

Chelsea

Standard.

VOL. II. NO. 17.

CHELSEA, MICH., JULY 11, 1890.

WHOLE NUMBER, 69.

CHELSEA STANDARD. HE COULD NOT HELP IT.

WM. H. MEIER,
OFFICE IN

STANDARD GROCERY HOUSE.

Chester Main and Park Sts.

$100 PER YEAR STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.

ADVERTISING RATES
FOR DISPLAY ADVERTISEMENTS.

1 Mo.	13.08	1/2	1/4	1/8
1 Col.	$12.00	$24.00	$48.00	$72.00
1 Col.	9.00	18.00	36.00	54.00
1 Col.	6.00	12.00	24.00	36.00
1 Inch	2.40	3.60	4.80	6.00

Reading notices 5 cents per line each insertion. 10 cents per line among selected items. Advertisements changed as often as desired if copy is received by Tuesday morning.

PALMER & WRIGHT,
PHYSICIANS & SURGEONS.

OFFICE OVER GLAZIER'S DRUGSTORE.

OFFICE HOURS:

Dr. Palmer's, 10 to 1 A.M., 4 to 6 P.M.

Dr. Wright, 1 to 3 P.M., 4 to 6 P.M.

H. L. WILCOX,

DENTIST.

See with Dr. Palmer over Glazier's

Drug Store. Hours: 9 to 12 A.M., 1 to 1 P.M.

THE BEST ICE CREAM.

AND

MILK SHAKE

CASPERY'S BAKERY

C. LADIES' FAVORITES

THE LIGHTNING BAKER

THE FINEST WOODWORK

ATTACHMENTS

SUPERIOR QUALITY

28 UNION SQUARE, NEW YORK

ATLANTA, GA. ST. LOUIS, MO. DALLAS, TEXAS

RELIABLE AGENTS WANTED.

One of the FREE

RECEIPT BOOKS

is sent, and we introduce our superior goods we will send to

ONE PERSON.

One who writes

across once can make use of the chance. All you have to do is return it to us after our neighbors around you. The beginning of this advertisement shows the small end of the barn. The following cut gives the appearance of it reduced to its original size.

Do the photographs of its bulk, etc., are grand, double size prints.

We will also show you how we make them.

Send us your address.

Better write at once. We pay all expenses charged.

Wm. H. Hallett & Co., Box 886, Portland, Maine.

CAPT. KING'S BEST SERIAL,

A Story

of the Social

Life

of our

Army.

TWO SOLDIERS,

Is Now Running

IN THIS PAPER.

Capt. King, the brave soldier who was forced to be a novelist.

His Interesting Life and How His Stories

Made Him Famous—How He Looks

Dresses and Walks—The Behavior of

His Life.

[Copyright by American Press Association.]

The story of Capt. Charles King'seventful life could not help a work of romantic fiction than a collection of every day facts. Capt. King's life is more familiar as a household word to readers of serial and magazine literature the past few years, and is today one of the best-known and most widely read authors in America. The demand for his stories is so great that no less than six new novels being printed in as many languages and syndicates, besides a number of other important new works, will be far enough ahead to keep him busy every hour of the day for the next two years.

Capt. King has been writing stories of love and war steadily for the past six or eight years, and in that time he has turned out an incredibly large number of novels and what is still more remarkable, they are all good ones. Capt. King is a writer by instinct and profession, a born soldier of men, but the receipt of a savage bullet and the appearance of one or two military stories from his pen combine to distract, somewhat reluctantly, into the field of literature. The demand for his stories gradually became so great that he has been compelled to abandon everything else and become a professional novelist.

Capt. Charles King is a resident of Milwaukee. He lives in a pretty little home on Franklin Avenue, surrounded by his happy little family—a wife and several children. He is 40 years of age, but appears much younger. He is small of stature, but a gallant, stalwart, athlete, with blue eyes and a handsome intelligent face. Being near sighted he constantly wears glasses. Excepting a mustache his face is clean shaven. He is fond of society, dressed faultlessly and is a true military man in gait and deportment, a ready speaker and quite at report. When not wearing his uniform he occasionally affects dress of a very striking kind. The portrait here given shows him in a suit of blackless white cloth in which he occasionally appears during the summer months.

After the huzzas of congratulation had subsided the victor was presented with a gold whip which he took across the track and laid in the lap of a young lady who had accompanied Gen. and Mrs. Emory. She has the whip yet, and it is suspended from a ribbon over the parlor mantel in Capt. King's cozy home. They were married a few months after the stirring incident. After going through the reconstruction period in the south our hero asked to be relieved from staff duty to join his troop, K, Fifth cavalry. In the Apache campaign in Arizona, in 1874, King saw brilliant service. The troop of which he was in command became conspicuous. Gen. Sherman publicly stated that he considered their services "unequalled by those of any cavalry regiment." On Nov. 1, 1874, King was severely wounded at Sunset pass. He was then only saved from falling into the hands of the bloodthirsty savages by the valorous devotion of one of his soldiers.

For months the intrepid commander was laid up with a shattered saber arm. Almost before it was well he was in the saddle again and went through the terrible Big Horn and Yellowstone campaigns. His service was brilliant, his bravery matchless, and his coolness in the heat of many of the most terrible battles ever fought with the Indians won him unstinted praise from his superiors. In 1878 King's wound, which had never healed, became so troublesome that he was forced to go before a retiring board. The next year he left the army that he loved so well and became a sheltered warrior—full of scars and glory before he had reached one-half of man's three-score-and-ten years. And thus it was that the soldier became an author. After his retirement he held several important civil and military commissions, and became identified prominently with the national guard, in which he is still very much interested.

In Capt. King's study, where he writes his stories, there is the variegated Navajo blanket in which his soldiers bundled or carried him down the mountain side after receiving his wound at Sunset pass. There too can be seen the pictures in uniform of many of the heroes of his stories. Shoulder straps, sword belts, forage cap and buckskin leggings are suspended from the walls. There are a thousand and one other curious things picked up by the captain during his army life. On the wall is a fine portrait of Gen. Rufus King, and near by is the magnificent presentation sword owned by the soldier writer's distinguished father. Altogether it is a home of refinement and taste. Capt. King and the lady who won the Metairie whip have three children, and there is a Charles King, Jr., who is a living picture of the father and a perfect soldier in miniature.

G. H. KNOWLTON.

Christian Hassing, a drayman of Indianapolis, wears the Iron Cross of the German empire, given him for bravery at the battle of Metz.

To do one's friend a kindness and then continually ambition his life by remanding him to a life more worthy than doing him an injury.

H. S. Holmes & Co.

CLOTHING DEPARTMENT.

We are offering our entire stock of Men's Suits.

Youth's Suits.

Boys Suits.

Men's Pants, Overalls, Flannel

Shirts, Summer Underwear,

Straw Hats, etc., at reduced prices. We have too many goods, and propose to turn them into cash, if prices will do it. COME AND SEE.

Respectfully,

H. S. HOLMES & CO.

A WHOLE SET OF DISHES

AND A

Pound of Baking Powder

FOR ONLY

FIFTY CENTS,

AT THE

STANDARD GROCERY HOUSE.

CHELSEA ROLLER MILLS

MARKET REPORT.

Corrected Weekly by Cooper & Wood

Roller Patent, per hundred	92.80
Housekeeper's Delight, per hundred	9.50
Superior, per hundred	1.50
Corn Meal, bolted, per hundred	1.40
Corn Meal, coarse, per hundred	.90
Feed, corn and oats, per ton	17.00
Bran, per ton	15.00
Special Fee (Rye, Oats and Corn)	75¢ per 100

No short weights.

TRY THE STANDARD COFFEE
25 OTS.

THE CHELSEA STANDARD.

W. EMMERT, Publisher,
CHELSEA - MICHIGAN

JAY GOULD was fined $100 for not answering a summons of a New York Court to act as a petit juror.

EZRA LEECH, a farmer of Newton County, Mississippi, discovered $10,000 in gold white ditching in his field a few days ago.

The explanation of the peculiar density of thunder clouds is said to lie in the fact that the vapor is partially condensed into drops by the electrical action.

A GEORGIA youth who answered in closing a quarterly advertisement of sight of the sky he ever got was from how to make money without work got within the four great walls. He has never stepped outside the gates. No friend or relative has spoken to him in all that period.

ON AN AVERAGE there are thirty-five more boys than girls born in New York City every week. On the average fifty more males than females die. So the female population grows more rapidly than the male.

THE MILITARY authorities of Russia have issued an order that cavalrymen shall not wear their ordinary spurs when they attend a ball. They may wear spurs with blunt rowels, but they may also, if they prefer, appear in civilian clothes, with no spurs at all.

A CURIOUS fact is noticed in connection with the formation of barnacles on ships' bottom. In the majority of cases there is a much heavier growth of grass and barnacles on one side than on the other, and in numerous instances one side will be almost free while the other is as foul as possible.

A PROMINENT Southern man recently confessed that he was never afraid of but two things. "One," he said, "was the Yankee army, and the other is my wife." The army is disbanded, but he has his wife with him yet, so there is no fear of his being a rebel. On the contrary he obeys and fears.

THE CUSTOM of a water boy to carry ice water through the cars began on Connecticut railroads during the war, when water was carried through the car to sick or disabled soldiers, and it so commended itself to the public that in 1864 a law was passed making the service obligatory on all roads running through the State.

A BOY named Drews performed a dangerousfeat in West Orange, N.J., the other day, it is related. The contractor for the drain that had been laid to carry off the standing water in lots on Valley road wanted to determine whether or not the drain was free from obstructions, and offered the lad a small sum to go through it. The pipe is eighteen inches in diameter, is eight feet under ground and is 1,200 feet long. The boy accepted the offer and entered the pipe. Half an hour later he emerged safely from the other end.

THE PASTEUR Institute has, for the first time since antirabic vaccination has been practiced, published complete statistics of the results of the Pasteur treatment for hydrophobia. From January 1, 1886, to December 31, 1889, 7,400 persons bitten by madrabies have been treated; 53 of these have died—a proportion of 0.7 per cent. The proportion of deaths when this treatment is not adopted is 15.90 per cent; consequently, among the 7,400 patients of the Pasteur Institute, 1,255 would have died had not the Pasteur method of treating hydrophobia been carried out.

THERE IS A saloonkeeper in Utica, N.Y., who must be a pretty square man, as saloonkeepers go. He inserts the following advertisement in the local papers: "To whom it may concern: Know ye that, by the payment of $1,527.40, I am permitted to retail intoxicating liquors at my saloon in this city. To the wife, who has a drunkard for a husband, or a friend, who is unfortunately dissipated, I say emphatically: Give me notice of such case in which you are interested, and I will keep him excluded from my place. Let mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers, uncles and aunts do likewise, and their quests will be regarded."

ADVERTISING is not, as many suppose, an outcome of modern necessity, but it is a very ancient practice; and the British Museum possesses a collection of old Greek advertisements printed on leaden plates. The Egyptians were great advertisers. Papyrus leaves over three thousand years old have been found at Thebes, describing runaway slaves, and offering a reward for their capture—poor wretches; and at Pompeii ancient advertisements have been deciphered on the walls. So perhaps after all, the inhabitants of old Athens and Rome and many other ancient cities had to deplore the decoration of their fine buildings and places as much as we do at the present day.

JOSEPH DUVUETTE has been in the Michigan prison for thirty-two consecutive years. He was convicted of murder in Sanilac County in 1858 and condemned to solitary confinement for life. For a number of years (how many he himself cannot tell), he was isolated from anything in the shape of a human being. He never saw a human face or heard a human voice for long weary months at a time. His food was brought to him on a tin plate and hand through a wicket, but he never caught a glimpse of the convict who waited on him. For thirty-two years the only sight of the sky he ever got was from within the four great walls. He has never stepped outside the gates. No friend or relative has spoken to him in all that period.

AN OLD Scotch lady who lived at considerable distance from the parish church was in the habit of driving over to the service. Her coachman, when he considered the sermon nearly at an end, would slip out quietly for the purpose of having the carriage ready by the time the service was concluded. One Sunday John returned to the church, and after ringing about the door for a considerable time grew impatient and popped in his head, discovered the minister haranguing as hard as ever. Creeping down the aisle toward his mistress he whispered in her ear: "Is he no near done yet?" "Dame," retorted the old lady, in a high state of indignation, for her patience had long been exhausted; "he's done half an hour since, but hell no stop."

GEORGE M. PELLMAN, the Pullman palace car inventor, is one of the very rich men of the country. He could draw a check for $30,000,000 and still have enough left him to support his old age in comfort. He has been made knight by the king of Italy, but he does not wear an iron pot on his head, and a steel jacket and pantaloons of iron, as all the knights of song and story and the illustrated picture books do. He dresses in the latest nineteenth century style, and is somewhat fastidious about his clothes. He spends most of his time on the railroad in one of his most luxurious palace cars. He is very kind to his employees, and is consequently very popular. He has built up the town of Pullman, in which all the inhabitants are well-to-do, and want and poverty are unknown. He is a silent reserve man, perhaps a trifle shy.

