THE greatest known depth of the ocean in the Pacific is near the Ladrone islands, where soundings were made to a depth of 26,850 feet, or a little over five miles. In the Atlantic the greatest depth found is just north of the West Indian islands, which is 23,250 feet, or nearly four and a half miles. In those parts of the ocean most free from islands, as in the route from Newfoundland to Ireland, the ocean is most shallow, seldom exceeding 12,000 feet.

"INJUN Jo," the original of one of the characters in Mark Twain's "Tom Sawyer," still lives in Hannibal, near where the scenes in the book are laid. He is now a tough old man of 75, and hauls trunks from the depot on a red express wagon drawn by a white horse. He has accumulated a modest fortune, owning twelve small dwelling-houses, but his clothes grow shabbier and more ragged every year. He has always been displeased with the notoriety Twain gave him, and considers himself insulted when the subject is mentioned.

THE English matron objects to the modern fashion of advertising infant foods by means of photographs of lightly-clad babies which have been reared upon them, because, forsooth, in future years when these infant girls, whose identity is established by the publication of their names beneath the portrait, become modest maidens, it will be embarrassing to have the young man of the future possess these portraits of the misses in-shirts. Of course, the baby boys of to-day are assiduously collecting and preserving the portraits for future reference in case of meeting their originals.

"CAN a hypnotized person be made to commit crime?" was very emphatically answered in the affirmative by Dr. Voisin, of Paris, in a paper delivered before the British association. He suggusted to a subject under his influence to commit the act of arson while hypnotically asleep, and there was obedience in each case. More than that, a woman was recently sentenced in Paris for a succession of acts of robbery. It was ascertained that she had been habitually hypnotized, and upon investigation it was discovered that she had robbed under the suggestion of outside

Murderer Bulling Hanged at Savannah, Mo., While Pleading Hard for Life-He Shoots Himself in His Cell and Is Dragged to the Gallbws.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 5 .- Louis Bulling, the wife murderer, was executed at Savannah, the county seat of Andrew county, Mo., at 3:21 o'clock Friday afternoon under most horrible circumstances. The story of the gallows tells no more hideous story. The murderer made a desperate effort to commit suicide just prior to the hanging and then died, yelling and shricking for mercy. The execution had been twice postponed during the day on Bulling's account; the last time when the wretched man fell in a fit on being told to prepare for his doom. Shortly before 3 o'clock Rev. Mr. Lavake, Bulling's spiritual adviser, who had been with him almost continuously since Thursday night, again entered the condemned man's cell. They were left alone. Five minutes afterward two shots were heard. Sheriff Berry and his deputies rushed into the cell. They found Rev. Mr. Lavake lying prostrate upon the floor in a dead faint. Beside him in his own blood lay Bulling, who had shot himself twice. One ball had entered the left breast just below the nipple and struck a rib and ran partly around the body. The other had inflicted a wound in the left side. Four deputies dragged the wretch out of the cell. He refused to walk and they carried him to the scaffold. He would not stand and was placed on a chair. Then the uxoricide proved himself the craven-hearted coward. begged, cried, blasphemed. He pleaded for and time, for mercy and for anything-everything but death. nally he was told to get up and stand upon the drop. He refused and four deputies held him up while the rope was adjusted. Yelling and screaming he shot through the opening at exactly 3:21 o'clock, His neck was broken and he died almost instantaneously. Ten minutes after the shooting of Bulling Rev. Mr. Lavake was arrested, charged with giving the pistol to the condemned

The scene on the scaffold previous to the fall of the drop was piteous in the extreme. A squad of soldiers from Fort Leavenworth surrounded the jail all day and accompanied the doomed man to the place of execution.

"Take them away," he cried, incohe rently; "they will kill me!"

