COLUMBUS DAY.

Practical Suggestions on the Proper Observance of the Anniversary.

OCTOBER 21 will be a gala day from one end to the other of the United States, and it is but proper that it should be so, for is it not Columbus Day, and will it not commemorate the discovery of a world which in the comparatively short time of four centuries has emerged from the blackness of the forest and the ignorance of the savage into the blazing sun of prosperity and the noontide of intelligence?

Now that the official programme for the uniform popular celebration of Columbus Day has been published, the question of the participation by this community in the national exercises becomes a live issue.

It goes without saying that the people of this locality will not be backward in evidencing their patriotism by an appropriate celebration of the memorable day, and a few suggestions as to the best method of executing this commendable design may not be amiss at this time.

In the first place, it should be borne in mind that it is intended that the school children should be the principal participants in the exercises. The pupils are to be at their places in school at 9 o'clock as usual. It is desirable that business be entirely suspended so that the relatives of the pupils may also be present. Printed programmes should be provided when possible, and the exercises will of course be subject to the limitations of the scholars, but everything which may be done should tend to the central ideas of Columbus' achievement and the remarkable progress of the country under the impetus of education. Appropriate patriotic decorations are necessary, and allegorical tableaux will add greatly to the effectiveness and enjoyment of the exercises. Music is also desirable.

In the afternoon comes the citizens' celebration, but, as in the morning exercises, the school children should take the most prominent part. Of course in the country districts this will not be the case, and the afternoon should be devoted to games for the young people and social gatherings for their elders, though every house should be decorated with the national colors. In the towns the afternoon should be devoted to some sort of formal celebration, in which all of the civic and military organizations should be invited to participate.

A review of school children after they have reached the reviewing stand and saluted the flag will add much to the "life and color" of the scene. A mass meeting of the citizens should follow during the day, when the best orators of the locality, and the most eloquent of the declaimers among the children—say one from each school—might deliver addresses appropriate to the occasion. The topics of these speeches will readily suggest themselves, but it must be borne in mind that anything relating to Columbus will be more interesting than anything else on such an occasion. The flag salute, the ode and the patriotic songs should be executed by the children without a hitch, and for this reason a great deal of preliminary work will have to be done by them.

Upon the school teachers will devolve the greatest portion of this labor. Each teacher should at once, if it has not already been done, present the matter of the celebration of Columbus Day to his pupils, and it should be laid before the young people in such a manner that each will be anxious to contribute as much as possible to the success of the affair. Enthusiasm is what is wanted and needed, for without it failure must result. Let each teacher select committees on reception, on decorations, on exercises, on printing, on newspapers, on arrangements and on finance. The principal must be actually if not nominally the directing spirit of each committee.

At the morning exercises at the schools the veterans should have charge of the flag and should also act as guards of honor to the schools on the march to the reviewing stand. The peculiar appropriateness of the veterans being the special patrons of the school celebration is apparent. Money and the active co-operation of the citizens at large are absolutely necessary to the success of the celebration, and these should and probably will be promptly forthcoming.

Only the general outlines of exercises suggested in the official programme are here given. These may be enlarged or contracted to conform to the wishes and possibilities of the celebrants.

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

The Colonel met them at the dining-room door, and Nell, approaching rather cautiously, gave him a half-expectant, half-questioning glance.

Her fears were quite groundless, however, for as soon as he had seen Margaret, and heard that she was going to leave them so soon, he had no thought for any one else.

"I don't know how we shall do without you," he said, bending over her with kindly affection. "Bertie told me you were going, and I have been anticipating my own loneliness. Have you grown tired of us so soon?" He took her face between his hands and regarded it with a gentleness in which a variety of emotions found expression. "You are in a hurry to leave us, Margaret," he added, sadly.

"Ah, no," she hastened to answer, as her eyes grew dim and a painful flush overspread her cheeks.

The gentleman did not answer for a second, during which his face worked with feeling and a tender light filled his eyes.

"You are a brave girl," he said, rather unsteadily, at last; "a true, brave girl. Heaven will bless you as you deserve. Don't let that second come near me; I might be tempted."

"You are so hard on him, Colonel. Don't."

"Don't blame him, I suppose. Ah, Margaret, you are like the rest of your sex—always ready to defend the man who breaks your heart. Well, well, I'll not be hard, for your sake, but when I think—Never mind; we'll miss you, child—every one of us. Don't quite forget your old friends; you won't find the new ones half so true."

Again Margaret's eyes grew dim, and she found herself incapable of an answer.

Alice, noting her distress, broke in with some light remarks, which Nell took up, notwithstanding her uncle's formidable presence, and discussed volubly.

Under this respite Margaret regained her self-possession, and began to speak quite calmly.

No further allusion to her going away was made during the meal, though each one seemed quite talkative. Nell particularly airing her opinions freely, and receiving no reproof for her temerity.

But when the time came to say good-by, and Margaret was ready to go, the Colonel, disregarding the hand she held out to him, clasped her in his arms, and tenderly, almost reverently, kissed her brow.

"I knew it would be hard," she sobbed, breaking down completely. "I knew this would be the hardest of all."

"No, it shan't be, Margaret," he said, putting her gently from him. "I do not wish to pain you, child, even for a moment. But I am very deeply moved to see you go from us under such circumstances. Your bravery and devotion will have its reward—be sure of that. Remember me when you need sympathy or advice, for I would not be worthy the name of friend if I could not show my affection in time of adversity as well as prosperity; and I know that not even your own father could be more anxious to help you than I am."

For many long days Margaret carried in her heart the memory of his kind words and sympathetic voice.

As she rode home through the winter afternoon toward the chain of beautiful hills which shut in the quiet, peaceful village, her fancy tinged with indescribable melancholy every surrounding object, and the melancholy lingered long after her eyes had ceased to look upon the scene that had engendered it.

