George E. Bell, of Ann Arbor, admited in court Monday that he had shot wice at his son with the intention of killing him. He was held to the circus court and in default of $1,000 bail was sent to jail.

At the regular meeting of the council, Monday night one of the alderman reported that he had been stricken down that same morning with cholera and thought it would be a wise plan for the council to take some action in reference to the case. No immediate steps will be taken as it was thought best to leave the matter until the next meeting when the brother will doubtless make a further report of his condition.-Saline Observer.

During a conversation with a prominent Scio farmer a few days ago we casually remarked: "Very dry weather, isn't it?" "So some people seem to think," said our granger friend "Don't you think a little rain would be a good thing for the farmers?" we asked. At this astounding query he aimed one of his characteristic glances at us, and replied: "See here, young man! The Almighty has been farming it a darn sight longer than I have, and when he thinks the farmers need rain I haven't the slightest doubt but that he'll send it." Pretty good philosophy, that .- Dexter News.

The laugh seems to be on a couple of Dexter's railroad men who recently started out in quest of the festive "duck." They reached the Dover pond in safety and put up a flock of beauties. Art. stood majestically in his old smooth-bore and at the same instant George arose in the stern of the craft, like an avenging angel. Over went the boat, the boys getting the "duck," and down to the bottom of the pond went the whole business. After much work everything was rescued but we havn't yet found anyone sufficiently courageous to ask the boys how they enjoyed their "ducking."-Dexter News.

I heard a good thing the other day which will interest the readers of this column. Several Ann Arborites, of the male persuasion, went out to one of 59,541,93 the famous resorts north of the city recently to spend a few days in hunting and fishing. All went well for a day or so when one of the gents, who is so unfortunate as to wear false teeth, had the misfortune to break his upper plate right into. One can imagine the predicament he was in, as there were none of the gentler sex in camp who could cater to one thus rendered powerless to masticate solids, so one of the company, who is quite a mechanic, thought he could "fix" the plate. So he hunted up the glue pot, a necessary article in camp, and glued the plate together which seemed to be solid. With triumph depicted on his countenance he carried the plate to his friend who put it in his mouth and began to eat his supper, which had just been prepared. For a few minutes all went well but as soon as the glue had become warm the parts separated and the glue became mixed with his food. After some time he succeeded in clearing his mouth of the mixture and then went to bed intending to return the next day to Ann Arbor and have his plate repaired, but in the night he was taken violently ill with cramps and the way he kept that camp of men waiting on him was a caution. One man nearly scalded his hands wringing out hot cloths to place upon the affected part, while others stood by with glasses of hot toddy which they administered in "small" doses. This was kept up until near morning when the pain left him and he quieted down and the poor tired watchers crept into bed. The following day the patient was too weak to return to the city but he passed the time in smoking cigarettes while the rest of the company put in several hours of good sleep.—Democrat.

CHAPTER XIII-Continued. She bent her head, pretending to examine the gleaming stones, but raised it immediately, to say rather slowly: "Tell me what you wish most, and you shall have it."

Brian gave a questioning glance at her half-averted face. He hesitated, but only for a second. The next he had caught ner in his arms, and holding her against his beating heart he pressed a long, passionate kiss upon her passive

She made not the slightest resistance, though her face had grown very white. He laid his own interpretation upon this sign. "You are angry," he said, allowing her to go at last.

'No, no, not angry; that was your Christmas gift.

She spoke with an effort and once more fell to admiring her pin. Brian watched her with a longing she felt rather than saw. To avoid his eyes she drew her chair closer to the fire and buried her head in its cushioned back.

"It is odd," remarked Brian, after an awkward pause. "I think the world would smile to know that a husband is only permitted to kiss his wife on Christmas day.

"Some other time we will talk of that, Brian. Not now. It will only stir up old discords.

There is always the shadow of discord between us," was the answer given with a sigh. "Heaven knows I should like to be a different man; but as I must be what I am, why can we not be happy together?"

'Are you unhappy?' "You know I am. What pleasure can you find in hearing me say so? You know your love is the one thing I long for. Yet you will kill yourself in the interest of others, while for me-

He paused with a passion more eloquent than words. Margaret could not reply immediately. A strange, nervous weakness benumbed her faculties, and she waited for a stronger moment to answer his reproaches

"You speak unjustly," she said at last, with great effort. "I do not take pleasure in your unhappiness. If you knew how utterly exhausted I am, you would spare such remarks. They pain me. I -I can't bear them now.' She had risen from her chair with the last words, and with sudden trembling swayed as though she would faint. "Margaret!" he cried, catching her in his arms, "tell me the trouble. "I am only tired," was the answer, with a half sob as her head rested for a second on his shoulder. "Only very "I have been a brute," he rejoined, penitently. "I should have seen you were ill. Let me do something for you, darling. 'Oh, no, Brian; I thank you. I shall be better when I have slept. T need only that, I think. I must say goodnight now.

With a sigh he let her go from him, and she moved away unsteadily; but coming back under the impulse of an after-thought, she said, very slowly:

"Brian, won't you try to believe that want to see you happy and contented, and that I try very hard to make you so? If I am not a better woman it is not because I do not strive to be.

"No more," cried Brian, with much warmth. "Margaret, you hurt me. Not to win your love, but to be worthy of it, that should be my ambition. You are too good for me, I Good-night."

CHAPTER XIV. A BITIER REVELATION.

The old year died amid the festivities incident to the season, and the new year was already a week old; but still Margaret had not regained her old-time spirits.

Brian was at first anxious and then to see her strong and well. Thus he argued with man's sublime selfishness.

"I wish you would tell me what is the matter with you," he said, rather sharply, at br. akfast one morning. "You say you prescribe for you, nor will you see Dr. Philips; and yet you go around looking like a ghost. I can't understand it."