As the rope was adjusted he asked for a drink. When given one he said: "That's my last," and then he began to scream. When the rope was adjusted about his neck he pleaded: "Please! please don't! Wait, wait! Give me a little more time, just a moment more of life; it is so sweet." Ile kissed the sheriff, but no black cap was adjusted and Bulling died gaping at the horror-stricken crowd. Bulling deserted his wife in the summer of 1882 and took up with another woman. The party and the restoration of peace in abandoned wife sought employment at the Herbert house in Savannah. For some cause, which has never been explained. Bulling gained access to her room one night in January, 1888, and with an ax almost severed her head from her body and otherwise mutilated the remains in a horrible tenced to be hanged on March 6 last. The day before the execution he was respited to April 17, and on the night of the 10th of that month he escaped by cutting his way out of the Savannah jail. A large reward was offered for his capture. The Pinkerton agency put men on his trail, but their search was unsuccessful. His arrest was finally effected by the Chicago police after a desperate running fire with the murderer and the wounding of him in the arm. At the time, however, the police did not know the man they had in custody. ling had been in Chicago for some time under the alias of Louis May, sometimes going by the name of Dillinger. His identity was discovered the day after his capture. and he was once more placed in his old quarters in the Savannah (Mo.) jail. On July 3, the night after his arrival at Savannah, he attempted suicide by taking a d se of morphine, which he had by some means managed to conceal about his person. Reciprocity Has Nothing to Do with the Removal of the Embargo. CAPE MAY, N. J., Sept. 5.-The negotiations which ended with the withdrawal of the prohibition against the importation of American pork into Germany were concluded at Saratoga and not at Cape May Point. The advices received from the minister and conclusion was reached while the president was at Saratoga by John W. Foster, representing the United States government, and Count von Munn, charge d'affaires, representing the German government, and was approved by the president. The removal of the pork restriction has nothing to so that the element of stability could do with any question of reciprocity, but is based upon the acceptance by the German government of the inspecment under the law of the last congress.

Our Minister to Chill Denies the Charge That He Was a Partisan of the Late President Balmaceda—His Only Efforts Were Directed in the Interests of Peace. WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 .- Germany is Santiago, Sept. 5.—In an interview United States Minister Egan denied going to follow its removal of the em-order to avoid further bloodshed he should deliver the government into the hands of Gen. Baquedano. It was on the night of August 28 that, forced by Members of the junta and leaders of ex-officials all agree that Mr. Egan has done much to save the credit of the United States. Senor Edwardo Matte, one of the foremost of the opposition leaders, said: "When the time comes I stand ready to youch for Minister Egan's behavior in every way. He is a gentleman, honorable and loyal to the country of his adoption." American residents in Satiago and Valparaiso affirm the views expressed by Senor Matte, while regretting Mr. Egan's selection as minister to Chili from an American standpoint. dered to the junta except Col. Stephen, with about twenty-five cavalrymen. They have gone to Argentine, where it is expected they will engage in guerrilla raids until they are captured.

Affairs have almost settled down to the ante-bellum state of quiet and order. There has been nothing decided as yet regarding the elections and the establishment of a constitutional government. It will take several weeks at least before the necessary arrangements for this can be completed, and in the meantime the junta de gobierno will administer the affairs of the country. The governments of Brazil and Peru