CHAPTER XVI.
A NEW FRIEND.

"Margaret, I think I shall bring Wilson to dinner to-night. I met him yesterday and he asked about you. He has heard Bertie lauding you to the skies, and naturally he is anxious to see the paragon."

"Really, that is too bad of Bertie. I don't pose as a paragon, Brian, and indeed I don't care to be one. I do want to meet Dr. Wilson, though, and if you will only correct his false impression, I wish you would bring him this evening."

"I'll bring him, but I'll leave you to correct or prove his impressions. I know you'll be equal to the emergency in either case. You should really appreciate the compliment he pays you. I don't believe I ever heard him express a desire to meet any one before."

"Really? Why, I feel quite vain. I hope he isn't a cynic."

"Oh, no. It is rather indifference, I think. He isn't particularly sociable; that is, he doesn't care for visiting. People follow him up, though, like the leech, and he's considered quite a catch in the matrimonial pond. Any number of anglers would be glad to land him. The power of money, you see. Well, I must be off. I shan't be home to lunch. Good-by. You won't be lonely?"

"No."

Every day Brian left Margaret with this question, and every day she answered "No," but always after he had gone she felt she had answered untruthfully. She was lonely—very lonely. She found so little to interest her—so little to fill the long dull mornings. Brian sometimes came to lunch, but as often he did not. Her afternoons were spent in seeing the sights of New York, shopping, or calling on her few friends, and her evenings at the theater, when Brian would take her; but more often at home alone when he had some engagement which he could not possibly defer.

From these engagements he would return late in the night, with the heavy, stumbling steps which told their own story, and which always struck so heavily on Margaret's heart, as she waited sleepless and anxious.

This was the record of the ten days she had spent in New York, and she seemed as far away from the reward the Colonel had promised her as when she left Elmwood.

Under other circumstances she could have been, not precisely happy, because she was too thoroughly a child of nature not to miss, with an intensity few could understand, the restful, peaceful influences of her country home. Yet she could have found contentment in this charming little apartment, with its comforts and luxuries. Its situation was convenient and delightful, in the heart of the city, surrounded by places of interest and amusement, and near the various clubs, where Brian was fond of spending his time.

She was in the center of bustle and activity. From her window she could hear the throbbing pulse of a life that was never still—the ever-sounding orchestra of a busy city; the mighty roar of the elevated trains, with their noisy, whizzing echoes; the sound of the heavy drays passing over the cobblestones; the lighter rumble of carriages, and the long line of pedestrians, made up an ever moving, ever changing panorama of human life, hope and ambition, upon which she gazed with feelings that brought her own loneliness and isolation more keenly before her.

"How was she to fill the long hours that must pass before dinner?" she asked herself. "Should she go through the stores and see the beautiful things the shop windows displayed so temptingly?"

That was not interesting when one had no companions to exchange opinions with. The crowds wearied her, too. She felt so utterly alone amidst the busy throngs, where a friendly glance seldom, if ever, greeted her. At home it was so different; there she could see a familiar face in every passer-by.

No, she would not go out to-day, she decided at last. She would stay at home and read and try to emulate the contentment of spirit which prompted Norah under all circumstances to sing cheerily over her work. Yet it was a bright day to spend indoors. The sun, which always seemed to her prejudiced fancy to shine through a yellow, thicker atmosphere, lay warm and golden on the house tops opposite. It tempted her with its cheeriness. But, pshaw! where was the pleasure in walking sedately over the hard pavements? How could that compare with a delightful gallop over the hills at home?

Ah, those glorious rides! Why couldn't these tall walls crumble away? Why couldn't the paved streets, this horrid noise and din by the touch of some fairy's hand give place to the familiar hills and fields? Not for long; only for one day—just one day. How she would use every hour of that day!

She would have her usual ride on Mollie's sleek back. They would canter away through the cool, still morning air against her cheek, and the glad sense of fresh, new life tingling in her veins. She would go to the Cedars and talk with Alice and the Colonel, and laugh over Nell's ridiculous nonsense, and feel so happy. She would run in to kiss the children as they pressed their little faces against the rectory window, and she would find time for a few minutes with Mrs. Martin to ask her how her rheumatism was, and hear if the old man had been out since his sickness. Ah, there was so much she would do if she could be at home to-day.

Nanny came in to remove the breakfast things, and she asked twice for the orders for luncheon and dinner before Margaret heard her.

"Indeed, I don't know," she said, at last, trying to fix her mind on these household details. "You and Norah exercise your ingenuity to-day. I'd particularly like a nice dinner, as Mr. Leigh will bring a friend home with him. Men must be fed, you know, even if the world goes to pieces. It is their failing to think more of their dinners than anything else, and we have to humor it. So you and Norah must do your best."

Quite late in the afternoon Margaret rather suddenly decided that she could stand the house no longer. So, preparing herself for a walk, she was soon upon the street.

When she arrived home it was nearly dinner time, and secretly upbraiding herself for staying out so late, she began to dress as quickly as possible.

"I should be dreadfully sorry if Dr. Wilson should come and I not ready to receive him," she confided to her reflection in the mirror. "I shouldn't know how to excuse myself. Well, it is rather late, and if they have come I cannot help it."

When she entered the parlor five minutes afterwards she found, not Brian, but a tall, fine-looking man who arose at her approach, with an air of chivalry perfectly in accord with the noble face.

That face impressed Margaret at once. Not so much with its beauty of feature and expression as with its firmness of character, its strength of intellect, and the ennobling influence which high endeavor and strong purpose had left upon it. Instinctively she felt a quickening of her sympathies and feelings, an indefinite attraction toward this man, whose very appearance compelled her admiration.

During her scarcely perceptible pause in the doorway, the stranger, with a swift but critical glance, had taken in the sweet face and girlish form. Then he started forward with the half question, half assertion:

"Mrs. Leigh? I am not mistaken."

