HENDRICKS IN BRONZE.

itigens of Indianapolis Unveil a Handsome Monument to the Late Vice-Pres-ident—A Poem by James Whitcomb Riley—Scuator Turple Delivers an Eid-

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 1 .- Today housands gathered at the State Capitol ounds to witness the ceremonies attending the dedication of the monu-ment to the late Vice-President Thomas A. Hendricks. After the formal presentation had been made by the monument committee an original poem, entitled "Hendricks," written by James Whitcomb Riley, was read by Prof. Fisher, of Hanover College. It is as follows: Pride of the Westland, and loved of the Nation

Leader invincible! Ruler most wise! Fevered nor flushed by the throng's acclama tion. Steadfastly poised as a star in the skies!

Paths that were night to us Thou dids't make bright to us-brightening still, till the transcendent shine, Swiftly withdrawn from us. New thou art gone from us, Haloes thy deeds with a glory divine

Versed as thou wert in the lore of the ages Voiced as a master in lofty debate. Thine was an eloquence history's pages Bustlingly whisper in vain to relate. Mute there the wonderful Pathos, or thunderful

Fleshes of denunciation-not jeers! Silent, the dutiful Scorn, and the beautiful Tribute of tremulous sobbing and tears! Thise, then, the mead of a people's affection Born above factional wrangle and fray;

Naught of thy virtues shall vanish away; Still in security Rest, in thy purity. Fixed as thy monument, tow'ring above-Ay, and outwearing it, All time declaring it—

Still warmly homed in the heart's recollection

Bronze shall outbrave not the legions of love! Then followed an oration by United States Senator Turpic, whose remarks were received with marked approbation. A synopsis of the oration follows:

upon the Wabash, the orator gave a lengthy sketch of the boyhood of the deceased statesman. He then referred to the first appearance of the deceased Vice-President in public life as a representative from the county of Shelby in the General Assembly, and in which capacity he left upon the minds of his colleagues such an opinion of his abilities as laid the foundation of that respect and esteem in which he always continued to be held by them and their Coming down to war times the orator said that as a Senator Mr. Hendricks constantly acted and voted in aid of the Government in every measure looking to the suppression ator, freely to discuss the civil policy of the ad ministration. His suggestions and amendance of the National forces then in the field were so timely, useful and important as frequently to command the approval of the mafority of the Senators politically adverse to his

This grave midst of his term as Senator; while in the whole range of former legislation and juristion thereof. The problem was peculiarly American only to be solved by a wise and comprehensive consideration of the laws, the institory of our own States and people. In this crisis of deliberation Hendricks stood, upon his side, almost alone. With the immutable calm such occasions, at a very early period in the debate upon the bill for the establishment of mili-

This doctrine, from the very day and hour of its utterface, was rejected with every epithet of reproach and contumely. It was beaten, submerged by large majoriti in both houses of Congress; decried as an unconditional surrender to the enemy. In the pelting storm of detraction and opposition-its author and advocate remained unmoved; n only waiting, but laboring with all diliger for that reversal of opinion among his country-men, which, after years of toil and strife, came at last. Hendricks lived to see those principles, once so much denounced, universally approved; to see this policy of reconstruction adopted as the basis of all legislation upon the subject; ultimately, to behold these tenets sanctioned and declared to be the law of the land by its highest tribunal, the Supreme Court of the United States. Thus he taught the lesson of those days, never to be forgotten, that the war had been waged for the preservation of the Union, not for the destruction of the States. If Webster be styled the expounder of the old constitution, with its half truths and compromises, upon a subject noted, but unnamed therein, Hendricks may be as justly called the expounder of the new.

Referring to the controversy in the Hayes-Tilden campaign, Senator Turple said: "In one supremely critical juncture of our National affairs, for many days, like Fabius of old, he walked and safely kept the field of peril, meriting in this the simple yet august decree of the at last. He had genius—the genius of states-manship; alike befitting the majestic assemblies and the highest councils of a free people. To genius belongs the hereafter. Governor Hill, of New York, delivered an address of some length, which was highly eulogistic in its character. Several other speeches were also made.

[The monument is a remarkable work of art. Its construction has occupied two years, $40,000 having been subscribed to defray its cost. The statue is of bronze, fourteen and a half feet high and weighs over 26,000 pounds. The sculptor is Mr. R. H. Parks. The statue represents the subject as in the act of stepping forward on the rostrum to address an audience. The head is slightly inclined and turned a little to the right.

