That most contemptible of beings, the dog poisoner, has been prowling around Plymouth.

One of the Chinese students at Ann Arbor, named Taiyn Cheo, disappeared one day last week, while laboring under some mental delusion.

According to the Observer, Saline's business men have a habit of collecting in front of the postoffice and getting into disgraceful altercations.

Most of our exchanges have an item reading something like this: "Coasting parties are enjoying themselves." They ought to add, "so are the doctors."

So harmless and inoffensive are the inhabitants of Ann Arbor, that the rabbits are coming in from the country for the purpose of escaping from the hunters.

It is said that a farmer brought a fat porker into Ypsilanti the other day and tried to trade it for a house and lot, but could find no one able to pay the difference.

The Ann Arbor water commissioners in a published card, ask consumers to be economical in the use of water. What an excuse for the small boy to kick against his mother's scrubbing.

Dexter people are trying hard not to be taken sick between the hours of 9 p. m. and 7 a. m., as the doctors have formed a trust and have doubled the price for visits between those hours.

The Toledo road is said to have a party of surveyors running a line from Whitmore Lake to Hamburg Junction by way of Base and Strawberry lakes. The line, if constructed, would be a great convenience to the public.—Ann Arbor Argus.

A Dexter man, while alive, was very good at shoveling snow. The other day his widow eulogized him by remarking that "John is at rest, and in a place where there is no snow to shovel." She is wondering yet why the people laughed.

The Toledo & Ann Arbor R. R. is now the connecting link of a splendid railroad system and trains loaded with the produce of the great mills of Minneapolis and St. Paul pass our doors daily on their way east and south.—Ann Arbor Courier.

Terrance Burns, of Ann Arbor, is the maddest man in that section of the country. His hens were just laying at a Nancy Hanks gait when some low down thief broke into the coop and carried off the most of them. At the present price of eggs this ought to be called embezzlement.

The students of Ann Arbor stuff cotton in their ears when they are so unfortunate as to have to go near the dental college. There are fifty-four chairs and they are filled all the time with suffering and howling humanity, who trust themselves in the hands of the fledglings.

A thief at Ann Arbor broke into a church and stole the contents of the box containing the subscriptions to the poor. Huge tracks were found in the snow leading to the window, and the officers first thought that an elephant had broken loose, but further search revealed the fact that Herman Stoll's boots fitted the tracks to perfection, and he was accordingly juggled.

The Ann Arbor Electric Light Company will make improvements in their plant this year, amounting to $13,000. This will include the putting in of a new 250 horse-power engine, when the present small engine will be used to supply power to manufactories, printing offices and other industries. A large new boiler will also be put in, and an additional smoke stack will be erected. It will occupy them most of the year in making these and other improvements for the benefit of their patrons.—Ann Arbor Argus.

"Why this rejoicing?" asked Lea Hedges, reining in her horse before Squire Condit's gate, and addressing Ellen, who stood with more than the sunset glow on her fair cheeks.

"Oh, Lea! good news! good news!" cried Ellen, running out and taking her friend's hand.

"Then do not keep it back, Ellen, for my very soul yearns for news good, bad or indifferent; anything to break the monotony of this dull life. Ah, if I were a man I should make my own news and give the world a fresh and startling supply every day, but being only a woman, a weaker vessel," as the dominie says, who—

Lea would have gone on at some length in her bantering, half-real, half-laughing way, had not Ellen Condit interrupted her by calling out:

"The Sea Hawk has just anchored in the harbor!"

"The Sea Hawk?" echoed Lea Hedges, and for the instant the color fled, under the excitement, from her cheeks, and she sprang from her horse, the spirited creature making no effort to get away, though there was no restraining hand on the bridle.

"Yes; she has been in sight for an hour, and Ralph has signaled that he is coming ashore at once. Mother has just gone in to order supper, and every servant on the place is hard at work to give their favorite a welcome."

"There, Ned, go home and tell Black Joe to put you in the stable."

Lea Hedges threw the bridle rein over the pommel of the saddle, and the intelligent horse, with a snort that no combination of letters could convey an idea of, tossed up his head and walked away with comical dignity.

"You will come into the house and wait," said Ellen, encircling her friend's waist with her left arm, and making as if she were going to the house.

"No, my love, we shall take the other direction," said Lea.

"No, to the shore. Let us greet the brave boys before their feet press the soil. Ten months since they sailed away. It has seemed like ten years. The Sea Hawk carried with her all the life and glory of the island. I pray that the pirates have torn none of them from us."

This was said as the girls hastened down to the beach, a few hundred yards below Squire Condit's house.

"The pirates have not taken the Sea Hawk," said Ellen, who, though as much rejoiced at the ship's arrival, had neither her friend's enthusiasm nor her fluency of expression.

"I knew the pirates never could take her; they might destroy her, but she would go down with the flag flying and every living man at his post," said Lea.

"The people are cheering and the bells are ringing, Lea."

"Aye, but the cheers are all too faint to express my feeling, and the bell tinkles when it should clash, and clang, and boom. Hark, a gun from the ship! See the smoke rising from the port like a monster's breath on a frosty morning. There is music in that sound. How did men fight before the roar of cannon set the warrior blood to throbbing in their veins?"

Ellen Condit did not attempt to answer her friend's question. By this time they could see a boat lowered away from the Sea Hawk, into which six rowers and four officers got.

The boat shot away from the ship, and headed straight for the beach where the girls—now the center of a large crowd of whites and gaily attired Indians—were standing.

From the stern sheets Capt. Denham waved his hat, and the people answered with a cheer.

The men at the oars threw all their strength into the quivering blades, till the boat at each stroke seemed fairly to leap from the water.

While the Captain's cutter was still several hundred feet from the shore he recognized among the throng the faces of Ellen, his adopted sister, and of Lea, his old playmate and friend.

He rose in his place and raised his hat, and the first and second officers did the same.

The people on shore supposed the greeting to be general, and they at once sent up a cheer, which the men at the oars answered, and as they shouted the boat seemed to leap from the water, as if it, too, were animated, and shared in the joy at again touching the soil on which it was built.

Captain Denham sprang ashore the instant the boat's bow grated on the white beach, and the people were not surprised to see him catch Ellen in his arms, for was she not his sister?

Lieutenant Dayton was near him, and his arms were about Lea, whose fine eyes were now full of tears of joy. Valentine was her own cousin, some said he was her lover, but of that this is not the time to speak.

Every man at the oars was native to the place, and had mother, sweetheart, or sister to greet him.

It would be a waste of time to describe what the most prosaic reader can easily imagine.

The men laughed and shook hands again and again.

The women smiled through their tears and seemed never to weary of repeating the first greeting.

And in the midst of it all, down came Squire Condit and Dr. Hedges, and to them the welcomes were repeated, and the gathering people cheered till the increased volume of sound rolled out to the ship. Here, the watching sailors—forced to stay on board—caught the joyous contagion, and springing into the rigging, they shouted in a way that called out all the crew of the stranger, who cheered also.

To speak of the feast and dances that followed that night would take a good-sized volume.

The officers of "The Stranger," as we shall call the other ship for the want of a better name, were invited, and how this was brought about, we shall now proceed to explain.

CHAPTER III. A NEARER VIEW OF THE OFFICERS AND CREW OF THE STRANGER.

While there was no name visible on the bow or stern of the stranger—at least to those unable to make a close examination—on the caps of the sailors, on the coverings of the upper-deck guns, and on the many small boats swinging in readiness from the davits was the word "Wanderer."

As on the Sea Hawk, everything on board the Wanderer was in the state of perfect order which old sailors designate as "ship-shape."

The crew were powerful, fierce-looking fellows, and, though there was not one man with gray hair or beard visible, all were in that golden prime of life when experience restrains the impulses of youth, without lessening its activity or vigor.

The majority of the crew was decidedly English, but accent and face told that the minority was composed of many nationalities; not an unusual thing in this day when England, in order to recruit her warships, sent press gangs on shore, and, if occasion required, did not hesitate to force into her service the sailors of merchantmen overtaken on the high seas.