THE GOVERNMENT seems to be making fair progress in the education of the Indians. There are 30,000 Indian children in the country between the ages of 6 and 16 years. The Government has educated a small percentage of these children, and, so far, the result has proved beneficial. The record of the Indian schools compares favorably with those devoted to the education of white children. But the Indian children are sent back after they complete their education to the tribes, where there is nothing for them to do but to relapse into barbarism. An attempt to live according to the ways of the white people is immediately frowned upon by the Indian fathers and mothers, and there is nothing that the educated Indian can do to earn a living. This will continue to be the case until the tribal relations are broken up by a division of the land in severals.

WILLIAM T. SHERMAN says he has left money enough in his will to build his own monument as he does not wish any such a circus over his dead body as has been made over Gen. Grant. Gen.

Sherman has about reached the scriptural limit of life, though he is young and chipper as ever. He is more approachable than he used to be. During the war he was a hard man to interview, and would frequently scold the interviewer with a fluency and profanity that would do justice to a professional scold. He sometimes has crochety moods even now, but his prevailing attitude is a hospitable and courteous one. Sherman is about as good a story-teller as Abraham Lincoln. He is very fond of the theater and attends them two or three times a week. He always kisses all the young ladies who are introduced to him, to the infinite jealousy of younger men.

Gen. Sherman is a familiar figure in New York City, as he is often seen on the elevated trains or on foot about the streets. He thinks New York is the best place in the world to live.

WE SHOULD do nothing inconsistent with the spirit and genius of our institutions. We should do nothing for revenge, but everything for security; nothing for the past, everything for the present and future.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

TOPICS OF INTEREST TO THE FARMER AND HOUSEWIFE.

Some Valuable Information for the Farmer, Stockman, Poultreer, Nurseryman, and Everyman Connected with the Farm.

Corn Ensilage for Beef.

At the Ontario Agricultural College experiments have been made with corn ensilage as a food for making beef, with the following summary of results: 1. That shipping steers can be fed at a fair profit with pieces of grain as at present, when of good types, when they are purchased at reasonable rates and where there are suitable facilities for feeding. 2. That corn ensilage and meal will fattan as effectively and as cheaply as a ration of roots, hay and meal, and with a less expenditure of labor. 3. That steers fasted twelve hours by simply turning them into a stall at night will struck from sixty to seventy pounds each. 4. That with food at present prices, such as that used above, steers weighing from 1,000 to 1,400 pounds can be made to gain on an average 1.801 pounds per day, and at an average cost of 21.63 cents per day for the food fed.

5. That the value of the animals for breeding purposes was increased by the fattening process an average of 15 cents per pound from commencement to finish.

Cultivation.

After three years' experiments with oats the Ohio Experiment Station summarizes its results as follows: 1. In the comparative test the varieties giving the highest yield in 1889 were the Improved American, Monarch, Rust Proof, Welch, and Colonel King's Hybrid. Prolester and White Shropshire remain among the highest producers. 2. Varieties weighing most to the measured bushel were Centennial, Early Prize Cluster, White Bonanza, Race Horse, White Victoria, and Rutgers White. 3. The highest percentage of oats standing at harvest was in Hopetown, Welch, Widewake, Improved American, and Rust Proof. 4. The varieties giving the highest average yield in a series of years are the White Shropshire, Monarch, Prolester, Early Dakota, and Rust Proof. These have averaged sixty bushels and above. Some of them have done this for seven successive years.

Seedling of oats standing at harvest in Hopetown, Welch, Widewake, Improved American, and Rust Proof. 5. The varieties giving the highest average yield in a series of years are the White Shropshire, Monarch, Prolester, Early Dakota, and Rust Proof. These have averaged sixty bushels and above. Some of them have done this for seven successive years. 6. Seedling of oats of two, six, seven, and eight pecks per acre in 1889 gave yields almost identical. Seedling at less than five and more than eight pecks gave smaller yields. In the average of two seasons' experiments a larger yield has been obtained from sowing at the rate of six pecks than from a larger or smaller quantity of seed.

Thinning Corn.

One of the disadvantages of poor seed corn is that there is a constant tendency on the part of planters to put in too much seed, says the American Cultivator. The idea, of course, is that somewhat fail to grow. Often, however, the poor seed all grows, but much of it has vitality injured so much that it presents only a sorry and weak appearance. When it comes up with five to ten stalks in a hill, the farmer thinks he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for

planting. Sometimes the farmer thinks that he will pull up all but three of the best, but he rarely, and practically, we may say, never does this. It goes against the grain of most farmers to thin out corn. Besides, to do it as it should be done involves more labor than was originally required for furnishing the charcoal was to dig a pit, build a slow fire in it, fill with corn cobs, and cover the cobs with about half a foot of earth, and when we got ready to use it we had a charcoal far superior to wood, and much cheaper. The stock all eat it. The charcoal is mixed in a pulverized state. I put about a pack of charcoal to a ton of either fodder or clover.

THE ORCHARD.

Horticultural hints. CHINASANTHUS for fall flowering must not be allowed to become too tall. Shift into larger pots, as required. Planting them out and putting them in October is the best way, and the least trouble.

The raised beds so common in many countries should not be. Flat beds are better, as they do not dry out.

Raised beds have to be watered every day in the heat of the summer, and are rarely satisfactory.

It is said that the Brighton grape is sufficient in pollen, and that this is why the vine, when planted by itself, does not set fruit well. When planted among other kinds, the trouble is not experienced. In flavor but few kinds equal it.

New kinds of fruits which are to be grafted on other trees should be given as vigorous trees, if possible. Setting them on old, worn-out trees will give no good results. The best of fruits will be poor if set on an ill-conditioned stock.

Do not forget that a thin evergreen can be made as bushy as desired by pruning. The knife can be used on evergreens as readily as on deciduous trees. After a year or two's pruning they become so thick that birds can hardly get through.

TOADS are excellent friends of the gardeners, living on insects which are no benefit in a garden. Were it not that moles make gardens unsightly and sometimes upheave seeds and plants, nothing could be said against them, as they do not eat vegetable matter.

WESTMINSTER men complain that the Bartlett pear is liable to blight at greater degree than some others. Blight is unknown as a serious evil in Pennsylvania, and what little occurs the Bartlett escapes. It is still the leading kind, as it has been for many years.

It is now generally known that pears are of better flavor when gathered a week or ten days before they are ripe. With peaches, however, it is different. They are at their best when left on the tree until fully ripe. Unless from trees in their own gardens, the inhabitants of large cities hardly know the taste of ripe pears.

THE FRUITING of the fig is more of a curiosity than a source of profit in the North. It is true that if beat over, and covered with earth for the winter it is secure, and so it is if wintered in the cellar. But the average man will not take this trouble, hence a solitary tree and there is all that we may reasonably expect to see.

S. D. WILSON, noted ornithologist of Geneva, tells the New York Horticultural Society that he lately injured the foliage of his plum trees, and to some extent his pears, by spraying with London-smoke, to destroy insects. Parrot green does not injure them at all. I have used parrot green in many ways on the foliage of different plants, and always without the slightest injury.

We have known of the mounding of a little earth around the base of a peach tree two weeks before it begins to flower, so that the borer's work, which is generally on inch or two under ground, can easily be got at later on by raking away the mound. But Worcester Wolverton, of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Society, says that when mound up to a good height, no borers will attack the tree at all, the wood being too hard for them. They must have the soft part near the ground or nothing.

WE HAVE known of the mounding of a little earth around the base of a peach tree two weeks before it begins to flower, so that the borer's work, which is generally on inch or two under ground, can easily be got at later on by raking away the mound. But Worcester Wolverton, of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Society, says that when mound up to a good height, no borers will attack the tree at all, the wood being too hard for them. They must have the soft part near the ground or nothing.

THE DAIRY.

Falling Off in Milk.

The reports of heavy yields of milk, so frequently published in live stock periodicals, are of little value, says the Practical Farmer. In forming a just estimate of the adaptability of a cow to dairy purposes, a week's record of her dairy at the milch is often very misleading. We need to know more. Her age, time of dropping her last calf, and full details as to her keep, must accompany the record in order to make it profitable reading. What is true of published accounts of the yields of prize and other noted cattle belonging to others, may for a stronger reason be affirmed of our own cows. Unless we keep continual records of the milk each one of them gives daily, and/or her feed, we are at loss to know whether

ROUND THE CAMP-FIRE

SOLDIERS TALK OVER EXPERIENCES AND SPIN YARN.

Blue and the Gray Revive Incidents of the War, and in a Graphic and Interesting MANNER Tell of Camp, March, 1863.

Twenty-five Years After.

BY MRS. NAPOLEON L. MORAN.

I thought I'd wander here again.

A worn old and gray.

I know the place is changed since then.

The landmarks, where are they?

This is the bold, there winds the stream;

Know you would think it but a dream.

Sil you would think it but a dream,

The battle that was fought.

The wind sighs mournfully, the

hanging limbs of trees struck my

head with stinging force, and I stumbled over intertwining roots and vines that covered the ground. I walked forty or fifty yards along the bank, and then dropped and crept on all fours along the ground, groping with my hands. The cold sweat poured from and over me, my breath seemed to fail. I realized at length what I had for some minutes—and they were as hours of agony—what I had been unwilling to admit to myself—that I had lost my landmarks and knew not where my home lay. Below a rocky bank under that bank was my skiff—but where? Possibly it had been discovered and removed. In such case I had not one chance in a thousand for life. I was in about as big a "funk" as ever I could be, and as ever I expect to again.

woods; and on the log, as I hurriedly cut the line that held my boat to it, I saw the great, supple form of a crouching bloodhound, his red eyes blazing like coals of living fire, his jaws distended his red tongue, froth-dripping, hanging low, and the whole body poised, panther-like, for a spring upon his prey.

With one swift, hard push I sent the boat whirling out into the current, but the savage brute was as quick. With a splash he was in the water close at the side of the craft. I seized the rough and heavy oar and made a desperate effort to drown him, but the network of boughs about the boat which prevented him from easily climbing in, broke the force and directness of the blow and it merely glanced on his ear. The hasty movement on my part nearly capsized the boat and as it careened toward my dumb antagonist he made a desperate effort to place his fore paws upon the side and at the same time fastened his teeth in the twigs that were nailed about it.

"I began to mix up in the crowd,"

Now or never was the time to rid myself of him. I drew my revolver and placed the muzzle between his eyes, but I could hear voices on the shore and sounds of men forcing their way through the brush—one shot would betray my position to the pursuers and bring a deadly volley upon me.

Meanwhile the brute hung on, and his weight and struggle drew the side of the boat below the water, which dashed in and threatened to swamp her. I changed my tactics, thrust the pistol into the breast of my coat, and drew a long knife—a trophy by the way, from a Confederate prisoner; it had been made from a file, was a rude weapon but splendidly tempered, double-edged, sharp-pointed and keen as a razor. Kneeling down I drove it, with all my force, into the throat, under the ear, of the great dog, gave it a quick, artistic turn and then cut through brain and muscle its way out to the other side. The splendid animal gave one convulsive leap, half its length out of the water, then sank beneath forever.

There were a number of random shots fired almost at the same time, showing that the trackers had reached the shore, but I had gained the shadow of the other side, and the boat was so well disguised that even the flashes of their guns did not discover it to the enemy. Some of the balls hummed rather too close to me to be pleasant, but I was left uninjured.

In the misery of that moment, in the sudden and utter helplessness I experienced in being unable to discover my bearings, I was about to let myself gently down into the stream and to float with its current to life or death. Our outposts must be reached; the General must be informed of the positive movement against him. If I failed to get through alive my body might float down the bayou to where our pickets were stationed, and the information they brought me was known to the contrary, or ignominious, horrible death sure to quickly follow his capture, and if he breathes as freely and finds his spirits as joyous as in a ball-room, he is better fitted to pose as a hero than I.

In the misery of that moment, in the sudden and utter helplessness I experienced in being unable to discover my bearings, I was about to let myself gently down into the stream and to float with its current to life or death. Our outposts must be reached; the General must be informed of the positive movement against him. If I failed to get through alive my body might float down the bayou to where our pickets were stationed, and the information they brought me was known to the contrary, or ignominious, horrible death sure to quickly follow his capture, and if he breathes as freely and finds his spirits as joyous as in a ball-room, he is better fitted to pose as a hero than I.

In the misery of that moment, in the sudden and utter helplessness I experienced in being unable to discover my bearings, I was about to let myself gently down into the stream and to float with its current to life or death. Our outposts must be reached; the General must be informed of the positive movement against him. If I failed to get through alive my body might float down the bayou to where our pickets were stationed, and the information they brought me was known to the contrary, or ignominious, horrible death sure to quickly follow his capture, and if he breathes as freely and finds his spirits as joyous as in a ball-room, he is better fitted to pose as a hero than I.

