Chelsea Union Fair.

Tuesday, the opening day of the fair, was bright and pleasant, and the Superintendents of the different departments were kept busy all day placing exhibits.

Wednesday the weather was unfavorable, and the attendance light. Thursday a large crowd was upon the grounds, although the day was cold and rainy.

On account of the bad weather the fair was continued Friday.

It cannot be said that the exhibits were numerous although the stock and vegetables were very fine specimens. The races were good each It is a matter of regret that the balloon ascension could not be made as advertised, owing to the bad weather. The society, however, cannot be blamed for the failure. Floral hall was well filled with vegetables, grains, etc. The bandiwork of the ladies was particularly noticeable. The majority of the merchants each had a very handsome display of merchandise.

It is needless to say that the usual merry-go-rounds, peanut and lemonade stands are on hand.

THE doctors are discussing the question whether the epidemic la grippe will return this winter. The weight of testimony is that it is not likely to be severe. "The microbes of la grippe live and thrive in arctic cold," says a wise writer, and "the long hot summer has been the best possible agent to destroy the germs." Such diseases, however, have to wear out gradually. La grippe will likely be a fixture among diseases for years to come.

CHICAGO TO GRANT.

Unveiling of the Handsome Statue of the Warrior-Statesman at Lincoln Park-Imposing Parade and Naval Display-Ceremonies at the Park.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.-The great metropolis of the west suspended the bustle and activity of its business interests to do honor to the memory of an illus-trious citizen-soldier and statesman. The magnificent statue erected by the citizens of Chicago to the immortal memory of Ulysses Simpson Grant, artisang citizen-soldier, general, commander in chief of the armies of the United States, and twice elected to the highest office in the gift of the people of his native land, was formally unveiled at Lincoln park. The great procession moved at 2 p. m. A division of the city police, 500 strong, under command of Chief Me-Claughry, in columns of companies, the first on foot and those following mounted, led the way. Then on pranc-Joseph Stockton, chief of staff, with their staffs. Gen. Horace Clark and his staff headed the Fifth division, which was exclusively composed of members of the Grand Army of the Republic. Conspicuous in this division was a little regiment, the Twenty-first Illinois infantry. At the head of the little company a one armed veteran bore a stand of colors. They were the selfsame colors that the hero of Appomattox himself unfurled in front of his headquarters when elected colonel of the regiment. The sixth division was house of Hunter & Co.'s compress at composed of veterans and the Sons of Montgomery, Ala., with 2,500 bales of Veterans and the seventh and last of civic societies. Prominent in this division was Chicago post of veterans of the Confederate army. The arrival of the head of the column with the revenue cutters Fessenden and Johnson were at anchor in the lake off the breakwater. Accompanying them and dotting the water for a square mile were 100 other crafts, from the big steamers of the Anchor line down to the small tug boats and pleasure sailing craft. Every vessel was gayly decorated with streamers and bunting and the scene presented by the naval display was picturesque in the extreme. It is estimated that fully 20,000 men were in line.

When the division containing the distinguished guests had reached the base of the monument Mrs. U. S. Grant, Jesse Grant and his wife and their children were escorted to seats on the right of Judge Gresham. Mrs. Grant, in response to earnest requests, appeared on the speaker's stand and bowed. The trial was too severe for her. She wept before the old soldiers who had called her out, and they bowed their heads, while not a few were visibly affected. Arrived at the park, when all was in readiness, Chairman E. S. Dreyer called the vast gathering to order. Bishop John P. Newman offered prayer. At the close of the invocation Edward S. Taylor, on behalf of the trustees of the Grant monument fund, presented the monument to the Lincoln park commissioners. As he closed he waved his hand toward the great pile of stone surmounted by the veiled statue.

At a word, amid cheers, Miss Mary Strong, daughter of the late Gen. Strong, released the fastenings and the veil dropped asunder. As the rays of light touched the magnificent statue of bronze, flashing forth its radiant splendor, revealing every curve of the noble figure of horse and rider and enveloping in a golden glow the stern face of the dead hero, a great cheer arose from the multitude-a cheer that was American and from the heart.

