There is never much variety in wedding presents, but the Prince of Wales seems to have been especially monotonous in those he has bestowed. What a Dynamo-Electric Machine Is. In reply to an inquiry from a correspondent, the dynamo-electric machine may be defined as a machine for converting energy in the form of mechanical power into energy in the form of electric currents, or vice versa, by the operation of setting conductors (usually in the form of coils of copper wire) to rotate in a magnetic field, or by varying a magnetic field in the presence of conduc-

The term is also applied to a machine by means of which electrical energy is converted into mechanical energy by means of magno-electric induction, in which electric currents are produced by the motion of permanent magnets, or of conductors past permanent magnets. Machines of the latter class are called "motors," those of the former "generators."-Pittsburg Dispatch.

An Odd Means of Livelihood.

An elderly Philadelphian earns a fair livelihood guessing. He makes guesses at everything when prizes are offered to stimulate the guesser. He answers newspaper competitions, puzzle contests, tells the number of beans in a bottle and other instructive things. He comes out strong at fairs, riddle matches and magazine prize questions. The hit of his life was when he secured the $500 offered by an agricultural society for correctly computing the number of grains of corn in an ear still growing on the stalk. WHITAKER,

One hour went by-two. The supper bell rang, but Beatrice never left ner task. She was writing now. A singular feature of chirography, hers, it seems, for she wrote with a coarse pen, in a bold, masculine hand, and then with a fine one in delicate Italian characters.

She manipulated the two letters, so dissimilar in appearance, folded them, placed them in an envelope, carefully added the superscriptions, and then, stamping the envelopes, put on her cloak and hat and stole from her room.

Down the dark hall, through the front portals, out into the road, and townwards she sped. At the village postoffice she paused to drop the letter into the box there, and a faint gleam of a lamp near by showed the address plainly-"Mr Raymond Marshall."

"Done!" she murmured, breathlessly, as she hurried homewards. "Circumstances, accident, all are in my favor. I could not have endured the confidences that broke my heart, much longer. Edna will never write, her father's letter tells me why. She will never see her old friends again. Raymond Marshall will forget her in time-I will be his friend, his consoler, and then-

The dark eyes glistened, the fair face was sentient with vivid emotion." Then! Ah! balm for the hungry heart, love for the starved soul, peace for the self-torture, for word and feature betrayed the secret of a woman who could suffer, conceal, and plot as well, to consummate the hopes dictated by hatred, jealousy and love!

CHAPTER III.

TWO LETTERS. "Two letters, Mr. Marshall."

Raymond Marshall took the tendered missives from the hands of the antiquated postmaster of Hopedale, thrust one, an ordinary business missive, into his pocket carelessly, but the other-

"False! Deceitful! I will never believe it," parted the petrified Marshall. 'Why! yesterday-the ring I gave her, the pledges we made-oh! this is some farce, some hidden dream! What is this?

Mechanically turning the wretched missive over and over in his nerveless hands, Raymond Marshall observed for the first time that it was comprised of two sheets of paper. And striving to separate them, he ascertained that stray patches of mucilageheld the lower page to the other. In a few minutes he discerned that it could not have been the intention of the sender to inclose the second sheet. deep-red with reactionary emotion. That was accidental. It had stuck to the top sheet and had been folded in with it by a hasty, careless hand.

It bore writing-not Edna's writing. A dagger seemed driven to Ray Marshall's heart as he tore it free, and the bold, masculine chirography danced before, his vision.

If he had been startled before, every pulse stirred with flerce fire now. The letter had evidently been received by Edna the day previous, and was signed with the name of the only rival in her fering and suspense. affection to whom he had ever given thought. Miss Chandler's cousin, Edna's announced escort, of that evening-Barton Brinsley.

The letter of an accepted lover to the woman he loved, it betrayed decided en ouragement from Edna. It even bore a slight ridicule of Marshall's pretensions. Edna had endured this! Edna had played him false, and while her shy lips were responding to his ardent expressions of devotion her hypocritical neart was thinking of Barton Brinsley. The complication was maddening. With eyes dashed with the insanity of gone to her relatives under a vow never

And then, realizing the folly of such a sentiment, the right of any man to honorably strive for a woman's preference, with the bitterness of death comprehending that the woman was the deceiver, remembering his mother's taunt once made that he had better marry some one besides "a nameless, homeless, nobody," he calmed down, put on his hat, and walked from the house like one in a dream, his lips firmly set, but sick at heart.

He went straight to the seminary. There was that in his heart so manly, so straightforward, so inclined to doubt the falsity of the woman he had so blindly trusted, despite the terrible evidence in his hands, that, though the meeting killed him, he was determined to have the matter settled now and

He would demand to see Edna-he would show her the letters. His philanthropic friends had more than once told him that all womankind were changing butterflies of sentiment. If she had indeed only played with his heart he would leave her presence and the place forever; w.thout a word accept the bitter lesson as a warning against trusting all humanity, and in silence and distance wait for the end of a life blighted, profitless, unendurable.

A servant admitted him and took his card to the lady principal. Miss Chandler looked serious as she entered the room, but greeted him with the geniality she always bestowed on Edna's friends. She started at the sight of his wretched face, however.

"Miss Chandler," he spoke, in his misery and agitation neglecting to take her proffered hand, "I wish to see Edna-

"Miss Mercer is in there alone, I think," spoke Miss Chandler. "Yes. Beatrice, Mr. Marshall.

And the principal opened the door and closed it upon Raymond Marshall and the woman he so disliked and distrusted.

I cannot tell you.

From beneath her veiled eyelids the girl studied his working face. Craftiness was there, but well masked. A strength to simulate.

"She left no word for me?" he forced himself to ask. "No. She wrote a letter to Mr. Barton Brinsley, but it is unmanly for you to have me betray my friend."

"Speak!" ordered Marshall, fiercely. "Do you not see that this suspense is killing me?"

Then know the worst," answered Beatrice, bulking all her fancied power on a final venture. "She wrote to Barton Brinsley. This morning he left Hopedale. Miss Chandler says he has gone away on business. I think it is to see Edna's new relatives and press his suit there. Mr. Marshall, oh, why will you force me to tell these , bitter truths? Forget her -she is unworthy of you. She never knew her own mind. There are truer hearts, hearts longing for a love they would cherish and never be-

His head had sunk on his breast. He believed now, and his heart was broken. Beatrice had drawn nearer to him. Her eyes aglow, her cheeks throbbing, her hand upon h's arm, heart and soul breathed forth the secret that had made her life one great void of misery since she had first seen his handsome, earnest

With a shock he looked up. Wonderment, intelligence in his glance, it drove her back abashed.

Her face betrayed her secret, she loved him! His face told unmistakably that he read that secret aright.

"Oh! how could I! But I pity you so! Think me unwomanly, but if your heart is breaking so is mine. Go, Mr. Marshall-Raymond-go! and leave me to the wretchedness of the ecret your suffering has wrung from my lips.