"There is no necessity for trying. Brian. I was never rosy in my best days, and people often grow thin from know, but presently she was aroused very simple causes. Will you pass me by loud voices raised in some altercaa roll, please?"

"You need not try to deceive me," put in Brian, complying with her request. "It is well enough to talk of being pale I care. and growing thin from simple causes. I know there is a reason for your indispo- cided, still unable to shake off the imsition. The place is dull enough, dear pression of dreaming knows. garet, you know my feeling perfectly well. It is of the place, not you, I complain. What under heaven can a sane man do here?"

"What can he do in the city? What do you do there?' Margaret asked this question very quietly.

What can one do?" repeated Brian, ignoring the personality. "Rather ask: What can't he do? New York life is so flexible, my dear, that it bends to every caprice. Wonderful and accommodating both. There's pleasure for everybody. A thousand amusements to fill up one's time. Ask a Gothamite how he enjoys himself and hear his answer."

"Then from your account I am to assume that enjoyment is the end and aim of his existence. I think your Gothamite's life would not suit me.

"Not if you hold your present principles, certainly. Really, Margaret, you are a most self-opinionated young woman, and I'd be delighted if you would drop one or two of your theories by the wayside,"

"I dare say it would be as well," was the answer; "they could not fall on more barren soil than your unappreciative mind offers.

Say philosophical rather than unappreciative. You must admit that I have reason on my side. Show me the benefit of working one's self to death, when there is no necessity for it. You only see the surface, Margaret, but I go 'On the contrary," smiled Margaret, you see only the surface, while I look deeper. You look only at the need of money, but I see a hundred effects in which money has no part. Necessity is a very accommodating term, and has a different shade of meaning for different people. As for working one's self to "Margaret," he said, starting at sight death, I'm afraid that is also an accom- of her. "You here? I did not know. modating term. A lazy man might consider the slightest exertion a step toward that lamentable end.

"I suppose I am that lazy man?" "I shouldn't be at all surprised. And, setting joking aside, Brian, I do think that no man has a right to do nothing. Lounging about day after day, with no higher ambition than to amuse one's self would, it seems to me, make a man or woman (more particularly a man), tired of himself. Now, don't look at want to be a shrew, or a preacher, before.' either. I detest everlasting preachers, and I don't intend to be one. Neversomething to do, and have a better reason for going to New York than your present one, which is-well, not particularly creditable."

Margaret's voice broke slightly, but she tried to hide the momentary weakness by sipping her coffee.

Brian's face had flushed very visibly at her allusion to the reason of his visits to the city and he, too, went on eating in silence.

"Margaret," he said, presently, "if you have any old men or women who need doctoring call me in and I'll show you what I can do. I'm pretty fair, notwithstanding my want of practice.

"Very well, Brian, be prepared for an early call. It is not your ability I doubt. though.

As he had said, Brian went to New York the next day. "I shall be back in a day or so," he told Margaret on bidding her good-by. "You may expect

Margaret did expect him, but she was

The days passed, and after his first letter she heard no more from him. She became worried and anxious, though even to herself she would not acknowledge her alarm.

She did not dream of bodily harm. Intelligence of such a mishap would have reached her quickly. Yet in some intangible way she felt that he was in danger and needed her.

In cases like this philosophy is of little avail. To tell herself that this or that was impossible, that Brian was merely forgetful and indifferent, augmented rather than relieved her fears.

To relieve her mind she rode over to but upon reaching her destination she annoyed. It was too had of Margaret was told that Alice had left the house to look so pale and thin, when he liked with the intention of returning in a short

Do you think I can talk quietly and calmly when I remember her? Why in the name of heaven do such men have wives? Why in the name of a just heaven should she have such a husband? the Colonel's high-pitched denunciations, Bertie's lower but not less emphatic ones, and now she could hear the Colonel angrily pacing the library, his regular rapid steps seeming to keep time with her quick heart beats.

No, this was not dreaming. She was fully awake. And crouching down in her chair she pressed her hands over her eyes as though she would shut from her sight the shame and disgrace that was actually touching her life. Why had it never occurred to her before? Why had she not guessed that, while she passed her thoughtless, unthinking days in the safety of her own home, he was following a path of ruin amid the gilded temptations of New York? How much of the blame would lie at her door, and what would be the end? Ah! those bitter questions, with their more bitter possibilities!

Before her mind rose the memory of a solemn moment and the never-forgot-

Don't forget Brian. Be good to him for my sake.'

Did she need such memories to make her realize that now as never before his future, his destiny rested in her hands? She could not sit here and wait quietly for Alice nor could she be found here by either Bertie or the Colonel. She must leave the house unobserved if possible.

Alas! it was not possible. Scarcely had she reached the hall than Bertie, leaving the library at the same moment, came suddenly upon her.

You are in trouble. You are ill. Tell me. "Heart-sick, Bertie, only heart-sick," she returned, with a half-sobbing breath, while she caught at the door for support. "I came to see Alice. She is out; I cannot wait longer." 'You have been waiting then," he questioned, quite bewildered by her strange manner. "Margaret," he add-

It was hard for Bertie to meet this inquiry calmly.

Not for any desert of yours," he said, rather huskily. "You ask me if I have known long, I'm afraid I must say yes. The first time I saw Brian not himself-I am hurting you." No: Go on, please. Tell me all. It

I believe he intended to, and I think he tried, but his resolutions are weak and easily broken. Do you remember the day met you in the road and you remarked upon my long face? It was the day before Brian left on this last visit. I dreaded the result for him, and I determined to tell you all and let your persuasions influence him. But, Margaret, when I saw your face my heart failed me, and I allowed the opportunity to slip. Yet you can remember how earnest I was in begging you to use your influence to keep Brian at home. Here the temptation see as to have no power over him. I think your presence must be the cause. Unfortunately, though, The Cedars to see and talk with Alice; he loves the allurements of city life. "It is so little to thank me for," he returned, sadly. "I wish I could do a thousand times more for you. If Brian is not content to stay with you at Elmwooe, the next best thing is for you to be with him in New York. It will be a gain for him, but leaving your home will be a heavy sacrifice for you. Do you fell called upon to make it?"