And then there boomed forth the presidential salute of twenty-one guns from the military and fleet. When the rumble of the last gun had ceased Hon. William C. Goudy for the commissioners of Lincoln park, and as its president, made a graceful speech of aceeptance. Hon. Hempstead Washburne, as mayor, accepted the monument on the part of the citizens of Chicago. Judge Gresham then delivered his oration, at the conclusion of which the

PARNELL'S CAREER.

Death Has Put an End to It-The Irish Eng. - The Cause Something of a Mystery-Rumors of Suicide Emphatically Denied by His Widow-Effect on Irish Politics - Biographical Sketch of the Great Home Ruler.

London, Oct. 8.-Great Britain and Irgland were startled Wednesday morning by the utterly unlooked-for announcement that Charles Stewart Parnell, the noted Irish leader, died suddenly at 11:30 o'clock Tuesday evenng at his home in Brighton. Mrs. Parnell, Mr. Parnell's stepdaughter and the servants were the only occupants of the house on Walsingham terrace when the Irish leader expired. The end was one of intense agony for the sick man until the moment when he became unconscious and eventually died without pain. The report that Mr. Parnell had died by his own hand spread far, and among the persons whom it reached was Mrs. Parnell. She requests that an emphatic denial be given to rumors that ner husband committed suicide. She states that he had long suffered from heumatism, which developed into the fever that killed him. There is some difficulty in securing details as to Mr. Parnell's illness, and no satisfactory explanation has been offered for having kept it so long a secret. It has been given out by one of the physicians that Mr. Parnell arrived at his home at Brighton from Ireland on Thursday and complained of suffering from a chill. On the following day he was unable to leave his bed and his regular physician was summoned. He seemed to have considered Mr. Parnell's illness to have been of a serious nature, for he soon sent for another physician, with whom he held a long consultation over the sickness of the Irish leader. This consultation was resumed on Sunday when Mr. Parnell was found to be in great pain and apparently growing weaker every hour. His sickness was pronounced to be an attack of acute rheumatism. Mr. Parnell, in spite of the care and attention which he received, did not seem to rally and grew weaker and weaker un-The son of Dr. William Richard Pow-

Mr. Justin McCarthy, member of parliament for Londonderry and leader of the anti-Parnell faction of the Irish parliamentary party, discussing the political effect of Mr. Parnell's death said it was impossible to forecast the political effect. Mr. McCarthy added, however, that he hoped it would lead to a complete reunion of all shades of opinion among Irishmen in general and in the Irish parliamentary party in particular. He said he believed that all feeling of hostility to Mr. Parnell or of hostility between individual members of the Irish parliamentary party would be swallowed up completely and disappear in regret which was experienced among Irishmen at the death of Mr. Parnell. [Mr. Parnell was born at Avondale, Wickow, Ireland, in the year 1846. He was a descendant of the poet Parnell and his family had been associated with Irish parliamentary life for upward of a century. His great grandfather, Sir John Parnell, was chancellor of the exchequer at the time of Grattan's parliament, Sir Henry Parnell, granduncle of Mr. Parnell, was a prominent member of the English parliament in the time of Lord Grey and Lord Melbourne, and was made Lord Congleton. Mr. Parnell, whose mother is daughter of Admiral Charles Stewart, a celebrated American naval officer, was educated at Cambridge university, but did not take any degree. After a tour of America he settled down on his property in Avondale, On the death of John Martin, in 1875, Mr Parnell'stood for County Meath and was elected. Mr. Parnell first took an active part in parliamentary affairs in the session of 1978, when in association with Mr. Biggar he initiated what was known by the various names of the "obstructive" and the "active" policy. He joined in the foundation of the Land league, and in October, 1879, he was elected its first president. At the general election of 1880 he was elected for the city of Cork. He elected in May, 1880, leader of the new party by twenty-three to eighteen vetes for Mr. Shaw. He took an active part in the land league agitation. After the land act was passed Mr. Parnell was arrested in October, 1881, on a charge of intimidation obstructing the working of that act. He was released in May, 1889. At the general election of he was reelected for Cork. Mr. Parnell formed an alliance with the liberals and by the vote of the Irish party everthrew the former govern ment of Lord Salisbury (January 16, 1886). Mr. Parnell's name has since been prominently before the public in connection with the hon osals of Mr. Gladstone. The proceedings of the parliamentary commission, which resulted in a victory for Mr. Parnell against the Times, and the exposure of the Pigott forgeries, the O'Shea divorce proceedings and Mr. Parnell's marriage, are matters fresh in minds of all.]