She held out her hand with a smile of welcome.

"No, you are not mistaken," she said, with the easy, gracious manner that made her personality so winning. "I am Mrs. Leigh, and you are Dr. Wilson, I know. I am very glad to meet you, and doubly glad to welcome you to my home, because I really cannot feel that you are a stranger, but rather an old friend whom I have heard of and talked of so often."

Her words gratified him very much.

"You honor me too highly," he answered, pressing the hand she offered him. "To be numbered among your friends is a privilege I esteem most deeply. Brian and I have been friends of such long standing that the pleasure I feel of meeting his wife is twofold."

"I'm afraid you find his wife very remiss," put in Margaret, flushing brightly, and seating herself in the chair he placed for her. "She must really ask your pardon for not being at home when you arrived. Her only excuse is a very whimsical disposition, which took her out so late that she could not get back at a reasonable time."

"She is fully excused," rejoined Wilson, meeting her smiling glance. "We got here about ten minutes ago, and Brian left me to make myself more presentable, he said. I was admiring some of your curios when you came in. I knew you at once. Bertie's description is so accurate, and I've had the picture of you in my mind."

"I think Bertie is inclined to exaggerate sometimes, Doctor. Still I hope you have not found the original very disappointing."

"Quite the contrary, Mrs. Leigh. Brian tells me that you have only been in New York a very short time, so I suppose you have not had sufficient opportunity to see how great and important we are. But you have visited a great many places of interest, no doubt?"

"Yes, quite a number; though very far from all, I am sure. Of course it is a great city, and no doubt a delightful one, and I am ridiculously unappreciative; but, indeed, I like some less pretentious places better. It is all noise and uproar to me. Do I quite shock you? I'm incurably devoted to country life, you see. I cannot enjoy any other. I hate any other. There, that's dreadfully childish."

He regarded her face with an intent, rather puzzled, glance.

"Yet you have established yourself very delightfully," he said, as if answering an argument in his own mind. "I fancy you must intend a long stay."

"Yes, it may be. That is, I don't know. Hope—It depends on circumstances, I think."

She spoke rather disconnectedly, and, anxious to divert any impression her words might make upon him she hastened to add:

"Don't misunderstand me, please. I don't wish you to think I actually dislike the city. I find it interesting in many ways, but I have not that fascination which some people feel for it. I was born in the country, and all my associations hold the memory of green fields and bright skies. I think that must account for my tastes. I know that brick walls and paved streets tire my eyes, and I feel a longing to rest them on something that is not here. Sometimes I am almost determined to go to Elmwood just for a day. It isn't far from here, you know; but then I remember that I should have to leave after the day was over, and that would be hard. So I think I must always put that thought aside. Brian is so different in his tastes; he likes this busy life. He finds the country dull and lonely, and Elmwood has not the same attraction for him that it has for me. He simply endures it, but I—well, I could live there forever, because it is home and—I love it."

The last words were spoken in a lower tone, but Wilson understood the meaning they held, and his next remark was in a more feeling vein.

"We will have to teach you to love New York for something more than its paved streets and brick walls. We Gothamites are very proud. We think that all things good and delightful are to be found in this great noisy city of ours."

Margaret smiled. "You have many desirable advantages, that is certain; but while you are proud of your wealth you should not forget your poverty."

"True. And we have enough of it. The condition of the poor in this city is miserable in the extreme, and perhaps, what is more incredible, the most opposite conditions of prosperity and want exist in such close proximity. I was most forcibly impressed with this fact a few days ago. I was passing along one of the streets just off from Fifth avenue. There were elegant mansions all around me, and handsomely dressed children playing under the eyes of watchful nurses. Yet a little further on I passed into a scene so different that I could scarcely credit the testimony of my eyes. Within an actual stone's throw of splendor and prosperity, poverty, misery, and sin were running riot. It is terrible to think of it. A physician whose practice lies amid such scenes is obliged to see so much of the heartaches of life."

"I suppose so," returned Margaret, with a sigh. "Such an experience wouldn't do for me at all; so much wealth on one side and so much want on the other would make me lose my faith in God. It is dreadful to say it, I know. I have taken myself to task for even thinking of it, but my sense of justice cannot be reconciled. There is some wise decree, no doubt, in what seems so unwise, but—Tell me, Don't you ever feel like taking the world to pieces and making it over again?"

He smiled, amused at the question and the expression which accompanied it.

"I have often thought it might be changed to advantage, but I do not know that I could manage it successfully."

WON BY WEISSERT.

Chosen Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Gen. A. G. Weissert, of Milwaukee, was chosen by acclamation to succeed Captain John Palmer as Commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The new Commander-in-chief was born Aug. 7, 1844, at Canton, Stark County, Ohio, and removed to Wisconsin in 1849. He graduated at the high school at Racine and the University of Michigan, the last-named conferring the degree of LL. B. He enlisted early in September, 1861, in the Eighth Wisconsin (Live Eagle) Regiment Volunteer Infantry, and participated in all the many battles of that regiment up to the time of his discharge, serving over four years. He was brevetted for meritorious conduct in battle, and was seriously wounded at the battle of Nashville, Tenn. His wounds have never healed. They are constantly open and at times very painful, the bullet still remaining in his leg. He joined the Grand Army in 1866, and is a member of E. B. Walcott Post, Milwaukee. He attends all the meetings when at home and takes an active interest in all its affairs, has represented his post and department at numerous State and national encampments, was elected Department Commander of the Department of Wisconsin in 1888, and unanimously re-elected to succeed himself in 1889, but after his election as Senior Vice Commander-in-chief at Milwaukee he resigned the command, believing that the honors should go round. He is a member of the legal profession and has a large practice.

LAVED IN HIS BABE'S BLOOD.