When nations became robbers in self-defense, it is not to be wondered at that pirates were plenty, as much for their contempt for law as their desire for plunder.

With one or two exceptions the officers were men between 30 and 40 years of age, and there was that in their manner that told of perils daringly met in the past; and the adventurous spirit in their stern, restless eyes showed that, like their beautiful ship, they were wanderers, impelled on and on by the spirit of adventure, which, though rife in that age, cannot be said to be peculiar to any.

Capt. William Fox, commander of the Wanderer, looked like a man in every way qualified for his duties. He was about 35 years of age, rather slender and of medium height, with hair and beard that would be called "golden" by the poetic and "red" by those of a prosaic turn. His eyes were blue, but with that steely glint that is rarely seen except in eyes of gray.

Capt. Fox must have been in these waters before, for when a yacht came alongside offering a pilot, he shouted down:

"I know the channel, and I can't fail if I keep in the wake of the Sea Hawk."

He seemed the very personification of activity, but it was activity without nervousness. His short, quick commands were given with decision, and obeyed with the promptness and regularity of fine mechanism.

After the anchors were down, and the sails furled, Capt. Fox said to a black-eyed officer, some years younger than himself:

"Come to my cabin, Mr. Frenault. I wish to speak with you."

"Aye, aye, sir," replied Lieut. Frenault, touching his cap and following the Captain down the companion-way.

The cabin of the Wanderer was quite in keeping as to neatness with the other parts of the ship, but the furniture was such as even an admiral could not have afforded. The place was crowded with works of art. The walls were covered with pictures, the most incongruous religious pieces being hung side by side with fierce battle pictures, and rude cupids placed in companionship with winged cherubs and seraphic madonnas.

Through the open doors of some of the staterooms opening into the cabin the same lavish adornments could be seen, giving the idea of a floating art-gallery, rather than the quarters of officers on a ship of war.

And this lavish profusion of wealth was visible in the persons of the officers, certainly in the two who now retired to an inner cabin.

Their fingers were half covered with rings, in which emeralds of deepest tint and diamonds of purest water flashed, and the buckles on their shoes, or "pumps," as they were then called, were masses of the same gems.

After closing the door of the cabin behind him Captain Fox pointed the lieutenant to a chair and sat down himself.

This done, he deliberately pulled off his pumps, and drawing a plainer pair from a drawer near by he put them on. He then removed his finger rings and threw them, with the shoes he had taken off, into a box.

"We must put away these things for the present, Mr. Frenault," said Captain Fox. "It is well enough to wear them at sea, where the sight of them will inspire our men to deeds of greater valor, but here they may create suspicion, and that is the very thing we must avert."

"Of course, sir," replied Lieutenant Frenault, and he at once removed his jewels, going into another room to remove his pumps. Coming back, he asked:

"Shall I instruct the other officers, Captain?"

"No; I have ordered them to wear nothing that does not accord with their rank as officers in the service of the good Queen Anne."

Captain Fox hesitated, and Mr. Frenault nodded, and said:

"I understand, sir."

"I expected that Captain Denham would have done me the honor of a visit the instant the Sea Hawk came to anchor."

"Gad, sir, he would have visited us before that if he knew who we were," said Lieutenant Frenault, with a low laugh.

The Captain frowned, bit his lips, and, evidently ill-pleased with his subordinate's levity, he continued as if he had not heard it.

"Perhaps I should not blame Captain Denham, for this is his home, and the home of most of his officers and men, and it is natural that he and they should hurry ashore to see their kinsmen and sweethearts."

"A sweetheart in Denham's case, sir, for, as we know, he has no kin here."

"You forget," said the Captain, tapping the table with the tips of his fingers and frowning.

"Pardon me, sir, but I did not think," said the lieutenant, apologetically, "that it would be amiss to allude, under the circumstances, to what we both know about Captain Denham's ancestors."

"It is amiss, sir. Zounds! if an echo of the facts came to his ears, all our great schemes would crumble to ashes like the Dead Sea apples, even though we had them ripe in our grasp, and we are near that now. Let me speak if there be speaking necessary; it is your duty to act." And now the captain brought his clenched hand down on the table.

"I have never been below, sir, when there was work to do aloft," replied Lieutenant Frenault, his dark eyes showing that he did not at all relish his superior's rebuke.

"Very well." The captain's manner was mild in an instant, showing that he was an actor as well as a sailor. "We must go ashore to-night, and pay our respects to the authorities. In the meantime, I shall send a note on board with my compliments to Denham. Get the cutter ready with a picked crew, and after supper I will go ashore, taking with me yourself and Harry Ludlow. Full dress, mind you."

"And side arms?" asked Mr. Frenault, as he rose to leave.

"How, sir, can an officer in her majesty's service be in full dress without his side arms?" snapped the captain, his eyes flashing again.

"True, sir."

A rap at the door, and before Frenault could say another word Captain Fox shouted:

"Come in!"

A handsome lad of sixteen came in, his cap in one hand and a no e in the other.

"Well, Don?"

"The cards of two gentlemen who have just come aboard, sir," replied the cabin boy, Don, speaking with a strong Scotch accent, and handing the paper to the captain.

"Ah, by the Spirit of Blake!" cried the captain, here are the village fathers come to do us courtesy. They shall have a royal welcome. Stay, Frenault, and help me receive them. Stand by, Don, we shall need your services at once."

The captain's face and eyes lit up. He was all animation now.

His moods were like those of an Alpine sky, or would have been were they not the direct effect of his strong will.

He sprang into his private cabin, and in less than a minute he came out again in a dress coat, a regulation etapeau under his arm, and a straight stiff-sword belted to his hip.

He hurried on deck, where Squire Condit, in a blue coat with brass buttons, knee-breeches, silk hose, low shoes with silver buckles, and a well powdered wig with a pendant black ribbon, was looking about him with that air of awe a landsman shows when first he steps on board a ship-of-war.

Dr. Hedges, except that his coat was bottle-green—a color at that time affected by the medical profession—was dressed exactly like his friend; and save as to some difference in stature—the former being short and stout—they might have passed for twin brothers.

"I am Goodwill Condit," said the squire advancing to the captain with a bow, intended to be stately, and his right hand extended, "holding a commission under her majesty—whom may God preserve—as Justice of the Peace in the County of Suffolk, in the Province of New York."

Quinine as a Protection Against Cholera.

Dr. Laurie, a physician well known in India, long ago asserted that he would stake his reputation on the efficacy of quinine as a prophylactic against cholera. A five-grain dose of this drug every morning while the disease is about is, he held, a sure preventive. During the epidemic of cholera in India last year, Dr. Behr made certain investigations which resulted in the discovery of the presence in the blood, etc., of cholera patients, of a peculiar parasitic protozoon or microbe, although whether this is the cause or result of the disease has yet to be determined. He found that this organism could not live in strong solutions of quinine, and he further found that the protective virtues of quinine were amply demonstrated during the epidemic. He now commits himself unreservedly to the opinion expressed by Dr. Laurie, and recommends the use of quinine as a prophylactic in addition to sulphurous acid. It has been his practice for years to administer one drachm doses of acid every three hours to all the inmates of a house in which the disease breaks out during the time the patient is in the house. He has given it in about 7,000 instances, and for the last three years he has not seen cholera occur in any case in which it was used. If quinine is really the effective prophylactic against cholera that these eminent authorities have such excellent cause to believe it to be, this fell disease has lost its terrors, for nothing is easier and less harmful than taking a five-grain dose of the drug during the epidemic of the disease.

Took Their Breath Away.

Sir Benjamin Baker, one of the engineers of the Forth Bridge, has related to the London News the fact that during the progress of the work several of the workmen fell from the bridge 150 or 160 feet into the water without being killed or even stunned. They had breath enough left in their bodies to catch a rope when it was thrown to them, but not enough breath to speak for the next fortnight.