It Opens to Receive the Remains of Charles S. Parnell-His Burial in a Cemetery Near Dublin-Thousands Attend the Funeral-Evidences of Grief Manifold-Perfect Order Prevails-Sad Scenes in Dublin.

DUBLIN, Oct. 12 .- The day looked forvard to with so much anxiety has passed, and the country is congratulating itself upon the fact that no such scenes of disorder as had been predicted to mark the funeral of the national hero, Parnell, vere witnessed.

During a drenching rain the remains of Charles Stewart Parnell were laid to rest Sunday. The funeral was one of the most imposing ever held in Ireland. Special trains from all parts of the country brought tens of thousands of ad-hearted Irishmen to Dublin. The steamer arrived at Kingston about 9 o'clock in the morning. Despite the fierce downpour of rain and the raw wind that made it almost impossible to stand on the pier thousands of people were waiting and reverently bared their heads as the coffin was brought ashore and the body of Parnell rested upon the soil of the country for which he struggled and died. A singular scene was now witnessed.

As the coffin was removed from the box which had encased it the crowd rushed forward and seized the box, tearing it quickly to peices for the purpose of obtaining fragments of the wood as relies. In a few moments more Dublin was reached, and a great throng greeted, with every mark of sorrow and love, the coming of the body of their leader. The coffin was borne on the shoulders of six stalwart lrishmen to St. Michael's church, where law courts. the near the rector, Rev. Thomas Long, assisted by Rev. G. A. Frye, rector of All Souls' church, Manchester, read the service of the church of Ireland. The immediate friends and the relatives of the deceased completely filled the church, the throng of general mourners remaining meanoutside in the pouring while The brief service being over, the procession was formed and the coffin, escorted by numerous Irish societies and by many thousands of citizens, was conveyed to the city hall and placed upon a magnificent catafalque in the central hall, at the foot of the statue of the great O'Con-At the head of the coffin stood the colors of the Wicklow volunteers, organized by Mr. Parnell's father in 1779. At the top of the coffin was an immense cross of flowers, inscribed with the names of the thirty-one faithful parliamentary colleagues of Parnell. The inclosure around the coffin was a mass of floral offerings of every shape and design, and coming from Parnell's admirers in all parts of Ireland and England. At 10 o'clock the arrangements were completed so that the crowd could be

cession six deep moved past, and the

At I o'clock the procession was stopped, though there seemed no end to the line of people who wished to pass the coffin. It was necessary, however, to begin the march to the cemetery, which would otherwise reached until late in the not be evening. Rev. Dr. Frve and Chaplain M. C. Vincent, of the Rotunda hospital, gave the word for the removal of the body, and at 2:30 o'clock the procession to the tomb began. The coffin rested on an open hearse, the floral design accompanying it being the one sent by the widow bearing the words: "To My Own True Love, My Husband,

My King." Not a single anti - Parnellite. known as such, was visible. the feeling of genuine and universal The order of march was: Pallbearers, chief mourners, officiating clergymen, Gaelies, with ex-Head-Center James Stephens and the equally noted John O'Leary; other societies, the general public.

Perfect order was observed. The sight from the city hall, while the vast cortege was in motion, was unequaled even by the great outpouring at the time of the O'Connell centenary. The streets along the route of the procession and the intersecting streets for blocks in both directions were masses of human beings, while the windows and housetops were also black with spectators. Most of the nouses were draped in mourning, and festoons of crape were swung across the streets at frequent intervals. Glasneven, the last resting place of the dead statesman, was reached at 6 clock. It was then dark. Revs. Vincent and Frye read the burial service by the light of lanterns. The thousands within hearing listened reverently to what was the most of them an alien service, and all joined tearfully in the recitation of the Lord's Prayer. The scene was to most impressive. The ladies near the grave sobbed aloud, and their grief was reechoed from all around. As soon as the grave was filled up the crowd began to slowly and quietly disperse. There was no speaking and no services except the reading of the burial rite. The Gaels were left to guard the grave and were soon alone with the dead. Immediately after the funeral the visitors began leaving Dublin, all trains being filled, yet the city is still abnormally crowded.

