" and four negro musicians; Mr. Scott, of Southland, La.; Davis, a stockman, of Texas; Mr. Keen; Mr. Huff, of Opelousas; J. W. Banks, the captain; V. Jordan, a clerk; Charles C. Ellis, second clerk; Swiny Hanna, clerk; F. Dinkie, a bar-keeper; Fred Verman, a stranger from Shook, the engineer; Henry Doyle, a porter; Henry Davis, a deck-hand; Tate, a barber; Henry Davis, a deck-hand; Tom Cook, a sailor; Billy Young, second mate; Red Reed, a sailor; Mrs. Tom Hough, of Opelousas, sister of Captain Banks; Mr. Wilson, of Red River plantation.

Both captains of the deck-watch, fifteen rousters and a nurse of Mrs. Kaufman were also lost, making the total death-list forty-six. Nine persons were wounded but none fatally. Fifteen passengers were saved.

Hon. L. F. Mason, Secretary of State, who was a passenger on the Corona, says that he was in the cabin talking to Mrs. Robinson when the explosion occurred. He escaped with life preserved, and assisted in saving Mrs. Robinson and another woman. There was very little time for preparation for escape, as the boat went down like a lead a few seconds after the explosion. As the steamer City of St. Louis came down she hailed the Corona and took on board the passengers and crew who were not lost in the river wreck.

No one seems to be able to give any explanation as to the cause of the sudden disaster. Captain T. C. Sweeney, one of the owners of the line, who assumed command of the Corona, says that the ship was not due to leave until 10 o'clock. He had just had occasion to examine the gauge and he found there was not a pressure of more than 135 pounds. The boat had a moderate cargo. She was in the midst of a heavy sea when she struck the river bank, and had just whistled to come to the City of St. Louis, when the explosion had a downward tendency and blew out the bottom of the boat, causing her to sink immediately. The cargo was torn to bits, the rear portion falling down and bearing a number of the saved. Captain Sweeney happened to be forward, and started at once to put out the flames, which began to burn at several places. He says the boat would undoubtedly have burned had he not gone down. None of the books, papers or other valuables were saved.

The Corona was on her first trip of the season, and had but recently come out of the dry-dock, where she received repairs amounting to nearly $12,000. She was built at Wheeling, W. Va., by Sweeney Bros. and had a carrying capacity of about 2,700 tons. At the time of the disaster she was valued at $300,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—A special cable from St. Pierre, N. F., says: The transatlantic steamer Geographic, of the Rossiere line, bound from Montreal to Southampton with cattle, sheep and a cargo of general merchandise, struck left Sydney on Tuesday, and was wrecked on the coast of Newfoundland. The ship was carrying a cargo of about 2,700 tons. At the time of the disaster she was valued at $300,000.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 4.—A sad story of shipwreck was received in this city Thursday. The steamer, which was bound for the West Indies and the loss of nineteen men. Those who have perished are as follows: Captain Richard J. Gray, Second Mate Stone, Chief Engineer Louder and sixteen others of the crew. Those known to have been saved are First Mate Parker, Second Engineer Melhorn and five of the crew.

The Earmoor cleared from Baltimore August 29, and sailed next day. August 31 she left Hampton Roads and put to sea. The storm which prevailed early in September struck her when she was off the West Indies. She labored several days in heavy seas, and then began to sink. The men gave up hope, and on the 5th of September determined to abandon the ship. Two boats were launched. In one of them were the First Officer Mr. Painter, Second Engineer Melhorn and five seamen. In the long boat were Captain Gray, the first officer, second officer and sixteen others of the crew of twenty-six men. The long boat, containing nineteen men, had not been heard from.

Captain Gray and the others in the long boat were picked up by another vessel. Among the rescued were Captain Gray, Second Mate Stone and First Engineer Boudart. The storm that wrecked the Earmoor was the great cyclone from the West Indies which played such havoc along the New Jersey coast in the middle of September. It was learned the crew were all Englishmen.

The Earmoor was launched at Newcastle, Eng., in January, 1887, whence she sailed. She is a screw steamer of 1,320 tons net tonnage. Her cargo consisted of 82,300 bushels of wheat shipped by Tate, Miller & Co. to this port. The cargo is valued at $20,000. The steamer was built by the Earmoor line of England. She had been plying regularly between Baltimore and Cuba for a year.

A NOTE OF WARNING.

Asiatic Cholera Gains a Footing in Europe—The case in Westward Bound—It Has Made Its Appearance in Greece, Turkey and Parts of Hungary, and is Spreading Rapidly—Over 2,000 Deaths in Bagdad.

OTTEWA, Ont., Oct. 4.—The Department of Agriculture has received word that Asiatic cholera is epidemic and has obtained a footing in Eastern Europe, Turkey and Greece, some parts of Hungary being affected. Bagdad is in desolation and nearly deserted. Up to the end of August the deaths had reached 2,000. The march of the dreaded disease along the old routes from the east furnishes a warning note to all sanitary associations to be on the lookout for it.

Close Back the Old Pan.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 4.—The Baltimore & Hampden Electric railway has discarded electricity as a motive power, and hereafter horses will be used. The cars on this line have been propelled by electricity for about a year, but the expense of the present system has been so great that the road is more expensive to operate by electricity than with horses. It was formerly a horse railway.

A Dastardly Act.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—A dynamite bomb was thrown into the slaughter-house of J. C. Scanlon, in this city, yesterday. No one was injured, and only about $200 worth of damage was done. The act is attributed to discharged employees.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Gowns and Novelties of the Incoming Season as Seen in Fashion's Glass.