have officially congratulated the junta junta announcing that the notes issued during the revolution by Balmaceda will be recognized as legal by the new government VALPARAISO, Sept. 5.-The congressional army was composed very largely of volunteers. So secure do the members of the junta feel in their position at present that they have given orders that any of the volunteers who wish to do so may return to their homes, and hence the late victorious army is rapidly disintegrating. In a few days it will hardly be possible to see many signs of the late war." The question of the refugees on board the American and German warships has been settled definitely. The United States cruiser Baltimore sailed Friday, presumably for Callao, having on board Senors Mollendo, Banadas, Espinosa, Godoy, Perez Montt and WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.-Cablegrams were sent from the state department to Minister Egan Friday afternoon. They were the outcome of Secretary Tracy's consultation with President Harrison, and Acting Secretary Wharton was merely the medium for their transmission. While the authorities will not allow the announcement to be officially made that Minister Egan has been instructed to recognize the congressionalists they admit that the preliminaries have been taken toward that end. The from Admiral Brown have been sufficiently clear as to the fact that th congressionalists constitute the only government now in Chili, but there is a doubt whether public order had been sufficiently restored and the rioting in the various cities stopped be preserved. This doubt seems also to have been settled and the news of the official recognition of the junta by tion of imported meats by this govern- the United States may be looked for as soon as Minister Egan receives his instructions. It is stated that the minister may not come home as soon as this duty is performed, but he is expected in Washington to report within the next two or three months. The course of Admiral Brown and Minister Egan in protecting the refugees is approved by the administration. Experience with South American revolutions has shown that foreign countries cannot afford to accede to the demands generally made by the victorious party for the delivery to it of the refugees who have found shelter in the foreign legation.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 7 .- The visitors who journeyed to the beach Saturday to watch the unusually heavy sea were treated to a sight rarely witnessed near shore. About 9 o'clock the wind was blowing furiously from the northeast. Suddenly the sea, at a spot near the shore, was unusually agitated, and as the eyes of all were directed to the spot a huge waterspout formed and began moving seaward in a southeasterly direction. The volume of water was balloon-shaped and was fully 300 feet high. There was no vessel in its track, but Tyler Emmons, a fisherman, narrowescaped being caught by the mountain of water. He saw it approaching and pulled his boat out of the way of the swirling Kiefer made the ascension under protest, as a strong wind was blowing over the lake. The plucky little woman sailed away, and when at the height of 5,000 feet cut her parachute loose and dropped. She had counted on reaching the Tazewell shore, but the parachute did not open soon enough and she fell into the lake. The immense crowd on the shore was horrified to see her sink with the big parachute settling over her. Anticipating a repetition of last Sunday's accident, boats were in waiting and the woman was fished out. She still clung to the trapeze bar, but was unconscious. She has not regained consciousness.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7 .- Hon. John Dominis, prince consort of Hawaii, died August 3 from a sudden attack of pneumonia. He had been ill some time with gout, which turned into inflammatory rheumatism. Pneumonia subsequently set in. Queen Liliuokalani was much affected by the death of her husband. The remains were lying in state at the palace when the steamer Mariposa left, August 29, guarded by Capt. Howlein and forty men from the royal barracks. Prince Dominis was born in Schenectady, N. PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 7.—Hundreds of farmers in éastern Oregon and eastern Washington are holding their wheat under orders from the alliance until spring in hope of getting better prices. The highest price paid in the northwest for wheat this season was seventy-five cents per bushel. This was at Walla Walla three weeks ago. Since then prices have declined from five to eight cents per bushel. It is believed that values will go up before long. Oregon and Washington will have about 35,000,000 bushels for export this year, and the bulk of it will come to Portland for shipment.

So he was immensely pleased the other day when he read that clever story about how a New York man sustained his town's reputation for fair women and won a bet at the same time. Of course you know the story: The New Yorker wagered with a Philadelphian that on a certain day they would meet so many first-class beauties on a certain number of blocks in the avenue. They did meet exactly the requisite number, and the New Yorker pocketed the money smilingly. He was a society man, you see, and he bribed these fair acquaintances of his, with unlimited candy and gloves, to help him win the bet. St. Agedore read the story over

More especially as the club think because they happen to I had read this article here. You know, have been born in York state that they I think, that my acquaintance on the can grind out that chestnut about Chicago girls' feet every day or so. Wait, I'll make them tired of it!"

He then proceeded to lay his little difficulty about getting a man to bet doors at the time appointed. with; so he first made sure that he would be betting on a certainty.

He called on a number of his fair friends on Prairie avenue, and explained his little plot to them in turn. That is to say, he explained it only in part. He could not bring himself to mention the fact that his bet was based on the smallness of the feet possessed by the fair ones whom he sought as his allies. He had too great a sense of delicacy to mention this detail. He merely told them the New York story and asked them to help him out in a similar way. Of course they were delighted, flattered, only too glad.

So with many sweet smiles and sweeter promises he made his pleasant round.

When he had assured the appearance on Prairie avenue at a certain hour on Sunday of enough tiny-footed maidens to give the impression that China was not in the same world with Chicago in this regard, he proceeded to the club.

It wasn't long before the conversation veered around to the topic ever foremost in the Chicagoan's mind, i. e., Chicago. "Yes," said one enthusiast, we'll be able to show New York some big things in '93."