She was sobbing, shrinking, now. In consternation her companion regarded her. She loved him! This had been the secret of her wayward moods. Despite himself a great wave of pity swept his chivalrous heart.

"I am sorry, he said brokenly. "A true woman's regard is better than a false friend's treachery. Miss Mercer, when I leave you, it is never to know happiness again, but I may know the peace of having done my tull duty if I trace this affair down to the last. I must see Edna-she shall tell me from her own lips what I already know! Then I am content to cherish my misery in s:lence. Speak! Win my gratitude, at least, by telling me whither she has

There was no reply. Only the subdued sobs broke the waiting silence. You know where Edna is?" persisted Marshall.

'les, I know!" cried Beatrice, lifting her face, flashing with jealousy and emotion; "but do you think I will tell you-send you to beg at the feet of a woman unworthy of you? Leave me! If you are suffering, I am tortured.

Her Irantic hands swept the portiolio across the desk as she shrank from him, hiding her humiliation, her jealousy, her love in hot, burning tears. About to speak reassuriagly to her, to plead with her anew for the knowledge he so craved, Raymond Marshall started as if deait a sudden blow.

His eyes happened to fall to the open portfolio. He recoiled, stared closer, and thea sprang to his feet with a wild, intelligent, hopeful cry.

For upon a sheet of paper, written there indubitably by the woman who had just so shame-face ily confessed her love, was the record of hatred and treachery that had so nearly blighted

Beatrice had snatched up the portfolio. Derance in her face, she panted like a tigress at lay.

"If I did," she cried wildly, "it was only to save you a fruitless chase. I alone know where Edna Deane has gone. I know that she will never dare write to you or see you again. You hate me, you spurn me-you, for whom I would have given a lifetime of devotion. Then find the pale-faced child you dote over, but never with my help.' A great, joyful glow sprang to the face of Marshall. So be it!" he cried. 'Knowing her to a lie, love will find a way. Revealed in your true colors at last, I know what to His thoughts were too full of Edna to expect of you; but, as I live, I vow pursue her half the world over!'

The Battle.

Never was the pure air clearer. Never seemed the heavens nearer; Never did the sunlight sniver Softer radiance on the river; Never were the breezes lighter. Nor the fleecy day clouds whiter.

All was lovely as a vision From the unseen world Elysian; Yet there seemed a dread foreknowing, Hushing even the river's flowing, As when earth, her breath suspending. Waits the mighty storm-cloud's rending.

Half a league between them lying, Armed with flags before them flying. Sword and saber glittering brightly. Where the sunbeams touched them lightly, Moved two mighty armies speeding To the conflict, death unheeding

Every eye flashed bright and brighter-Not the war stee I loudly neighing. Not the winds around them playing. Nor the turf before them lying, Seemed to know less thought of dying. But before the day's bright fountain Sank behind the western mountain. Lurid clouds were hovering o'er them, Blood-stained was the grass before them, And the breeze around them sighing Breathed a requiem for one dying. Tinged with carnage was the river. Earth with horror stemed to shiver; And where er the cannon's thunder Tore the solid ranks asunder, In the blood-stained mass were lying Friend and foeman, dead and dying.

But when Peace, with snowy pinions, V: n juished War's dark-visaged minions, On the brightest page of glory Wrote the Freedom's heroes' story: Oh. where'er their forms are sleeping. Rest they now in Honor's keeping! Our Country.

Southern Women.

R. THOMAS NELSON PAGE, in his book,"The Old South," has much to say in praise of the wives and mothers of the old regime. The master of the plantation, he says, might shift much of the responsibility upon a competent overseer, but the mistress had no such means of relief. "She was mistress, manager, doctor, counsellor, seamstress, teacher, housekeeper, slave, all at once." Such a woman was told by her husband that one of the gates was broken. "Well, my dear," she answered, "if I could sew it with my needle and thread, I would mend it for you." In another place Mr. Page says that some years ago he was shown a worn and faded letter, written on old Confederate paper with pale Confederate ink. It had been taken from the breastpocket of a dead private soldier of a Georgia regiment after one of the battles around Richmond.

It was from his sweetheart. They must have been plain and illiterate people, for it was badly written and badly spelled. In it she told him that; she loved him; that she had always loved him since they had gone to school together in the little school house in the woods; that she was sorry she had always treated him so badly, and that now, if he would get a furlough and come home, she would marry him.

Then, as if fearful that this temptation might prove too strong to be resisted, she scrawled a little postscript across the blue Confederate sheet:

"Don't come without a furlough, for if you don't come honorable, I won't marry you.'

Telling Regiments by their Cheers.

"I learned during the civil war to tell what section of the country a regiment was from by hearing its cheer,' said Col. Sol Hilligoss, a guest at the Southern. "Of course it was easy enough to distinguish the wild 'rebel yell' from the deep-toned cheer of the Northern legions, but each of these had well defined variations. Draw a line from Boston to San Francisco, from that city through St. Louis to Richmond, Va., and from the latter city to New Orleans, and you run the whole gamut of the American battlecry, from the deep base of the far North to the shrill treble of the extreme South. The war cry of the West is a compromise between the deepchested Yankee cheer and the thrilling rebel yell. It more nearly resembles the awful warhoop of the Sioux than anything else I can think of, and is appalling in its intensity and ferocity. The cheer of a Maine regiment makes you think of the old Norse sea kings. It rolls and reverbertaes like a salvo of artillery. A Virginian regiment does not cheer, it does not shriek. Its warcry in the short, sharp, terrifying growl of the bull dog before he closes his iron jaws on the throat of an enemy. The yell of a Louisiana regiment strikes the ear like the scream of a panther or the shriek of a shell; but when an Iowa or Michigan regiment gives tongue you think the portals of of ferocity, the apotheosis of terror."-

General Sherman's wrath blazed with increasing intensity, and cooled off very slowly. Sheridan's anger exploded without premonitory fizz, and subsided as quickly. Theodore R. Davis, the war artist, tells the Cosmopolitan of an occasion when Sherman was so full of wrath at a man that he turned him over to Sheridan, saying, "I am too apgry, Phil; see to him." It was on a train of freight cars running on the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad. At this time the railroad was a military road, and the only ticket required was a countersigned army pass, or the written transporta-tion ticket furnished to forloughed soldiers.

"I had left the box car," Mr. Davis writes, "in which Generals Sherman and Sheridan, together with a few officers of their personal staff, were riding, while the train conductor, unaware of their presence, was collecting fare from protesting soldiers whose rights on the train, if supplied with proper papers, were better than his own. To stop the robbery I returned to Sherman's car and briefly explained to the general what was going on. " 'Hold on, Phil!' he said to Sheridan, who was on his way to the door. Then turning to me with a peculiarly steadfast gaze:

" 'Are you positive of this?' he asked quietly. "'Yes sir.'