In the misery of that moment, in the sudden and utter helplessness I experienced in being unable to discover my bearings, I was about to let myself gently down into the stream and to float with its current to life or death. Our outposts must be reached; the General must be informed of the positive movement against him. If I failed to get through alive my body might float down the bayou to where our pickets were stationed, and the information they brought me was known to the contrary, or ignominious, horrible death sure to quickly follow his capture, and if he breathes as freely and finds his spirits as joyous as in a ball-room, he is better fitted to pose as a hero than I.

In the misery of that moment, in the sudden and utter helplessness I experienced in being unable to discover my bearings, I was about to let myself gently down into the stream and to float with its current to life or death. Our outposts must be reached; the General must be informed of the positive movement against him. If I failed to get through alive my body might float down the bayou to where our pickets were stationed, and the information they brought me was known to the contrary, or ignominious, horrible death sure to quickly follow his capture, and if he breathes as freely and finds his spirits as joyous as in a ball-room, he is better fitted to pose as a hero than I.

In the misery of that moment, in the sudden and utter helplessness I experienced in being unable to discover my bearings, I was about to let myself gently down into the stream and to float with its current to life or death. Our outposts must be reached; the General must be informed of the positive movement against him. If I failed to get through alive my body might float down the bayou to where our pickets were stationed, and the information they brought me was known to the contrary, or ignominious, horrible death sure to quickly follow his capture, and if he breathes as freely and finds his spirits as joyous as in a ball-room, he is better fitted to pose as a hero than I.

In the misery of that moment, in the sudden and utter helplessness I experienced in being unable to discover my bearings, I was about to let myself gently down into the stream and to float with its current to life or death. Our outposts must be reached; the General must be informed of the positive movement against him. If I failed to get through alive my body might float down the bayou to where our pickets were stationed, and the information they brought me was known to the contrary, or ignominious, horrible death sure to quickly follow his capture, and if he breathes as freely and finds his spirits as joyous as in a ball-room, he is better fitted to pose as a hero than I.

In the misery of that moment, in the sudden and utter helplessness I experienced in being unable to discover my bearings, I was about to let myself gently down into the stream and to float with its current to life or death. Our outposts must be reached; the General must be informed of the positive movement against him. If I failed to get through alive my body might float down the bayou to where our pickets were stationed, and the information they brought me was known to the contrary, or ignominious, horrible death sure to quickly follow his capture, and if he breathes as freely and finds his spirits as joyous as in a ball-room, he is better fitted to pose as a hero than I.

Twenty-five Years After.

BY MRS. NAPOLEON L. MORAN.

I thought I'd wander here again.

A worn old and gray.

I know the place is changed since then.

The landmarks, where are they?

This is the bold, there winds the stream;

Know you would think it but a dream.

Sil you would think it but a dream,

The battle that was fought.

The wind sighs mournfully, the

hanging limbs of trees struck my

head with stinging force, and I stumbled over intertwining roots and vines that covered the ground. I walked forty or fifty yards along the bank, and then dropped and crept on all fours along the ground, groping with my hands. The cold sweat poured from and over me, my breath seemed to fail. I realized at length what I had for some minutes—and they were as hours of agony—what I had been unwilling to admit to myself—that I had lost my landmarks and knew not where my home lay. Below a rocky bank under that bank was my skiff—but where? Possibly it had been discovered and removed. In such case I had not one chance in a thousand for life. I was in about as big a "funk" as ever I could be, and as ever I expect to again.

Twenty-five Years After.

BY MRS. NAPOLEON L. MORAN.

I thought I'd wander here again.

A worn old and gray.

I know the place is changed since then.

The landmarks, where are they?

This is the bold, there winds the stream;

Know you would think it but a dream.

Sil you would think it but a dream,

The battle that was fought.

The wind sighs mournfully, the

hanging limbs of trees struck my

head with stinging force, and I stumbled over intertwining roots and vines that covered the ground. I walked forty or fifty yards along the bank, and then dropped and crept on all fours along the ground, groping with my hands. The cold sweat poured from and over me, my breath seemed to fail. I realized at length what I had for some minutes—and they were as hours of agony—what I had been unwilling to admit to myself—that I had lost my landmarks and knew not where my home lay. Below a rocky bank under that bank was my skiff—but where? Possibly it had been discovered and removed. In such case I had not one chance in a thousand for life. I was in about as big a "funk" as ever I could be, and as ever I expect to again.

Twenty-five Years After.

BY MRS. NAPOLEON L. MORAN.

I thought I'd wander here again.

A worn old and gray.

I know the place is changed since then.

The landmarks, where are they?

This is the bold, there winds the stream;

Know you would think it but a dream.

Sil you would think it but a dream,

The battle that was fought.

The wind sighs mournfully, the

hanging limbs of trees struck my

head with stinging force, and I stumbled over intertwining roots and vines that covered the ground. I walked forty or fifty yards along the bank, and then dropped and crept on all fours along the ground, groping with my hands. The cold sweat poured from and over me, my breath seemed to fail. I realized at length what I had for some minutes—and they were as hours of agony—what I had been unwilling to admit to myself—that I had lost my landmarks and knew not where my home lay. Below a rocky bank under that bank was my skiff—but where? Possibly it had been discovered and removed. In such case I had not one chance in a thousand for life. I was in about as big a "funk" as ever I could be, and as ever I expect to again.

Twenty-five Years After.

BY MRS. NAPOLEON L. MORAN.

I thought I'd wander here again.

A worn old and gray.

I know the place is changed since then.

The landmarks, where are they?

This is the bold, there winds the stream;

Know you would think it but a dream.

Sil you would think it but a dream,

The battle that was fought.

The wind sighs mournfully, the

hanging limbs of trees struck my

head with stinging force, and I stumbled over intertwining roots and vines that covered the ground. I walked forty or fifty yards along the bank, and then dropped and crept on all fours along the ground, groping with my hands. The cold sweat poured from and over me, my breath seemed to fail. I realized at length what I had for some minutes—and they were as hours of agony—what I had been unwilling to admit to myself—that I had lost my landmarks and knew not where my home lay. Below a rocky bank under that bank was my skiff—but where? Possibly it had been discovered and removed. In such case I had not one chance in a thousand for life. I was in about as big a "funk" as ever I could be, and as ever I expect to again.

Twenty-five Years After.

BY MRS. NAPOLEON L. MORAN.

I thought I'd wander here again.

A worn old and gray.

I know the place is changed since then.

The landmarks, where are they?

This is the bold, there winds the stream;

Know you would think it but a dream.

Sil you would think it but a dream,

The battle that was fought.

The wind sighs mournfully, the

hanging limbs of trees struck my

head with stinging force, and I stumbled over intertwining roots and vines that covered the ground. I walked forty or fifty yards along the bank, and then dropped and crept on all fours along the ground, groping with my hands. The cold sweat poured from and over me, my breath seemed to fail. I realized at length what I had for some minutes—and they were as hours of agony—what I had been unwilling to admit to myself—that I had lost my landmarks and knew not where my home lay. Below a rocky bank under that bank was my skiff—but where? Possibly it had been discovered and removed. In such case I had not one chance in a thousand for life. I was in about as big a "funk" as ever I could be, and as ever I expect to again.

Twenty-five Years After.

BY MRS. NAPOLEON L. MORAN.

I thought I'd wander here again.

A worn old and gray.

I know the place is changed since then.

The landmarks, where are they?

This is the bold, there winds the stream;

Know you would think it but a dream.

Sil you would think it but a dream,

The battle that was fought.

The wind sighs mournfully, the

hanging limbs of trees struck my

head with stinging force, and I stumbled over intertwining roots and vines that covered the ground. I walked forty or fifty yards along the bank, and then dropped and crept on all fours along the ground, groping with my hands. The cold sweat poured from and over me, my breath seemed to fail. I realized at length what I had for some minutes—and they were as hours of agony—what I had been unwilling to admit to myself—that I had lost my landmarks and knew not where my home lay. Below a rocky bank under that bank was my skiff—but where? Possibly it had been discovered and removed. In such case I had not one chance in a thousand for life. I was in about as big a "funk" as ever I could be, and as ever I expect to again.

Twenty-five Years After.

BY MRS. NAPOLEON L. MORAN.

I thought I'd wander here again.

CHELSEA STANDARD.
BY
W.M. EMMERT.
OFFICIAL VILLAGE PAPER

FRIDAY, JULY 11, 1890.

THIS MAY BE FOR YOU.

About one month ago we sent out about two hundred statements, requesting those who could to hand or send us a dollar. Seventy-five persons responded promptly and kindly, but others did not. In consequence we were unable to meet an obligation, and extend the time until August 1st. If you have not paid this year's (or perhaps last year's) subscription, will you do so now? It is but a small amount for you, but the aggregate will make quite a sum for us. The best you can.

Francisco people will soon have the privilege of passing their time away in a new depot.

Wheat cutting will be in order in this vicinity this week. The yield promises well.

Prof. Morris will begin his pastorate of the Congregational church at Dexter next Sunday.

David Finley, of Ecio, lost $8,000 worth of barns by lightning during the storm last week.

Mrs Nellie A. Grant, teacher of piano, organ and harmony. Terms reasonable. Address her at Chelsea.

A. Steger found $ recently, and next day found the owner. Most people when they find money, keep it.

Miss Nellie A. Grant, teacher of piano, organ and harmony, has located in the U.S.C. She was formerly a resident of Webster, N.Y., and comes highly recommended by Prof. Landau, director of the Clarendon College conservatory of music, where she has been a student and teacher for seven years.

SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORT.

The following is the semi-annual report of the Congregational Sunday school, and may be of interest to some of our readers:

No. of scholars enrolled, 142.

Average attendance each Sabbath, 93.

Total collection for quarter, $18.30.

Average collection for each Sabbath, $1.44.

Total collection of each class this quarter:

Mr. Kempf's class, $2.28

Mrs. Holmes' 2.10

Mrs. Wines' 5.20

Mrs. Hoag's 8.60

Miss Smith's 8.60

Mr. Hatch's 1.40

Mr. Judson's 3.80

Miss VanTyne's 4.20

Mrs. Davidson's 1.11

Mrs. Crowell's 8.30

Mrs. Wood's 5.50

Mrs. Edwards' 9.20

Matic Smith's 8.40

Total, $18.30

BELLE CHANDLER, Secretary.

C. L. S. C.

The members of the Chantinga Circle of this place closed their year's work on Monday evening, June 22.

In several respects the meetings, which have been held twice a month at the homes of the members, have been more profitable and successful than those of the preceding five years. The Circle has consisted of fifteen members, of whom three are post-graduates. There are two graduates this year, the Misses Mary and Satie VanTyne. The class of '90 has the largest enrollment of any one of the twelve L. S. C. classes. We regret the loss of one of our members, Miss Irene Everett, who has moved to Lansing and no longer answers to that name. On the second Monday in September the Circle and all who wish to become members are requested to meet with our president, Mrs. M. G. Hill, to make arrangements for the work of the coming year. E. R. K.

Lima Luminations.

J. R. Hammom and news is last week. Everybody is at work.

scarce. Several from here went to Dexter the Fourth.

Mike Paul has moved on the Stabler farm.

Lima celebrated Saturday night with fire works and a dance.

D. H. Hanchett, of Jackson, visited at O. B. Guerin's last week.

Rev. A. Stalker, of Clinton, and Rev. A. B. Storus, of Hudson, are spending a few days with I. Storus and family.

John Steubach started for the wheat field Tuesday noon. His horses ran away, breaking the machine all to pieces and slightly injuring John. He now has a new machine.

SOMETHING ABOUT EXET.

The Chicago News is publishing in its columns pictures of Chicago beauties, or of ladies, both married and single, it claims to be such. But they look common enough when contrasted with the fair sex of Grass Lake. The ladies of this village have the fairest faces, handsomest forms and sweetest voices of any corresponding number of fairies on earth. The ladies of Chelsea are rather pretty, but there isn't with two or three exceptions, a female nose in the village that will pass muster. In Stockbridge one-quarter of the female anatomy is on the ground, their shoes being so enormous they are not designated by numbers. When walking they waddle like Pekin ducks, yet there is two to one that the athletic Gladys will be something to say in their favor in the next issue of his Sun. Still, the poor fellow is deeply mortified over the desperately plain-when of his slow-going but cozy little town, and life, as a consequence, is a burden to him. He has our sympathy. — Grace Lake Voice.

New there, Bro. Carlton, the ladies of Grass Lake are all right, but no one would care for one with feet smaller than the thinnest, there is nothing like a good understanding, you know, and then the foot is an index of the heart. Our women are very sympathetic; they even commissionable your own wretched condition, dear brother, and were you to reach a distance they would comb your tangled locks in great shape. — Sun.