The pedestal is of granite, imported from the Bavano quarries in Italy. This stone is of light coral tint and has been used for some of the famous statues in Europe. The base is twenty-nine feet long by twenty-one feet wide and is laid in three courses, each one about twelve inches high, rising like steps to the die in the center.

On each side of the monument is a niche.

That in front bears the only insciption on the monument—the single word Hendricks, chiseled in the stone, and finished with gold leaf. Below the name is a bronze wreath of oak and laurel leaves nearly three feet in diameter. It was east, at the reval foundry is Rome, where moiding is carried to the perfection of art, and where it is not uncommon to use natural leaves or flowers as models. This particular wreath was exhibited in Paris, where a gold medal was awarded it, and where Mr. Parks bought it for the decoration of this monument. Above the niche which is thus adorned is a United States shield in bronze, with a spray of laurel

IDAHO IS A STATE

The President Signs the Bill Admitting WASHINGTON, July 5.—The President signed the act for the admission of Idaho as a State of the Union at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. The Idaho admission bill which thus becomes a law declares the present Territory of Idaho to be a State, and ratifies the constitution framed by the convention of July 4, 1889, and adopted at the election in the following November. The State is declared entitled to one Representative in Congresss until after the census is taken. The usual grants of sections 16 and 36 of public lands in each township for the support of common schools, of fifty sections for public buildings, of 5 per cent of the proceeds of the sales of public lands to constitute a permanent school fund are made, and the State is confirmed in its title to seventy-two sections of land granted the Territory for a university and to the lands on which the penitentiary at Boise City is situated. The State constitution, which is ratified by the act, contains a special provision prohibiting polygamy and declaring that no person shall be entitled to vote, to hold office or to serve as a juror who is a bigamist or polygamist, or who twenty-seven of a less serious char- practices or encourages plural marriages or is a member of or countenances any organization which teaches such doctrines. [Idaho is an Indian word signifying "Gem of the Mountains." The new State is 410 miles in length from north to south, and 257 miles wide in the extreme southern part. There are 18,400,000 acres classed as mountainous, 15,000,000 acres of agricultural lands, 7,000,000 acres of population of the Territory was 32,610, but it has since increased until the Beardstown, Ill., July 1.—William Bell, aged 40, was found dead on the sixteen organized counties in the State and a large number of thriving towns. The capit and largest city is Boise City, situated in the southern part of the State on a branch of the of taxable property in 1887 was $20,741, 192. These figures represent only a fraction of the wealth of the newly admitted State as the valuation itself is placed very low and does not include the rich mining properties and their products on which there is no tax. Growing crops are also exempt, and as assessments are made early in the spring but little grain, fruit, hay, or other products of the farmer is ever on the assessment rolls. The agricultural dands of Idaho are almost exclusively sage-brush lands and require irrigation to make them productive. They occupy large portion of the available area of the State and generally consist of broad plateaus. A stranger unacquainted with sage brush lands would regard any at tempt to reclaim them useless, but with irrigation the soil becomes exceedingly productive. The best farms in Idaho were once ed to the raising of all kinds of grain, the warmth of the earth and the mellowness of the soil always warranting an abundant yield when watered. The product of Idaho's numerous and exten sive mines is one of the great reasons of permanent growth and prosperity. The produc-tion of gold, silver and lead for the year 1887 is estimated as follows: Gold, $2,417,429; silver, $4,633,160; lead, $2,195,000, making a total of $9, 245,589. Four Persons Lose Their Lives at McKeesport, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 5.—At 2 o'clock Friday afternoon John Thompson, his wife and 14-year-old girl Bessie, and Richard Smith and wife and three children started to row across the Yioughiogheny river at McKeesport, twelve miles above here. The boat was old and rotten, and when the middle of the river was reached it gave way. Both men sunk instantly, and Bessie Smith and Alice, Thompson followed, after rising three times to call piteously to their mothers to save them. Robert, an 18-year-old son of Mrs. Thompson, dragged his mother to the boat, and she and her infant child were supported by the brave boy until help arrived. Mrs. Smith also saved herself by clinging to the submerged boat. The bodies of the two men, with their daughters, were recovered.

A GAME FOR TWO. Why Mr. Gibson Browne Didn't Go to the Party.