Horrible Butchery and Sickening Spectacle Attendant Upon Illness.

William Loch, aged 34, has been ill with typhoid fever several weeks at this home near Reading, Pa. The disease made him insane, and within the last few days his mania turned to religious topics and he decided to make a sacrifice of one of his family. He got out of bed and beat his aged mother terribly, breaking one of her arms in two places and bruising her body. In the night he became wild and wanted to sacrifice his eldest son, and he was locked in his room. His ravings soon attracted the neighbors, who gathered around the house nearly one hundred strong. Mrs. Loch, weak from fear and illness, and nursing a 3-weeks-old infant, called upon them to do something to quiet her husband, but they seemed paralyzed with fear. The oldest child was locked in a room next to Mr. Loch's, the windows of both opening on a porch roof. Loch climbed out on this roof, smashed the window of the child's room and jumped in. He reappeared with the child in its night-gown. He held the child up in full view of everybody and, with a razor he had procured, cut the infant's throat, nearly severing the head from the body. Throwing the body over his knee, he caught the dripping blood in his hands and said: "And now I will wash my face in the blood of my child," and did so. People beheld the ghastly sight by the light of their lanterns. Several men climbed to the porch roof where the tragedy took place, but Loch, with bloody hands, forced them down. At last constables came and forced him back.

STRIKERS' RESORT TO THE LAW.

Prominent Carnegie and Pinkerton Men Arrested for Riot.

The Homestead men are apparently endeavoring to turn the tables upon the Carnegies and Pinkertons and administer to them some of the medicine, in a legal way, which has been dealt out to the latter so freely of late. Secretary F. T. F. Lovejoy, of the Carnegie Steel Company, was arrested by Constable Joe Wallace, on a warrant issued by Alderman King, charging Mr. Lovejoy with aggravated riot and assault and battery. The secretary was arrested in his office and taken at once to the Alderman's office. He waived a hearing and gave $2,000 bail for his appearance. As soon as it was learned by the Carnegies and Pinkertons that informations for certain others of their members were out those others went to the Alderman's office and gave bail. These included H. C. Frick, H. M. Curry, J. G. A. Leishman, Otis Childs, L. Phipps, J. L. Potter, G. Corry, J. F. Dovey and Nevin McConnell. Robert Pinkerton and William A. Pinkerton also gave bail.

Jehus Boost Prices.

Twenty-two dollars a day for carriages!

That is what the liveries of Chicago have compelled the World's Fair Directors to pay for rigs to be used in the presidential procession on October 21. Three hundred carriages have been contracted for at $22, and 200 more at $20 each for the day—a total of $10,600 for vehicles alone.

SALEM, Oregon, is interested in an assassin who has confessed to five murders and shows symptoms of having others on his mind. It is not known whether he is really guilty or is bidding for the flowers and other favors that come to the truly bloody.

THE OFFICIAL PROGRAMME.

Ceremonies Which Will Attend the World's Fair Dedication.

When the Congress of the United States authorized the commemoration of the Four Hundredth Anniversary of the discovery of America by an International Exposition to be held in Chicago during the summer of 1893, it also provided that the Exposition buildings should be dedicated on the 12th day of October, 1892, with "appropriate ceremonies." Subsequently, by act of Congress, this date was changed to Oct. 21, 1892.

Aside from the international interest in this fitting prelude to the magnificent picture of the world's progress that will be presented in 1893, this dedicatory service will furnish an opportunity for the world to behold the extent of the preparations which are being made for the Exposition.

The evening of Wednesday, Oct. 19, a grand reception will be tendered the President of the United States, his Cabinet and other distinguished guests at the Auditorium. After the close of the ceremonies on each of the three succeeding evenings there will be magnificent pyrotechnic displays.

Thursday, Oct. 20.

The first day will witness an imposing procession, indicative of peace, contentment and prosperity, participated in by civic organizations, which will be reviewed by the President of the United States, his Cabinet, the Congress and other honored guests.

In the evening, at Jackson Park, amid myriads of electric lights and other displays, a water pageant, "The Procession of the Centuries," will move through the beautiful water-ways of the Exposition grounds, illustrating with beauty and historic accuracy some of the great facts of history connected with the discovery of America, such as the condition of this country prior to the landing of Columbus; striking events in the life of the great discoverer; important epochs in American history and the world's progress in civilization. The vessels upon which these tableaux will be represented vary from 40 to 53 feet in length, modeled after the naval architecture of the period represented; for example, "Columbus Before the Court of Spain," will be represented upon a vessel modeled after the lines of the "Santa Maria."

Friday, Oct. 21.

The national salute at sunrise will inaugurate the ceremonies of Dedication Day. The President of the United States, his cabinet, members of the Supreme Court, members of the Senate and House of Representatives, distinguished foreign guests and Governors of the different States and Territories with their official staffs, will be escorted by a guard of honor composed of troops of the United States army, detachments of the United States naval forces, and regiments from the various State National Guards, to the Manufacturers and Liberal Arts Building, in which the dedicatory exercises will be held.

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon in this building the following dedicatory programme will be carried out under the direction of the Director General:

1. Columbian March. Written for the occasion by Prof. John K. Paine.
2. Prayer by Bishop Charles H. Fowler, D. D., of California.
3. Dedicatory Ode. Words by Miss Harriet Monroe, of Chicago; music by G. W. Chadwick of Boston.
4. Presentation of the master artists of the Exposition and their completed work, by the Chief of Construction.
5. Report of the Director General to the World's Columbian Commission.

12. Dedicatory oration, Hon. Wm. C. P. Breckinridge, Kentucky.
13. "The Star Spangled Banner," and "Hail Columbia," with full chorus and orchestral accompaniment.
14. Columbian oration, Chauncey M. Depew, New York.
15. National salute.