An Expert's Opinion.

Our readers have doubtless noticed the numerous discussions by the scientists and hygienists as to the relative value of the various baking powders. A careful sifting of the evidence leaves no doubt as to the superiority of the Royal Baking Powder in purity, wholesomeness and strength, from a scientific standpoint. An opinion, however, that will have perhaps greater influence with our practical housekeepers, is that given by Marion Harland, the well-known and popular writer upon matters pertaining to the science of domestic economy, of housekeeping, and of home cooking. In a letter published in the Philadelphia Ladies' Home Journal, this writer says: "I regard the Royal Baking Powder as the best manufactured and in the market, so far as I have any experience in the use of such compounds. Since the introduction of it into my kitchen I have used no other in making biscuits, cakes, etc., and have entirely discarded for such purposes the home-made combination of one-third soda, two-thirds cream of tartar."

"Every box has been in perfect condition when it came into my hands, and the contents have given complete satisfaction. It is an act of simple justice, and also a pleasure, to recommend it unqualifiedly to American housewives."

MARION HARLAND.

For Shipping Belts.

Belts that slip can be cured by covering the pulleys with canvas. Wrap the canvas twice around the pulley, using the following mixture to keep it in place. White glue, six pounds; white lead, in oil, two pounds; nitric acid, one-fourth ounce. Dissolve the glue in two quarts of soft water, mix in the white lead, add the acid, and employ the mixture hot.

Just the Thing.

This is an expression the traveling public generally use when they find something that is exactly what they want. This expression applies directly to the Wisconsin Central Line, which is now admitted by all to be "The Route" from Chicago to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Ashland, Duluth, and all points in the Northwest. Their double daily train service and fine equipment offers inducement which cannot be surpassed.

This is the only line running both through Pullman First-class and Tourist sleepers from Chicago to Pacific Coast points without change.

United States Government

World's Fair Souvenir Coins—

The Official Souvenir of the Great Exposition—

5,000,000 of which were donated to the World's Columbian Exposition by the Government, are being rapidly taken by an enthusiastically patriotic people.

As there early promised to be a demand for these Souvenirs that would render them very valuable in the hands of speculators, the Exposition Authorities decided to place the price at and sell them direct to the people, thus realizing $5,000,000, and using the additional money for the further development of the Fair.

Considering the fact that there were but 5,000,000 of these coins to be distributed among 65,000,000 people, in this country alone (to say nothing of the foreign demand,) and that many have already been taken, those wishing to purchase these mementoes of our Country's Discovery and of the grandest Exposition ever held, should secure as many as they desire at once.

Realizing that every patriotic American will want one or more of these coins, and in order to make it convenient for him to get them, we have made arrangements to have them sold throughout the country by all the leading Merchants and Banks. If not for sale in your town, send $1.00 each for not less than five coins, by Post-office or Express Money-order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft, with instructions how to send them to you, all charges prepaid, to

In Olden Times

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

Heavily Freight.

Trailing skirts for street use seem to be coming into vogue again, and the New York Tribune makes a patriotic attempt to stem the tide by printing a list of the articles which such a train collected in a walk down town:

- 2 cigar ends.
- 9 cigarette do.
- A part of a pork-pie.
- 7 hairpins.
- 4 toothpicks.
- 1 stem of a clay pipe.
- 3 fragments of orange-peel.
- 1 slice of cat's-meat.
- Half the sole of a boot.
- 1 plug of chewed tobacco.
- Straw, mud, scraps of paper, and miscellaneous street refuse, ad libitum.

Pain Self-Inflicted.

This is supposed to be an age of enlightenment. Yet the half-civilized persistence with which hosts of people keep dosing themselves on small occasion argues a blind credulity characteristic of the dark ages. Constipation has a myriad of alleged cures, which in a nauseous dose merely evacuate the bowels—this operation being preceded by pain and followed by weakness—the latter an effect of their excessive, violent action. Podyphyllin, aloes, gamboge embodied in the form of pills, blue mass, calomel—these are among the violent medicaments for which should be substituted Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the finest, most genial laxative extant, never gripping, and resembling in its action an effort of nature in her happiest mood. This benign and thorough medicine is also an antidote to malaria and rheumatism, gives strength to the system, renders digestion perfect, and regulates the kidneys and bladder.

THE water that makes the foam under the mill-dam is not the water that turns the wheel of the mill.

THERE are a large number of hygienic physicians who claim that disease is always the result of a transgression of Nature's laws. The proprietors of Garfield Tea are both physicians, and have devoted years to teaching the people how to avoid sickness by following Nature's laws. They give away with every package of Garfield Tea a little book which they claim will enable all persons, if directions are followed, to avoid sickness of all kinds, and to have no need for Garfield Tea or any other medicine.

A DISTURBANCE

Isn't what you want, if your stomach and bowels are irregular. That's about all you get, though, with the ordinary pill. It may relieve you for the moment, but you're usually in a worse state afterward than before.

This is just where Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets do most good. They act in an easy and natural way, very different from the huge, old-fashioned pills. They're not only pleasant, but there's no reaction afterward, and their help lasts. One little sugar-coated pellet for a gentle laxative or corrective—three for a cathartic. Constipation, indigestion, bilious attacks, dizziness, Sick and Bilious Headaches, are promptly relieved and cured.

They're the smallest, the easiest to take—and the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You pay only for the good you get.

JUSTICE LAMAR DEAD.
Expired While Visiting at the Home of a Relative in Georgia.

Justice Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus Lamar died at Macon, Ga., on Monday evening. His sudden death was a great shock to the community. The Judge had been in poor health for some time, but seemed to be mending during the last two weeks. About eight o'clock, says a dispatch, he took his overcoat, intending to come into the city from the residence of W. H. Virgin, where he had been a guest. He was met at the door by a friend, Dr. Llewellyn, with whom he returned to the sitting-room. At that time, and during all the afternoon, he was in good spirits. At dinner, at 6:30, he had a good appetite. Dr. Llewellyn left the house about 8 o'clock, and a few minutes later the Justice was seized with violent pains in the heart and soon died. For months back he had been in such health as to take no more than a perfunctory interest in the Supreme Court proceedings.

JUSTICE L. Q. C. LAMAR

but he took his seat the usual decision day. He left Washington for the South about a month ago. Since then he had missed the sessions of the court, his absence causing some delay in the decision of the late front case, wherein the city of Chicago and the Illinois Central Railroad were the participants. Recently Judge Lamar was thought to have considerably improved. L. Q. C. Lamar was the most conspicuous Southern man in public life. A native of Georgia and for thirty-five years a resident of Mississippi, he had been closely identified with the varying fortunes of his section throughout its most eventful period and until his death he more than any other man typified to the American mind the best there is in Southern culture and Southern statesmanship. His career was a varied and an interesting one. He had been lawyer, journalist, college professor, legislator, planter, soldier, and diplomat, but was chiefly distinguished for the eloquence of his oratory and the breadth of his scholarship.

DEATH OF BISHOP BROOKS.
Succumbs to an Attack of Diphtheria After Four Days' Illness.

Bishop Phillips Brooks died at his home in Boston of diphtheria, after an illness of but four days' duration. In the death of Bishop Brooks, says a Boston correspondent, the Protestant Episcopal Church loses one of its most brilliant and progressive divines. The Bishop has occupied advanced ground among the liberal thinkers of his church ever since he was ordained to the ministry in 1859, and his "low church" views were so pronounced as to make him conspicuous. He frequently preached in churches of other denominations, and his brilliant pulpit oratory made him powerful for good. His remarkable ability was early recognized. He was the object of frequent calls, was offered a Harvard professorship, and in 1863 declined the office of assistant bishop of Pennsylvania, to which he had been elected. A conscientious toiler in the spiritual vineyard, he chose to remain with his Boston parish. In 1891 Phillips Brooks was elected to succeed the late Bishop Paddock, of the diocese of Massachusetts, and his selection was indorsed with enthusiastic pleasure by churchgoers of all denominations. Bishop Brooks was a man of magnificent physique. He was six feet four inches tall, and of proportionate build. Conspicuous among men both mentally and physically, and endowed with a heart that matched his figure whose departure from life will be widely mourned. He was in his 58th year.