OR. AND MRS. GIBSON BROWNE, although sincerely fond of each other, found ere they had been many months married, that there were vaious things shout which they did not agree. Hundreds of other young married apples have made the same discovery, and although it surprised and shocked them, they have been too wise to allow it to wreck the happiness of their mar-

Mr. and Mrs. Browne were thus wise. They wasted no time in undignified and unprofitable wrangling over their difences of opinion, but neither of them jelded one jot or tittle to the other. They simply kept silent on all topics on which they should disagree. Happily, also, for them, their differences of opinion were in regard to the minor things of life, and, although it is the "little foxes that destroy the rines," their little differences did not destroy their worldly happiness, each of them being blessed with abundant good nature in spite of the firmness of opinion that made them decline to yield

Church Episcopalian, while Mr. Gibson Browne was inclined toward Unitarianism, but Mrs. Browne did not become a Unitarian, nor did Gibson renounce his faith and become an Episcopalian- and yet they were happy as married folks

Mrs. Browne was decidedly opposed to all operas in which there was a ballet; while Mr. Browne was fond of a ballet purely because of the artistic effect it gave to operatic scenes, and he went to the opera whenever he felt like doing so, and did not annoy his wife by telling her any thing about it.

And when Mrs. Gibson wished to do any thing she felt it was perfectly proper for her to, even though Gibson did not approve of it, she simply and quiety did it, and Gibson was none the wiser. There were times when Mr. and Mrs. Gibson Browne exemplified the old adage, "silence is golden."

One morning, at the breakfast table, Mr. Browne said:

"My dear, don't forget that the Van Horns give their party to-morrow

"I remember it," replied Mrs. Browne without lifting her eyes from her plate. "What dress shall you wear?" "I am not going," replied Mrs.

Browne, calmly.
"Not going?" Mr. Browne dropped his knife and fork in surprise. "No. I am not."

"Why not?" "I have my reasons, Gibson. Rest assured that they are good ones. And I'd rather you didn't go either." "But I think I shall go, my dear."

"I'd rather you wouldn't." "I don't see why I shouldn't go." "Let the fact that I don't wish you to suffice for this once."

For the first time in their married lives, Mr. and Mrs. Browne engaged in

Mrs. Browne did not resort to tears; be never did; Mr. Browne did not rage and fume and use ungentlemanly lan-guage; he never did—but their voices grew harder and colder every moment, and as they rose from the table, Mrs. Browne said, decidedly:

he same if 1-I know what I'll do! Yes, dr. Pil do it. We'll have a big laugh over it afterward, although it wouldn't be much of a laughing matter if Mrs. Browne knew I intended doing it. But I'll do it, sure as guns!"

And when Mr. Browne went home to tea the next evening there was tucked away in his vest pocket a little phial containing a colorless liquid he had just purchased at the druggist's. "She often puts a drop of this in a glass of milk or of water and takes it when she can't sleep or when she has a toothache," he said, "and it never fails to send her right off to sleep. Now, I'll manage to put a few drops of this in her tea to-night. She always lies down for a little while after each meal, and she'll be asleep before ten minutes to-night, and I can dress and be off without those keen eyes of her upon me, and without any disagreeable arguing of the matter, for go I will."

Browne found it easy enough to 'doctor' the glass of milk his wife always drank at the tea-table, and, according to her usual custom, Mrs. Browne lay down on a sofa immediately after tea, and, as Browne had predicted, she was oon fast asleep.

"But hanged if I don't feel mean over it," said Browne, as he sat in his big easy chair looking at her and picking his teeth with the gold and pearl toothpick she had given him only three days

"It was taking a mean advantage of the little woman, hanged if it wasn't, Wonder what she'll say when she wakes and finds me gone. She'll be mad enough, no doubt. But it'll teach her that I'm not to be thwarted. It isn't that I care much for the party. I'm tired and sleepy enough to stay at home, Preservative Qualities of Soap-Stone. A writer in a London journal calls attention to the unappreciated uses and preservative qualities of soap-stone, a material, he says, which possesses what may be regarded as extraordinary qualities in withstanding atmospheric in-fluences, those, especially, which have so much to do with the corrosion of iren and steel, and from experiments made it is said that no other material is capable of taking hold of the fiber of iron and steel so readily and firmly as this. In China soap-stone is largely used in preserving structures built of sand-stone and other stones liable to crumble from the effect of the atmosphere; and the covering with powdered soap-stone in the form of paint on some of the obelisks of that country composed of stone liable to atmospheric deterioration has been the means of preserving them intact for hundreds of years.—Chicago Herald.