The Mirror Separation Dispelled.

An actor at one of the dramatic agencies was in great distress. He had broken the mirror in his room, and he felt that his luck must leave him. He was consoled by a brother actor. "My dear fellow," said this second, "comfort yourself. There is nothing at all in the mirror superstition." Mary Anderson told me that she broke seven hand-glasses in a season, and this season turned out to be the point at which her success began. Reassure yourself. — New York World.

Chinese Wit.

A traveler in the far east relates that Chinese gentlemen of quality consider it beneath their dignity to invent their own jokes. When they go into society each carries with him a collection of bon mots and smart repartees, obtained from various sources, and when he thinks the time has come for him to make a sage remark, he turns over the leaves of his commonplace book till he lights on a suitable passage, which he gravely points out to his neighbor. The latter reads the passage with equal gravity, whereupon he selects from his own stock an appropriate rejoinder, which he shows the other with a bow. Both then smile solemnly, and, after many compliments, resume their conversation. — Il Popolo Romano.

A Ghost in London.

The story goes around in London that a ghost has really been seen. A well-known woman, just before appearing in some private theatricals, saw an old friend standing near the entrance of her dressing room. She greeted him, but he only shook his head and walked away. She learned the next day that her friend had died the day before she thought she saw him. — San Francisco Argonaut.

STATE OF MICHIGAN THE CIRCUIT COURT FOR THE COUNTY OF WASHENAW.
Mary Riggs, complainant.

Chas. H. Riggs, Plaintiff in Chancery.
Chas. J. Riggs, Rowena Riggs, Defendants.

Suit pending in the circuit court for the county of Washtenaw in chancery. At Ann Arbor on the 10th day of June, 1890, it satisfactorily appearing to this court by affidavit on the part of the defendant, Rowena Riggs, a non-resident of this state and a resident of the state of Ohio, that the last known residence of the plaintiff, Chas. H. Riggs, was in this state, but that their present place of residence cannot be ascertained. On motion of David B. Taylor of counsel for complainant, it is ordered that the said defendant, Rowena Riggs, Chas. J. Riggs, and Rowena Riggs, cause their appearance in this cause to be entered within five months from the date of this order, and in case of their appearance and their failure to answer to the complaint, or if no answer be filed and causes thereof to be served on said defendant's collector within forty days after service on them of a copy of said bill and a notice of this order, and that in default thereof, said bill be taken as confessed by said nonresident defendant, and it is further ordered that within twenty days from the date hereof of the said complaint cause a notice of this order to be published in the Chelsea STANDARD, newspaper printed and published in said county of Washtenaw, and in such manner and in such places as in the opinion of the court, the said publication be continued for a week.

EDWARD D. KINNEY, Circuit Judge.
H. A. HOWARD, Register for Complainant.
D. B. TAYLOR, Solicitor for Complainant.

CURLETT'S

Thrush, Pinworm Heave

Remedy.

Curlett's Thrush Remedy is a sure cure for Thrush and rotting away diseases of the feet of stock.

Curlett's Pinworm Remedy (forman or beast) a compound that effectually removes those troublesome parasites, which are such a great source of annoyances to stock.

Curlett's Heave Remedy is a sure cure for Heaves in the earlier stages, and warranted to relieve in advanced stages, if not producing a cure.

TESTIMONIALS.

Joe Stanton of Webster says: "I cured a very bad case of thrush with Curlett's Thrush remedy; the cure was permanent."

Henry Doubt, of Dexter township, says: "My horse was cured of a very bad case of thrush by using Curlett's Thrush Remedy."

Chas. Goodwin, of Webster township (formerly of Dexter township), Washenaw county, says: "I cured the worst case of thrush I have ever seen, with Curlett's Thrush remedy; which made a permanent cure."

George H. Conners, of Dexter township, Washenaw Co., says: "I cured my horse of thrush by the use of Curlett's Thrush Remedy, which I have known others to use and it always produced a permanent cure."

Levi R. Lee, of Webster, Washenaw Co., says: "I had a very valuable horse which was afflicted with thrush five or six years and could not cure it until I used Curlett's Thrush Remedy, which made a permanent cure, could not get half what the horse was worth while he was troubled with thrush."

William Conners, of Dexter township, Washenaw Co., says: "Thrush very nearly ate the entire frog of my horse's foot and I could not get any help for it seemingly, until I got Curlett's Thrush Remedy, which after a second application killed the smell and removed the lameness, curing it in a short time, leaving a good healthy growing frog which in a short time was its natural size."

H. M. Ide, the shoer of Floral Temple, Dexter and other noted trotters says: "Have never known Curlett's Thrush Remedy to fail to produce a permanent cure of thrush; after a few applications, smell and lameness is removed."

Jim Smalley, a noted horse jockey, of central Washtenaw county, says: "Curlett's Heave Remedy never fails to give relief, and to all appearances cures the horses I gave it to, and they never show any sign of distress while being worked hard or driven fast."

A. T. Hughes, one of the supervisors of Washtenaw county, says: "Seven years ago I cured a very bad case of thrush with Curlett's Thrush Remedy; the horse has shown no symptoms of the disease since."

For sale by F. P. Glazier and R. S. Armstrong.

Real Estate For Sale.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, COUNTY OF
Washtenaw, ss.

In the matter of the estate of Calvin Pratt, deceased. Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of an order granted to the undersigned administrator of the estate of said deceased by the Honorable Judge of Probate, for the County of Jackson, on the 23rd day of June A. D. 1890, there will be sold at public vendue to the highest bidder at the office of Turnbull & Wilkinson in the village of Chelsea, in the County of Washtenaw, on the 10th day of August A. D. 1890, at one o'clock in the afternoon of that day, subject to all the encumbrances, by mortgage or otherwise existing at the time of the death of said deceased or at the time of such sale, the following described real estate, to wit:

Fourth. The undivided one-half of the following described pieces of land situated in the said township of Sylvan, particularly described as follows, viz., the west half of the north-west quarter of the northwest quarter of section twenty-two, also about acres of land north of the territorial road as conveyed by Elihu Friesel Horace G. Holcomb, being a part of the southwest quarter of the northwest quarter of said section twenty-two. All commencing at the northeast corner of section twenty-one and running thence westward along the north line of section twenty-one, five chains, then southward along the east line of section twenty-one, twenty-seven chains and eight links to the north line of lot six, block eight, of the village of Sylvan, thence eastward along the north line of the said lot six, eighty and one-half links to the northeast corner thereof, thence southward along the east line of lots six and eleven of said block eight, for chains and fifty links to the centre Main street, thence eastward along the centre of Main street, twenty chains, then thirty-two links to the section line thence north along the east line of section twenty-one, twenty-nine chains and twenty-nine links to the place of ginning. Also village lots number nine and ten of block ten according to recorded plat of said village of Sylvan, situated in the township of Sylvan, Washtenaw county, according to the recorded plat of the village of Sylvan, all enclosed and occupied as one parcel and subject to the dower of Cornelius Pratt, widow of Solomon Pratt, deceased.

Second. The undivided five-twelfths (5-12) of lots six, seven, eight and nine, of block twelve, lot one block thirteen, and lots four, five, six and seven of block seventeen, and all the land embraced within and adjoining said lots, originally laid out for street purposes but never opened or used by the public, situated in the township of Sylvan, Washtenaw county, according to the recorded plat of the village of Sylvan, all enclosed and occupied as one parcel and subject to the dower of Cornelius Pratt, wife of Solomon Pratt, deceased.

Third. The undivided five-twelfths (5-12) of all that part of the west half of the southeast quarter of section twenty-one in said township of Sylvan in Washtenaw county, which lies north of the territorial road and that part of said west half of the southeast quarter of said section twenty-one lying to the west by Hugh McNally's land, on the east by John Knoll's land, on the south by the section line, and on the north by scores of the west half of the north-west quarter of said section twenty-one, containing fifty acres, more or less, an used and occupied together for farming purposes.

Fifth. The undivided one-half of the following described pieces of land situated in the said township of Sylvan, particularly described as follows, viz., the west half of the north-west quarter of the northwest quarter of section twenty-two, also about acres of land north of the territorial road as conveyed by Elihu Friesel Horace G. Holcomb, being a part of the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of said section twenty-two. All commencing at the northeast corner of section twenty-one and running thence westward along the north line of section twenty-one, five chains, then southward along the east line of section twenty-one, twenty-seven chains and eight links to the north line of lot six, block eight, of the village of Sylvan, thence eastward along the north line of the said lot six, eighty and one-half links to the northeast corner thereof, thence southward along the east line of lots six and eleven of said block eight, for chains and fifty links to the centre Main street, thence eastward along the centre of Main street, twenty chains, then thirty-two links to the section line thence north along the east line of section twenty-one, twenty-nine chains and twenty-nine links to the place of ginning. Also village lots number nine and ten of block ten according to recorded plat of said village of Sylvan, situated in the township of Sylvan, all enclosed and occupied as one parcel and subject to the dower of Cornelius Pratt, widow of Solomon Pratt, deceased.

Dated July 3rd, 1890.

WELLS PRATT,
Administrator.

THIS MAN IS HAPPY!

Yes, there is no reason why all can not be happy, a enjoy the good things of this earth. Many persons that wealth is happiness in itself, but if you will look above you, you will notice that the poorer classes usually enjoy themselves the most. Why? Because they have no to that they will lose money, or not make more. They are content if they make an honest living without robbing one else.

Another reason is, that they usually pay cash for what they buy, thus saving not only on what they consume, but they do not spend money for foolish purposes.

We claim that the merchant who sells for cash only, a public benefactor in two ways: first, he saves the money on the goods he consumes, and secondly he teaches economy.

True, it is no disgrace to have money and accumulate something for a "rainy" day. If you are inclined to something by buying good goods at right prices, and for cash or eggs, call on the Standard Grocery House, Wm. E. Mert, proprietor, corner Main and Park streets.

CHELSEA STANDARD

FRIDAY, JULY 11, 1890.

TRAINS LEAVE:

EAST.—5:45, 7:30, A. M. 4:02 P. M.
WEST.—11:15 A. M. 7:48 P. M.

LOCAL NEWSY ITEMS.

Picked up while roaming around this most beautiful village.

A sow and pigs for sale. Apply to D. B. Taylor.

No more legal holidays now until Thursday, Nov. 27th, Thanksgiving day.

There are now forty-three states in the Union. Idaho having been admitted last week.

Nearly 200 of Chelsea's inhabitants spent the Fourth at our neighboring town Dexter.

Mrs. Stalau will sell military goods at a great reduction from now on. Give her a call.

Wanted! Fifty berry pickers on the South Lima Fruit Farm. Work for about six weeks.

Prof. Hall is completing the census of this township. Dr. Holmes being physically unable to do it.

Wm. Bacon is now a full fledged justice of the peace. Offenders brought before him will be dealt with according to law.

Hot and cold baths at Crawford's Barber shop, at only 15 cents. Why you should not be clean and feel comfortable now, is a puzzle.

Dr. Harry Williams, dentist, is now nicely located in Dr. Palmer's office, where he can be found any day in the week (some Sundays excepted).

Mrs. Storms, mother of Mrs. G. W. Boynton, died Sunday, aged about 83 years. The funeral was held Wednesday, Rev. J. H. McIntosh officiating.

The next Republican state convention will be held in Detroit, August 21 and 22. This is about the time the great exposition will be held in the City of the Straits.

Eddie Allen, aged about twelve years, carries his arm in a sling, the result of falling out of a cherry-tree, Thursday last. Dr. Palmer reduced the fractured wrist.

Dr. Talmage estimates the wealth of King Solomon, the extensively married man, at £680,000,000 in gold, and £1,028,000,377 in silver—a grand total of $1,228,000,000.

Weather prophet J. H. VanRiper informs us that during the three "showers" of last week (Sunday, Monday and Tuesday), 3.07 inches of rain fell, the heaviest in this part of the state.

The strawberry crop was rather "short" here, but raspberries and huckleberries promise to make up the shortage. Fortunately sugars are not as high this year as last, so more fruit can be bought.

A cyclone visited Fargo, N. D., last Monday, destroying thousands of dollars worth of property, and killing and maiming many persons. New Orleans was flooded the same day, the rain coming down in sheets.

Sunday last the dead body of Aug. Booze, of near Franklin, was found. Justice Ed. Ward empaneled a jury and Dr. Wright made an examination; the verdict being that deceased came to his death by apoplexy. Mr. Booze was about 63 years of age.

With all the improved farm machinery, farmers are short of help, and some would even pay a very large price for a month's help. Labor-saving machinery does not, by any means, throw men out of employment, as a new employment is thereby created.

Prof. Samuel Strain, who for two years has superintended the Morely schools, was in the village Monday, looking better than ever. With his wife he is spending a short time at her parent's home near Stockbridge. Mr. Strain does not expect to teach next year.