PHILLIPS BROOKS

None But Royal

BAKING POWDER is absolutely pure. No other equals it, or approaches it in leavening strength, purity, or wholesomeness. (See U. S. Gov't Reports.) No other is made from cream of tartar specially refined for it and chemically pure. No other makes such light, sweet, finely-flavored, and wholesome food. No other will maintain its strength without loss until used, or will make bread or cake that will keep fresh so long, or that can be eaten hot with impunity, even by dyspeptics. No other is so economical.

The Baking Powders now being offered in this vicinity, with the statement that they are "as good as Royal," have been shown by the official analyses to be composed of alum and detrimental to health.

The official chemists of the United States and Canada, State analysts, municipal boards of health, and physicians indorse the great qualities of the Royal Baking Powder.

Shells for Cameos.
For cameo cutting various kinds of shells are used. There are the bull's mouth, which has a red inner coat, or what is known as a sardonyx ground; the black helmet, which also has a so-called onyx ground, and which shows up white on a dark claret color; the horned helmet, white on an orange-yellow ground, and the queen conch, with a pink ground. The latter shell is about ten inches long, with a rose-colored aperture and an extremely broad lip rounded above.

The bull's mouth and the black helmet are the best shells, for the horned helmet are apt to separate from the ground, or to "double," as the French workmen express it. The queen conch seldom has the two colors distinctly marked from each other, and the pink of the ground fades on exposure to the light. The red color of the bull's mouth extends but a short distance within the mouth of the shell, and becomes paler as it proceeds inward; hence this shell affords only a single cameo large enough for a brooch and several small pieces for shirt studs, while the black helmet furnishes on an average about five brooches and several stud pieces. The queen conch yields only a single piece.

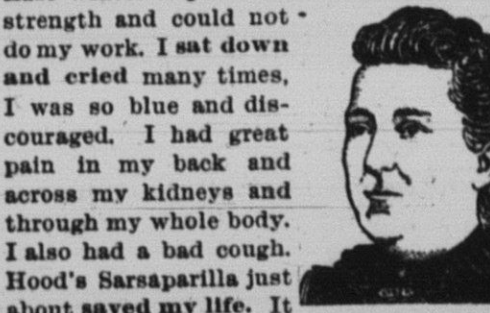

Cassid flammea, which is about six inches long, cassid decussata, and cassid tuberosa, which are white upon a dark claret color, are also occasionally used. The bull's mouth shells are derived from India and Ceylon, and the black helmets and queen conches from the West Indies.

The Question
Of how to visit the World's Fair without great inconvenience and loss in securing comfortable hotel accommodations at reasonable prices is one that interests everybody. This problem has been solved so far as subscribers to THE SATURDAY BLADE and THE CHICAGO LEDGER are concerned. All annual subscribers to either of these papers now receive certificates which entitle them to the privileges of the "W. D. Boyce World's Fair Bureau of Information," operated solely by W. D. Boyce, publisher of THE SATURDAY BLADE and CHICAGO LEDGER. When certificate holders reach Chicago they go at once, at any hour of the day or night, to the office, 115-117 Fifth avenue, where they register. Here reception rooms are provided for both ladies and gentlemen, where mail can be directed, correspondence attended to, baggage and parcels cared for, and where correct information can be obtained about the various ways of getting around the city and to and from the fair grounds. Some trustworthy and competent person will also accompany each certificate holder in search of a boarding place and secure for them rooms at whatever price desired. BLADE and LEDGER subscribers will be guarded against all sorts of impositions during their visit at the World's Fair. For these services no charge will be made; they are absolutely free. Subscription price of either of these papers is $2 per year. Sample copies sent free. Address the publisher, W. D. Boyce, 115-117 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Trade Mark Case.
Judge Thayer, of the United States Circuit Court at St. Louis, recently granted a perpetual injunction, and reference to a master to assess the damages sustained by the plaintiff, in a suit against Joseph Tegethoff, instituted by the Hostetter Company of Pittsburg. Defendant Tegethoff is restrained from making or selling imitation Hostetter Stomach Bitters in any manner whatever; either in bulk, by the gallon, or by reselling empty Hostetter bottles; and from the use of the word "Hostetter" in connection with any article of stomach bitters, thus protecting the plaintiff in the exclusive use of the word "Hostetter" as a "Trade-name."

Kind reader, did you ever stop and think what the publisher of a paper has to meet in his daily efforts to supply you with mental food? Did you ever think you had no part to perform to make your village or city paper a welcome visitor? Did the thought ever enter your mind that no two of the readers of the local paper need exactly the same mental food? Did you ever stop and think that it is much easier to find fault then to make a faultless paper? Did you ever stop and consider that it takes the handling of thousands upon thousands of little pieces of metal, called type, every day? Did you as you unfolded your newspaper stop and think that it requires hard and laborious work of minds and hands to inform you what transpires in your neighborhood? Did you ever stop and think, that he who supplies you with the events of the hour cannot cease from constant labor to bring the paper to your door? Did you ever stop and think that you who read can do much to help make your local paper bright and interesting? Take a pencil and paper and put down any matter of news in your daily rounds, on your farms, in your shops, behind your counters, at your fireside, hand or send them to your local paper. Try it and report.—Ex.

Mrs. Mary LeFurge Boyd.

Mary LeFurge was born June 24, 1837, in Seneca county, N. Y., and in 1851 came to Michigan, making her home in Lima.

November 20, 1854, she was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Boyd and for thirty-nine years she has been a faithful companion to him.

For more than a year she has been suffering severely. Many times friends have almost given up hope, but through it all her trust has been firm, ready to go or stay as the Master should decree. It is pleasant to think that the Heavenly Father had granted her the past month or two, sufficient strength to look out upon the bright world once more, and as it were, even if unconscious to herself, bid adieu to the scenes and places and friends she had loved so well.

Many are there to whom she has been a true friend and helper in times of sickness and trouble. Some have already crossed the dark river and even now have welcomed her on that golden shore. Those who still remain will cherish with deepened feelings her many kindnesses.

Her death occurred Saturday, January 28, and the funeral was held at the house Tuesday.

Wednesday morning Manager Wilkinson received a telegram stating that Edward Maro was very ill and consequently another date would have to be made for his appearance here.

Indelible Ink.

An ink that will not fade. Five cents worth of nitrate of silver placed in a small vial, pour on one tablespoon cider vinegar, and let it stand for a day when it will be ready for use. Before marking the goods dissolve one teaspoon of soda in half teacup of water, wet the cloth to be marked with this solution, iron it dry, then write the name with a steel or quill pen, pass a hot iron over it and it will bring the name out at once. The beauty of this ink is that it is easily prepared, and never fades nor eats the cloth.

We desire the correct address of every intelligent housewife. We would like to arrange with one person in each town to compile a list of such names for us. For this service we will give a year's subscription to "Woman's Work," for each thousand inhabitants according to last census. If your town has a population of 2,000, a list of names for it will entitle you to receive Woman's Work for two years, or will entitle yourself and some friend to receive it one year each. If your town has 5,000 inhabitants you will be entitled to receive Woman's Work for five years or yourself and four friends to receive it one year each. Never a better chance to make presents.

We have special blanks prepared for this work, and these must be used in every case. They will be sent with two sample copies of Woman's Work, on receipt of ten cents in stamps. We can arrange with only one person in each town or city, and first applicants always have preference.

Address at once, Woman's Work, Athens, Georgia.

THE FAVORITES.

Why is sweet Phyllis, far and wide,
The favorite of the town?
Why does she meet, on every side,
A smile and not a frown?
Is not that that fair maid the most Of wealth or fame possesses,
But this—that she can letters post
And not read the addresses.