JUDGE GRESHAM'S ADDRESS. CHICAGO, Oct. 7.-The following is a wnopsis of the oration delivered by Judge Walter Q. Gresham at the unveiling of the statue of Gen. Ulysses 8. Grant at Lincoln park in this city:
Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: It is hardly necessary on this occasion to enter upon any minute account of the life and deeds of the man to whose memory this beautiful statue has been erected. They are part of the history has been erected. They are part of the history of our country, and in the minds of the people are as familiar as household words. Wherever its history is read, in whatever nook and corner of the habitable globe there exists an intelligent interest in the strength and perpetuity of our institutions, the name and fame of the illustrious soldier, where at once their product and their prewho was at once their product and their pre-server, have preceded aught that may now be said of him. Many incidents of his public or said of him. Many incidents of his public or private life, however, will bear frequent repe-tition, because they serve to illustrate personal characteristics which made him, in many respects, an ideal citizen of our democratic republic, and are worthy of our constant emu-

He was remarkably free from that vanity and conceit which have been the weakness of many great minds, and which seem to be the peculiar vice of men who have risen, like him, from humble antecedents to a lofty eminence. He had none of the strut of the first Napoleon, as it was revealed in his private letters, his turgid addresses to the armies of France and his egotistical assumption that he was a man of destiny; and one of the boastfulness with which Casar an nounced his victories in Asia Minor to the Roman senate ever manifested itself in the speech or writings of the victorious leader of ur armies. Greatness was never more unconscious of itself than it was in him. The triumphs of Grant from Belmont to Appomattox never destroyed his balance, or affected the habitual moderation of his utterance or de-

Even with the confederacy at his feet, as a inal testimony of his skill and prowess as a military chieftain, he was not betrayed into snything like exultation, and stopped the jubi-lant firing of a salute in his command as soon s the sound of the cannon reached his ears. The glittering uniform of the conquered leader of the confederate armies contrasted strangely with the plain and much worn habiliments of the conqueror; but Grant was more intent upon the results of the conference between them than upon his own appearance in it. And it was not the result of a surrender of the condederate armies and final cessation of hostilities upon the north or upon partisan politics that occupied his mind. In that supreme moment he ceased to be the leader of the union army only, and thought and acted with broad and enlightened statesmanship and patriotism for the whole reunited country. He thought of the feelings and sensibilities of the vanquished, and of making the road towards of the waste lands and impoverished communities of the south which were again under the old flag, and quickened a returning sense of obligation to it by restoring to every confederate soldier the horse or mule which had belonged to him, and might be used again in making and garnering the crops on which he and his family would depend for their sustenance. He thought more of giving an impulse to the pursuits of peace and industry among a disorganized people, of aiding hem in the maintenance of themselves, of bringing them back into social as well as political relations with the rest of the country, than ment of these salutary ends. In the struggle sctuated by the spirit of revenge or hate, or by sught else than a high sense of patriotic duty. due to any lack of courage or persistence, or ble result of their having undertaken an impossible task. It is natural that men who friendship, and, so long as they are loyal to the flag of the union, brave and generous men will not censure them for cherishing an affectionate regard for one another, and for strewing flowers on the graves of their fallen comrades. Grant had extraordinary abilities, and while he never dwelt upon or thought about their greatness, or measured or compared them with he abilities of others, he knew just what they were, their extent and limitations, what might be accomplished by them, and what was beyoud their reach. He was never misled by ating himself too high or too low. In Mexico he had shown unmistakable sense and courage in a subordinate capacity, but in our late war he began the study of himself as a commander and leader of men, and he soon mastered the

As he became conscious of his powers he relied with unshaken confidence upon his own judgment. He held few if any councils of war: He succeeded in great emergencies by his native strength of will and intellect, and his resolute persistence where men of more learning and better versed in military science, but with less natural capacity, would have failed. What they are obliged to learn, he seemed to know intuitively. He disregarded elementary maxims of war, without hesitation, when they were plainly the outgrowth of conditions radieally different from those which confronted him. He was equal to any command or emergency. But there was no affectation of dash or brilliancy about his movements. The boldest of his campaigns and battles were not deter mined upon without deliberation, and an intelligent comprehension of the obstacles in his path and the means at his command for overcoming them. And having once entered upon the execution of his plans, reverses which would have discouraged less resclute and far-sighted men never impaired his confidence in ultimate success, or disqualified him for seizing upon unexpected advantages and profiting by them. With a definite end always in view, without wavering or vaciliation, and ever ready, with large resources, to adjust his plans to any change of circumstances, Grant pressed determinedly on to an invariably accessful termination. He never lost the fraits of victory through inactivity.