"We can do that now," said a sarcastic and unpatriotic member, "in Here was St. Agedore's chance. "Oh," said he, "it gives me a severe pain to hear you harp on that worn old string. I tell you what I'll do-just to prove what nonsense that idea about Chicago feet is-I'll bet you that I can walk five blocks with you on Prairie avenue, and that in every block we'll meet at least one girl whose feet will be indisputably Cinderella-like." "I'll take your bet," said the other,

"Very well," went on St. Agedore, "suppose we get our friend Corbridge here to act as umpire and make the walk with us. Agreed. And-how will as to who smiled best-why, we shall see that when it is quite clear who smiled last. Certain it is that he was at intervals until the stated Sunday arrived. Three o'clock found the three friends duly assembled at Prairie avenue and Eighteenth street. St. Agedore was radiant in victorious confidence. The other man said very little. And the umpire looked awfully important. He had to decide an almost nahis significance deeply.

The momentous walk began. Arm in arm-the three strolled onwards. Half of the first block had been traversed when a door opened and a radiantly-attired damsel stepped down onto the trottoir. But-oh, horrors-as she came down the steps the size of her feet was distinctly and awfully visible. It was-but let us draw a large veil over the exact dimensions. St. Agedore shuddered. His opponent smiled faintly, and Corbridge looked surprised.

The blocks were passed one by one. In nearly all of them the trio met with girls whose feet were imposing, but not pretty. But none of the fair ones who had promised to appear for St. Agedore's benefit fulfilled that promise. Twenty-first, Twenty-second. St. Agedore's face grew pale. "I confess that in some cases I had to raise my bribe considerably over a previous one, but the persuasive power of more candy prevailed, and, after all, I am ahead a trifle on the bet." And then St. Agedore repeated a large number of three-em dashes quietly to himself. He has been waiting ever since for a chance to get gloriously even, but the chance hasn't come yet.

So, sad as it is to relate, the size of Chicago feet was not permitted a vindication on this occasion. Virtue was defeated, but-we shall sec. In the meanwhile, St. Agedore is

He Could Spell. Grandma had forgotten that it was two years since she had seen one small member of the family, and that the child had, in the meantime, done a great deal toward learning to spell. tear to which the surface of the earth is subjected is shown in the stonecapped pinnacles which are found on South river, in the Wahsatch mountains. There are hundreds of these slender pillars, ranging in height from forty to four hundred feet, most of them crowned by large caps of stones. They are not works of human art, as might be imagined, but are the memorial monuments of the hill from which they have been cut by the action of air and water. Those pinnacles alone remain of many square miles of solid rock, which have been washed away to a depth of some four hundred feet. The greater hardness of the surface has caused it to resist corrosion more than the underlying rock, thus leaving huge caps of stone perched high in air on the points of their columns. One double column, capped by a single stone, forms a natural bridge, both unique and

A BULL FIGHT IN PROVENCE. Scenes of Excitement Attendant Upon the

Usually the bulls for the Sunday's bull fight are brought into the town from the Camargue in a closed van, and scarcely anyone knows when they arrive. But at rare intervals they are driven by their Camarguan keepers through the streets to their stables in Winans. It gives figures as follows: the amphitheater. In most parts of the civilized world all precaution is taken tional question, you see, and he felt thoroughfares; in Provence, to send to keep wild cattle out of the public thoroughfares; in Provence, to send them tearing through the towns is the treat of treats reserved for holidays. The route they were now to follow had been officially announced, with M. le maire's signature to the proclamatic and Hecla's stock of the maire's signature to the proclamatic and Hecla's stock of the maire's signature to the proclamatic and Hecla's stock of the maire's signature to the proclamatic and Hecla's stock of the maire's signature to the proclamatic and Hecla's stock of the maire's signature to the proclamatic and the signature to the signatur maire's signature to the proclamation. The greater part of it of course lay along the boulevards. The whole place was barricaded with wooden barriers to prevent their escape down any cross street, and everywhere shutters were drawn in lower windows, and doors were closed, and shops were shut, in case they did, by chance, get loose. Business was suspended.