He looked kindly in her face, but he found no hesitation there.

'A hundred times, if necessary," she responded. "I had not thought of that part, and I cannot speak of it yet. Will you see that John brings my horse? And remember me to Alice and your father,

CROPS HAVE BEEN INJUREL. Rain, Drought and Frost in Different Sections Injure Crop Prospects.

The following is the weekly telegraphic bulletin of the Weather Bureau: Temperature—The week cooler than usual on Central and Southern California coasts, and generally in all districts east of the Rocky Mountains, the exceptions being the Red River of the North Valley, the upper Ohio Valley, and portions of the lake region, where the temperature was normal or slightly above. The deficiency in temperature has averaged from 3 to 5 degrees on the Atlantic coast from North Carolina to Massachusetts, and over the greater part of the country between the Mississippi River and the Rocky Mountains. Over the plateau district and on the Northern Pacific coast it was warmer than usual, and along the coast north of California the week was exceptionally warm, the excess in temperature amounting to from 5 to 7 degrees per

Frost occurred in the Upper Mississippi, Missouri, and Ohio valleys, New England, and in the northern portion of the middle Atlantic States, but the reports indicate no serious injury. Freezing temperature prevailed in Wyoming and Northern Montana the 11th. Early corn is now reported as safe from injury by frosts in the principal corn-producing States, and if late corn escapes injury during the next two weeks the crop will be safe. Precipitation-More than the usual amount of rain has fallen in the upper Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys, over Arkansas, Louisiana and Eastern Texas, and along the Atlantic coast from North Carolina southward. There has also been a slight excess of rainfall in the Dakotas and in portions of Pennsylvania and New York. Unusually heavy rains fell along the coast of South Carolina, Georgia and Eastern Florida, in the upper Mississippi valley, Central Arkansas, and near the mouth of the Mississippi, where the actual rainfall has ranged from two to five inches. From the Ohio valley eastward to the Atlantic coast but little rain fell during the week, and over a considerable portion of this region there was an entire absence of rain. Little or no rain has fallen in the Rocky Mountain district, and none fell on the Pacific coast except light showers in Washing-

Cotton picking, which was begun in the southern portion of the cotton region two weeks ago, is now general in the northern portion of the cotton region, and some shipments have been made. The cotton crop in South Carolina is reported as seriously injured, and in Louisiana there are complaints of rust and boll worms.

Severe drought continues throughout Maryland and rain is much needed in portions of Virginia, South Carolina, Kentucky, Arkansas, Michigan and

HOW TWO SCHOOL TEACHERS DID IT.

Two Hundred Dollars Grows to Twelve Thousand Within a Year. [Marion, Indiana, Chronicle.]

There are two sisters teaching in the Marion public schools who have reason to thank the rapid development of one of Chicago's manufacturing suburbs for a small fortune which has grown from a very tiny seed planted less than a year ago. To a representative of the Chronicle these young ladies told the story of their remarkable investment as follows:

"At the close of our school work a year ago we found that we had saved about $100 each, for which we had no immediate use. We were spending our vacation in Chicago, and stepped into the Chamber of Commerce Building to see Jay Dwiggins & Co., whom we had long known. They were just then founding the new town of Griffith. whose fuel oil pipe lines and four great railroads, including a complete belt line encircling Chicago, gave great promise of making this a factory

"We were inclined to make an investment in the new town and consented to join them in the purchase of a five-acre block which they wished to subdivide with some other tracts and put immediately on the market. Our $200 sufficed to make the cash payment for onethird interest in this five acres and we expected to meet the deferred payments from our wages the following year.

"After making this investment we went further on our vacation trip, and what was our surprise a few weeks later to receive word that the five acres had been bought, subdivided, and completely sold out. Three parties had taken the entire block at a profit of almost $6,000, one-third of which we learned was at our disposal.

"So far we had not even seen Griffith, but this remarkably quick turn of affairs gave us a great interest in the new town, and we went immediately to look it over. We found, nine miles southeast of Chicago limits, a remarkable railroad junction, but little more than that. There were perhaps a dozen houses scattered about in the oak groves and occupied by railroad employes. There were no stores, no streets, no sidewalks, no nothing-except a bright future. The surveyors were just putting down the lot stakes. We found our block in the very center of the town plat, with frontage on what promised to be the best business street. The lots had been sold out at the ridiculously low average of $130 each.

"We remarked that we would rather buy than sell at these figure. This quick sale, even at a low price, had given us the capital with which to buy. We immediately selected Block 11 in the Original Town of Griffith, and bought it with the profits we had just made. We left Griffith, saying: Well, we shall see what a year will bring forth in this promising place.' We have just now returned from Griffith after a year's absence. We found four factories completed and many more negotiating to come. Houses are going up on every hand, and streets which had not been cut out when we were there a year ago, are now lined with prosperous stores. Our block, if sold at present prices, would realize about $12,000, but we would not take $25,000 for it. If it were similarly located in Marion, it would bring $50,-

"We have seen Marion grow up from a country town into a flourishing young city, by the location of factories, and Marion has but three railroads and has not the great city of Chicago to tie to. We confidently expect within the next five years to see Griffith a great and flourishing city, and that will be time enough to realize on our beautiful block of lots. Since we bought our relatives have made further purchases and have made money, too. We certainly believe that Griffith lots bought at present prices and on the very easy terms at which they can be had will prove a quickly paying investment."