Why is this plain Priscilla sought
By many ardent lovers,
Who hitherto have not been caught
By charm so far above hers?
Is not her eyes—a common brown,
Albeit, bright and sunny—
But not another girl in town
So careful of money.

And every one likes Phoebe, though
She wears not silk nor satin,
And all her cultured lovers know
She knows not Greek nor Latin.
But though so simple and demure,
'Tis nevertheless conceded,
That though she's weak in literature
The bread she bakes is splendid.

Another maiden much admired
Is Ruth, the farmer's daughter,
And men by other girls desired
In marriage oft have sought her.
For though they like to flirt with Kate,
Her prettier, wittier neighbor,
They much prefer one for a mate
Well used to honest labor.

THE INDIVIDUALITY OF THE HAIRPIN.

Every Woman Knows Her Own, Just as She Knows Her Own Baby.

Five hundred millions of hairpins!
That is what the women of this land do annually buy, beg or borrow.
Now a hairpin never wears out. It sometimes becomes pale and bent with age, but its avoirdupois is all there. What therefore becomes of these successive millions?

During the past ten years 5,000, 000,000 of hairpins have been made and sold. At present there are only about 100,000,000 in circulation.
Now where—where are the other 4,900,000,000? They have been sown broadcast from Maine to California, and have left not a trace behind.
Of course some of them are picked up and restored to their sphere of usefulness, but most women are as shy of adopting strange hairpins as they are of accepting an unidentified toothbrush. The hairpins therefore go to make up the flotsam and jetsam thrown out by the tide of humanity and dumped into the waste places of the suburbs to form new town lots.

And, speaking of hairpins becoming pale with age, why is it that when a package of new ones can be bought for a few cents most women cling to their old ones until every vestige of color has gone, and he who runs may easily count their gleaming heads?

And, again, can any one explain how it is that every woman knows her own hairpins just as she knows her own baby, no matter how numerous and similar its companions?
And, furthermore, all women have at least one pet hairpin. It is regarded with religious care from year to year. It is the keystone in the construction of her coiffure.
Other generations of hairpins come and go, but that particular one is looked after too zealously to be lost.
Generosity, friendship, filial devotion—nothing is strong enough to induce a woman to part with her treasure. She will laugh and offer you her entire stock, but will reserve her pet. Every boarding school girl can tell how she has rescued her particular hairpin joy from the bureau —nay, from the very locks of some friend who had abstracted it.

There are a great many points of resemblance between a hairpin and a man. A hairpin, for instance, is a sort of a jipped. So is a man—sometimes a very bad sort. Some hairpins are straight, some crooked—a resemblance to men which need not be pointed out. Extreme sharpness and extreme bluntness are equally as disagreeable in hairpins as in masculine manners. Both are very unreliable—not likely to stay where they are put. And last, but by no means least, both are made for women. It is the reason for their existence, and but for her they would languish on the top shelves of utter neglect.—
New York World.

Good Reason.

She—That odious Mrs. Newtrot seems to think more of her dog than of her boy.
He—Oh, well, the dog has a pedigree.
—Life.

Yellow snuff is used largely by the Canadian French girls, who compose a majority of the employees in the cotton mills all over the United States, particularly in New England.

Why the Neighbors Changed.

Before the boy came we always liked our neighbors very much indeed, but that only shows how you can be fooled, for if ever any people threw off the sheep's covering from their wolfish forms those people did.
You never in your life saw the amount of persecution they subjected our boy to. They not only allowed their children to fight him and throw sand in his eyes all for nothing (for he told us so), but they told the most malicious falsehoods on him up and down the street.

They said that he fought every boy in the neighborhood, chunked their chickens and sauced their reverend selves. Made him out a real bad boy. The idea! And his own grandmother says that he is the best boy in the world, and she knows good children, for she raised us.

There is nothing like keeping out of bad company, so we moved out of that street. We got from the fry-pan into the fire. The people we went among were worse than the ones we left, and we hadn't been there six days before they fell upon that poor little boy of ours like so many harpies.

And so it has continued—and right now we wouldn't be speaking to that little sandy haired woman, who lives vis-a-vis to us if it were not that we are trying to cultivate a spirit of Christian forbearance.—Philadelphia Times.

Manuscripts in the Kairoun Library.

There can be no two opinions as to the presence of a very large number of ancient manuscripts in the Kairoun library, and these volumes—a creditable thing for the lazy and indolent Moors—are certainly the objects of very great care. The trustees of the Kairoun have a regular staff of custodians chosen from the university professors and teachers, who are charged with the safe-keeping of the books, and the cellars are annually inspected and the books repaired when the necessity arises. I should say that, bar accidents of fire in the future, when the library is thrown open the manuscripts will be found in a very fair state of preservation.

Upon another point my informants all agreed. They said that in the library there are quite a number of books written in strange, unknown tongues. Generally, my genial Tho-la friends asserted, they were written in Greek, but on my showing them a book in German they were unanimously of opinion that this was the language in which the volumes were written. So I am forced to the conclusion that any writing which is not Arabic is Greek to the Fokies and Thobas of Fez.—Fortnightly Review.

A Rude Shock for an Athlete.

It goes a little hard with a young man who has seen his name in all the newspapers as captain of an eight, nine or an eleven, whose age, weight and diet, girth about the waist, biceps, muscles and hour of going to bed are all matters of absorbing public interest for a length of time, who is interviewed by the ubiquitous reporter, photographed by the snap shot camera fiend and after whose health gray bearded alumni anxiously inquire when they meet around the lunch table at Parker's—of course it is a little hard for him to presently discover that he is no longer famous and can walk the street without creating a sensation. But many things are a little hard that are a good deal salutary. Distinction of every kind is relative if not temporary. This fact cannot be found out too soon.—Boston Advertiser.

Mrs. Cameron's "Oenone."

The story of Mrs. Cameron's "Oenone" is this: Mrs. Cameron was at Oxford. While walking in the "High" she passed a very beautiful girl. Going up to her she asked,
"Who are you?" "I'm Mrs. Donkin's cook," replied the maid. Mrs. Cameron got her address, called on Mrs.
Donkin and obtained permission to take the girl to Freshwater for a time as a model. She is Oenone.—

Perseverance in a Bachelor Rewarded.

The old fellow hustled up to the desk of the marriage license clerk, and without any formality or preliminaries he began, "Give me a marriage license," he said, "and give it to me quick." "Who for?" asked the ungrammatical clerk. "For myself of course." The clerk gave a long whistle of surprise. "How old are you?" he inquired, opening up his book. "Seventy-five." "Ever been married before?" "No; this is my first offense." "What the mischief does a man at your age want to marry for?" "Because he can."

"It isn't such a difficult thing to marry, is it?" "May not be for some folks," said the aged applicant hurriedly, "but it seems so for me. I made my first attempt when I was twenty, and for fifty-five years I've kept steady at it, but I never could get a woman to say 'yes' until last night, and I'll be swizzled if I know how this one happened to, and I don't care. It's enough if she did, and she did, and now I want to get that license and have her clinched before she backs out. I've got her outside in my wagon, with a policeman watching her, and I want you to hustle with the license. The preacher's waiting, and if there's no preventing Providence you bet I'll not fill a bachelor's grave. Here's your money. Goodby," and the happy man grabbed his license and ran for the wagon.—Detroit Free

Congressman Mitchell of Milwaukee Wins the Wisconsin Prize—Novel Means of Coercing a Grand Rapids Flier—Distribution of the Chilian Indemnity.

Martin Succeeds Plumb.