The Vicksburg campaign was begun and prosecuted amid the virulent censure of himelf, popular clamor for his removal, the jeal ousy of martinets, and the doubts and misgiv-ings of some of his faithful and trustworthy abordinates; but it went steadily on until it reached a triumphant conclusion. Its end scaled the fate of the confederacy, restored confilence in the efficiency of our armies throughout the north, and among loyal people everywhere, and all but the quiet and undemonstrative soldier, who had brought it about, and for whom it was a personal triumph as well as a union victory, gave way to a delirium of joy and excitation. No success ever turned his head. He commanded himself as successfully as he commanded armies, and where he led, all felt has a gainst the consequences of incapacity or afe against the consequences of incapacity or

It was a cause for which he was willing to wake any sacrifice, even life itself. According to their views the whole interest that any citizen has in municipal, state or national government is measured by what he can make out of it. It is worse than idle to shut our eyes to the existence of corrupt methods and practices in our politics which threaten to subvert our free institutions. The man who accepts a bribe of any sort places his conscience and judgment in the vilest bondage. He is no longer free. Argument is wasted on him. Considerations of the public weal or woe do not affect him. Bayonets at the polls would not control his con-duct more effectively. And men who contribute money to buy votes, and to bribe the people's representatives, as well as those who disburse it, are deadly enemies of the republic. Their greed and love of power are greater than their love of country. They impair popular respect for law, which is the only safeguard for life and property; and it will be an evil day for the nation when its preservation depends upon their patriotism and courage. They may masquerade in the garb of righteousness, and address the people in the language of patriotism, but their virtues are assumed; they are hypocrites and assassins of liberty, and would welcome a dynasty rather than shed their blood in defense of popular government. Their shameless and insidious attacks on free institutions are infinitely more dangerous than the revolutionary teachings and practices of comparatively few visionary and misguided men and women in our large cities. It is not such men as these, but the great multitude, engaged in active and hardy pursuits, who constitute the real strength of the nation. They are not enemies of law and order, they do not envy or hate those who have acquired property by honest methods, they bear their full share of the public burdens, and so long as the powers of the nation are not perverted to their injury for the enrichment of few, they will rally to its defense with unselfish and devoted patriotism. Their energy and courage have not been deadened by ease and luxury. There can be no prosperity without public tranquillity, and the people will not long remain tranquil under a well-founded belief that the corrupt use of money prevents a free and honest expression of their choice of men and measures. If public opinion cannot be honestly expressed in authorized ways, our elections will become expensive and useless mockeries, and free government will exist only in name. Let us not be deceived by mere forms. Men like Grant who have sprung from the people, with strong and resolute character, un-spoiled by luxury, clear-minded and levelheaded, able to see men and things as they really are, undeceived by outward show and conventionality, are worth more to our nation than all its mere cunning, self-seeking politicians, its political theorists or its plutocrats. In war and peace these qualities lie at the foundation of all true character. A nation not only needs such men but they are indispensable to it. In times of peril it may perish without

It is not improper at this time to call attention to baneful influences and practices which lower our national standard and, unchecked, threaten disaster. Engrossed in the cares of spen his own part and lot in the accomplish. business and laborious occupations, men seem inattentive to the requirements of citizenship, t they do not c its duties and responsibilities, when they are clearly seen and fully understood. They may The failure of the southern people was not be slow to act, but when danger becomes imminent they will assert themselves leadership in the field, but it was the inevita | again as they have in the past. They will not allow the republic to perish from neglect. The sentiment of patriotism is still strong in the were capable of such an effort should be people. It is neither dead nor short-lived. It semented together in bonds of sympathy and grows and strengthens with honest appeals to It, and it may be appealed to with confidence for the vindication of good measures. It increases with every draft that is made upon it and while it may become silent through neglect, it does not cease to exist. Its voice may be unheeded for a season and may be drowned by the noisier tongues of greed and selfishness, but it will be heard Utica. again. It patiently submits to many affronts, and quietly endures many indignities. But in its temporary silence it gathers an accumula-tion of energy, and when the limit of endurance has been reached its commanding voice breaks forth on the startled air, trumpet-tongued, and against its mighty tones no other voice dares lift itself.