" 'Yet you may be mistaken. Have your pass ready. The rest of us don't happen to need one. Stand by the door; we will keep back.' "It would be impossible to construct a stronger pass than the one Rawling had made expressly for me by General Grant's direction. It covered every. thing until further orders-guards. pickets, military railroads and govern. mental steamboats. This paper the conductor curtly refused, and demand. ed cash.

"'But,' I said, 'you have not collected from others.'

"'Yes, I have, too. Sick men and all pay on my train.'

"Then Sherman spoke: 'You human buzzard! Inhuman thief! Rob my sick and wounded soldiers under their general's eyes? I'll tie you hand and foot!"

"His eye caught Sheridan's, and the next instant the trembling wretch was under expert treatment by a thoroughly practical operator.

Years afterward Sheridan, with laughing voice, said, 'Sherman tortured me nearly to my limit when he kept me waiting for a crack at that scoundrel. I had to hit him, that's all I had to. He used his position to wrong private soldiers. But it was Sherman all over to keep his grip on the rascal. Tied hand and foot the unfortunate wretch rode the rest of the way to Nashville in perpetual motion on the floor of a platform car under guard of his recent victim. Then Sherman proscuted him, and sent him for a long term to the penitentiary.

" 'Don't you remember, old man, continued Sheridan, 'it was almost no trouble to get the money back to its rightful owners?""

Heroes of Andersonville.

There is one class of the survivors of our civil war for whom I feel the reverence due men who have proved that they possess fidelity and loyalty beyond the usual inheritance of our common humanity.

I refer to those who suffered in the Southern prisons, of which Andersonville was the perfect type. Gallant and heroic as were the deeds performed on the battlefields, or wherever the foe was met, they were such as we have a right to expect from all brave men, and most of us feel that we also could have done as they did, since they risked only life, and the issue was soon decided.

But to drag out the lengthened herror and martyrdom of a life-if it can be called life -in Andersonville, knowing all the time that it was more than probable that their nearest and dearest friends would never know what became of them, when the way of escape was so easy, and their cause would be so slightly injured if they availed themselves of it—who could credit human nature with the fact that more than twenty thousand died thus in Andersonville alone, were it not so well attested? And when I stand in the presence of one who endured this living death solely because truth and loyalty to his country and his convictions demanded it, I feel that the old beliefs were true, and that the gods have dwelt among us as men .- Our Country.

Delirious Bravery of a Southern Hotspur. On the last day of the battle at Pea Ridge, while the force under Gen. Sigel was gallantly charging the Rebels and driving them from the heights they had occupied, one Rebel officer, Captain of a Louisiana company, seemed resolved to throw away his life. As his fellow soldiers retreated, he advanced further toward our troops until he was almost alone. He waved his sword and cried in a loud ringing voice for his men to follow him, de nouncing them as cowards if they retreated. They heeded not his appeals, and seeing himself deserted, he ran toward our advance, shouting like 3 madman and saying something that sounded like, "I am brave as Casar. If we are whipped, I do not want to live. Come on, you ____ Yankees! The Union infantry were anxious to hell have been forced—that Lucifer take this Southern hotspur prisoner. and all his attendant horrors are loose and would have done so had not one upon the land. It is the incarnation of their batteries opened from the left, and its storm of iron swept down the single life which, so full of fierceness, ebbed itself away in the sodden and unpitying ground. He was the son of a sugar planter living up the Bayou la Fourche, and was given to drunken ness, which perhaps accounts for his delirious conduct,

VICTIMS OF A MADMAN.

INNOCENT PEOPLE SHOT BY A CHICAGO MANIAC.

Wife of the Murderer and a Police Officer Wounded by the Frenzied Man-Policemen and a Big Crowd Held at Bay-Mob Violence Narrowly Prevented.

Deed of a Demon.

Herman Siegler, a cabinet maker, living at No. 723 North Paulina street, Chicago, got up early the other morning, went to his brother's house and borrowed a shotgun on the pretext that he wanted to go hunting, returned home, shot and killed his father and motherin-law, seriously wounded his wife, and filled a policeman's nose full of buckshot, he in return getting a bullet in his abdomen from another officer's revolver. His work of death was done mainly in the house in which he lived, but after policemen were summoned the battle waged between him from the house and the officers from the street. He emptied a double-barreled shotgun at them a volvers flew in his direction as rapidly as fingers could pull the triggers.

Thousands of people attracted by the fusillade swarmed around the house, and when Officer Dan McCarthy finally grappled with and overcame the murderer, they fa'rly howled for his blood. Some one started the cry, "lynch him!" and it was taken up by excited men and women. Although four patrol-wagon loads of officers were on the ground, they had a herculean task to prevent the infuriated people from making short shrift of the then c wering murderer. Men fought with each other to get at Siegler, each howling "Kill him!" "Lynch the brute!" Step by step, the officers, with drawn revolvers, forced their way through the crowd, and even when the prisoner was placed in the East Chicago patrol-wagon the danger was not over, for the horses were thrown back on their haunches, while men tried to climb over the wheels and steps to get at the object of their wrath. He was finally removed in safety to the East Chicago Avenue Police Station and subsequently to the County Hospital. The result of the morning's bloody

North Paulina street; shot in abdomen: may recover. Mrs. Herman Siegler, 30 years old, No. 723 North Paulina street; shot in face and neck; will recover. Siegler's Statement.

Siegler made the following statement: About 8:30 o'clock this morning I went to my brother William Siegler's house, 893 North Hoyne avenue, to get a gun, as I was told by our Lord God up above to go and get a gun. I was born to realize this country. The Lord said to me, to-day is the day of Judgment, and you have got to be there. I brought the gun home and put it in the clothes closet, and after awhile I took it out. Then my mother-in-law came down stairs. She is a witch, She said to me: . You have got to die, and I will not go where you want to send me,' and I shot her in the hall. The old man came down-stairs and I was confused, and I fired at the old man and shot him. I then came out on the steps and the patrol wagons came. Then I was dumfounded. I have been sick and been feeling bad for some time." It is strongly believed that Siegler is insane.

A waste of fiesh and a want of digestion. These go together. People who cannot assimilate the food they swallow must, of necessity, lose bodily substance. To remedy this, rencer digestion easy and thorough with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a tonic famed the world over for its strength and fleshyielding qualities. Appetite and sleep are both impaired by indigestion, which begets nervous symptoms, heartburn, flatulence, irregularity of the towels and palpitation of the heart-the latter often being erroneously attributed to disease of that organ. All these manifestations disappear when the Bitters is resorted to. Milaria, rheumatism, liver and kidney trouble are effectually counteracted by this superb corrective, which is not only effectual but permanent.

The Way to Health.