What Spectacles Have Done. Eyeglasses are commonly ground with equal convexity on both sides. The material for their manufacture is both glass and a kind of stone called Brazilian pebble. It is really a rock crystal of very fine quality and does not resemble a pebble in any particular. Spectacles have alleviated more misery than all other agencies, because there is no sorrow equal to that caused by impaired sight.

Phantoms.

The hopes of cure held out in the advertisements of numberless remedies are mere phantoms, without the slightest shadow of reality about them. On the other hand, no statement has ever been made in behalf of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters that is not susceptible of ample substantiation. Care has ever been taken in laying its claims before the public to circumscribe those claims with the bounds of truth. Allegations outside of these form no blot on the record of this sterling, timehonored remedy, proven by the most respectable evidence to be a remedy for and preventive of malarial disease, rheumatism, kidney trouble, chronic indigestion and biliousness. It is an ineffably fine tonic, promotes convalescence and mitigates the infirmities of age. Taken before retiring at night it is a promoter

Dr. Pierce's Pleas-ant Pellets. To begin with, they're the smallest, and the easiest to take. They're tiny, sugar-coated anti-billious granules, scarcely larger than mustard seeds. Every child is ready for them

Then, after they're taken, instead of disturbing and shocking the system, they act in a mild, easy, and natural way. There's no chance for any reaction afterward. Their no chance for any reaction, Indigestion, Bilious help lasts. Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Sick or Bilious Headaches, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are promptly relieved and permanant, cured.

They're put up in glass vials, which keeps them always fresh and reliable, unlike the ordinary pills in wooden or pasteboard

And they're the cheapest pills you can buy, for they're quaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.

Tossed Hither and Thither.

The iron steamboat Cepheus was then hired and the first and second class cabin passengers started for the promised land. The weather was rough and many were seasick, but they cared little for that, happy in their escape from the prison-ship Normannia. After a voyage of about thirty-six miles the captain weakened and said he-was atraid to take the Cepheus over the bar without a pilot. In consequence of this the iron steamboat started back to the Horseshoe bend and the first-class passengers were once more put on board the rickety old Stonington. The second-cabin passengers were kept on board the Cepheus without beds or even pillows on which to lay their heads. They were strewn about the settees and carpeted decks of the steamer.

Eearly on Monday morning the captain of the Cepheus discovered that he required coal and water, and could not get to Fire Island without them. He calmly steamed up to the quarantine jetty and made fåst alongside and sent word shortly after 4 to wake the health officer up.

After a hurried conference with Dr. Fergusson and Mr. Wall, Dr. Jenkins decided to water and e al her at his own long time before taking dock. There was no infection on board, said Dr. Jenkins, and the conduct of the mob was atominable and an outrage. He would give them pratique as soon as possible as they had already been forty-eight hours out of the Normannia. Gov. Flower had said that he would, as Governor, have obeyed the injunction of Judge Barnard, but if he had been in the position of the captain of the Cepheus he would have landed the passengers if he had had to do sixty

DO FARMERS WANT DIRECT TAXATION?

An exchange asks this question. The heaviest tax that the farmer is called upon to pay is that which is caused by sickness. Farmers are peculiarly liable to pneumonia and rheumatism. Indeed, it is not too much to say that if these maladies were removed the lives of the farming community would be greatly prolonged. They take cold, it settles on their kidneys, and they complain of a pain in their back without knowing what ails them. Then they suffer with rheumatism and are unfit for work. If they will take REID'S GERMAN COUGH AND KIDNEY CURE they will find that all of their troubles will disappear, for this great remedy stimulates the kidneys and enables them to perform their office—that of removing the uric acid from the blood. In speaking of the attraction at the Town Hall to-night, the San Francisco Examiner says: Nelson's Great World Vaudeville Combination is what the denomination conveys, being a concentration in one company of the most celebrated artists from various parts of the universe, as to constitute a phenomenal colossal and selected congregation of the various shows on the world's stage. A. E. WINANS, Clerk. THE PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION

On motion the board adjourned.

He Recommends the General Observance of Columbus Day on Oct. 21.

Whereas, by a joint resolution, approved June 29, 1892, it was resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, "That the president of the United States be authorized and directed to issue a proclamation recom-mending to the people the observance in all their localities of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America, on the 21st of October 1892, by public demonstrations and by suitable exercises in their schools and other places of

Now, therefore, I. Benjamin Harrison, president of the United States of America, in pursuance of the aforesaid joint resolution, de hereby appoint Friday, Oct. 21, 1892, the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus, as a general holiday for the people of the United States. On that day let the people so far as possible cease from toil and devote themselves to such exercises as may best express honor to the discoverer and their appreciation of the great achievements of the four completed centuries of American life.

Columbus stood in his age as the pioneer of progress and enlightenment. The system of universal education is in our age the most prominent and salutary feature of the spirit of anlightenment, and it is peculiarly appropriate that the schools be made by the people the center of the day's demonstration. Let the national flag float over every school house in the press upon our youth the patriotic duties of American citizenship. In the churches and in the other places of assembly of the people let there be expressions of gratitude to divine Providence for the devout faith of the discoverer, and for the divine care and guidance which have directed our history and so abundantly blessed our people. FAMED SANTA MARIA.

COLUMBUS' FLAGSHIP COMPARED WITH MODERN SAILING VESSELS.

The Wonder to the Mariner of Today Is How the Navigator Crossed the Ocean in His Little Caravel—A Facsimile for the World's Fair.