At the close of this programme a special electric and pyrotechnic display will be given, with a repetition of "The Procession of the Centuries."

Saturday, Oct. 22.

A series of military maneuvers and parades will constitute the main portion of the day's programme. In the evening attractive and appropriate celebrations will be provided, followed by a magnificent display of fireworks.

A number of brilliant social entertainments will be given by the citizens of Chicago during the three evenings of the dedication celebration.

Only Those Invited.

According to a Chicago correspondent, none but those who have received invitations will be admitted to Jackson Park Dedication Day, Oct. 21. This is the position at present of the Committee on Ceremonies, and is generally understood among the directors. The reason given for this course is that there will be more people with invitations than can be satisfactorily handled that day. Already Secretary Culp, of the Ceremonies Committee, has been instructed to issue 50,000 invitations. Most of these were sent out weeks ago. This makes the prospective number 100,000 persons. In addition to that the Executive Committee has ordered that all the paid-up subscribers to the capital stock of the Exposition have invitations issued to them. It was estimated that 14,000 subscribers have paid in full, so that another 28,000 persons will be added to the charge. Milward Adams, who has charge of the seating capacity of the Manufacturers Building, will provide chairs for 90,000 people. There will be standing room in the building for 35,000 more. If the gates were thrown open to the public it is feared that the multitude would become unwieldy.

While according to the present plan none but invitation bearers can get in the park Dedication Day, outsiders will see the procession, all the distinguished people, the review of the troops, and the display of fireworks on the several nights.

At the democratic senatorial convention held at Manchester Friday, Mr. Myron W. Clark, of Parma, received the nomination.

The calendar for the October term of circuit court contains the following number of cases: Criminal, 19; issue of fact, 45; issue of law, 2; impanelance, 3rd class, 1; 4th class, 18. Total, 111.

On Monday, October 3, The Detroit Evening News made a new and radical departure by dropping its price from two cents to one cent per copy, or six cents per week.

The children of Mrs. Abie Spaulding, deceased, wish to extend their heartfelt thanks to the choir and kind friends who assisted them during their late bereavement.

The C. L. S. C. will meet at the home of Mrs. J. C. Winans, Monday evening, October 10 at 7 o'clock. All wishing to join the society are cordially invited to be present.

Mr. Stainbridge, a well known farmer living in Pittsfield, was killed at Ypsilanti Wednesday. His horse became frightened and ran away, throwing him upon his head.

Complaint has been made by some of our citizens, who have had plants stolen from the graves of friends at the cemetery. It seems too bad after one has toiled to raise plants, to have to lose them in such a manner.

At the republican senatorial convention held at this place Saturday last, J. F. Lawrence, of Ann Arbor was named as their candidate as state senator. A delegation visited Mr. Lawrence at Ann Arbor, and urged him to accept but he would not.

At Howell, Wednesday, two people were fatally burned in a fire which consumed nearly an entire square. During the fire an explosion occurred which caused the roof and floors of one of the buildings to fall and caught many people within. The office of the Livingston Herald, Brewer & Helcox, publishers, was entirely consumed.

Mr. Howells will begin in the November Cosmopolitan, a department under the attractive title: "A Traveler from Altruria." Those who have seen the first two papers think they will equal in interest and in their wide appeal to all classes, the Breakfast Table Papers of Dr. Holmes. In order to give the necessary time to this work Mr. Howells has turned over the detail editorial work to Mr. Walker.

Some idea of the magnitude of Dakota farming, may be gleaned from the fact that on the great Dalrymple farm, in harvest time, may be seen 35 combined reapers and threshers at work at the same time. One of these machines will cut and thresh and bag 62 acres of wheat per day, which at an average yield would produce 1,900 bushels of grain. It requires 17 mules to draw and four men to work each machine.

Men have various ways of carrying money. Butchers, grocers and bakers carry it in a crumpled wad. Bankers in nice bills, laid in full length in a morocco pocket-book. Brokers always fold their bills twice. The young business man carries his money in his vest pocket, while the sporting man carries it in his trouser pocket. Farmers and drivers carry their money in their inside pocket. Editors carry theirs in other people's pockets.

The ladies of St. Mary's church will hold a bazaar in the town hall the first week in November. The following ladies will preside over the different departments: Choir Table—Mrs. H. V. Heatley, Mrs. C. Spinnagle, Mrs. Jas. P. Bacon, Mrs. August Neuberger, and Mrs. John Eisenman. Sodality table—Miss Rose Doll, Miss Anna McKone, Miss Minnie Howe, Miss Mary Miller and Miss Rose Clark. Columbus Table—Mrs. Martin Howe, Mrs. John Weber, Mrs. C. Klein, Mrs. C. Whitaker and Miss Julia Wheeler.

Arrivals of farm produce have largely increased the past week, though prices remain about as last week. Wheat now stands at 69c for red or white. Barley is coming in quite freely and bring $1.15 to $1.20 per hundred. Beans are coming forward slowly and several lots have been bought some at $1.55 and some at $1.60. Very choice lots would bring $1.65 to $1.70. Rye brings 56c, oats 31c, clover seed $5.50, potatoes 65c to 70c, pears, $1 for the best, apples 75c for fair stock. Some cranberries have been bought at $2 per bushel, grapes bring 3 to 4c per pound, tomatoes 60c per bushel, cabbages 3 to 5c per head, eggs 17c, butter 18c. A carload of poultry is being taken here this week a 8c for chickens and ducks and 6c for geese. Dressed pork brings 6c per pound. Trade is picking up and we shall have a good fall trade. Everything brings a fair price but wheat. This is the time to carry that as it will doubtless do better later on. Many are compelled to sell however, on account of their need of money and having on hand two crops or nearly so in very many cases. Farmers have learned a useful lesson the past year that it is dangerous to carry anything when a good price is offered for it. It has cost them dearly, but if they do not forget it, it will be worth its cost in the long run.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Ralph Freeman entered the High School last Monday.