The P. of I. picnic, spoken of in our last issue, to be held August 20th, will take place in the handsome and pleasant grove of W. E. Stevenson, at NORTH LAKE. This is supposed to be the finest grove in Washtenaw county, and contains about five acres of timbered ground.

The apple crop near Saline will be an entire failure this year.

Two dozen papers at this office, for five cents. Come quickly if you want them.

Justice Butts, of Ann Arbor, tried 57 criminal cases during the last five months.

Saline's school board has engaged the old corps of teachers with the exception of principal and preceptor.

Chelsea's postmaster will probably be appointed this month, as Mr. McKune's commission expires August 17.

Michigan will get $12,214.93 of the $400,000 appropriation for arming and equipping the militia during the present fiscal year.

Wool is not moving yet, but considerable is being contracted for at 25 cents up. Farmers are disappointed, and so are buyers. It's more satisfaction to the buyer to be able to pay a big price.

Master Thos. Cooley Angell and Miss Sarah Angell, aged about six and eight, of Detroit, who are with R. C. Glenn, at North Lake, caught a 10-ounce pickerel while fishing last week. How's that for little anglers?

The several merchants and others in this place sell about $10,000 worth of tobacco, snuff and cigars annually. As the Patrons are trying to economize, we wonder how much they pay for a thing which is worse than useless to them?

The young ladies of the German Lutheran church will serve ice cream and cake in the Klein building, next Saturday evening. Don't miss this opportunity of getting some of the frozen sweetness, as the ladies know how to make and serve it.

It is a pleasure to announce that, beginning with Sunday evening next the several churches will hold union meetings. The meeting next Sunday will be held at the Congregational church. Somewhere in the good book there is something in regard to brothers dwelling in harmony. Let it be so in this case.

Mr. and Mrs. Pratt, of Worcester, Mass., parents of Mrs. Rev. Bailey, arrived in the village Thursday, rather unexpectedly. Mr. Pratt has charge of a large grocery store in that city, having been in the same place forty-two years. The store has not handled tobacco during the last forty years, and will not as long as Mr. Pratt manages the same.

Prof. E. C. Glenn, principal of the Upper Peninsula business college, formerly of North Lake, and Miss Carrie Bruce, daughter of Dr. Bruce of Albion, were married last week Thursday, spending Sunday with the groom's parents at North Lake, leaving for their northern home Monday.

The well wishes of a large circle of friends are with them.

About 3 o'clock last Friday morning (the Fourth), the fire bell rang, announcing that a fire was in progress.

Investigation proved it to be a part of the old Godfrey house, just in the rear of the STANDARD office, and belonging to Mr. Caspary. It had been set afire. The loss, though not great, is not covered by insurance. While the street looks better for its absence, yet we do not approve of this method of removing objectionable buildings.

The annual school meeting will be held in the Union School building next Monday evening, at 7:30 o'clock. Two trustees in place of Dr. Palmer and Fred Vogel will be elected. The question of free text books will also be voted upon.

As two-thirds of the taxes you pay are school taxes, why not be present? No patron of the school can afford to be absent from the meeting when his money is voted away. Come out and select men who have the welfare of the school at heart.

Reports from the various wool centers show that up to last night Clinton county had marketed 426,000 pounds, about 90,000 less than last year's total crop; Oakland county had marketed at Pontiac about 150,000 pounds, 500,000 less than last year's total; St. Clair county has marketed 85,000, just 60 per cent less than last year's crop. Genesee county farmers are holding back, and Sanilac stops to the front over last year's total. Sanilac county's crop netted $128,747 this year.

Dr. Brantley is no longer a health officer at Ann Arbor.

The county treasurer paid $62.30 for sparrow orders, last week.

The Leader says that Mr. Schenk, of this place, has bought a fine horse at Dexter.

The county treasurer paid $7,854.91 into the state treasury last week, as state taxes.

One of our city undertakers had fifteen funerals to attend during June, and eighty during the first six months of the year. — Argus.

Turnbull & Wilkinson now occupy their handsome offices over the STAN-BAUER, where they will be glad to see you in business or as a caller.

Warren Halleck, of Ann Arbor, aged from 25 cents up. Farmers are disappointed, and so are buyers. It's more satisfaction to the buyer to be able to pay a big price.

States amounts to a little over fifteen dollars per capita. The Canadian national debt is forty dollars per capita.

E. L. Cooper's Holstein cow gave an average daily production of 52 lbs. 12 ozs. of milk, for a period of 56 days ending last week. — Grass Lake News.

The Ypsilanti weather reporter says that in June, 1890, 2.09 inches of rain fell; in 1889, 3.50 inches, and in 1888, 3.35 inches. Can this be correct?

It seems that not less than a dozen cows were killed by lightning in this country during the storms last week. Keep away from cattle while electricity abounds.

If the McKinley tariff bill goes into effect the noisy fire cracker will cost about three times as much next year as this, as the tariff is raised on it from 23 cents to 63 cents per box.

Ex-Senator Thomas W. Palmer, of Detroit, was elected president of the world's fair commission at a meeting held in Chicago recently. A good selection, and an honor to Michigan.

Superintendent of the Census Porter says that from present indications the returns of the enumerators will show a total population of the United States of 64,500,000, against 50,152,783 in 1880.

Fred Sawyer and Miss Alice O. Derby were married Monday. The groom is a son of Hon. A. J. Sawyer, and the bride has been a stenographer and typewriter in Mr. Sawyer's office. Argus.

The following officers of the Baptist Y. P. C. A. were recently elected: President, Frank Ellsworth; vice president, Miss Anna Tichenor; secretary, Miss Ella Barber; treasurer, Miss Nettie Hoover.

The Fourth was not celebrated in this place, the streets being deserted. Nearly everybody went to Dexter or Jackson. The office here sold something like $125 worth of excursion tickets, at any rate.

Miss Dorothy Blake, of Grass Lake, was awarded $1,750 last week, for damages sustained in Waterloo township, last year, by being thrown from the buggy, her horse taking flight at some logs in the road.

Damien Heim, of Sylvan, has a new boy which he says weighs 14 pounds. Doubts are expressed in the neighborhood upon the latter point. Still the youngster, judging from his voice, is rather hefty. — Grass Lake News.

Our readers will be pleased to learn that a handsome boy made his appearance at the home of Gilbert and Mrs. Gay, of Stockbridge, last Saturday, July 5th. Trust he may live to gladden their hearts for many years.

A sort of minute maggot is said to be working in the blooming heads of clover, damaging it considerably in some sections. Truly the farmers' and fruit growers' insect foes grow more numerous each year. — Saline Observer.

The bill of the Eastern Michigan Insane Asylum at Pontiac, against this county for the past three months was $706.16. This includes the board, repairs, clothing, etc., of twenty persons, fifteen of whom have been in the asylum all of the three months. — Argus.

L. Z. Foerster, the Ypsilanti brewer, has placed an artificial ice machine in his brewery, and hereafter will not be dependent upon the whims of winter for his supply of ice. The machinery will be run by a seventy-five horse power Corliss engine, and cost $10,000.

YOUR FOLKS AND OURS.

Mrs. Sparks was in the village yesterday.

C. H. Kempf was in Ann Arbor Monday.

Frank Broderick is visiting friends in town this week.

Ora Taylor, of Detroit, spent Sunday with his parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. Dr. R. M. Speer, of Battle Creek, visited friends here the Fourth.

Miss Jessie Everett is spending the week with her sister, Mrs. Feener, in Lansing.

J. H. Evans, who has been in business at Dexter for years, has removed to Webster.

Rose jars, (filled with mustard now) only 20 cents at the Standard Grocery House. Just what every lady wants.

Washtubs, washboards, mops, clothes lifters, clothes pins, clothes pin bags etc. just received at the Standard Grocery House.

The Standard Grocery House has just received a fine line of canned goods, including plums, white cherries, pine apple, pumpkin, corn, beans, peas, peaches etc., etc. If you want something nice call on us.

Miss Meyers, of Grand Ledge, was the guest of Mrs. C. H. Dempf, this week.

Mrs. Jay Everett is in Stockbridge this week, with her daughter, Mrs. Gilbert Gay.

Mr. A. Harper, of Corunna, spent the past week with numerous friends in this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Roedel visited friends at Bridgewater a few days of the past week.

C. T. Conklin was in Big Rapids last week, visiting his daughter, Mrs. Alice Whitaker.

Miss Carrie Freer will spend the summer at Bay View, for which place she left Monday.

Miss Maud Freer closed her first term of school last Thursday with appropriate exercises.

Mr. and Mrs. James Taylor and daughter Lottie visited friends in Detroit last week Thursday.

Edith Novos left Wednesday morning for Port Huron, and will spend the vacation at Huronia Beach.

Miss Ruth Loomis entertained quite a number of her young friends last evening, in honor of her birthday.

Misses Jennie Saley and Irene Mills, of Bridgewater, spent Sunday with the latter's sister, Mrs. F. W. Roedel.

Hon. Geo. C. Codd and family, of Detroit, arrived in this place Monday, for a week's outing at Cavanaugh lake.

Dr. Schmidt and wife are now pleasantly located in Miss Conklin's house, corner of East and Jefferson streets.

Judge Thomas Cooley spent Saturday last at Gleason's North Lake resort. Some forty persons are there most of the time now.

Mrs. Amelia Glover left for Keystone the first of the week in company with Miss May Shunk, where she will spend the summer.

Mrs. McAllister, who has been the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Durand, for a week, has returned to her home in Detroit.

Misses Nellie McLarons Dena Keek and Carrie Vogel, who have been camping at North Lake for the past week or two, have returned home.

Miss Zoe BeGole entertained about twenty-five of her playmates, Wednesday, it being Zoe's birthday. The little ones had a royal good time, too.

Mrs. L. W. Allyn, nee "Doll" Loomis, who has been residing at Syracuse, N. Y., will shortly remove to Newark, N. J., where she will be with relatives.

Jas. Beasley spent a few days of the past week with parents in this place, leaving Monday for Mackinac. James is a lime reparer for the Western Union people.

Miss Nettie Hoover, our compositor, who has missed but a day at a time during the past sixteen months, spent the past week with Mr. and Mrs. and Miss May Sparks, in Jackson.

Miss Tillie Mutchel, who graduated at the Normal, was a Chelsea visitor a few days of this week, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Kenif. She will spend vacation at her home in Grand Ledge.

Miss Louise Buehler and Miss Tonia Mohrlock spent the Fourth very pleasantly with relatives at the Exchange hotel in the city of Marshall. They are nice young ladies, and their friends are glad they had so enjoyable a time.

COOK'S COTTON ROOT COMPOUND

Composed of Cotton Root, Tamny and Pennyroyal—a recent discovery by an old physician. Is now used monthly—everyday. Price $1. by mail.

London, ask your druggist for Cook's Cotton Root Compound and take no substitute. Ad.

MISS POND LILY COMPANY, No. 3 Fisher

Block, 131 Woodward ave., Detroit, Mich.

Sold by Glazier, the Druggist, Chelsea and other drug stores.

For sale by R. S. Armstrong.

100% Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Price $1.00 per bottle.

For sale by R. S. Armstrong.

100% Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Price $1.00 per bottle.

For sale by R. S. Armstrong.

100% Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Price $1.00 per bottle.

For sale by R. S. Armstrong.

100% Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Price $1.00 per bottle.

For sale by R. S. Armstrong.

JANET LEE

OR

In the Shadow of the Gallows.

BY DAVID LOWRY.

CHAPTER XI—Continued.

"Nay," said Proctor, "I will pay my own score. We will be none the less friends. And since you seem interested in the matter, I can tell you John Lee was always considered one of the most courageous men in Salem. No man did more for his friends in the Indian wars, and there are men in high places who will see that justice is done his family."

All in the inn looked at Proctor, whose voice was lifted so that all there could hear him. The sailor extended his hand. "A steady tack I can keep run of; it's the fellow that wears about. I've no patience with. As well speak to a weather vane as some I've not here. So, mate, you are standing by John Lee's family. I like your cut, more because it's like drawing teeth to get a hearty answer to a simple question in Salem. Tell me, what like is this John Lee, whose wife and daughter are in league with witches?"

"A man of goodly presence; a very upright but unhappy man. His wife and daughter are sadly misrepresented."

"If so bad and my mates were asleep, and some one should find signs of a witch, what though I nor my mates had caught up with the witch, dost tell me I and my mates were to be held to account for helping witches in the forest. Tell me what the law says. I want to take my bearings proper bearing on this matter, because no man or woman can do, so they'd say, free from witches when they choose to come augh. That be like the story they tell of John Lee."

"No," said the landlord, breaking his silence. "It were well it was no worse. Tis said his wife or daughter practice witchcraft. There be other things, too, which hat gives color to the rumors."

"So?" said the sailor. Then he hurried,

"Many a man has hanged on rumor."