The only true way to health is that which common sense dictates to a man. Live within the bounds of reason. Eat moderately, drink temperately, sleep regularly, avoid excess in anything, and preserve a conscience "void of offense." Some men eat themselves to death, some wear out their lives by indolence, and some by over exertion, while not a few sink into the grave under the effects of vicious practices. All the medicines in creation are not worth a farthing to a man who is constantly and habitually violating the laws of his own nature. All the medical science in the world cannot save him from a premature grave. With a suicidal course of conluct, he is planting the seeds of decay in his own constitution, and accelerating the destruction of his own life.

TENNYSON.

The poet Tennyson was fond of his pipe, but he was exceeding susceptible to the charms of pretty women, whom he was willing to grant any favor to. In his later years he had the reputation of being morose and discourteous, especially to strangers, but this was because he was so bored by them that they became a veritable annoyance. He once had an American arrested and fined because the latter in his zeal had climbed the poet's favorite tree and cut off a large branch which he was going to fashion into a walking-stick as a memento. How many people would be willing to stand admiration to go at such lengths as this. The poet's death was caused by his own imprudence. He went riding insufficiently clad, took cold, and it settled upon his kidneys, as all colds do to a greater or lesser extent. The result was an attack of pneumonia, which proved fatal to him. Pneumonia can be cured by the use of REID'S GERMAN COUGH AND KID-NEY CURE, because this great remedy at once incites the kidneys to action, and thus relieves the congestion of the lungs. There appears to be very little hope of anything better for wheat, at least before the holidays, Western receipts are now and will continue to be so large that any material advance is out of the question until the winter stops their large output. It now stands at 68c for red or white, barley is easier on account of the market being well supplied for the present, and sales can only be made at consessions. The best of it would bring $1,20, but the bulk of it is being bought at $1.10 to $1.15. Oats are firmer and 34c are paid for white and 32c for black ones. Rye is dull at 49c, beans are lower under free receipts and $1.40 is the top for the best. Clover seed continues firm at $7, for prime. Dressed hogs come in freely now and bring $6.35 per hundred. Poultry is not moving much now but holiday trade in that line will begin the last of next week and ten cents per pound will be paid for turkey and 7c for chickens and ducks, eggs are in demand at 20c and butter 20c.

CHURCH CORNER.

A Normal class is being organized in the Methodist Sunday School.

Dr. Powell was elected president of the Epworth League last week.

Methodist church, the sermon will be mans. to young men on "Success."

League had bought a piano was an error. But since that time they have bought one. It is a Chickering concert grand.

Subject at the C. E. prayer-meeting last Sunday evening was "Let your light shine." It was suggested that the light should shine steady and not be allowed to flicker, that it should shine in the dark places, not the brighter ones.

Last year the American Sunday School Union organized 1,664 Sunday Schools, gathering into them 7,018 teachers and 59,551 scholars, distributed 15,573 Bibles and testaments; their missionaries visited 56,573 famities and delivered 12,487 addresses.

United States are now supporting in foreign missionary fields over two hundred Bible-woman; the English Zenana Society has one hundred seventy-one. Some of the most effective missionary work is being done by these laborers.

It is to be hoped that the anthem rendered at the Congregational church Sunday night will be used again soon. when there are more present. Nevertheless, we commend the choir for using one of their best pieces on a stormy night. Those who attend service on such occasions deserve the best.

At a rehersal a few nights ago in the parlors of the Congregational church a lamp tired of the ordinary routine of life, began a series of movements which made it necessary to eject it from the building. An explosion was averted by the timely hurling of said lamp upon the lawn. The grass was slightly damaged but the church was saved.

Mrs. Maria Yocum.

The subject of the present sketch, Mrs. Maria Yocum, was born at Tems River, N. J., August 23, 1824. In 1844 she removed to Michigan--the following year uniting with the Presbyterian church at Unadilla.

In 1846 she was united in marriage to John K. Yocum at the home of Mer uncle, John Green, of Lyndon Conter. Three sons and one daughter were given them.

Our May 12, 1867, a specially interthe entire household into the member- Mrs. S. Winslow. ship of the Baptist church at Waterloo. In 1882, they removed from their rural home near Waterloo to Chelsea.

On the evening of November 21, 1892, after an illness of a single week, our lamented sister quietly passed from a world of shadows to a world of light.

In reference to her character and life-work, no words of fulsome eulogy are required; her record is on high. In just testimony, however, to her eminent worth, it should be said that for her generous, responsive spirit, her eminent social qualities and all the essential graces composing a full-orbed, Christian character, she was justly held in highest esteem alike by intimate friends and the general public.

On November 23, the funeral services were held at the Baptist church, the pastor, Rev. W. W. Whitcomb, officiatings Text 1 Thes, 4:13, 14.

Resolved; That while we, the members of R. P. Carpenter Corps, No.210, W. R. C. feel that we must submit to the will of Him above, yet we do feel in her removal from among us, her husband has lost a loving wife; her children a kind- and loving mother, and we an honored and respected sister.

Resolved; That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the husband, children and her bereaved brother and sisters, in the hour of their affliction, and commend them to Him who doeth all things well.

Resolved; That our charter be draped in mourning for thirty days,

Resolved; That these resolutions be placed on the record of the Corps, and that a copy be sent to the bereaved family, also published in the local

THE regular monthly crop report of Secretary Mohler of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture shows that the total yield of corn throughout the State last season was 138,658,621 bushels, or 24.74 bushels to the acre. A larger area has been sown to winter wheat this fall than last, but the conditions have not been favorable for its growth. WHEN the doors of the Ashland, Cass County, Ill., bank were opened Monday morning it was found that during the night robbers had forced an entrance to bookkeeper of the Armour Packing the building, blown open the safe by means of dynamite, and carried away all its contents, probably amounting to $2,500. The officers of the bank will not make public the exact amount taken. Two freight trains collided on the Chicago Belt Railroad Sunday morning, near the Chicago and Alton crossing, and three men lost their lives. The dead are: John Beauchamp, conductor; Louis Obitz, fireman; and Richard A. Otto, brakeman; all of Auburn Park. The injured are: John Best, brakeman; and Thomas Garland, engineer; bruised about about face and scalded, left arm

HERMAN SIEGLER, a cabinet maker, living at No. 723 North Paulina street, Chicago, went to his brother's house and borrowed a shotgun, on the pretext that he wanted to go hunting, returned home, shot and killed his father and mother-in-law, seriously wounded his wife, and filled a policeman's nose full of buckshot, he in return getting a tullet in his abdomen from another officer's revolver. A TERRIFIC windstorm swept over the northern portion of Hamilton, Ohio, causing great destruction. It approached from the West, and first struck the pulp mill of the Louis Snider's Sons Company. The entire west end of the building was blown in. The bricks and timbers fell on five men who were working in the pulp-room. The roof was torn to pieces and carried some distance. Two were fatally injured. The storm also struck Cincinnati, and two men were killed.

THE annual meeting of the Youngstown (Ohio) Garfield Club was held on Friday night. Several hundred members and delegates were present. The club held a business meeting early in the evening. After electing Henry and James Garfield honorary members of the club and appointing officers for the ensuing year, the meeting adjourned, and was followed by an elaborate banquet. Covers were laid for over 300. Gov. McKinley delivered an eloquent tribute to the lamented Garfield.