Spain is now in the midst of a series many in the Spanish ports larger than of fetes in commemoration of the discovery of America which will last till voyage would be comparatively short late in October. On the 3d of Angust, and the sea where he was going always date of the sailing of Columbus from smooth, and he particularly requested Palos, the jubilation began, and of all such vessels as would enable him to run the sights the exact reproduction of the close in along the shores and sail up the flagship of Columbus, the Santa Maria, rivers. On his third voyage, when he excited most amazement. Among the actually reached South America, he sailors in the vast gathering there was a complained of the size of his vessel, loud chorus of astonishment and unbe- which rendered coast exploration diffilief. Almost unanimously they de- cult. clared that such a ship had not done the thing-it was impossible.

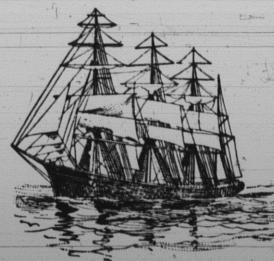

THE NEW SANTA MARIA.

It is indeed hard to believe that the little caravel of 240 tons at the outside could have made such a voyage, and bus, and returned to receive renewed when one compares it with the large salutes. At this naval congress of nasailing vessels of today he may well be tions the fact was humorously comincredulous. With the achievements mented on that Columbus took with him of steam and practical science we are for interpreter a scholar who knew Lat-(though sailing vessels antedate written Armenian, in addition to Spanish; that history, the progress therein since 1492 this learned gentleman was a failure in is as great as in anything else) comes to the New World, and that the first to one as a great surprise. Compare the master any of the Indian tongues were little Santa Maria with, for instance, the most illiterate sailors. But this is the magnificent Shenandoah, the American four masted bark and queen of all sailing vessels, which a few months ago went from San Francisco to Liverpool with 5,002 tons of wheat on board.

Consider first the big sailer. The Shenandoah, commanded by Captain Murphy, was one of the five which left the Bay of San Francisco last year on the famous race around the Horn. They sailed at high tide, of necessity, as they drew twenty-seven feet of water. The weight of wheat aboard, 5,002 tons, was the greatest cargo of the kind ever placed in a vessel and equivalent to 166,733 bushels, or the crop of an average agricultural county. An adequate description of the Shenandoah would fill a column. Sailer as she is, she "makes sail by steam," as sailors saythat is, the sails are pulled into place by a little donkey engine, and of all glorious sights to the seaman's eye there is none more glorious than to see her swell from bare poles to full rig of snowy sails in less than five minutes.

The Santa Maria might have been placed on the deck of the Shenandoah without adding perceptibly to her weight of cargo. She was a decked vessel, and while the Spanish historians do not deal in exact measurements they are so minute in details of her capacity that her size is known. Captain Gustavus W. Fox, after a very careful calculation, declares that her length was "63 feet over all and 57 feet along her keel," with 20 feet beam and 101/2 feet in depth. Her crew consisted of fifty seamen, and in the list are found the names of one Englishman and one Irishman. It is really a pity that this list is not certainly authentic: it would be interesting to know the name of the first Irish emigrant to America. This historic vessel was wrecked on Christmas eve, 1492, on the coast of Hispaniola, a calamity due to the gross carelessness of the sailing

Small as she was, her consorts, the Pinta and the Nina, were considerably smaller, being mere barks, called caracraft and other light coasting vessels of 4. Acknowledgment of God. Prayer willing to dare the passage of the stormy Atlantic in such craft gives us a high idea of their courage, and as a matter of fact only Columbus, Las Casas, the Pinzons and two or three other mad enthusiasts were willing. The crew consisted chiefly of desperate characters compelled to take the trip. Many were released from prison to go, and some had been condemned to death and voluntered as a bare chance for life.

Our astonishment is but slightly mitigated when we read that Columbus did not ask for large vessels, for there were

The Spanish authorities declare that the Santa Maria of 1892 is an exact reproduction in every detail of that of 1492. It has the same old fashioned shape, the same primitive masts, riggings and sails, and even the same armament of falconets and mortars, halberds and arquebuses. The cabin of the commander is furnished in the style of the Fifteenth century, and its table is littered with maps, documents and nautical instruments of the period. Finally, its mastheads are decorated with the royal standards of Castille and Leon, in exact imitation of the flags which Columbus planted in the New World on Oct. 12, 1492. The vessel is manned by an excellent crew, obtained from among the fishermen and sailors of Cadiz and San Fernando, and placed under the orders of a detachment of officers of the royal navy.

At the opening of the Spanish fetes, on Aug. 3, the war vessels of all nations were at Huelva to salute the new Santa Maria on her first voyage down the river, and her entrance into the Bay of Cadiz was greeted by deafening salvos. As there was almost a dead calm, however, she had to be taken in tow by a gunboat, which marred the representation somewhat. Later, however, she sailed out beautifully on the route taken by Columan oft repeated experience.

J. H. BEADLE. THE OFFICIAL PROGRAMME.

Prepared for the National Columbian Public School Celebration of Oct. 21.

T IS now known to all readers that President Harrison has issued a proclamation naming Oct. 21 as the true anniversary of the discovery of America, and recommending its observance by suitable exercises in all the schools of the United States. A uniform programme for every school in America, to be used on Columbus Day simultaneously with the dedicatory exercises of the World's Columbian exposition grounds in Chicago, will give an impressive unity to the popular celebration. Accordingly, when the superintendents of education last February accepted the plan for this national public school celebration, they instructed their executive committee to prepare an official programme of exercises for the day, uniform for every school.