By three o'clock, the entire town of more than twenty thousand people had turned out to meet them. At the cafes on the Lices there was not a vacant table. Gay parties were at every window and in every pretty hanging-garden. The paths opposite were thronged, and the market was over. To greet the bulls the stately, handsome women not, he said," as every step brought of Arles had put on their finest costumes, their long gold watch-chains hanging over the Quaker-like shawls and soft fichus, the pretty Arlesian cross at their throat, a tiny square of bon of their head-dress. They walked together arm-in-arm on the wide road, conscious that they were, as a sight, equal to any other part of the day's Boys already were climbing into the trees in a delicious tremor of Tear and expectation. * * * But suddenly there was a cry of, "Ye! les taureaux!" and the dancers, hot and breathless, rushed to the garden railings. Out on the Lices people were fleeing in every direction, springing across the little ditch by the roadside, jumping up on the high marble benches.

At the far end of the boulevards rose a cloud of white dust. The next minute eight black bulls thundered past on a dead gallop, the foam streaming from their mouths, guarded on each side by men, each one of whom carried a long trident and was mounted on a white horse of Camargue. After them came at full tilt men and boys and even women. From the gardens the crowd turned and made a short cut for the amphitheater. From every street people were running towards it, laughing, shouting, pushing, panting. All Arles was racing for one more look at the bulls.

We reached the front of the main entrance just in time to see the black reads the papers. Did you ever see bulls galloping up a narrow street, one or two a little in advance, and the white horses, their riders setting firm in the saddle, the long tridents in their hands. They were at the top of the street. The only way now open for them led into the stables. Suddenly the barrier fell. Eight bulls were at large in the streets

Everybody left. I did not wait to see anything more. But when, once safe inside the amphitheater, I looked out on many housetops; but no one was on the street.

Gradually the women came back to the doors, lifting up the green curtains and peeping out while they kept the children well behind them. Men walked boldly about. Then at last we started cautiously for the hotel. Wild got into the Hotel de Ville, and are pressure he will raise his arm. mounting towards the man of bronze. The clerks have flown." "They are coming here now. Les taureaux! les taureaux!" Then came precipitate

But the bulls were seen no more that night. They had gone back to the Camargue. Eight others, fresh and fit for combat, were brought in the covered van to take their places.

Preposterous as it may seem to let a regiment of cowboys and bulls loose in this town—a flourishing city long before the Christian era-there was a barbaric picturesqueness about the grand arrival of the bulls not to be found in the better regulated spectacles of more serious people. -J. Summary Execution. A despotic government has its advantages, and among them is the easy collection of a debt, provided the ruler is you," said mamma, who had passed friendly to the creditor. Ahmed Vefyk Pasha, a Turkish statesman, was once kind, and was beginning to tire of governor of Broussa, and this story is told of his paternal rule: A rich man had judgment pronounced against him but thought she could do so without in favor of a poor man. The latter, owing to the bribes of the rich man, could not obtain execution, and complained to Ahmed Vefyk. After heariug the case, Ahmed saw the debtor riding up to the Konak upon a beautiful Arab horse. He ordered the creditor to sit down, called a messenger, and whispered to him. The debtor entered the room, and was surprised at the exceptional cordiality of the pasha, who invited him to sit down, to take coffee, and to converse. Presently, when he rose to leave, the pasha pressed him to remain, and kept him more than an hour, until, indeed, a messenger entered the room and placed a small bag on the table before Ahmed. When the debtor next rose, Ahmed took the bag from the table and gave it to him, stating, "This is yours. You owed so much to this poor man, I have sold your horse, paid him, and this is the balance belonging to you."-Youth's Companion.

Paris, like all other great cities, has been much concerned with the question how to dispose of sewage. At present most of the outflow of the collecteurs pours into the Seine, to its serious polution. But some years ago the municipality purchased several thousands of acres of land in the plains of Gennevilliers, a few miles down the river, and began the experiment of a sewage farm. The project has been an unqualified success. An extension from the Pere-Lachaise-St. Denis collecteur carries a

FOUND DEAD.

Mystery Over the Death of Two Persons Near Red Oaks. The body of James Burns was found in his home near Red Oaks by Herman Grostick. A girl who was supposed to be his daughter, but who it was ascertained from papers found in the house was not, was found lying dead across the body. A tight cord around the girl's neck showed that she had been strangled. There were no signs of a struggle and everything in the house was in order. The supposition was rich old lace inclosed in the velvet rib- that Burns died a natural death and that the girl, on discovering his death, strangled herself. Burns was 45 years old and the girl was 18.