Rev. L. N. Moon spoke in chapel Wednesday morning.

Miss Inez Stocking, '92, called at the high school last Friday.

John Kilmer, who has been ill, is again able to take up his studies.

The lyceum Monday evening was a success, the affirmative side of the question winning.

The report cards are now out which accounts for the long faces worn by many of the students.

Misses Blanche Bayer and Alice Whitaker were "B." Grammar visitors last Friday afternoon.

Miss Allie McIntosh has left school and will continue her studies in Grass Lake, her future home.

The Friday morning exercises are very fine, and many useful and instructive quotations are learned.

The new mottoes which decorate our walls are a very good thing for absent-minded pupils to gaze at and to fill space.

A boy was asked the other day when his birthday was. He answered: "I don't know whether it is January or June but anyhow it is when huckleberries are ripe."

If two young gentlemen of the high school who are aspiring to the title of Dr., do not do less laughing, they will undoubtedly be promoted to a seat of honor much to the humiliation of their proud and haughty spirits.

Mrs. Abie Spaulding.

Abie, daughter of John and Rebecca Rockwell, was born March 11, 1798 in Cornwell township, Vermont. Here she received her education, and according to the custom of the time, learned to spin and weave. Those were days when it was necessary to know how to make what one needed, not simply to earn money and buy ready made what one might fancy. We ought not to look narrowly upon those times, for they held the power to produce as noble and true characters as are anywhere to be found. At the age of 21 Abie was led to give her heart to Christ. It was under the ministry of the Rev. Mr. Bushnell who for more than twenty years had been pastor of the Congregational church near their home.

On the 19th of March, 1822 she was married to Davis Warren Spaulding. They commenced housekeeping near Orwell, Rutland county, Vt., remaining there three years where their first two children, Marietta and Eli were born. They then moved to Shoreham where they lived until 1830.

Here, two daughters, Samantha and Lucy were born. Early in June they began preparations for a removal to Michigan, a journey which must necessarily take weeks, and fraught with no little difficulties to a mother with four little children, the eldest scarcely seven and the youngest four weeks old. Traveling in company with five other families, they left Watch Point on the 9th of the month, on a boat built for the double office of sail and canal boat. On reaching Whitehall the sails were taken down, horses attached and they were towed down the Erie canal to Buffalo. Here they changed boats and came to Detroit. Weeks lengthened into months and yet the journey was not ended. On reaching the Detroit river, they were becalmed. The men left the boat and walked to Detroit, the women and children remaining on the boat some days longer. Near the middle of August, more than three months since starting, they landed at Detroit. Then came a journey in lumber wagons to Dexter. Soon after, Mr. Spaulding located an 80 acre farm and in the following spring they settled in a home of their own. But pioneers were not always successful. The stoutest and bravest heart sometimes gave way under the long strain of pioneer hardship.

In those dark days, after five years of life in Michigan, and now with six children to care for, Mrs. Spaulding was left alone.

No one can tell the sadness, no pen can paint the picture of trial and suffering borne by that mother as with resolute heart she faced the future. But thank God she had learned to trust One who "sticketh closer than a brother," whose arm is strong to lean upon, who never leaves nor forsakes those that trust him. Passing through the school of adversity, struggling against poverty, we have found her with a courage that never failed, with a fortitude that knew no despondency, a judgment that seldom erred, a faith always bright, ever the devoted, tender watchful, sacrificing mother, the living hopeful Christian, the faithful sympathizing friend, she affords us an example worthy to be remembered, to be admired.

For more than a score of years the burden of life's labor has been lifted from her shoulders and nobly borne by her son Dennis and family. And here in this home at the eventide of a beautiful autumn day, October 1st, Aunt Abie after 94 years, six months, and twenty-six days of earth's toil and care, quietly passed to her heavenly home.

What a change she has witnessed in all this country since the fall of 1830 when she came to Michigan. A change wrought out by the toil and sacrifice of many. But now her eyes look upon a more beautiful sight. They see the King in His glory. The why's and wherefore's of many a dark providence are to her perhaps all plain, the hill of life she has climbed, the toil is ended. Lovingly and tenderly they laid her form to rest.

Of the six children for whom she toiled and sacrificed, three have passed on before. Two daughters, Mrs. Lucy Shepherd, of Olivet, Mrs. Emma Parker, of Lima, and one son, Dennis, survive her and have watched with anxious solicitude and tender care as one by one the Lord has added to her years

"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course; I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing."—2 Tim. 4: 7, 8.

Obituary.

Died, Sunday morning, October 2d, in this village at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Geo. E. Davis, Mrs. Salmon Pratt aged seventy-nine years, two months and fourteen days. Thirtysix years ago her late husband and she came from her childhood's home in Schoharie county, N. Y. and settled at Sylvan. Her home has since been in this immediate vicinity. Six children she has reared and trained to manhood's and womanhood's full estate. Of these three have gone on before and three survive her. To her daughter, Mrs. Davis, has been granted the priceless privilege of ministering with every device that grateful love could suggest to lighten the long weary pain of her last illness. Through out the painful waiting for death, the trust given to her Savior in childhood shone clear and undimmed. A week ago she sent to the church a vase of flowers saying it was the last Sunday morning she could do that. Last Sabbath as the bells gave their final stroke she went to worship in the perfect temple. She leaves to her family circle that blessed heritage, the fragrant memory of a wise and loving christian mother. Children and grandchildren rise up to call her blessed.

A COMPLETE SET OF THE WORKS OF CHARLES DICKENS

FREE!

The Most Valuable and Remarkable Premium Ever Offered Free with any Periodical.

A MARVEL IN BOOK-MAKING. A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, IN 12 LARGE VOLUMES, FREE.