The following programme has been prepared by the committee: The schools should assemble at 9 a. m. in their various rooms. At 9:30 the detail of veterans is expected to arrive. It is to be met at the entrance of the yard by the color guard of pupils, escorted with dignity to the building and presented to the principal. The principal then gives the signal and the several teachers conduct their pupils to the yard, to drumbeat or other music, and arrange them in hollow square about the flag, the veterans and color guard taking places by the flag itself. The master of ceremonies then gives the command, "Attention!" and begins the exercises by reading the proclamation

8. SALUTE TO THE FLAG. By the Pupils. At a signal from the principal the pupils, in ordered ranks, hands to the side, face the flag. Another signal is given; every pupil gives the flag the military salute-right hand lifted, palm downward, to a line with the forehead and close to it. Standing thus all repeat together slowly, "I pledge allegiance to my flag and the republic for which it stands; one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all." At the words "to my flag" the right hand is extended gracefully, palm upward, to-ward the flag, and remains in this gesture till the end of the affirmation, whereupon all hands immediately drop to the side. Then, center such a vessel was absolutely open and in no respect superior to the fishing chord, all will sing "America"—"My country, tis of thee."

A Forgotten Columbus Monument.

It is a mistake to suppose that there vas, up to a short time ago, no monument to Columbus in the United States. There is a monumental shaft in Baltimore. It is obscurely placed and is inscribed "Chris. Columbus." It dates from 1784. It was erected by the French consul general, De Amamour, who, with some hundred or more French officers and soldiers, remained in Baltimore tolerably familiar, but the fact then in, Greek, Hebrew, Arabic, Coptic and after the end of the Revolutionary war.

A Train Dispatcher's Blunder Causes Death and Ruin on the Northwestern Near Marshalltown - The Blunderer's Wife in the Wreck.

Killed in a Wreck.

FOUR men were killed and two injured by a collision on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad near Marshalltown, Iowa. In addition fifteen freight cars were smashed, two locomotives broken into bits, and a score of sheep killed. The wreck was caused the colliding of a freight and an accommodation train. Following are the names of the dead: Jack Ashton, engineer of the freight; W. T. The collision was due to the carelessness of the dispatcher at Belle Plaine. Freight No. 21 was late and had orders to meet No. 14 at La Moille, the first station west. No. 14 had clearance to proceed to Marshalltown. After No. 21 pulled out of that city her right of way was recalled, but it was too late. The two trains met on a sharp curve, a large hill preventing the engineers seeing their danger until there was not time even to reverse the engines. Many of the trainmen jumped, but both the engineers and Fireman Linebaugh were killed. Conrad Tusing, fireman of No. 14, was hurled thirty feet through a barb-wire fence. Train Dispatcher and as they traveled in steamboat and Titus' wife was on the accommodation railway cars they spread the disease to train, but was not injured.

A BIG raft of logs from Fort Bragg reached San Francisco Sunday, towed by the steamer Noyo. The raft, which is the first that has made the trip successfully on the Pacific coast, is 321x 42 feet beam and 18 feet deep. It holds 1,500,000 feet of lumber. The pilothouse and steering gear were in the center. The raft is eigar shape and the logs were kept in place by wire. Sixty thousand dollars have been spent in preparing ways and other apparatus for launching these rafts at Fort Bragg.

There will be no more racing at Garfield Park, Chicago. The attaches of the track were paid off and notified that their services would be no longer required. The club gave up the idea of racing there several days ago, though the decision was not announced. Publie opinion against the track had not been so strongly expressed, and it was thought that some lucky stroke might have favored the club's plans. The split among its members is certain. In talking over the future a working member of the club declared to a local bookmaker that on no account would he go on with racing in Chicago or with that wing of the club that is building a track at Robey, Ind., though the authorities there were "all right" and ready to protect the establishment.

The President's Wife Very III.

UNLESS there should be a decided improvement in Mrs. Harrison's condi. tion within the next few days, of which there is very little prospect at present. the worst may be expected. The President will remain with Mrs. Harrison until she gets better, and has no other plans whatever. It is therefore apparent that his stay and his future movements are altogether contingent and indefinite. Drs. F. E. Gardner of Washington, F. E. Doughty of New York and E. T. Trudeau of Sar. anac had a consultation at the President's cottage at Loon Lake in regard to the case of Mrs. Harrison, and at its close issued the following statement of her condition. "Primary dist ease, pulmonary tuberculosis right side, associated with nervous prostration. Recent complications, subacute pleurisy, with rapid effusion of water in the right chest, necessitating two tappings, with some relief. Present condition critical on account of tendency to reproduction of fluid. Removal to Washington at present im. possible. Prognostication as to the immediate future uncertain," The President's family take no encourage. ment from the bulletins. The physicians advise them to hope for the best, but offer no real encouragement. They have quietly intimated to the President the strong probability of a fatal result, Mrs. Harrison was first taken with a severe attack of the grip in Washington in the winter of 1890, followed and aggravated by severe bronchial and pulmonary trouble lasting some time. Last winter she had a second attack of the grip, which this time was followed by catarrhal pneumonia, lasting seven or eight days. After that she was troubled by a severe cough, removed to a hospital and the seamen followed in March last with a slight hemorrhage of the right lung. THE New York Health Board has admitted officially that Asiatic cholera has made its appearance in that city. While the board has been issuing daily bulletins declaring there was not a single case in New York it has had genuine cases under surveillance and been investigating deaths doubt caused by Asiatic cholera. The first death occurred eight days ago. There have been three since, which with the first, are proven by biologica examination to have been caused by Asiatic cholera. Bacteriologists Biggs and Durham are now making a microscopical search for the deadly germ in a fifth fatal case, in which the diagnosis will probably also be confirmed.

BLOODY BATTLE-FIELDS

ENTERTAINING REMINISCEN-CES OF THE REBELLION.

Graphic Accounts of the Stirring Scenes Witnessed on the Battle-Field and in Camp-Old Comrades Recite Experiences of a Thrilling Nature.

Two Kinds of Cowards.