The vast majority of the people are patriotic and sound to the core. In them is our main stay and chief dependence. Our confidence in their steady and unfaltering love of country, which is indifferent about any show of itself, and speaks only in its acts, will never be misplaced. It was this sort of patriotism that was personified in Grant.

SOUTHERN HORSEMANSHIP. People Who Are from Necessity Superior

Riders. It will be accepted as a truism that the man or people who does any given thing the most constantly will be apt to excel in that one thing. Apply this to the riding of the southerners. Now the climate and soil, the thicker population, and more industrious habits of the eastern and middle states produced excellent roads at a much earlier period than in the south. In fact, there are few places in the south to-day where the roads can be called tolerable. Good roads are wont to be followed by wheeled transportation; poor roads force people to cling to the saddle. When the northern farmer goes to the nearest town he drives, because the roads are good, and he can carry his stuff to better advantage; the southerner rides, because the roads for a great part of the year are impassable leaves a husband and ten children. to wheels. This breeds the universal habit of horseback work. The same thing applies to women. To visit their neighbors, go to church or shopping in the nearest village, the women must make use of the saddle. This necessity of the country, where the roads are bad, becomes habit of the city, where the roads are better. The southerner has been in the saddle constantly for many generations, and to-day boys and girls alike ride the colts in pasture, with only a stick to guide them. In the north these conditions and habits ceased long ago. Riding is a mere fashion of very recent origin, though it has acquired such an impetus that it may have come to stay.

The southern seat is practically the same as the true military seat; and except that the bridle hand is wont to be held a trifle too high, which is a habit caught from the high pommel or roll of blankets or other baggage in front of the soldier, this seat, when not exaggerated, is, all things considered, the best for road riding, and perhaps would enable a man to do a greater number of things in the saddle than any other one style. And though the English pigskin is perhaps a neater and more available rig, the southerner is, in gaits and style and knowledge of road work, by far the best model for us to copy, as his saddlebeast is the best for us to

About Laughter.

A laugh may cover all manner of sentiments—joy, sorn or anger; it may be the most musical or most discordant of sounds, the most delightful or the Mr. John Oldenage, who is nearly 80 years of age, had a light stroke of paralysis last week.

of sounds, the most delighted or most horrible which can fall upon our ears. Contrast the happy laughter of merry children with the gibbering cry of the maniac or the hoarse laugh of a defiant criminal, the musical ripple of cultivated mirth with the roar of a tipsy crowd at a fair.

A really musical laugh is perhaps rarer than a really musical voice. The giggle, the snigger, the half-choked seldom do we hear that melodious in a charming garden, laid out with sound, the laugh in its perfection. It should not be shrill, nor too loud, nor too long. The Taj Hahal.

India boasts of the tallest mountain in the world, the most beautiful building and the finest eeho in the world, the tallest column in the world, and the largest church in the world, which are at Delhi. Of course the all-absorbing object of interest to tourists is the Taj Mahal. The Taj is undoubtedly the greatest architectural wonder in the world to-day. The main quadrangle, 1,000 by 1,860 feet, is red sandstone. The property of the main entrance from the preliminary court without, the visitor finds himself in a charming garden, laid out with sees that miracle of beauty, the Taj, with its pure white walls, inlaid with every kind of Oriental gems, and its great marble dome towering to supernal heights. It might seem that such an inscription is out of place on such a tomb, but as it is in the native characters, it never bothers tourists much. The immense amount of work involved in bringing the materials together can scarcely be imagined, especially in bringing the marble from Jeypore, 100 miles distant, and the sandstone from Pettehpore. It must be remembered that that was in the pre-railroad days. There has been some debate as to where the diamonds were. At present none are to be discovered.