Meantime Grizelle Meade left the room,

and her husband served the customers. He attempted to receive the sailor's score, at the same time Arthur Proctor unbuttoned his purse and held it across his knee,

"Well, mistress, there's some would say, if they saw what happened to me, it's enough to hong him. Many a man has been hanged for less."

"O, sir, if you speak of it, it will ruin

"No doubt without doubt. But if I do not speak of it, it will be because I must not."

"If you heard the story you would have pity on us both. Watson, our only son was murdered in that hotel."

The sailor laid down his knife and fork

and looked at her.

"It's true. All Salem knows it. But my son was killed by a stranger. He came the night before. He shot my son and ran away, and no one was ever seen

"A rare thing as my eyes ever gazed on—and I've seen somethin' too abroad—is that mate."

Several turned to see what it was that excited the sailor's curiosity. Giles Ellis bowed over the edge of the purse exposed on Proctor's knee. Daniel Meade, who had returned the sailor his change, slowly turned, too. One of the customers at moment stooped to examine the purse closer. When he raised his head, Daniel Meade uttered a hoarse cry and fell heavily upon the floor.

"Stand aside," said the sailor. "Give him fresh air, ye rubbers. He is in a fit."

Grizelle Meade, entering at that instant

said in an authoritative tone: "Help me to let with him."

She did not seem alarmed; her manner was deliberate, as her words were decisive.

It was Giles Ellis who raised the landlord's head and held his shoulders, the sailor lifted his feet, and Grizelle led the way into the adjoining room. Presently the sailor reentered the taproom, and looking about him said:

"Is Daniel Meade often taken with fits?"

No one answered. Arthur Proctor's seat was vacant. The sailor looked from one to the other, smiled grimly, then left the inn without waiting for the slow coming answer. When he returned an hour later there was no one present save Giles Ellis, who was taking his leave.

CHAPTER XII.—THE SOMNAMBULIST.

"If you should hear any noise through the night, pay no attention to it," said Grizelle Meade, as she showed the sailor to his room.

"Unless it's a canion, or something like it, it'll not disturb me. I'm a sound and long sleeper, afford and ashore," the sailor answered.

"My husband may speak loud—when he is this way, which is not often. Give yourself no concern, sir."

When he was alone, the sailor looked about him, undressing himself speedily. He lay down on the bed, and fell sound asleep. His clothes, his money—all that he possessed—was tossed on the floor beside the bed. This man seemed to have no taste, or nothing to lose. His sleep was dreamless, sound as a baby's, and as quiet.

It was well on in the morning when he awoke with a start. Some one was approaching his room. The sailor sat up and listened intently. There were foot-steps approaching his room. He heard them distinctly.

The door of his room was pushed open slightly. The sailor could not hear the hand on it. But there was no light. Whoever was at the door did not require a light.

The intruder was nearing his bed. The sailor slipped out of it, on the side nearest the wall, and stood still. He could hear the intruder breathing. Who could this intruder be? The step was heavier than that of the landlady. The sailor smelt—he had so little fear in his composition that he smiled at the thought of the landlord attempting anything with a man like him.

The intruder stepped silently to the side of the bed. His breathing became painful. There was a blow. The sailor knew well what that sound meant. Then he reached out a hand with a grip like a think knot, or this matter would have been cleared up before this. Did you mark what the sailor said about Martin Lee last night?"

"Tis as I thought. But you do not escape me so easily," said the sailor, as he wrestled with the landlord.

Now there was a sound of steps below. The steps approached the room quickly. There was a ray of light, and then the landlady hastily entered.

Her face was drawn with terror. Her hands trembled violently. She could scarcely speak.

"Daniel! It is we, Daniel!"

The landlord, released by the sailor, passed a hand over his head like a man dazed. He looked at the sailor, at the knife in the bed clothes, at his wife.

"What is this, Grizelle? What are you doing here? Why is this man here?"

"Come, you have been dreaming,

Daniel."

She took him by the arm and was leading him away when the sailor stopped forward, withdrew the murderous knife from the bed clothes, and handing it to her said, with a meaning look:

"I think you had best take this with you. And I advise you to get your husband into some other calling, lest his dreams cost some ody their life."

Grizelle Meade took the knife without answering a word, and let her husband, who staggered like a man suddenly bereft of understanding, from the room.

"A steady tack I can keep run of; it's the fellow that wears about. I've no patience with. As well speak to a weather vane as some I've not here. So, mate, you are standing by John Lee's family. I like your cut, more because it's like drawing teeth to get a hearty answer to a simple question in Salem. Tell me, what like is this John Lee, whose wife and daughter are in league with witches?"

"A man of goodly presence; a very upright but unhappy man. His wife and daughter are sadly misrepresented."

"If so bad and my mates were asleep, and some one should find signs of a witch, what though I nor my mates had caught up with the witch, dost tell me I and my mates were to be held to account for helping witches in the forest. Tell me what the law says. I want to take my bearings proper bearing on this matter, because no man or woman can do, so they'd say, free from witches when they choose to come augh. That be like the story they tell of John Lee."

"No," said the landlord, breaking his silence. "It were well it was no worse. Tis said his wife or daughter practice witchcraft. There be other things, too, which hat gives color to the rumors."

"So?" said the sailor. Then he hurried,

"Many a man has hanged on rumor."

Meantime Grizelle Meade left the room,

and her husband served the customers. He attempted to receive the sailor's score, at the same time Arthur Proctor unbuttoned his purse and held it across his knee,

"Well, mistress, there's some would say, if they saw what happened to me, it's enough to hong him. Many a man has been hanged for less."

"O, sir, if you speak of it, it will ruin

"No doubt without doubt. But if I do not speak of it, it will be because I must not."

"If you heard the story you would have pity on us both. Watson, our only son was murdered in that hotel."

The sailor laid down his knife and fork

and looked at her.

"It's true. All Salem knows it. But my son was killed by a stranger. He came the night before. He shot my son and ran away, and no one was ever seen

"A rare thing as my eyes ever gazed on—and I've seen somethin' too abroad—is that mate."

Several turned to see what it was that excited the sailor's curiosity. Giles Ellis bowed over the edge of the purse exposed on Proctor's knee. Daniel Meade, who had returned the sailor his change, slowly turned, too. One of the customers at moment stooped to examine the purse closer. When he raised his head, Daniel Meade uttered a hoarse cry and fell heavily upon the floor.

"Stand aside," said the sailor. "Give him fresh air, ye rubbers. He is in a fit."

Grizelle Meade, entering at that instant

said in an authoritative tone: "Help me to let with him."

She did not seem alarmed; her manner was deliberate, as her words were decisive.

It was Giles Ellis who raised the landlord's head and held his shoulders, the sailor lifted his feet, and Grizelle led the way into the adjoining room. Presently the sailor reentered the taproom, and looking about him said:

"Is Daniel Meade often taken with fits?"

No one answered. Arthur Proctor's seat was vacant. The sailor looked from one to the other, smiled grimly, then left the inn without waiting for the slow coming answer. When he returned an hour later there was no one present save Giles Ellis, who was taking his leave.

CHAPTER XIII.—A WICKED COMPACT.

At the hour when the Globe Inn was free of customers, Giles Ellis entered it, and inquired after the welfare of the landlord who was abed. "I came," said Giles Ellis in his insinuating manner, "to inquire how he is." I was sorry to see him in such straits."

Nobody knew what he suffers. What I have gone through in the past twenty-four hours."

"What think you caused Daniel to fall in a fit, Mistress Meade?"

"That needs no answer. Ever since my poor son was killed, the very sight of a sailor distresses him."

"There is no mistaking it."

"You'll not think he meant it."

"No. Why didn't he come in the dark straight to the bed? Didn't I see him wake up? He was as sound asleep as ever man was. That I could swear. A sleek-walker—that is what he is."

"But he never walked until this trouble began."

"I can believe that. Well, it will do no good spreading reports. Do you keep an eye on him. Were best you guard all lodgers well. No, not—I'll do you no harm. I'll make no trouble for honest people. It's only rogues I hang."

When he had eaten breakfast, he ate heartily, like a man who relished his victuals—he paid his score and went away.

CHAPTER XIV.—THE SOMNAMBULIST.

"If you should hear any noise through the night, pay no attention to it," said Grizelle Meade, as she showed the sailor to his room.

"Unless it's a canion, or something like it, it'll not disturb me. I'm a sound and long sleeper, afford and ashore," the sailor answered.

"My husband may speak loud—when he is this way, which is not often. Give yourself no concern, sir."

When he was alone, the sailor looked about him, undressing himself speedily. He lay down on the bed, and fell sound asleep. His clothes, his money—all that he possessed—was tossed on the floor beside the bed. This man seemed to have no taste, or nothing to lose. His sleep was dreamless, sound as a baby's, and as quiet.

It was well on in the morning when he awoke with a start. Some one was approaching his room. The sailor sat up and listened intently. There were foot-steps approaching his room. He heard them distinctly.

The door of his room was pushed open slightly. The sailor could not hear the hand on it. But there was no light. Whoever was at the door did not require a light.

The intruder was nearing his bed. The sailor slipped out of it, on the side nearest the wall, and stood still. He could hear the intruder breathing. Who could this intruder be? The step was heavier than that of the landlady. The sailor smelt—he had so little fear in his composition that he smiled at the thought of the landlord attempting anything with a man like him.

The intruder stepped silently to the side of the bed. His breathing became painful. There was a blow. The sailor knew well what that sound meant. Then he reached out a hand with a grip like a think knot, or this matter would have been cleared up before this. Did you mark what the sailor said about Martin Lee last night?"

"Tis as I thought. But you do not

"Did you not hear him tell how he was marked by Martin Lee in a quarrel?"

"Yes; and how he was, Martin Lee's friend. I heard him answer you that."

"And how he knew that Martin Lee was coming this way, and should be in Salem now?"

"Yes; I heard all."

"Think you Martin Lee is here?"

"Was it not a sailor killed your son?"

"It was. Grizelle bowed her head and put her apron to her eyes."

"That sailor was he not Martin Lee, think you?"

"I never thought more about him than of the sailor who slept here last night."

"I never thought more about him than of the sailor who slept here last night."

"Why should you charge Martin Lee?"

"Because this man says he was coming here. This is a matter none can hear. I came to speak to you alone. Not at Lee did come to Salem. He is here, where he is now no one knows, but in good time it will be shown he was in Salem. Grizelle Meade, if you are vont with me, will see just as plain to Martin Lee."

"And how has he to do this thing?"

"What would you have us do?"

"First, promise that you will never breathe what I will tell you."

"You can trust me; I trust you," answered Grizelle Meade slowly.

"I know that Martin Lee was seen in John Lee's house on the morning after the murder."

"Well, and if he were?"

"Can you not say? Is it not plain?"

"Why did not John Lee bid him stay? Because he dare not."

"Tis well known Martin Lee was a wild youth. Nay, then, to tell you more, John Lee forbade him his house."

"How know you this?"

"That is my secret, Grizelle Meade."

"But even if it were not so report?"

"I thought you were honest. Tis was Martin Lee and the Marshall saw in this room. The sailor from Africa, with stories of diamond fields."

"Why, then, that could never be, and I know not."

Giles Ellis looked at her keenly. A struggle was revealed in Grizelle's man's eyes. Something was combated—pressed.

"It is all clear to me now. It was none other than Martin Lee. I verily believe who found shelter here that night. But who—why did he not make himself known?"

"Why, he had good reasons, doubtless, than you had plenty to do without revealing himself to us here, else John Lee would not drive him from his door."

"That is reason, too," said Grizelle Meade slowly.

"But if ever it comes to the authorities, you must be sure was Martin Lee was here. Are, and so must Daniel

A "LOOKOUT" ON SHORE.

How the Arrival of Steamships Is Noticed at Pine Island Light.

Pine Island (a desirable strip of sand on the south shore of Long Island) appeared at first a most unpromising place, with its one old rambling hotel, its light-house and signal station; but like many other unexplored regions, it afforded some occupation to make a day pass very pleasantly. The lighthouse is the very first seen by our returning mariners. Another bit of interest is the well of delicious pure water coming up out of the Sakura-like sand with a few yards of the ocean, and the fact that it is on an island makes it all the more curious. The signal station is a building of pyramidal form firmly anchored by iron stays, the lower part containing the living room, and the upper being the observatory, or watch tower. Here Mr. Keegan has his photographic instruments and the telescope through which he continually sweeps the horizon day and night in search of his winged guest. The first appearance of a steamer owing to the opacity of the smoke, as we all know, is, of course, the smoke; next, her masts come into view, and, finally, her hull. The last can be seen at a distance of thirteen and one-half miles. But Mr. Keegan's quick eye, having discerned the smoke, waits only for her masts, and then names the vessel. "What?" you say. "Before the hull appears, or has he seen her colors?" You are not more surprised than I was to learn that he invariably names ships from the tops of the masts alone; that is, by the spaces between the masts, which you will find if you have never noticed them before, in all ships. Quickly the news is flashed over the wires to New York, and enabled to Liverpool hours before the vessel reaches her pier—a message carrying joy to many an expectant household, and important information to commercial houses. The responsibility that rests upon a correct guess is very great, as you can see, and the disastrous results of a mistake one can imagine. Of course the calculations of a ship's arrival after leaving a foreign port are of great assistance, but ships are often delayed by storms or accidents, and again are hastened by favorable winds and smooth seas, so "eternal vigilance" must be the motto of this faithful watchman of the sea. Once he told me, he discovered through fog a tiny line of smoke, so indistinct he could scarcely define it. He watched closely, and presently he fancied he saw another, which indicated two vessels. The atmosphere was too thick to see more, so upon this very slight evidence he telegraphed the arrival of one of our largest steamers, doing so with great anxiety, but, happily, it proved correct. The night signals are colored lights flashed at intervals.