JUDGE FISHER, of St. Louis, Mo., gave a decision in the case of J. N. Labold against the Southern Hotel Company. Labold gave his overcoat to the man who attends the hat-rack. When he came out he found that some one had taken it. He was refused satisfaction and sued for the value of his overcoat. In giving his decision Judge Fisher said that while the porter was not compelled to receive an overcoat at the entrance to the diningroom, still, from the fact that he did receive it, the hotel became responsible for it and was liable for it.

THERE is an alarming increase of typhoid fever cases in St. Louis at present. Friday forty-eight new cases were reported to the health department. About 250 cases have been reported thus far in November, against 261 for the entire month of October, 14 for last April, and 12 for last May. Dr. Francis, of the Health Department, is investigating the causes of the disease. The force of the sanitary office is making an exhaustive examination of sixty houses from which typhoid fever has been reported. All the sanitary conditions of such dwellings are carefully scrutinized.

THE conductor of a Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul train left a caboose and fifteen loaded cars standing on the top of a heavy grade near Hartley, Iowa, Monday morning while the train crew with the engine went to do some switch-In the caboose were five members of a bridge gang sleeping. None of the brakes on the detached cars were set and the wind blew them back over the grade, and when near Everly the cars crashed into a rapidly moving freight train. Of the men in the caboose Daly Stephenson was dead when taken from the wreck. J. Stephenson was burned and crushed and will die. The other men were rescued, but are badly hurt, although it is thought they will recover,

THE plant of the Marble Gloss Lime Works at Menominee Falls, fourteen miles west of Milwaukee, Wis., was partially destroyed by fire. The firm was started by an explosion in the engine-room. A short distance from the burning building was a large tank filled with petroleum, and near by was stored a quantity of dynamite and giant powder. The people organized a bucket brigade and kept the flames back until the petroleum was run out and the dynamite and powder removed to a distance. In the meantime the fire spread in the opposite direction and burned about 300 feet of railroad trestle, together with a number of Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul freight cars. The loss is about $10,000, with no insurance. The company recently received an order for 200,(00 barrels of lime from Chicago, which they cannot now fill.

AFTER the close of Mr. Joseph Jefferson's two-weeks engagement in "Rip Van Winkle" the new Irish comedy-drama which Manager Wm. H. Powers brought out last week in Baltimore will have its Chicago presentation at McVicker's Theater. The play is in five acts, and all the scenery has been painted especially for the production. It will be elaborate and will present truthful pictures of famous localities. The operatic attraction that Manager McVicker will offer his patrons this year will be no less a noteworthy one than Miss Pauline Hall and her opera company in the brilliant successful new opera, "Puritania." Miss Hall essays the role of a dashing cavalier, Vivian, and a captivating young officer, it is said, she proves to be. "Puritania" has most assuredly been a pronounced success. It ran over one hundred nights in Boston and nearly two months in New York, and it will 'certainly be the operation event of the season in Chicago.

CALIFORN'A'S delegation to the Fiftythird Congress will consist of four Democrats and three Republicans. THE next-Fifty-third-Congress will convene the first Monday of December, 1893. The present House consists of 226 Democrats, 88 Republicans, and 8 People's party members; total, 332. The next House will consist of 219 Demoerats, 125 Republicans, and 11 People's party; total, 355. This is a Democratic oss of seventeen, a Republican gain of thirty-seven, and a People's party gain of three. The Democrats have complete control, entirely upsetting the calculations of Edward McPherson and other experts that the People's party would hold the balance of power inthe House. The present Senate stands 47 Republicans, 39 Democrats, and two People's party. The terms of 29 Senators expire March 4, 1893, and Republican losses and Democratic and People's party gains which will result from the change of political control of legislatures elected this year will make the Senate stand after March 4 as follows: Democrats, 43; Republicans, 40; and People's party, 5. The People's party will therefore have the balance of power in the United States Senate, and if the Senators have the nerve to stand up for what the rank and file of the party demand there will be some interesting Senatorial deadlocks.

No important change appears in the condition of business. The distribution of products continues enormous. Production by manufacturers is greater on the whole than in any previous year, and while some hesitation is seen about entering into new accounts, the general tone of business and industries is remarkably healthy. Trading in cotton was much the largest ever known in any week, but stock dealings have been but moderate. At Boston business continues large, collections good, money easy. In general, the situation is unchanged, excepting that wool is more quiet.

The International Monetary Conference, which has begun at Brussels, Belgium, will doubtless be the most imnortant gathering of recent years so far as its effects upon the fiscal policies of the world are concerned. It will be of the world are especial consequence to the interests of the United States, for this is the chief silver-producing nation of the world, and upon the results of the conference will depend in a large measure the material prosperity of several States of the Union, whose chief wealth consists in their mines of argentiferous ores. The conference was first proposed by the Congress of the United States, and after consultation with representatives of the leading foreign powers its details were formulated and delegates appointed. These consist, on the part of the United States, of ex-Comptroller of the Currency Henry W. Cannon, Senator William B. Allison, of Jowa; Senator John P. Jones, of Nevada; President E. Benjamin Andrews, of Brown University; Congressman McCreary of Kentucky; and Edward O. Leech, Director of the Mint. These delegates represent fairly all the views of Americans on the subject of silver coinage. Senator Allison takes a middle view on the question. Senator Jones is confessedly a radical free-coinage man. Dr. Andrews has written an interesting volume on "The Gold Dollar," and his views are almost radically against free silver. Director Leech believes that there is too much silver in the market, and Congressman McCreary is inclined to side with Senator Jones, although by no means as radical on the subject. Duties of the Members.

The duties of the delegates have been clearly defined by the act authorizing the conference and also by the Secretary of the Treasury. They have authority simply to discuss and propose, but no power to take final action. The deliberations will in all likelihood be conducted in the English language. The American delegates will argue for bimetallism, and it is likely that our most bitter opponents will be the English delegation, who believe that we are making a griev us error in purchasing 4,500,000 ounces of silver a month. They think that to stop coining this great mass of silver dollars monthly would drive more bullion abroad, and in that way favorably affect the silver market. No proposition looking to an indorsement of free coinage of silver will probably be submitted by any of the American representatives. Importance of the Conference.

The conference will have the co-operati n of all the leading nations. likely to be far more important than any monetary conference of recent years. The conference held at Paris during the Exposition of 1888 was not vested with any authority and was productive of no results. A conference was held at Washington last year of the Pan-American countries, but it related merely to devising methods for securing a common coin, and its work was fruitless, because the scheme was impracticable. The present conference will represent every shade of national views. There will be England and Germany, which are upon a gold basis, and Aus ria, which is passing through the conditions necessary to bring it to the same basis, silver having been demonetized. France and the other countries of the Latin Union, which maintain a parity between the two metals while limiting the silver coinage, will be fully represented. India, which is suffering financial convulsions because of its silver basis, w.ll have its own representatives, although Great Britain will dietate its policy. Mexico, which is on a purely silver basis and has a large direct trade with Europe, may help in solving the problem.