THERE is a vast deal the private and pubmen," observed a dis-tinguished Southperner, who won a Smost painful illustration of this fact was in the course of the first day's fight at the Battle of the Wilderness. I had two Mississippi regiments in my comgiand, and, being a native of that state, I knew quite a number of the soldiers personally. One man I had known for years as a well-to-do planter in the Delta. For the first two years of the war he hired a substitute, but he was free with his abundant means in contributing to the scant exchequer of the Confederacy. Under the general conscription act he was forced into line. When he arrived at the camp he came straight to my tent.

"I was glad to see him, for I knew him personally to be a man of unquestioned courage. He and my brother had been at college together, and afterward, during a political contest, in which he was a candidate for the State Senate, he had fought a duel with his Whig opponent, and my brother was his second. The men fought at ten paces and he shot the Whig down, though not fatally. He was one of those men who gave no insult and brooked none, and so successfully had he come out of three or four unprovoked personal encounters that in his champion fighter when he had to fight.

I will feeling that he had accomplished every bumped along on the ties for about two even hold horses, drive a wagon-any- thing which had been demanded of hundred feet, and plunged headlong burying itself: snorting and steaming in the loose earth. Men shouted, women screamed, and for a moment everything was in the wildest confusion. The cries for help from the victims brought the bystanders to their senses, and they rushed to the rescue.

> The engine was almost covered with sand. It had plunged so far into the embankment that a track on top was bent and torn from its place. The smoker had been telescoped by the tender, and over half of it was ground into kindling wood and lay scattered for many rods on either side. The other three coaches did not leave the track.

> James Corea, the Italian laborer, was working on the embankment when the accident occurred and was unable to escape. He still breathed when taken from under the engine, but died twenty minutes later. His body was horribly scalded and both arms were broken near the shoulders. Thomas Leahy was found wedged between the platform of the smoker and the tender, where he had to be cut out. The exact cause of the accident is not known, but it is thought that the crossing, owing to recent heavy rains, was soft and springy, causing the rails to spread under the heavy, rapidly moving train.

KILLED BY TRAIN ROBBERS.

Four Men Fall Under Deadly Fire from Evans and Sontag's Guns.

Evans and Sontag, the train robbers, were overtaken at Samson Flats, near Fresno, Cal., and a deadly exchange of shots took place. A posse consisting of United States Deputy Marshal McGinnis, "Dick" Wilson, L. Olsen, Constable Warren Hill, George Witty, two Apache scouts and one or two others had tracked the robbers from Dunlap to Samson Flats in a mounta'n fastness. The posse was coming down the trail by Young's place, and: when opposite the house a door was violently thrown open and Evans and Sontag appeared on the sill. Before the officers could recover from their surprise the two robbers opened a deadly fire with shotguns, and then with Winchesters. The posse was so demotalized by the sudden attack I then looked at them and discovered that they could make no effectual re-

Four men fell under the deadly fire of the robbers. Three were mortally wounded-United States Deputy Marshal McGinnis, "Dick" Wilson and L. Olsen. George Witty, who was so badly wounded in his encounter with the robbers at Visalia, was shot through the neck, though it is not believed he is mortally wounded. The horse ridden by Constable Warren Hill was shot from under him, and two other members of the posse were slightly wounded. The Apache scouts escaped unhurt.

It could not be found out whether the robbers were wounded; but it is likely they were not very badly wounded if at all. They immediately escaped without any interference and went up farther in the mountains. The dead men and George Witty are

SIX VICTIMS OF CHOLERA IN ITEMS OF INTEREST TO MICHI-NEW YORK.

One Patient Died Ten Days Ago, but Nothing Was Done - Reasons for Reticence-Did Not Want to Alarm the People and Cause Panic.

Kept It a Secret.

It has developed that, despite the stringent quarantine, the heroic efforts of the National and State Governments and the oft repeated declarations of the Board of Health to the contrary, the much-dreaded plague has found a foothold in New York City, and has already many victims. Not only did it develop that the cholera had effected a landing, but that the landing was effected at least two weeks ago, the fact having been kept from the public. That the fact was made public was due to an accident-a slip of the tongue of an attache of the health office, while notifying his superiors of the discovery of a Daily representatives of the press have asked the officers of the Board of Health if the disease had showed any signs of breaking out in the city, and even up to the morning of the above reported discovery were answered in the negative. When pressed, however, and presented with evidence that their secret was a secret no longer, they reluctantly admitted that they were "investigating the cases of a number of persons who had died under circumstances which led them to fear that choleraic germs might be present." They could give no definite reply to the question, "Is there cholera in New York?" however, until they had received the report of the bacteriologists making the test examinations.

Names of the Victims.

The names of the victims, so far as could be learned, are as follows: CHARLES MCAVOY, plasterers' assistant, 35 years old.

MRS. SOPHIA WIGMAN, died at No.

768 Eleventh avenue. WILLIAM WIGMAN, husband of Sophia Wigman, died at the same address.

MINNIE LEVINGER, 20 months old, died at No. 411 East Forty-sixth street. CHARLOTTA BECK, 30 years old, died at No. 1764 Second avenue.

PETER CALLAHAN, an unmarried stableman, who boarded with his sister at No. 318 East Forty-seventh street, died after an illness of four days; 30 years of age.

It was admitted that there were a number of suspected cases now under investigation, but the names or locations to attacks of insanity. of the victims would not be divulged. The reason assigned by the officers for dotte barber had a fight the other eventheir reticence was that they had no desire whatever to create a panic until they were absolutely certain that Chol- member was subsequently ejected from era Asiatica really was the cause of the barber's mouth. A warrant for the minds of the health officers as to the presence of cholera in the city was dispelled when the following reports from the bacteriologists who had made examinations of the cases were handed of Health.