Under Contract.

A man who was taking in some of the sights at Brighton the other day was led to notice a short-haired young man in a loud check suit, who was accompanied on his rounds by a couple of younger chaps, who seemed to do him honor and to imitate his actions as far as possible. After while he with the short hair seemed to get up an aching for a row, and he drove the first peg by approaching the man in a swaggering way and impudent demanding:

"If you the cove that's got a cigar for me?"

He received an emphatic negative, when he went his eyebrows, and he continued:

"The cove is inclined to be sassy, but perhaps it's 'cause he don't know me. Chollie, you and Dan give him an eye-opener, and while he assumed a superposed graceful pose, with his hat plucked over his ear, "Chollie" approached and whispered:

"He's bad—awfully bad! He's do wickedest fightin' in New York he is. He's going to challenge any kid in the world."

"He'd better go and dig for clams," growled the man.

"What's dat?" demanded the awfully bad.

"Do cove wants his eye punched, and if it wasn't fur dat copper-ovor dere I'd do it. Perhaps he'll do me honch to step-around behind de pavilion!"

The man said he would and did, and as he reached a secluded spot and pealed his coat the wickedest observed:

"I begs do cove's pardon, but I just remember dat I am under contract not to fight until I meets do Oswego. Whirlwind, I should like to put him to sleep, but it would be agin' contract."

It was suggested that the other two might kindly for him, but he replied:

"Chollie is my trainer and Dan is my backer, and it would be agin' de contract." The man then suggested that he had a licking in store for the three, and that he should begin business in thirty seconds; but before firen' had chap'd he was alone.—New York Sun.

SIMON DENTON, who committed suicide at Union Tuesday of last week, was one of four brothers who became famous as teachers of writing, and all of whom lived to old age, says the Lewiston Advertiser. "Soldom" was the seventh boy born to his mother in succession, and, as he used to say, "she named me Soldom, because it seldom occurred for a woman to have seven boys, one right after the other." One of the neighbors said she ought to have called me "Denton," for she had boys so often." His suicide was due to the recent combination of school-book publishers, and fear that his financial interests would suffer for it, though he lived on one of the best farms in Union, in a large two-story house, with a barn eighty feet long, and kept a large stock of cattle and horses, with hired men the year round. He was eighty-one years old.

The latest report of the Birmingham Free Libraries Committee shows that the book render of the past year were divided as follows: Scholars and students, 1,392; clerks and bookkeepers, 1,138; errand and office boys, 301; tailors, 208; shop assistants, 290; jewelers, 216; compositors and printers, 192; milliners and dressmakers, 160. Almost at the bottom of the list come journalists, 6; news agents, 2; reporters, 2. Is this because they have libraries of their own, or because the people who write in newspapers lose the taste for reading books?

A JEWISH SYNAGOGUE to be erected in Baltimore will, it is said, be the only specimen of pure Byzantine architecture in the United States.

M. L. DUNNIN, of Milwaukee, is Hale and hearty at four score, and for sixty-three years he has not tasted of tea or coffee.

Cow and Pig Make Friends.

A popular case of brute attachment came under the notice of Miss Freddie Lehman not long since. A little stray pig about as big as a bar of soap, that had become lost from its mother, took up with one of Miss Lehman's milk cows, and the cow and the pig became wonderfully attached to each other. The pig suckled the cow as if she were its own mother, and the cow fondled the pig as if it were her own calf. Neither could be separated from the other, and they seemed perfectly miserable when apart for only a few minutes. The little pig foraged for the cow, and would often slip into the stable, where the horses were feeding, and, stealing their provender, carry it out to its adopted mother; and the cow would swing to any mortal it knew the pig would like, and carry it to her little foster child. The two formed themselves into a society for mutual protection and grandeurization, and they prospered and grew fat in their happiness. But a dark day came. After a little growth and got fat, and Miss Lehman sold it to the butcher. The cow immediately began to grieve, and lost her appetite. And the cow still continues to mourn her loss, and her eyes bear a peculiarly sad and pathetic expression. —Hans Nys.

The world over there have been observed about 100 species of mosquitoes. What? you say. "Before the hull appears, or has he seen her colors?" You are not more surprised than I was to learn that he invariably names ships from the tops of the masts alone; that is, by the spaces between the masts, which you will find if you have never noticed them before, in all ships. Quickly the news is flashed over the wires to New York, and enabled to Liverpool hours before the vessel reaches her pier—a message carrying joy to many an expectant household, and important information to commercial houses. The responsibility that rests upon a correct guess is very great, as you can see, and the disastrous results of a mistake one can imagine. Of course the calculations of a ship's arrival after leaving a foreign port are of great assistance, but ships are often delayed by storms or accidents, and again are hastened by favorable winds and smooth seas, so "eternal vigilance" must be the motto of this faithful watchman of the sea. Once he told me, he discovered through fog a tiny line of smoke, so indistinct he could scarcely define it. He watched closely, and presently he fancied he saw another, which indicated two vessels. The atmosphere was too thick to see more, so upon this very slight evidence he telegraphed the arrival of one of our largest steamers, doing so with great anxiety, but, happily, it proved correct. The night signals are colored lights flashed at intervals.

An Unfair Advantage.

Young man in charge of weighing machine in time museum. Come, gentlemen, step forward and be weighed. If I don't guess within six pounds of your exact weight it will cost you nothing; if less within six pounds it will cost you only 5 cents. Step forward, gentlemen.

Hard Sittison—Young fellow, guess me.

Y. M.—One hundred and let's see, six pounds. What, only 75? I'm out. Next!

H. S.—You guessed me right a month ago, but I've lost weight since then.

Y. M.—I guessed you correctly a month ago. So I'll remember you now. And you've lost weight, you say? Lost seven pounds, haven't you?

Under Contract.

A man who was taking in some of the sights at Brighton the other day was led to notice a short-haired young man in a loud check suit, who was accompanied on his rounds by a couple of younger chaps, who seemed to do him honor and to imitate his actions as far as possible.

After while he with the short hair seemed to get up an aching for a row, and he drove the first peg by approaching the man in a swaggering way and impudent demanding:

"If you the cove that's got a cigar for me?"

He received an emphatic negative, when he went his eyebrows, and he continued:

"The cove is inclined to be sassy, but perhaps it's 'cause he don't know me. Chollie, you and Dan give him an eye-opener, and while he assumed a superposed graceful pose, with his hat plucked over his ear, "Chollie" approached and whispered:

"He's bad—awfully bad! He's do wickedest fightin' in New York he is. He's going to challenge any kid in the world."

"He'd better go and dig for clams," growled the man.

"What's dat?" demanded the awfully bad.

"Do cove wants his eye punched, and if it wasn't fur dat copper-ovor dere I'd do it. Perhaps he'll do me honch to step-around behind de pavilion!"

The man said he would and did, and as he reached a secluded spot and peeled his coat the wickedest observed:

"I begs do cove's pardon, but I just remember dat I am under contract not to fight until I meets do Oswego. Whirlwind, I should like to put him to sleep, but it would be agin' contract."

It was suggested that the other two might kindly for him, but he replied:

"Chollie is my trainer and Dan is my backer, and it would be agin' de contract." The man then suggested that he had a licking in store for the three, and that he should begin business in thirty seconds; but before firen' had chap'd he was alone.—New York Sun.

SIMON DENTON, who committed suicide at Union Tuesday of last week, was one of four brothers who became famous as teachers of writing, and all of whom lived to old age, says the Lewiston Advertiser. "Soldom" was the seventh boy born to his mother in succession, and, as he used to say, "she named me Soldom, because it seldom occurred for a woman to have seven boys, one right after the other." One of the neighbors said she ought to have called me "Denton," for she had boys so often." His suicide was due to the recent combination of school-book publishers, and fear that his financial interests would suffer for it, though he lived on one of the best farms in Union, in a large two-story house, with a barn eighty feet long, and kept a large stock of cattle and horses, with hired men the year round. He was eighty-one years old.

The latest report of the Birmingham Free Libraries Committee shows that the book render of the past year were divided as follows: Scholars and students, 1,392; clerks and bookkeepers, 1,138; errand and office boys, 301; tailors, 208; shop assistants, 290; jewelers, 216; compositors and printers, 192; milliners and dressmakers, 160. Almost at the bottom of the list come journalists, 6; news agents, 2; reporters, 2. Is this because they have libraries of their own, or because the people who write in newspapers lose the taste for reading books?

A JEWISH SYNAGOGUE to be erected in Baltimore will, it is said, be the only specimen of pure Byzantine architecture in the United States.

M. L. DUNNIN, of Milwaukee, is Hale and hearty at four score, and for sixty-three years he has not tasted of tea or coffee.

Heroes of the "Light Brigade."

There is at present a movement on foot in England to raise a fund for the survivors of the gallant band of 600 who in 1854 made the famous charge at Balaklava against the Russians. Over three decades and a half have elapsed since then, and it seems a rather ungrateful act to so long neglect the heroes of that terrible onslaught. The chief reward has been through all these years the medals awarded them for their bravery and the tribute which Tennyson has paid them in his immortal ballad. "Their Charge of the Light Brigade." But monarchies at best are ungrateful, and England is not much of an exception. The majority of her battle-scarred veterans who have no means of supporting themselves are inmates of poor-houses or eke out existence through the charity of others.

How different is it with the surviving heroes of our battlefield? This country to-day supports a numerous army of disabled veterans and paid out last year to them over $100,000,000 a sum much larger than that which is required to maintain the entire German army. America is proud of her old soldiers. Their patriotic war was her bulwark in the darkest crisis of her history; their welfare is the object of her solicitude in the noonday of her prosperity.

This action on the part of private individuals in England of raising funds to supply the wants of the survivors of the Light Brigade is most commendable. But the Government should have seen long since that not one of the heroes of Balaklava suffered depitration.

Confirmed.

The favorable impression produced on the first appearance of the agreeable liquid fruit remedy, Syrup of Figs, a few years ago, has been more than equalized by the pleasant experience of all who have used it, and the success of the proprietors and manufacturers, the California Fig Syrup Company.

Illusions & Motions.

Watch-waterfall for some time, and the water appears to stand still, while the rocks behind it move up. While sitting in a train and watching another train passing, it is impossible if the latter is of closed carriages (like a mail train), to say which of four things is happening. The other train may be at rest, or we may be resting; both trains may be moving in the same direction, but ours quicker or in a contrary direction. We can only settle the question by looking out of the other window.

NEW TRANS-CONTINENTAL ROUTE.

Via Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and Northern Pacific Railroads. Through Pullman-Sleeping Cars leaves Chicago daily at 5:30 p.m. For St. Paul and Minneapolis. For Fargo, North Dakota. For Helena and Butte, Montana. For the Yellowstone Park. For Spokane Falls and Tacoma. For Portland, Oregon. Best Route to Seattle and all North Pacific Coast points. The scenic line to California, via Portland and the Shasta Route. Tickets on sale at 207 Clark street and Union Passenger Station, Canal, Adams and Madison streets, (Chicago).

THE Bon Marche is now going to call itself "Glovers to the Prince of Wales." When H. R. H. was in Paris he paid that man a visit with some members of the British peerage and ordered sixty dozen pair of kid gloves.

HALL'S CATARRH-CURE is a bland and is taken internally. Sold by druggists.

JUDGE—I think you might be honest if you were to ascend to yourself to it.

Prisoner—Maybe so. Judge's habit is a queer thing. —Paris Tribune.

FARMER ACORN (solemnly).—My wife wants half a yard of ribbon to go with this coat-stuff.

Proprietor-Grocery.—All right, neighbor. Take a seat and sort of keep an eye on things while I go out and hunt up my little daughter. She's outside somewhere makin' mud pies. —New York Weekly.

Proprietor-Grocery.—All right, neighbor. Take a seat and sort of keep an eye on things while I go out and hunt up my little daughter. She's outside somewhere makin' mud pies. —New York Weekly.