A MOVE was made Wednesday by the Democrats in the Senate and Populists in the House of the Kansas Legislature which removes the Senatorial fight from Topeka to Washington, and will probably result in a settlement of the dispute concerning the organization of the Legislature. By a vote of 86 to 6, in which the Republican Senators did not participate, John Martin, of Topeka, was named for the United States Senate. Before the result was announced Senator Baker, Republican, asked that he be permitted to have his vote recorded. The presiding officer said: "The Senator is too late with his request; the vote has been counted and will be so announced." This ruling and the fact that nine of the Populist Representatives hold contested seats is the ground upon which the Republicans will contest Martin's seat. Martin is a Democrat, and is elected to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Plumb, which does not expire until March 4, 1895.

Mitchell Wins Out.

On the 31st ballot the deadlock was broken in the Wisconsin Senatorial struggle at Madison, Thursday, by the nomination in Democratic caucus of Congressman Mitchell, of Milwaukee. Bragg's support wavered, three of his adherents going to Mitchell, and twelve of Knight's followers cast their votes for the Cream City statesman. The result was a great surprise, for Mitchell's chances had been regarded worthless for many days. The final vote was Mitchell, 46; Bragg, 32; Knight, 1.

At a meeting of Populists, at Los Angeles, Cal., resolutions were adopted denouncing Congressman-elect Cannon and Assemblyman T. J. Kerns, of Los Angeles, as traitors, and formally rejecting them out of the party. This action was taken because Kerns voted for White (Dem.) for United States Senator, when, as the Populists claim, he was pledged to vote for their candidate.

THE Michigan Trust Company believes in taking care of its wards. A Grand Rapids photographer, a married man, according to a dispatch, has been flirting with a young widow, a ward of the company's, and as there was no way to reach the fellow, the company hired two able-bodied officers to watch him and give him a sound thrashing every time he molested the lady. The officers have performed their duty faithfully and the company is defending them in a suit for assault.

THE Navy Department has refused to make payment of the Chilian indemnity to any one except the sailors of the Baltimore themselves and—in case of the two deceased sailors—to their legal heirs. As far as the department officials are concerned, the beneficiaries will be under no obligations to pay attorney fees. The department considers the indemnity in the nature of a present to the injured sailors and not as the payment of the claims originally filed in the State Department by a San Francisco lawyer. The sum of $10,000 each is the amount recommended by the naval board to be allotted to the legal heirs of the two deceased sailors. This leaves $55,000 to be distributed among the other sailors.

JUSTICE HARTLETT, of the Brooklyn Supreme Court, has rendered an opinion declaring that "Pat" Gleason is not Mayor of Long Island City. The Justice, however, says he is not satisfied that Horatio S. Sanford is legally qualified to act as Mayor and has designated the President of the Council to act in that capacity pending a settlement of the dispute.

At New York, good beef is scarce and high-priced, eggs maintain their high price, and other produce is coming into the city so slowly that dealers exact a few cents per pound or measure above the usual figures upon most of it. It is believed that before there is any reason to put up the price of coal because of local scarcity the warm weather will have released the large supply now at the tidewater depots on the Jersey shore.

THE Montreal train was wrecked at Rutland, Vt. E. H. Cobb, a traveling man for Howard, Spurr & Co., Boston cigar manufacturers, was instantly killed, and every one of the forty or fifty passengers received injuries more or less serious, while the engineer, fireman and other train hands were seriously hurt. The wreck was caused by a locomotive striking a broken frog. There were many ladies on the train, and while none received fatal injuries, they became frantic with fear and shrieked until exhausted.

A NEAT illustration of the value of newspaper advertising was given at the Portland, Me., Young Men's Christian Association meeting Sunday, when General Secretary McDonald stated that he had some curiosity to know what method of advertising reached the most people. He had circulated thousands of little dodgers, giving notice of the meeting, and he asked those who had seen them, and had been moved to come through that means, to rise. The hall was packed as full as it could hold, and of the entire number about fifteen rose. Then Mr. McDonald asked all who read the notices in the newspapers and had been influenced by them, to rise, and the crowd rose in a body.

THE big grain elevators, eight stories high, filled with miscellaneous grains, in Carondelet, South St. Louis, burned on Sunday morning. After midnight a general alarm called out the full fire department at one o'clock. The elevator stood on the banks of the Mississippi, and toppled over into the river after burning half an hour. The elevator loss is placed at $150,000. Tied up and frozen in, almost directly in front of the elevator, were the transfer boats, the Missouri and the Pacific. Both were destroyed.

THE State Bank of Wahoo, Neb., closed its doors Tuesday, and its affairs were placed in the hands of the State Banking Board. Fears are entertained that the institution is in a bad condition. The last statement showed $50,000 on deposit, and more than that was on deposit. W. H. Dickinson, proprietor and principal stockholder, has during the last few weeks quietly disposed of all his real estate in one way or another and left the city on a visit. He is now supposed to be somewhere in Texas. Dickinson was formerly a banker at Springfield, Mo.

At Anderson, Ind., a few minutes before midnight Monday night an explosion of natural gas wrecked the National Exchange Bank, located in the new Dooey Hotel. The force of the explosion shook the entire building and caused a panic among the inmates of the hotel. The building caught fire and the guests were compelled to rush through the smoke into the street with nothing on but their night clothes. So fierce were the flames and so rapidly did they spread that the whole block was threatened with destruction. It is feared that at least two persons were unable to escape and were cremated.

FIFTEEN of the prisoners confined in the county jail at Springfield, Mo., made a bold escape about 3 o'clock in the afternoon while Jailer Ward was opening the door for a prisoner to take out the refuse. Taylor, the wife beater, assaulted and held him while another prisoner opened the cell doors and let the prisoners escape. The officers up to a late hour had succeeded in recapturing seven of the men, who are charged with small crimes. Among the others still at large are Peter Renfrow and Shorty Cook. Renfrow is under sentence to be hanged for the murder of Constable Charles Morris, at Summerville, Texas County, several years ago while resisting arrest. As Renfrow left the jail he grabbed the jailer's revolver and kicked off the telephone instruments from the wall. It is doubtful if Renfrow will allow himself to be captured alive, as he is a man of great nerve and a dead shot.

He fired six shots at the men, of whom there were three, but failed to hit any of them. After they blew the safe open the robbers stacked $10,000 in silver at the east door of the building and were ready to leave with their plunder when surprised. Ward will recover.

JUSTICE L. Q. C. LAMAR, of the United States Supreme Court, died at Macon, Ga., Monday night. He was stopping at the home of W. H. Virgin, his relative, and late that afternoon took his overcoat and started out for a walk. He had scarcely left the house when he was met by a friend and returned to Mr. Virgin's house, where he talked cheerfully for quite a time with his friends. Justice Lamar dined at 6:50 with the family and seemed to have a good appetite and to be in a cheerful mood. His friend Dr. Llewellyn, whom he had met, left the house at 7:40 o'clock. A short time after this the Justice was seized with violent pains and died in a few minutes.

THERE have been many stormy sessions of the House, but they have generally been held when a matter of political or personal interest has been at stake. Rarely has a more boisterous meeting been held over a nonpartisan and nonpersonal measure than that of Monday. Members were at cross-purposes over the quarantine bill. Its most earnest supporters believed that it did not go far enough, and while they acquiesced in some of the amendments made by the New York members they did so under protest, and in the belief that if they did otherwise the measure would meet a lingering death through filibustering. After many parliamentary wrangles the bill was finally passed. On motion of Mr. Warner of New York an amendment was adopted extending the provisions of the bill to immigration and importation across land boundaries as well as across sea boundaries. The object of this amendment, as explained by Mr. Warner, is to protect the Canadian and Mexican frontiers.

TEN striking switchmen of the Lake Erie and Western at Muncie are now in jail at Indianapolis. A CALL has been issued for a convention of all trades unions in Nebraska to assemble in Omaha Feb. 19. The convention has been called under the authority of the American Federation of Labor, so that Knights of Labor locals have not been included in the call. The meaning of this action of organized labor at this time in this way is to so amalgamate the different branches of the building and other trades into one compact working body that its very existence will have the effect of making contractors and others pause before attempting any reduction of wages or the abrogation of any of the privileges which the men now enjoy. It is also hoped by the promoters that when all the workmen of Nebraska are organized under one constitution and operating under one general set of by-laws each action in the way of strikes will be prevented.