SIR—We would respectfully report that very careful biological examinations of the intestinal contents from the body of Charles Mc-Avoy, who died Sept. 6, have been completed. Autopsy showed anatomical lesion of sporadic cholera, but the biological examination proves that the spiritum of Asiatic cholera was present in the intestines. We, therefore, declare the case one of Asiatic cholera. Respectfully submitted,

Department: SIR-Mrs. Sophia Wigman, whose body was eferred to us to determine the cause of death, lied of Cholera Asiatica, as has been shown by the biological examination of the intestinal discharges taken before death. No reliable conclusions could be drawn from the postmortem or biological examination made after death in this case, or of her husband, Wm. Wig-man, and both bodies have been embalmed. We have no doubt, however, that the cause of death in both cases was the same. The bio-logical examination in the case of the child, Minnie Levinger, also shows that the cause of death was Cholera Asiatica. Respectfully submitted,

HERRMANN BIGGS
EDWARD K. DUNHAM.

On receipt of these reports bulletins were issued setting forth the facts regarding the presence of the scourge and its work, as given above. The physicians say that they have been unable to account for the presence of cholera germs in the cases mentioned, as none of the dead persons had been infected in any known way. Every precaution had been taken in each instance to prevent the further spread of the disease. The clothing and bedding of each patient had been burned, and the houses in each case placed under strict quarantine. Thus far no secondary cases have been discovered in the premises occupied by the victims. In the official bulletin it was stated that the body of a woman who had died under suspicious circumstances was being investigated, and that but one new case had been reported. The bulletin further said that all suspected cases of cholera reported were being very carefully watched. Fears Excited Rather Than Allayed.

The fact that the board admits that other cases exist and refuses to publish their location has an effect contrary to that which the secrecy is intended to produce. Instead of allaying, it tends to excite, the fears of the people, and keeps them in a condition bordering on

The health officers are very fearful that the knowledge of the presence of the plague in the city will cause a general exodus of those who can afford to leave the city, and a panic of fear among those who must, perforce, remain, and said that there was very little danger of an epidemic if people would only keep cool and think more of carefully regulating their manner of living and less of the cholera. President Wilson said that there was no occasion for excitement in the city, as the cholera would not become epidemic. There was a possibility that it

THE Michigan Weather Service Bureau report says: The last week has been a good one for crops. In the northern counties sufficient rain has fallen to keep the crops in good condition and put the ground in fine shape for fall sowing, which is being rapidly oushed. Corn, wheat and oats are a fair crop and potatoes are doing well. The drought has not been broken in the southern counties and the days have been too warm and the nights too cold for the proper development of small grains. Pastures are drying up and some farmers are foddering their stock. Plums, peaches, and other fruits are plentiful this year and about ready for market. Frost occurred on the nights of the first two days of this month, but nothing injured except some corn on low lands and a little buckwheet in one county. ### WASHINGTON LETTER.

An Interesting Budget from the Nation's Capital.

Washington, Sept. 16-The illumination in the streets of Washington during the time that the members of the Grand Army are in the city, will be unique and will excel anything ever seen in this part of the country. There will be a large number of what are called universal signs on which are the pames of the great battles and of the generals who lead the Union hosts to victory. These will be grouped about the various corps badges, the battles and names of generals being associated as nearly as possible with the corps with which they were identified. Of course, these names and badges are produced by the electric lights, thousands of incandescent lamps being employed in doing so. A design that will be of special interest will be erected at the head of Fifteenth street at the entrance to the White Lot. It will be a huge facsimile of the G. A. R. badge, eighteen feet high. This badge is made up of incandescent lamps of the various colors that go to make up the badge, and when the lights are turned on the emblem produces a gorgeous and magnificent Grand Army medal. The great display of the wonders of electricity will be shown in the White House grounds in front of the President's house. Here innumerable lights will be hidden in the shrubbery, all of them changeable in their character and disappearing and reappearing in the most bewildering manner. The trees and shrubbery will be fairly magnetized with electricity and the effects will be novel and in many respects startling. The illumination of the Capitol building will be something out of the ordinary and will be accomplished by search lights. These powerful lights, stationed on the top of the high building will be thrown upon the dome of the Capitol, and cause that wonderful structure to stand out like a piece of marble statuary against the dark background of the sky. Taken altogether the illumination of Washington on this occasion will surpass anything yet attempted, and will be a revelation to the thousands of spectators.

All political eyes are turning toward Washington now. The approaching gathering of the old soldiers interests thousands of people. You hear it talked of on every hand. The Grand Army button is beginning to make its appearance on the streets, the old soldiers are brushing up their uniforms and war reminiscences and preparing to meet their old friends. Mr. Cleveland's ears will probably burn when the Grand Army boys get together. The Grand Army is supposed to be a nonpolitical organization, but it could scarcely be expected that in a presigetting in his work on them. There is reason to believe that the old soldiers will be reminded a good many times before they get away from Washington of Mr. Cleveland's veto record, and if Bourke Cockran and Gen. Sickles are not quoted several times to the effect that Cleveland cannot get the vote of the old soldiers then there is more forgetfulness on the republican side than could reasonably be expected.

While there is nothing in the late reports from Loon Lake to indicate that Mrs. Harrison is making any substantial progress toward recevery, it is encouraging to learn that her symptons are more favorable, and it is needless to say that the hope of her restoration to health is universal. The whole country feels an interest in this matter partaking more or less of a personal character, for the reason that all our citizens, without regard to politics or party bias, feel an immediate and loval of the President or of the President's household, even though they may be strangers to both. Whether the President will be able to visit the Capital during the encampment week depends, of course, upon 'Mrs. Harrison's condition. Earnest and enthusiastic as he is in regard to the great reunion, and reluctant as he might otherwise feel to absent himself on this occasion, he will necessary. The veterans of the Grand must.