Many suggestions have been made for the guidance of the conference. The one which has been most discussed among financial authorities is the proposition of Dr. Seytbooer, the emment Austrian publicist. He has suggested an agreement by which the countries taking part in the conference should limit silver coinage to certain small coins, none to exceed in value the twenty franc piece. It is stated that while silver could not thus be placed on a parity with gold, it might be maintained at a ratio of about twenty to one. The actual commercial ratio is how about twen y-four to one. The coinage ratio in the United States is sixteen to one, in the Latin Union and most Uuropean countries tifteen and a half to one, and in India fifteen to one. Dr. Seytbooer's plan is declared by those who have studied it to be too intricate to meet with general adoption. The whole aim of the Brussels conference will be directed toward practical measures, without seeking to revolutionize the existing relations of gold and silver, which could only be done by universal remonetizat.on.

UNCLE JERRY'S REPORT.

Work of the Agricultural Department Reviewed by Rusk. The report of the Secretary of Agriculture has been submitted to the Presi-last fiscal year with that of former years, and emphasizes the fact that of the more than $1,000,000,-000, represent ng the exports of our domestic products for the last year, nearly 80 per cent. consisted of agricultural products, this not only mak-SECRETARY RUSK. ing the United States the creditor of the world for a sum exceeding $200,000,000—the excess of our exports over imports-but relieving our home markets from a surplus product which would otherwise have reduced prices to a point below the cost of production. For a large share in bringing about the conditions which have made these gratifying results possible the Secretary claims credit for his department.

In regard to imports he finds encouragement for the farmers in the fact that in spite of an aggregate increase there is a reduction in the proportion of imports consisting of products which compete with our American agriculture, for, while in the fiscal year ended in 1883 54 per cent, of the imports were competing, only 44 per cent. of our imports for the last fiscal year did so compete, He nevertheless regards imports competing with the products of our own soil as still far too great. He instances $40,-000,000 worth of animal products, $67,-000,000 worth of fibers, $27,000,000 worth of hides, $30,000,000 worth of fruits and wines, as articles of this kinds, and cites the imports of raw silk, amounting to $25,000,000 yearly, as an instance of products imported which could with proper encouragement be produced in our own country. He declares these figures to indicate the main ultimate object of the work of the department, which he defines, in brief, as "the closest study of all markets abroad which may be reached by our own agricultural products, accompanied by persistent and intelligent efforts to extend them and the substitution in our markets of home-grown for foreign-grown products.

LABOR LOSES ITS FIGHT.

The Great Strike at Carnegie's Homestead Mills Declared Of.

The great strike at Carnegie's Homestead steel works has been declared off. After a five months' struggle, which for bitterness has probably never been equaled in this country, the army of strikers finally decided to give up the fight. This action was taken at a meeting of the lodges of the Amalgamated Association at Homestead, the vote standing 101 in favor of declaring the strike off and 91 against it. Among those present at the meeting were Vice President Carney, Secretary Kilgallon, Treasurer Madden, and David Lynch of the Advisory Board.

The officials addressed the members, and in plain words told them the strike was lost, and advised them to take steps to better their condition. The remarks met with considerable opposition, but when the vote was taken it showed a majority of ten in favor of declaring the strike off. Those who were in favor of calling the strike off were jubilant, while those who were against it were badly put out.

The Homestead strike has proved one of the most disastrous in the history of the country. It or ginated from a reduction in wages in the department where members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers were employed. The hitch was on what is known as the sliding scale. It is a scale which regulates the men's wages by the market price of steel billets. Nearly every mill in this vicinity signed the scale, including other mills of the Carnegie Company. At the refusal of the firm to sign the scale for the Homestead mill, a lockout was declared by the Amalgamated Association, and they were joined by the mechanics and laborers, who struck out of sympathy only, their wages not being reduced. The strikers were determined to keep nonunion men out of the mi land adopted military discipline. The story of the arrival and bloody fight with the Pinkertons July 6, the subsequent riotous proceedings, and the calling out of the National Guard, and its departure after three months' duty; is too well known to repeat. For six weeks the mill has been running almost as well as before the strike, but until within the last week the strikers have steadfastly refused to admit defeat.

the United States Express Company. George J. Bagley, a messenger for the United States Express Company, appropriated a package containing $100,-000 in paper currency, which had been placed in his care in Omaha Thursday night to be delivered in Chicago Friday morning. Just twenty-four hours after the money had been missed the thieving messenger was arrested in Chicago by Detectives Weaver and Plunkett, of the Central Station, ly a brilliant coup. And within forty-eight hours after the disappearance of the cash $19,990 of it was locke i up in the safe of the United States Express Company in Chicago. Bagley obta ned the money by a brilliantly laid scheme, but once in his possess on the weight of the currency was too much for his discretion and he completely lost his head. ### THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

AN INTERESTING AND INSTRUC-TIVE LESSON.

Reflections of an Elevating Character-Wholesome Food for Thought - Studying the Scriptural Lesson Intelligently and Profitably.

Work Among the Gentiles. The lesson for Sunday, December 4th, may be found in Acts xiv. 8-22. INTRODUCTORY.

Here is an experience more or less familiar to teacher and preacher. We all of us have had our attention called to some individual in the class or congregation to whom we have more directly addressed ourselves. The homiletical professor sometimes advises such a course. The alert or convicted listener certainly stirs the speaker to new and unwonted interest. The writer recalls the experience of a classmate, to which he has been more than once prompted to make reference. "I was preaching along." he said-(it was in the sort of trial preaching of student days) -"in a dull, heavy way, trying to find my bearings, and, with no help from my audience, pulling myself along by main strength. All at-once from over back of the stove, on the left of the house, there came a sonorous 'Amen!' You ought to have seen me go for that man! He waked me up, and from that time on I had a good time." More than one halting discourse has been saved in this way-God bless the good deacon! And more than one of us has glimpsed the responsive tear in the eye of conviction or persuasion, and has gone on to new illumination of the truth. May the man ready to be healed be found and felt in church and Sunday-school to-day. WHAT THE LESSON SAYS.

There sat, or was sitting. Imperfect tense. --- Impotent. A direct translation from the Greek (by way of the Latin); literally, unable. He was a partial paralytic .- Walked. From the Greek here comes our peripatetic.

Speak, or speaking, talking, present participle. - Steadfastly beholding .-Looking with fixed attention. A word of frequent occurrence in the New Testament. Luke 4: 20; Acts 3: 4; Acts 11: 6, etc. -- Faith to be healed, i. e., saving faith. Infinitive with the article.

Loud voice. Greek, great voice.--Upright. Place I last in the Greek, more emphatic. --- And he leaped and walked. Stronger in the original: ieaped up and went to walking.