By a new method of cementing iron the parts cemented are so effectually joined as to resist the blows even of a sledge hammer. The cement is composed of equal parts of sulphur and white lead, with a proportion of about one-sixth of borax. When the composition is to be applied it is wet with strong sulphuric acid, and a thin layer of it is placed between the two pieces of iron which are at once pressed together.

It was suggested that the other two might kindly for him, but he replied:

"Chollie is my trainer and Dan is my backer, and it would be agin' de contract." The man then suggested that he had a licking in store for the three, and that he should begin business in thirty seconds; but before firen' had chap'd he was alone.—New York Sun.

AN insect nest called the "aphis" has been causing great destruction on the Pacific coast, but now it is discovered that the ladybird (coccinella) is the very busily engaged in eating up the aphids. The ladybird is a charming creature, well known to literature and to folklore, and it is especially pleasant to learn that it has gone into a useful business.

A QICK-FIRING gun, the invention of Mr. Thorsen, was tested recently at Lindesberg, in Sweden. The results showed that ten shots can be fired within twenty-five seconds, which is twenty-four shots a minute. All the shots were true, and hit the target within a space of nine inches long by six inches wide.

We moved here recently, and the druggist said he didn't have any Dr. Hall's. We don't destroyers, but what I said I would. I have never seen him, and so could not get some free samples, and so could not tell what Dr. Hall's Wound Destroyers are, but will not give any children any other.

Mr. J. D. Hall, Boston, Mass.

LOCUSTS are so numerous in some parts of South Australia that they cause continual real trouble flying, and the country is being stripped of everything green by those scourges.

S. S. Morris Free, will be sent by Cragin & Co., Philadelphia, with any order of 25 Canadian postage. Stick wrappers. Snuff-bottle Electric Soap wrappers. Snuff-bottle.

KISSING—A panel of this picture for a copper or stamp.

BILE BEANS.

Use the SMALL SIZE (10 little beans) to the hot water. They are the most convenient; suit all ages.

Price either size, 25 cents per bottle.

MENTION THIS PAPER WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS.

J. F. SMITH & CO., St. Louis, Mo.

Makers of "Bile Beans."

MENTION THIS PAPER WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS.

CHELSEA STANDARD.

BY
WM. EMMERT.

OFFICIAL VILLAGE PAPER.

FRIDAY, JULY 11, 1890.

TWO SOLDIERS.

By Capt. CHARLES KING.

Copyrighted by J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia, and published through special arrangement with the American Press Association.

CHAPTER I.

Two missives had reached him.

The rain was flashing dimly on the grimy window sill and over the awning of the shop below. The street cars went jingling by with a dripping load of outside passengers on both platforms. Wagons and drays, cabs and closed carriages that rattled or rumbled along the ordinarily busy thoroughfares looked as though they had been dipped in the river before being turned loose on the streets, and their Jesus, a bedraggled lot, must needs have something amphibious in their composition, else they could not have borne up against the deluge that had been soaking the city for two days past. The policeman, wading aimlessly about at the opposite corner, enveloped in rubber cap and overcoat, cast occasional wistful glances into the barroom across the way, wherein the gas was burning in deference to the general gloom that overhung the neighborhood, and such pedestrians as had to far abroad hurried along under their umbrellas as though they half expected to have to swim before they could reach their destination.

The dense cloud of smoky smoke that had overhanging the metropolis for weeks past, and that wind from any direction could never entirely dissipate, for the simple reason that smokestacks by the score shot up in the outskirts on every side, now seemed to be hurled upon the roofs and walls, the windows and the pavement, in a black, pasty, carboniferous deposit, and every object out of doors that one could touch would leave its inky response upon the hand. A more depressing "spell of weather" had not been known for a year, and every living being in sight seemed saturated with the general gloom; every living being except one, Capt. Fred Lane, of the Eleventh cavalry, was sitting at the dingy window of his office in the recruiting rendezvous on Swanmore street, and actually whistling softly to himself in supreme contentment.

Two missives had reached him that ghastly morning that had served to make him impervious to wind or weather. One large, formal, impressive and bearing the stamp of the war department in heavy type across its upper corner—had borne to him the notification of his promotion to the rank of captain (Troop D) Eleventh cavalry; vice Curran, retired. The other tiny billet had given him even greater happiness. It might be hard to say how many times he had read and reread it since he found it on the snowy cloth of his particular breakfast table in his particular corner of the snug refectory of "The Queen City" on the looks of which most respectable if somewhat venerable club his name had been borne among the list of army or navy members ever since his "graduation" fifteen years before.

All his boyhood, up to the time of his winning his captaincy at West Point, had been spent in the city where for the past sixteen months he had considered himself fortunate on being stationed on recruiting service. During the second year of his term at the academy he was startled by the receipt of a sad letter from his mother, telling him briefly that his father, long one of the best known among the business men of the city, had been compelled to make an assignment. What was worse, he had utterly broken down under the strain, and would probably never be himself again. Proud, sensitive and honorable, Mr. Lane had insisted on paying to the utmost farthing of his means. Even the old homestead went, and the broken hearted man retired with his faithful wife to a humble roof in the suburbs. There, a few months afterward, he breathed his last, and there, during Fred's graduating year, she followed him. When the boy entered on his career in the army he was practically alone in the world. Out of the wreck of his father's fortune there came to him little sum that started him in the service free from debt and that served as a nest egg to attract future accumulations. This he had promptly banked until some good and safe investment should present itself; and, once with his regiment on the frontier, Mr. Lane had found his pay ample for all his needs.

It is unnecessary to recount the history of his fifteen years' service as a subaltern. Suffice it to say that, steering clear of most of the temptations to which young officers were subjected, he had won a reputation as a capital "duty officer," that was reckoned here and there by some brilliant and dashing exploits in the numerous Indian campaigns through which the Eleventh had passed with no small credit. Lane was never one of the jovial souls of the regiment. His mood was rather somber and contemplative. He read a good deal, and spent many days in the saddle exploring the country in the neighborhood of his post and in hunting and fishing.

But from the colonel down, there was not a man in the Eleventh who did not thoroughly respect and like him. Among the ladies, however, there was one or two who never lost an opportunity of giving the lieutenant a faint and not ineffective clapping whenever his name came up for discussion in the feminine conclaves occasionally held in the regiment. Sometimes too, when opportunity served, he was made the victim of some sharp or sarcastic speech that was not always easy to bear in silence. Mrs. Judson, wife of the captain of B troop, was reputed to be "down on Lane," and the men had no difficulty whatever in locating the time when her change of heart took place.

The truth of the matter was that, thanks to simple habits and to his sense of economy, Lane had quite enough little balance in the bank, and the ladies of the regiment believed it to be bigger than it really was, and, having approved the furnishing and fitting up of his quarters, the next thing, of course, that they essayed to do was to provide him with a wife. There the trouble began.

Simultaneously with the arrival of his first bar as a first lieutenant there came from the distant east Mrs. Judson's younger sister "Emmy" and Mrs. Loring's pretty niece, Pansy Fletcher. Lane was prompt to call on both, to take the young ladies driving or riding, to be attentive and courteous in every way; but while he did thus "perceive a divided duty," what was Mrs. Loring's horror on discovering that pretty Pansy had fallen rapturously in love with "Jerry" Latimore, as handsome, reckless and impudent a young dragoon as ever lived, and nothing but prompt measures prevented their marriage. Miss Fletcher was suddenly transported to the east, whither Jerry was hard up to follow; and then, in bitterness of heart, Mrs. Loring blamed poor Fred for the whole transaction. Why had he held aloof and allowed that—that scamp!—that never do you to cut in and win that innocent child's heart, as he certainly did? Against Latimore the trials of her wrath were confined, coming publicly, but against Lane she could not talk so openly.

Mrs. Judson had held the sudden departure of Miss Pansy with an equanimity she could hardly disguise. Indeed, there were not lacking good Christians in the garrison who pointed significantly to the fact that she had almost too hospitably opened her doors to Miss Fletcher and her lover during that brief but volcanic romance. Certain it is, however, that it was in her house and in a certain little nook off the sitting room that their long, delicious meetings occurred almost daily, the lady of the house being busy about the dining room, the kitchen, or the chambers overhead, and Emily, who was a good girl, but densely uninteresting, strumming on the piano or yawning over a book at the front window.

"Why Mr. Lane needs is a gentle, modest, domestic little woman who will make his home a restful, peaceful refuge," said Mrs. Judson; and, infersentially, Emmy was the gentle and modest creature who was destined so to bless him. The intentions of the ladies by which he was induced to take the lures by which he was seduced to become Emmy's escort to all the hops and dances, redoubled themselves after Miss Fletcher's departure; but it was all in vain. Without feeling any particular affinity for Mr. Lane, Emmy stood ready to say, "Yes" whenever he should ask, but weeks went on; he never seemed to draw nearer the subject, and just as Mrs. Judson had determined to resort to coercive measures and point out that his attention to Emmy had excited the remark of the entire garrison, and that the poor child was herself looking wan and strange, there was a stage robbery—not twenty miles from the post. Lane, with fifteen troopers, was sent in pursuit of the desperadoes, and captured them, after a sharp fight, thirty miles up the river and near the little Indian cantonment at the Indian reservation, and, further, the lieutenant was carried, with a bullet through his thigh. By the time he was well enough to ride, the regiment was again in the field on Indian campaign, and for six months he never saw Fort Curtis again. When he did, Emmy had gone home, and Mrs. Judson's politeness was something awful.

Lane was out with the Eleventh again in three more sharp and severe campaigns, received an ugly bullet wound through the left shoulder in the memorable chase after Chief Joseph, was quartermaster of this regiment a year after that episode, then adjutant, and finally was given the recruiting detail as he neared the top of the list of that lieutenants, and for the first time in fifteen years found himself once more among the friends of his youth—and still a bachelor.

Securing pleasant quarters in the adjoining street Mr. Lane speedily made himself known at the club to which he had been paying his moderate annual dues without having seen anything of it but its bills for years past, yet never knowing just when he might want to drop in. Then he proceeded after office hours to hunt up old chums, and in the course of the first week after his arrival he had found almost all of them. Bailey, who sat next to him in school, was now a prominent and prosperous lawyer. Terry, who sat just behind him, and occasionally inserted crooked pins in a convenient crack in his chair, was thriving in the iron business.

Warden had made a fortune "on change," and was one of the leading brokers and commission merchants of the metropolis. He had always liked Warden; they lived close together, and used to walk to and from school with each other almost every day. Mr. Lane had started on his quest with a feeling akin to enthusiasm. Calm and reticent and retiring as he generally was, he felt a glow of delight at the prospect of once more meeting "the old crowd," but that evening he returned to his rooms with a distinct sense of disappointment. Bailey had jumped up and shaken hands with much effusion of manner, and had "my-dear-fellow-ed" him for a minute or two, and then, "Now, where are you stopping? I'll be round to look you up—the very first evening I can get away, and—of course we'll have you at the house;" but Lane clearly saw he was eager to get back to his desk, and so took his leave. Terry did not know him at all, and he began to laugh, and then he blushed to quarrel what he'd been doing with himself all these years. But the man who passed him from top to toe was Warden. Business hours were over, and their meeting occurred at the club. Two minutes after they had shaken hands Warden was standing with his back to the log fire, his thumb in the arm hole of his waistcoat, sitting on his toes, his head well back, and most affably and distinctly patrolling him.

"Well, Fred, you're still in the army, are you?" he asked.

"Still in the army, Warden."

"Well, what on earth do you find to do with yourself out there? How do you manage to kill time?"

"Time never hung heavily on my hands. It often happened that there wasn't half enough for all we had to do."

"You don't tell me! Why, I supposed that about all you did was to drink and play poker!"

"Not an unusual idea, I find, Warden, but a very unjust one."

"Oh, yes, I know, of course, you have some Indian fighting to do over there, but that probably amounts to very little. I mean when you're in permanent camp or garrison. I should think a man of your temperament would just stagnate in such a life. I wonder you hadn't resigned years ago and come here and made a name for yourself!"

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"I should, indeed, like to live in a desert and have some Indian fighting to do over there, but that probably amounts to very little. I mean when you're in permanent camp or garrison. I should think a man of your temperament would just stagnate in such a life. I wonder you hadn't resigned years ago and come here and made a name for yourself!"

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"I should, indeed, like to live in a desert and have some Indian fighting to do over there, but that probably amounts to very little. I mean when you're in permanent camp or garrison. I should think a man of your temperament would just stagnate in such a life. I wonder you hadn't resigned years ago and come here and made a name for yourself!"

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've nothing to say," said Warden, "but it always struck me as such—a-well, Fred, such a wasted life."

"The life has been rather more brisk than you imagine," he answered, with a quiet smile, "and I have grown very fond of my profession. But you speak of making a name for myself. Now, in what would that have consisted?"

"Oh, well, of course, if you really like the army and living in a desert and that sort of thing, I've