There has just been published A Set of the Works of Charles Dickens, in Large and Handsome Volumes, printed from entirely new plates, with new type. By special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer to our patrons this splendid set of Dickens' Works, postpaid, free. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humor, pathos, masterly delineation of character, vivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skillfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The twelve volumes in this set contain the following world-famous works, each of which is published complete, unchanged and absolutely unabridged:

DAVID COPPERFIELD, MARTIN CHIZZLEWIT, NICHOLAS NICKLEBY, DOMBY AND SON, BLANK HOUSE, LITTLE DOBBER, OUR MUTUAL FRIEND, PICKWICK PAPERS, BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS STORIES, OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS, THE OLD CURIOUS SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER, A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES, AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

THE PLAN.

We will send a complete set of these books FREE by mail, postage paid, guaranteeing safe delivery, as follows: To any old subscriber, who sends one dollar, and renews their subscription to either of the following publications for one year:

THE PEOPLE'S LITERARY COMPANION,

OR—

The National Farmer and Home Magazine

To any new subscriber, who sends one dollar for either of the above periodicals for one year.

This is the greatest offer ever made, and the greatest bargain ever offered. Up to this time the price of a complete set of Dickens' Works has been ten dollars or more. The use of modern, improved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the present extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade are factors which made this wonderful offer possible. Bear in mind that we offer, not a single volume, but the entire set of twelve volumes all free to subscribers. All may now avail of the luxury of owning a handsome set of Dickens' works. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Do not neglect or put off this wonderful opportunity. Send at once, you will be delighted with the charming books, and, as long as you live, never cease to regard it as the best investment of a dollar you ever made. Address all communications to and write, and are possessed of fair intelligence, you are fully qualified to make a grand success of what we offer you. We have lately published at great expense and labor a perfect wonder in the way of an illustrated Gift Book, suitable to all classes, an ornament to any home, and at a price that brings it within the reach of all, even those of moderate means. Heretofore only those who indulged in luxuries have felt that they could afford a book of this class, as they are sold in book stores at $5.00 and upwards. The book which we offer is not in any way inferior to those above referred to, but is far superior to hundreds of books of this nature that are sold at prices exceeding ours by an enormous percent. It is selling with a rush wherever shown. Agents have only to show the book and mention the price, and it sells on its merits without further talking. No better Christmas, New Year's or Birthday present can be selected. It will sell, not only for holiday trade, but at all seasons of the year, for the reason that all will want it in their homes, and will have it as soon as they can get it. Money can be earned at our new line of work, rapidly and honorably, by those of either sex, young or old, and in their own localities, wherever they live. Any one can do the work. Easy to learn. No fancy, no anything. No risk. You can devote your spare moments, or all your time to the work. This entirely new line brings wonderful success to every worker. Beginners are earning from $25 to $50 per week and upwards, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you the employment—we teach you FREE. This is an age of marvelous things, and here is another great, useful, wealth-giving wonder. Great gains will reward every industrious worker. Wherever you are, and whatever you are doing, you want to know about this wonderful work at once. Delay means much money lost to you. No space to explain here, but if you will write to us, we will make all plain to you FREE. Address, TRUE & CO., Box 400, Augusta, Maine.

HOW I EARNED AN ISLAND.

Enterprising Young Man: True & Co. instructed and started me. I worked steadily and made money faster than I expected to. I became able to buy an island and build a small summer hotel. If I don't succeed at that, I will go to work again at the business in which I made my money. True & Co. Shall we instruct and start you, reader? If we do, and if you work industriously, you will in due time be able to buy an island and build a hotel. If you wish to, Money can be earned at our new line of work, rapidly and honorably, by those of either sex, young or old, and in their own localities, wherever they live. Any one can do the work. Easy to learn. No fancy, no anything. No risk. You can devote your spare moments, or all your time to the work. This entirely new line brings wonderful success to every worker. R. G. DUN & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

The alarm about cholera has vanished, and trade in every direction shows all the improvement that was expected. The South is a little dull because cotton is low in price and late, but a little improvement has been seen during the last week. In a few quarters at the West farmers are holding back wheat for higher prices, so that collections are retarded. But the general tenor of advices is exceedingly favorable. The volume of business continues larger than a year ago. Collections are exceptionally good on the whole, and although money is in active and increasing demand at nearly all points the supply is ample for all legitimate needs. Gold exports have ceased, foreign exchange has declined, and the money market is at present without disturbing features. Speculation is not on the whole active enough to have a disturbing influence.

NANCY HANKS MAKES A NEW RECORD.

Express Robber Cummings at Liberty Trouble in St. Louis Council—The Pe Breaks Out Anew at New York—Explosion.

Sad Mixing-Up of Vermin-Destroyers. SOME time ago numbers of cats were sent from Halifax and other places to Sable Island to destroy rats, which were killing rabbits there. The cats after destroying a number of rats played sad havoc with the rabbits. The cats becoming numerous it was decided to send a number of foxes to the island to thin them out. The foxes did the work too well. They not only moved down the cats, but killed all young birds and destroyed thousands of eggs. This fact has been brought to the notice of the Government with the view of having the foxes cleared off the island.

Good Fortune for a Poor Farmer. W. A. FREEMAN, a farmer who is in very moderate circumstances, in Montgomery County, Tennessee, received a letter from William Lord Moore, a lawyer in London, informing him that suit had been decided in his favor which will net him $2,000,000. The Buckingham palace is located on the ground in question. The estimated value of the whole estates is $8,000,000. Freeman's friends advise him not to advance any money until the matter is fully investigated.

Nancy Hanks, 2:04.

THERE is no place in the country where Nancy Hanks is more popular than Terre Haute, where Doble has trained her for two seasons, and a crowd of 8,000 or more turned out Wednesday afternoon to pay homage to the new queen. A BIG OFFER

TO STANDARD READERS.