(Special Correspondence.)

Stately directoro redingotes, graceful French polonaises, continental coats and Grecian-draped and plaited skirts are represented among the latest importations of stylish gowns for both day and evening wear. The beautiful wool toiles are either bordered, striped or in black and made up invariably on the bias; and although a large portion of the dresses received are made of one description of material alone, still there are many handsome tailor gowns which show a combination of wool stuffs of two kinds, as a velvet-striped dress with a plain camels' hair skirt, or a redingote trimmed with the stripe, or else two colors of a plain fabric, as a golden chestnut redingote or continental coat, with ivy-green skirt that has a bordering of chevron stripes in handsome shadings. Stripes and plaids are certainly a marked feature of the new season, and silk and velvet fabrics. They are found mostly, however, among the autumn "suitings" imported for entire costumes, and next to the bordered and striped fabrics appear to be the favorite patterns to be combined with camels' hair, India cashmere and other plain woolens. All of these dresses are remarkably chic and pretty. Some of the French models have loose belted, and worn with Babel-jackets that have open fronts and Jersey-fitting backs. Vests of gray or ecru cloth are more popular than ever, and are decorated with new and effective Gothic passementeries, or with gold galloon or braiding. An autumn walking-dress shows a plaid skirt of dark blue and leaf-brown, with a plain camels' hair skirt of leaf-brown. The open jacket of dark blue amazon cloth has a deep thousquare revers collar. Beneath the coat is a continental vest of pale leaf-brown silk, braided in cashmere colors, matching those of the plaid skirt. These are pushed sleeves coming from beneath the close ones of plain blue cloth which reach to little below the elbow. These are of the corded silk gathered into a narrow braided band at the wrists. Plaited skirts retain their popularity, appearing upon some of the handsome dresses which come from overseas. Short jackets of velvet or silk form the bodies of many dresses of autumn or wool. The dress material is down the middle of the front, folded, or dropping in a blouse fashion. The little square jacket is without revers, and reaches only to the waistline. The back is sometimes straight across, and sometimes slightly pointed at the points. The skirts of all new dresses are hung to appear almost straight, yet those of heavy material have one or two short skirts in the foundation skirt, these not at all evidence, but without producing any buoyancy, merely supporting the folds. The dress of straight wool skirts of what ever shade are garnished with rows of black velvet ribbons, or with lines of black gimp, galloon or a single deep border of Vandyke passementerie points. Black and mahogany are an exceedingly fashionable color mixture, and cloth and striped armure silk are much used for brides' traveling costumes made in directoro fashion, with skirt revers, and bodies and sleeve decoration of the stripe. The long French refectory coats of armure silk or silk cloths of plain colors, with a wide and a monk's hood lined with the striped armure. Bridal trousseaus this season contain many pretty blouses, and they are usually three lovely tea gowns and as many stylish tea-skirts. Young ladies wear silk skirt waists and trousseaus more or less Russian in style, and wear them even for dinner and theater dress evenings. They are thorn-stitched, silk-embroidered, galloon-trimmed, striped, smoked or crossed in soft diagonal folds. Some of the Russian blouses have velvet yokes and Crowsfoot cuffs, with a deep pointed girdle that is almost a bodice. For day wear they are made of some of the wool material like Claretta or Henrietta cloth, and are worn with plaited skirts of like fabric. Thus, skirt and blouse are combined in a very comfortable costume. With this suit for walking a cloth jacket is worn, which opens with the fancy revers or blouse, which gives the effect of a Fedora vest. Mollere shoes of black velvet hand-arched in Spanish fashion, and French brilliants are worn with directoro tea gowns over hose of silver silk. Two toques rival the box turban in favor, and the lovely "picture" hats this season are made of moss green or black velvet. The brims are wide, the crowns low, and the trimmings the gold cord and long black ostrich plumes. C. D. F.

RELATED OF GREAT WRITERS.

The famous lossnet worked in a cold room, with his head wrapped in a towel. MONTESQUIEU could compose his post-chaise, with the horses at a rapid trot.

VOLTAIRE always fancied elegant toilets, and adorned himself in a striking manner. JOY wrote most of his tragedies in an alley, at each end of which was a bench, and on each bench paper and pencils, ready for use.

The great romancer, Balzac, after a frugal dinner at six or seven o'clock, had his servant call him at midnight, when he took a cup of extremely strong coffee, and worked till noon.

The productive capacity of Le Sage, author of "Gil Blas," depended upon the sun. He awoke at sunrise, and the higher it rose in the heavens and the clearer it shone, the richer was the flow of his thought.

The English poet, Alexander Pope, dressed like a dandy, and his monstrous bag of hair, his elegant sword, his tight velvet hose and his excessively wide ruffles, gave to his little, crooked figure a comical appearance.

JOHN wrote his "Night Thoughts" lying a skull lying on the table before him, which served him also as a candlestick. Sometimes he walked among the graves of a church-yard at midnight in order to excite grave and solemn thoughts in his mind.

Probate Order.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Washtenaw. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Washtenaw, held at the Probate Office in the City of Ann Arbor, on Monday, the 23rd day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.

Present, J. Willard Babbitt, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Ann Clark, deceased.

George W. Turnbull, the administrator of said estate, comes into court and represents that he is now prepared to render his final account as such administrator.

Thereupon it is ordered, that Tuesday, the 2nd day of October next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for examining and allowing said account, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be held at the Probate Office, in the City of Ann Arbor, in said County, and show cause, if any there be, why the said account should not be allowed.

And it is further ordered, that said Administrator give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said account, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Chelsea Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.