SEVERAL Berlin dailies demand that the government prepare at once an emigration bill to meet the emergency created by the United States quarantine regulations. The Hamburg authorities say that more than 20,000 persons in Austro-Hungary, Russia, and Germany, who have paid their money for passage to the United States, will not be accepted by the steamship companies, and unless something is done to stop them many are likely to be stranded in towns along the German seaboard.

THE Hawaiian legislature has granted an exclusive franchise to H. D. Cross of Chicago, W. B. Davenport of St. Louis, and John Phillips, J. J. Williams, Samuel Nourin and W. C. Achi of Honolulu to operate a lottery in all its various forms.

R. G. DUN & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

There is a somewhat general increase in complaints about collections, although money at nearly all markets is comparatively easy, and in supply adequate for legitimate demands.

ONE important patent on the telephone expired at midnight Friday night. The Blake transmitter has become the property of the public after many years of monopoly in its manufacture by the patentee and the American Bell Telephone Company, which controlled it; and any man or company can begin the manufacture of this part of the telephone. While the original transmitter is no longer covered by a patent, improvements have since been made which are covered by patents bearing later dates, and these have yet some time to run. The full patent term of seventeen years since the patent was issued will not expire until Sept. 15, 1898. The reason for its expiration in the United States is that under the laws governing patents in this country a patent for an invention previously patented abroad shall be limited so as to expire at the same time as the foreign patent. Francis Blake patented his transmitter in England Jan. 20, 1879, and the term of a patent under the laws of Great Britain is fourteen years.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capital—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

The Senate and House.

In the House Thursday a bill was passed to meet the requirements of the interstate commerce law relative to the testimony of witnesses. Mr. Wise (Va.) called up a Senate bill concerning testimony in criminal cases growing out of the interstate commerce act with a substitute providing that no person shall be excused from attending or testifying before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the ground that the testimony or evidence may tend to criminate him. The substitute was agreed to, and the bill as amended was passed without objection. Mr. Boatner (La.) offered an amendment requiring all railway common carriers to accept from connecting lines loaded cars or trains to be hauled to the point of delivery at a rate not exceeding that they charge for similar service over their own lines. Agreed to, 85 to 58. The bill was then passed. The bill for the establishment of a national quarantine was called up, but the opponents of the measure filibustered against it and finally forced an adjournment. The discussion of the anti-options bill was continued in the Senate from 2 o'clock until the time of adjournment, but no action was taken on the bill itself or on Mr. George's amendment to it. In the morning hour Mr. Pepper (Kas.) concluded his speech in favor of a single term of the Presidential office. Mr. Cullom (Ill.), from the committee on commerce, reported a bill appropriating $29,500 for establishing buoys on the water front of Chicago. Passed.

The Senate Friday paid an additional mark of respect to the memory of ex-President Hayes by adjourning without transacting any business. The House also adjourned out of respect to the memory of ex-President Hayes. The general deficiency appropriation bill was reported and placed on the calendar. Mr. Warner (Dem.) of New York, from the Committee on Manufactures, presented a report on the sweating system, and it was placed upon the calendar. Mr. Dearnond (Dem.) of Missouri, from the committee on the Election of President, etc., reported a bill to repeal the sections of the Revised Statutes concerning supervisors of elections.

The new Colombian postage stamp was vigorously attacked in the Senate Saturday by Mr. Wolcott, of Colorado, after transacting routine business. Mr. Wolcott called up the joint resolution introduced by him some days ago to discontinue the sale of the Colombian postage stamps. He was at a loss to understand, he said, why those stamps had ever been manufactured. He noticed that the Postmaster General suggested in his annual report that he expected to receive $1,500,000 extra profits out of their sale to stamp collectors. That was a trick that might suit some of the little Central American states when they were a few thousand dollars "shy," but the United States was too big a country to unload a cruel and unusual stamp upon stamp collectors. The feature of the session of the House was the consideration of the national quarantine bill. It was ushered in by an eloquent speech from Congressman Rayner of Maryland, who depicted the danger which was imminent to the people of this country from unrestricted immigration, and who urged upon the House the necessity of agreeing to some national law which would protect the United States from an invasion of its most deadly enemy—cholera.

Mr. Chandler (N. H.) diverted the Senate Monday by arranging two Republican Senators, Messrs. Hoar (Mass.) and Platt (Conn.), for putting forward against the anti-option bill a constitutional argument that would be equally strong in its application to the tariff law. At the conclusion of Mr. Chandler's speech the anti-option bill went over without action, an agreement having previously been reached when the vote on the bill should be taken. Certificates of election of Senators Cockrell (Mo.) and Davis (Minn.) for their new terms from March 4, 1893, were presented and placed on file. The House, after a lengthy parliamentary discussion, succeeded in passing the quarantine bill.

Early Tuesday a communication from Chief Justice Fuller of the Supreme Court to the Vice President, announcing the death of Justice Lamar, was laid before the Senate. Messrs. Walthall (Miss.) and Gordon (Ga.) made brief remarks, paying warm tributes of respect to the memory of Mr. Lamar, and Mr. Wilson (Iowa) moved, as a mark of respect to the memory of Mr. Lamar, who was formerly a member of the Senate, that the Senate adjourn. The motion was carried unanimously. There was but little business transacted in the House because of the announcement of the death of Justice Lamar. On motion of Mr. Allen (Miss.) the House adjourned as a mark of respect to the memory of the dead Justice.

Neither the anti-option bill nor the Cherokee outlet bill—which have the alternate right of way in the Senate—had any show of consideration Wednesday. The hour of the session was taken up in routine matters. The only exceptions were the introduction of a bill for the admission of Utah as a State, and an amendment reported from the committee on naval affairs and referred to the committee on appropriations looking to a further increase of the navy. The remainder of the session was passed behind closed doors and was devoted to the question of whether the nomination of Mr. McComas as one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia should be or not be confirmed. In the House filibustering against the bankruptcy bill was inaugurated by Mr. Kilgore, of Texas. He was ably seconded in his endeavor to defeat the bankruptcy bill by Mr. Pierce, of Tennessee, who supplemented his every motion with another which was calculated to prevent action, and the filibustering continued. "Another wasted day" was the comment of the Republicans, and their comment was echoed by a majority of the Democrats. But the few Democrats opposed to the bankruptcy measure held firm, and the House adjourned without action, thus exhausting the two days assigned to the Judiciary Committee and the bankruptcy bill.

The cause of these sinking spells or spasms has always been mysteriously kept secret by the physicians and family, although the public and press have frequently attributed them to Bright's disease of the kidneys; at other times brain trouble was alleged, but the most frequent conclusion was that Mr. Blaine was suffering from kidney disease of some sort. CAREER OF JAMES G. BLAINE.

BEAINE'S BAR HARBOR HOME

The grandfather for whom young Blaine was named, first chose a political career. A protracted stay in Europe, after he had finished his studies, estranged him from his early ambition. He returned to America in 1793, and as a special bearer of dispatches, delivered to the American Government a treaty with some foreign power. Afterward he retired to private life. The father of James G. Blaine was born

Later he traveled extensively in Europe, his health being much broken. At the time of the Republican Convention in 1888 he refused to accept the nomination, cabling from Scotland to the Chicago gathering to that effect. Several months earlier he had written a letter refusing to be considered a candidate.

As Secretary of State.

He worked for the success of Mr. Harrison in the succeeding campaign and at the beginning of the present national administration he entered the cabinet as Secretary of State. His distinguished career in that position is well remembered. The Pan-American Congress, the reciprocity treaties, and other striking incidents, rendered his work remarkable. Owing to personal differences with the President, he resigned his position in the Cabinet a few days before the meeting of the Convention of his party. Though a short time before he had declined in set terms to be a candidate before the convention he permitted his friends to use his name. On the first ballot, however, Mr. Harrison was re-nominated. Though in bad health, Mr. Blaine wrote a letter and made a speech for his party during the campaign lately closed.