We have arranged to club THE CHELSEA STANDARD with that bright, pure, sparkling periodical, SUNSHINE; FOR YOUTH. Our arrangements are such that it will be sent to Each New Subscriber and also to all old ones who have paid in advance, for the full term of one year; we do all this without increasing our subscription price a penny.

We feel that our efforts in supplying both papers for the price of our own alone will be appreciated and thus bear the good fruit of mutual satisfaction and benefit.

THE CHELSEA STANDARD.

An independent local newspaper published every Friday afternoon from its office in the basement of the Turnbull & Wilkinson block, Chelsea, Mich.

From Our Neighbors.

A gentleman who has given the census some attention—with the view of settling a disputed question—says that Dexter is the home of 70 widows.

A grievance book has been opened at the Ann Arbor city clerk's office, where all who have complaints to make can enter them. The clerk will get tired of that. The number of people who will come in to visit with him will make the office look like a hall for holding mass meetings. The clerk may not be able to add up long columns of figures, but he'll fancy he is the president, holding a levee every day.—Adrian Press.

A shrewd old farmer living near this city gave an itinerant spectacle man his "come-up-ens" recently. The peddler took up the granger's "specs" and asked him if he could read with "them things." Answered in the negative, the traveller offered to fit rustic's eyes for $5 so he could read "as well as anybody." "Do it," said the tiller of the soil, "and I'll give you $10." With all the tricks of his profession the optician tried pair after pair until everything in his stock had been tested. As the old farmer laid down the last pair, he mildly remarked: "Pity I never learned to read, isn't it, it's so hard to fit my eyes." The peddler fainted.—Ypsilanti Sentinel.

Mrs. Isabel Kohn, of this city is suffering from a battle with a huge gray cat. More than three months ago Mrs. Kohn's feline wandered away from home and fell among evil companions. His temper was by no means improved when he returned, and yet he was not particularly obstreperous until last Thursday night. The animal's tail was accidentally trod upon by Mrs. Kohn, and he immediately attacked her. He strove desperately to reach her face and throat, but the woman managed to beat him off with a poker. Her dress from the shoulder to the wrist was in shreds and her flesh was horribly lacerated. One well directed blow laid the animal low. Mrs. Kohn then celebrated his demise by promptly fainting, in which condition her husband found her on his return from work.—Ann Arbor Register.

A very fat woman with a diminutive little man as her husband were hurrying along the street early one morning recently to catch the north bound train. When the oddly matched couple reached Main-st., the little man went to make a few purchases while the wife waited outside. After a few minutes she began to get impatient fearing they would get left and as the meek little fellow appeared he was greeted with a torrent of abusive words and ordered to "carry the luggage and walk fast too," she knew "they would be late." He walked fast and carried the luggage while his majestic wife walked on like the captain that she was. Our Man felt like giving the husband a good shaking and trying to put a little sand into the man's make up. He also felt like telling the wife that if she knew the comments made to her disadvantage, he thought that in public she would not attempt to lord it over her inoffensive husband even if she did in the home.—Ann Arbor Democrat.

G. W. Hitchcock, drayman, picked up a sealed telegraph envelope from the floor of the waiting-room of the depot one day last week on which there was no address, and on opening it was astonished to find two $20 bills. He "laid low" and awaited developments. The next day agent Debenham confided to him that he had lost $40 and was in a very discouraged mood, he had searched the office high and low, ransacked his house from cellar to garret, made a raid on the bank—but without avail. The last joke had been on Hitchcock, so Hitchcock let Deb sweat awhile and then told him about his find. Deb was so tickled they came near having a one-sided hugging match then and there. As Debenham had been so rattled over his loss that he could eat no dinner, and Hitchcock had been so busy he had had no time to get his dinner, they both adjourned to Stephens' hotel and dined at the agent's expense. They're even now.—Milan Leader.

Intelligence and Affectation.

It may be said that intelligent mankind is naturally subject to affectation. Purists may object that these ideas are antagonistic, since nature is essentially opposed to falsehood; but in the human character are many contradictions side by side. Without an effort they agree to differ. Babies must be natural you would think, yet, so soon at least as male observers have a chance to study them they are a mass of affectation. Simplicity of manners is the fruit of years and hard experience, amiable or the reverse, for years and hard experience kill the ideal.

A busy man has no time to fancy himself somebody else. He is never allowed to forget exactly who he is and what he has in hand. So the real character asserts itself. But you shall see men not busy or not engaged in that hourly struggle with fortune which absorbs the imagination, cherishing ideals to the last. Thus, the likeness of a great noble of the Eighteenth century may be identified in our modern house of peers. An interesting and pleasing likeness it is, too, generally, though the flesh and blood original would be as much an anachronism as an Eighteenth century bishop.—National Observer.

Sealing Wax Is Made of Shellac.

In olden times common beeswax was used for sealing envelopes. The wax was mixed with earthy materials to give it consistency. It was difficult to preserve it, however, as even a little heat tended to soften it. Later gum was introduced for this purpose, and then came sealing wax, which is made chiefly of shellac. The sealing wax that comes from India is the purest and is made almost entirely of shellac, vermilion or some other pigment being mixed with it for color. All of the varieties of shellac are translucent, and some of the finer varieties are in sheets as thin as writing paper.—Boston Globe.

A Good Way to Pack Flowers.

It will not do to wet cut flowers themselves. This causes them to wilt early. The best way, or one of the best, is to wrap the stems in wet moss and cover the flowers with waxed paper, packing the flowers closely. Violets, acacias and chrysanthemums have in this way been successfully sent to Seattle, and New York.—San Francisco Examiner

The needy, incapable poor should be well taken care of, but let us as people beware of enfeebling ourselves by indiscriminate charity.