What Paul had dore. As the world saw it .- To us. The preposition of nearness or association; i. e., to dwell with us. Jupiter. Greek: Dios or Zeus .-

Mercurius. Greek: Hermes. The Latin terminology is used in the translation. Mercury was the son of Jupiter and the messenger and interpreter of the gods, the patron of eloquence, etc.

Before the city, i. e., his temple was there.—Would have done sacrifice. Or wished to do sacrifice. A complacent and accommodating religion, ready to adopt innovations. Christianity is, on the contrary, uncompromising. WHAT THE LESSON TEACHES.

Faith to be healed. Let us not make a mistake. It was not quantity but quality of faith; it was not faith enough to be healed, but rather was it healing faith. The Christian herald does not ask how much faith, or what amount, in proffering salvation. Degree of faith counts for something, but later on. Here it is kind of faith, genuineness and reality of faith that is scrutinized. The woman who touched the hem of Christ's garment had a very little faith, but it was the real thing; and that is wonderfully efficacious under God. So here this lame man had but one thing, a small thing but specific, definite-he had faith to be healed. Let faith keep pace with need. This is the simple, humble life in Christ. "Believe and keep on believing. The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men. What if they had accepted the homage, and settled down to enjoy their advantage, making the most out of it! It has been done. Our brother pastor has been telling us of the Unitarian missionary dispatched to some part of Japan. The word pres-ently comes back, "Send us another: this one has turned Buddhist." Likely enough, if there be no divine Christ to constrain. The test came to Paul and Barnabas, and right there they proved the divineness and other worldliness of their faith. It is a common missionary experience. There comes a time when by vielding, but a little, it would seem, to the Pagan spirit he can apparently win much for his cause. But beware. Witness Catholicism abroad, and its wicked conformities and perversions. Nay, do not these things. "Worship God!

He left not himself without witness in that he did good. God's goodness is his prevailing witness. So long as men live they have testimony of God in the daily mercies enjoyed. In this sense there is no man without the ever-present and persistent proofs of God's guard and guide. Only sin dulls us to the apprehension of it; and so a Savior is sent suited to sinners, fitted to arouse them out of sin's lethargy. But here is a truth that ought oftener to be emphasized. The natural man is without excuse. God's speech is all about him. God besets him behind and before, His mercy endureth. To accept Jesus, as intimated in last Sunday's lesson, suggestively at least, is but to "continue inthe grace of God." Does not the goodness of God lead to repentance? Confirming the souls of the disciples.

Have a care, pastor, teacher, it is not enough to snatch a soul from the burning. The soul must be built up and strengthened, settled, in the life of godliness. Here comes in pastoral work. No pulpit occupant can dispense with it, if he cares for the souls committed to his charge. Here come in the teachers' visits in the home. Every instructor should follow up his teachings. Most of all, perhaps, to-day, our churches need this sort of "confirming,"

THEY ARE PLEASED.

Prohibitionists Satisfied with Their Showing at the Polls.

"Leaders of the Probibition party are very much encouraged over the results of the election just passed," said C. L. Stevens, editor of the Lever, the official organ of that party. He continued: "We think the National vote will run to about 325,000, against 250,000 for 1883. In the Western States, such as Kansas, Nebraska and Minnesota, where the People's party movement was very strong, we lost some from our vote of four years ago. On the other hand, in most of the States east of the Mississippi River, and in Iowa and California, we made substantial gains. Nearly every Sta'e shows some increase over 1888. I believe that the official returns will show the increase in Illinois to be the greatest of any State. Indiana made good gains, and also New York, including New York City, and most of the New England States. The Vate.

FOUR MEN KILLED IN A WRECK Negligence of a Switchman Causes a Fatal

Accident in Nebraska.

A Grand Island, Neb., dispatch says: At Alda Siding, eight miles west of Grand Island, express train No. 8, going at a speed of forty-five miles an hour, crashed into an extra freight train standing on the switch.

The passenger train, which was due here at a o'clock and at Omaha at 10:40, was nearly one hour and a half late, and, striking the grade west of Alda, Engineer McDonald determined to make up some of the time, and pulled the throttle open. The freight engine had been doing considerable switching on the siding. After the work had been completed the engine was comparatively dead at the head of the siding. The morning was foggy, and unmindful of danger and secure in the thought that the switch was properly placed, the engineer and fireman of the extra waited for the passenger train to rush by.

But the switch had not been closed and the passenger train brought death to four men and fatally wounded three others through criminal negligence of the switch tender. The menkilled were: . W. Keller, conductor of the freight, Grand Island. He leaves a widow and two children. Barney McDonald, engineer of the passenger, North Platte. Leaves a widow, but no children. Gus Barrett, engineer of the freight, North learn the cause of the irregular motion Platte. Leaves a widow and three of the machinery, when to their horror children. Ira Owens, fireman of the freight, North Platte. Leaves a wife and five children. The injured are: William Costella, fireman of the passenger, Grand Island; single; badly scalded; both ankles fractured and will probably die. William Sutherland, brakeman on the wreck and feet broken. A. M. Lyons, mail agent, Kearney; head wounded and leg fractured.

No passengers were injured. Both engines are wrecked, while the mail and baggage cars are badly damaged. Inside of half an hour a relief train from Grand Island was on the scene with physicians to look after the wounded and all passenger and baggage were transferred from the wreck to the relief train, which reached Omaha at 3 o'clock.

MRS. LEASE IS WILLING.

If the People of Kansas Desire It She Will Become a Senator. Topeka, Kan., special: Mrs. M. B.

Lease has just made the first authoritative statement concerning the use of her name in connection with the United States Senatorship. She arrived in town last night, and this morning she held a reception at her hotel. She announces to all callers that she would accept the Senatorship if it was offered her, but she would not engage in the scramble for the place. "I shall not enter the rate for the place," she said. "The office should seek the woman as well as the man. When I say I shall make as fight I say it with this proviso: That I am not attacked solely because I am a woman. There is one very peculiar fact connected with my candidacy. I have received hundreds of letters of encouragement from men since the announcement of my candidacy, but not one from a woman. I am the only woman who has ever been mentioned in connection with a place of this kind, and I naturally expected some encouragement from my sex. A letter from Miss Anthony, for example, or a word of encouragement from Mrs. Joyns. Single-handed and alone I have done more for woman suffrage than all of them. I had a suffrage plank incorporated in the Populists' platform, and I forced the Republican party to do the same thing. If the politicians see fit to attack me because of my sex I shall fight this thing to a finish as a matter of principle.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

An Interesting Budget from the Nation's

Washington, Nov. 25.—The discussion by democrats of a proposition to issue new government bonds to make up a deficiency in the revenues of the government excites considerable interest. It will excite much more interest if it becomes generally understood that the democrats, acting as a party, really contemplater such an issuance. For a number of years past the policy of the government financiers has been to reduce the public debt as low as possible. and the disappearance of the muchtalked-of surplus in the treasury is in part due to that. The proposition to turn around now and issue new bonds will meet with disfavor in many directions and it is uncertain what the effect would be on the party undertaking it Certainly an attempt on the part of congress to authorize the issuance of new bonds would excite much opposition. The disorders it would provoke would make the attempt to issue bonds embarrassing for the party responsible this move necessary might be put upon the outgoing administration. The reciprocity provision which Mr. Blaine succeeded in inserting in the McKinley bill is narrower than he proposed, and too narrow to accomplish protection against the developed manuarticles which the McKinley bill authorizes our government to use as reciprocity stock in trade is too restricted to enable us to make a satisfactory arrangement with Mexico. The reciprocity provision has worked admirably, as far as it goes. in increasing our trade sugar and hides, and can well and safely be extended until it puts the three Americas, in which this republic holds the manufacturing supremacy, upon a reciprocal free trade basis as nearly as possible. The question of a protective or revenue tariff or approximate free trade without European manufacturing competitors involves difficulties which do not embarass the proposition of reciprocal free trade between the three Americas with protection against the rest of the world.

President Harrison, several cabinet officers and the civil service commissioners are discussing the advisability of extending the provisions of the civil service law so as to put within the classified service many people not now within its protecting scope. As a general proposition the civil service law, it is stated, embraces, all government employes, except those who have to be confirmed by the senate and messengers. laborers, &c. By a special order of the president chiefs of divisions in the several departments have up to this time been exempted from this operation. The various subtreasurers, too, are now without its scope. These mat ters have been discussed quietly for some time, and there is a general concensus of opinion in departmental circles that they too should be put into the civil service. This can be done by an order of the president. He, it is said, has been considering this extension for some time and was only prevented from ordering it before the election by the sad circumstances with which he was surrounded for the previous six months

No greater tribute can be paid Secretary Rusk than is found in the figures made public in his annual report. In 1888 the balance of trade against the United States was over $28,000,000. In 1889 it was over $3,000,000. In 1890 the balance was in our favor and amounted to less than $40,000.000. Last year it was still on the right side and amounted 'to $202,000,000. Of this vast preponderance agriculture claims credit for nearly eighty per cent, and if Secretary Rusk had not been so modest he might have said truly that much of the tremendous increase was due to his keen-sightedness and administrative ability. Agricultural shipments during the year which ended last June exceed by the value of $150,000,000 the agricultural shipments of any previous year, and were worth $260,000,000 more than those of 1889, when the Wisconsin granger took charge of the department.

All the estimates compiled by the several executive departments, with the exception of those of the interior departments, are now in the hands of Secretary Foster of the treasury department, They are being printed for submittal to congress when it meets in December. These estimates, as far as they have been compiled by treasury officials. show an increase of $53,500,000 over the estimates for the same branches of the public service for the last fiscal year, which amounted to $409,708,693.

It is true that during the course of the compaign Mr. Cleveland declared: "I am a democrat," but he didn't say what kind of a democrat he is. There are democrats and democrats.

It is rather hard work for Mr. Cleve land to make an anti-monopoly speech. Every time he throws a brick he hits one of his millionarie friends square in the

In view of the fact that Sir Edwin Arnold will very likely be the next poet-laureate, one turns with interest to his most entertaining article in the DecemberCosmopolitan on a "Japanese Watering Place. The same number contains seven portraits of Tennyson and interesting views of his late home and surroundings. Thos, Gorman has penetrated the mysteries of the silent trapists' monastery with a profane kodak. A curious bit is tound in the for it. A reason being urged by young contrast of the double frontispieces Cable of Illinois and other democrats, which adorn the magazine-on one who favor an extra session, is that bonds | side the marvelous painting of "The should be issued at once, so that the re- | Conquerors," by Fritel, which attractsponsibility for the condition making ed so much attention at the last Paris salon, and on the other, "The Conquered," by Anton Dietrich; in the one the heroes of war moving down the vista of the centuries in magnificient array between ghasty lines of naked his purpose of substantial free trade corpses, the other the unfortunate of between three Americas with common all times and lands flocking beneath the gentle hand of the loving Christ. The factures and cheap manufacturing Cosmopolitan will mark its first edition labor of Europe. A statement by our of 150,000 copies-that for Januaryminister to Mexico shows that the list of by the offer of 1000 free scholarships. In return for introducing the Cosmopolitan into certain neighborhoods the Cosmopolitan offers to any young man or woman free tution, board, lodging and laundry at Yale, Vassar, Harvard, or any of the leading colleges, schools with countries which produce coffee, of art, music, medicine, or science.

ORIENTAL JEWELS.

Depth and Purity of Color More Desired

The reason that colors in an Oriental brooch or bracelet are so perfect is the same reason that an old Oriental carpet is better than any other. An Asiatic dislikes to be dazzled; to be blinded with glare; to have his eyes hurt and his brain heated by unsubdued effects of light. Consequently, a though he dyes his wools in intense colors, having few others, he so combines them. so mixes them with black and with that dark cream of which Europe has never caught the secret, that the total result is restful, and the very idea of glare or of full daylight on the patterns is entirely absent.

It is precisely the same with Oriental jewels. Their natural glare is kept down by combination and want of polish. The Asiatic who carved in jade and sank deep inscriptions into sapphires could have faceted precious stones as well as the cutters of Amsterdam, who until lately used no machinery, but he did not desire to do it. He wanted subdued effects, and made of the garnet a carbuncle-which is a miracle of color without glare-or he cut off, as we have seen in many emeralds, a mere corner, so the beholder, instead of being bothered with flashing green, should peep at will into green depths. We do not say he was altogether right -as regards the diamonds he was altogether wrong-but we may rely on it that he knew his business, and when he failed that he intended to fail. His intense appreciation of turquois was due not only to admiration for its color, which can be matched only by one or two flowers, but to the fact that it is the one gem that, for ail its brilliancy of color, does not hash. To this hour the high-class Asiatic loves the cat's eye as the European never can, because the light in it gives no pain, but reveals itself through a sort of dusky shade.

The European has made lovely jewels and will make lovlier ones, but he never has made jewels like those of the Asiatic, who with inimitable art can take from gold all its glitter without diminishing by one iota the perfection if its color, and will hand you a bit of mamel in which the green is as bright as the emerald, the red as flery as the ruby, and the whole as restful to the eye as a piece of turf.

The Oriental jeweler has another merit, and in it lies the secret of a possible great development in the demand for European jewelers' work. He always gives to his jewels a certainty of value. His gold is gold of unadulterated purity, his silver truly silver of the standard; his gems the stones. they are said to be, and his work paid for at an understood and invariable rate. The consequences are that he makes little, and that the market for his commoner wares never ceases, jewels being as much property as English sovereigns are—equally portable, nearly as capable of concealment, and as fixed in value. - Keystone.