HOME LIFE OF THE BLAINES.

An Almost Ideal Happy Household Until Death Entered Two Years Ago.

The home life of the Blaine family has been almost an ideal one. At Augusta their household was one of the most charming places to visit. Mrs. Blaine was a gracious hostess, unbending from her customary reserve at her own fireside, where her character was seen at its best. There can be no question that the phases of social life devolving upon Mrs. Blaine from the outset of her husband's political career have not been altogether pleasant to her. The obligations of her position have been discharged as a duty in which personal enjoyment had no from gray to white, and is always well and tastefully arranged. Unconsciousness, unworldliness, unselfishness, and truthfulness, a power to make those who know her enthusiastically devoted to her, an industry almost limitless in its accomplishment, cheerfulness which never fails in the darkest crisis, and frankness—these are the characteristics of the woman who, though so little known in her own personality, has reflected in her husband's brilliant successes the strength and nobility of her life.

The Law-Makers.

The Law-Makers.
In the House Tuesday Mr. Bailey introduced a bill providing for a uniform tax on spirituous and malt liquors of $400, which shall also include druggists. It provides that saloons may be kept open all night and all week days, except election, Thanksgiving, and possibly other holidays of a religious character. Several other measures were proposed. A bill was passed and given immediate effect providing an assistant prosecuting attorney for Muskegon County. Several bills were noticed in the Senate. Each house balloted for United States Senator under the provision of the Constitution, resulting as follows: Senate—Francis B. Stockbridge (Rep.), 20; Daniel J. Campau (Dem.), 10; Eugene H. Belden (Dem-Populist), 1. House—Stockbridge, 66; Campau, 27; Belden, 4.

In the House, Wednesday, a bill was introduced providing for air brakes after Jan. 1, 1894, upon all trains. A resolution was adopted to cut off the Upper Peninsula members of the House a compensation of $2 per day, but Representatives Chamberlain had the vote reconsidered and the resolution referred. Other bills introduced were one for the repeal of the Miner electoral law; reducing the number of justices of the peace to two in Grand Rapids; amending the game laws for deer; to establish a central board of control for insane asylums similar to that for other State institutions passed by the Legislature of 1891 and which will be repealed, undoubtedly, by this; joint resolution asking Congress to submit a constitutional amendment for the divorce of United States Senators by a direct vote of the people. In the Senate bills were noticed making the deer season for deer only during the month of November for the entire State; making an appropriation for the support of the Michigan University; for incorporation of companies to furnish abstracts and guarantee titles; to establish a 3-cent fare upon all street railways; making it unlawful for employers to prevent or attempt to prevent employees from joining labor organizations. Resolutions were adopted by both houses appointing a committee to prepare suitable resolutions upon the death of ex-President Hayes. Branches will adjourn on Saturday until Jan. 10, when the House and Senate committees to visit the State institutions. In joint session the Legislature elected F. B. Stockbridge Senator.

Thursday afternoon the majority of the Senate Committee on Judiciary made a favorable report on a manuscript bill to repeal the Miner electoral law, and the report was adopted. The bill was then put upon its immediate passage and passed by a strict party vote. The House concurred in the Senate resolution providing for an adjournment from Saturday until Monday, Jan. 30, and the committee will visit the State institutions. The Upper Peninsula delegation has made "preparations to take the Committees on State Mining School and Mining Interests" together with a few invited guests to the upper country by special train to leave Detroit Sunday morning. A resolution requiring members to file an itemized statement of expenses was defeated. In the House bills were introduced to authorize Boards of Supervisors of the Upper Peninsula to provide the sheriffs of said counties with salaries in addition to the fees now received and to repeal the act providing for the Central Boards of Control for State institutions. A joint resolution providing for a Constitutional amendment reducing the time in which bills may be introduced in the Legislature from fifty to thirty days was also introduced. Resolutions on the death of Benjamin F. Butler were adopted in the House.

In the Senate Friday—the Contested Elections Committee in the Wheeler-Muzzey case reported in favor of the sitting member, Murford (Dem.). Bills were noticed making appropriation for current expenses of the Northern Asylum; amending the law creating the State Board of Dental Examiners so that no more graduates than two from the same school can serve upon the Board at one time; increasing the salary of the Superintendent of Public Instruction from $1,000 to $2,000, and providing for his election at the spring election when representatives of the university are chosen. The most important bill noticed in the House was one providing for the inspection of beef on the hoof at slaughter-houses in the State. It is practically what was known as the "beef-on-the-hoof" bill before the Legislature of four years ago. It would effectually prohibit shipping dressed beef into the State by outside parties, although they could maintain slaughter-houses within the State. Other bills were introduced for creating a State land commission for developing waste lands and for forming text-books for the schools; making an appropriation for marking the position of Michigan troops on the Gettysburg battlefield; appropriating $20,000 for a woman's annex to the University gymnasium; establishing a home for the feeble-minded and epileptic and appropriating $50,000 therefore; to tax all church property in excess of $5,000 in value.

Have You a Mole?

It is now pretty well established, says a distinguished physician, that a large proportion of moles on the face and neck if allowed to remain long enough will become cancers. I have seen this proved any number of times. Several years ago I was called in consultation by an examining physician of a Life Insurance Company to look at a man who wished a $10,000 policy. This man had a black mole on his right temple. I advised the physician to reject the applicant unless he had that mole removed. The would-be policy-holder laughed at me and angrily said he'd have nothing more to do with a concern that accepted such idiotic advice. More than that, he said he'd wear that mole for fifty years if he lived that long, just to prove me a quack. In less than a year a very malignant cancer developed from that very mole, and within two years from the time I examined him he was a dead man, the cancer ending his life. But the dermatologist has not yet discovered why moles become cancers, or how it is known that the pigment or coloring matter in them is the poison that starts the growth.

Army of the Republic. In the parade Gen. Hayes and Gen. Butler were the heroes of the spectators. Gen. Butler rode in a carriage, but Mr. Hayes, despite his seventy years, walked briskly in the ranks. When the reviewing stand was reached Mr. Hayes saluted and walked on, but was called back amid the cheers of the crowd, and given the place of honor by the side of Vice President Morton. Among the best informed social and political lights of the capital, the ex-president was regarded as a plain, positive man of excellent abilities and good impulses, who did his work according to the lights set before him, and was anxious more for the approval of his own conscience than for the plaudits of the public.

The inauguration of a president is not a very costly affair if Mr. Harrison's inauguration is any criterion. Of course the features of the celebration attendant on the inauguration—the decoration of the streets, the cost of the ball, etc.—are investments made by the citizens of the District. The actual cost of the inauguration itself is borne by the senate of the United States and it costs less than a senatorial funeral. The items of four years ago bring the total cost of the inauguration up to $2,520.50.

I am informed that Senator Calvin Brice is spending at least $25,000 a year for social festivities. The entertainments given at his house this winter surpass the Whitney parties, which were considered the most elaborate ever given in this city before the advent of the Brices. Judging from the crowd which forces its way into the Brice's "Concoran House" as their mansion is called, the genial senator and his family are being imposed upon. Persons who do not know the host or hostess, push their way into the receptions and linger around the dining room. There is at all times a large contingent of the genus "reception-hogs" in Washington, and they are particularly rampant this winter.

The gossips are considerably puzzled over a well-authenticated report that Judge Walter Q. Gresham of Indiana was in this city for two or three days last week on a secret mission alleged to have relation to the formation of the next cabinet. What he was here for and whom he saw while here are questions that are still unsettled. The visit was very mysterious and Mr. Gresham got away several days before it was known that he had been here.

Ten thousand petitions have been received by Representative Duburrow, of Chicago. They are all in favor of opening the world's fair on Sunday. They are from every state and the committee room overflows with them. It is suggested that congress dispose of the whole troublesome business by leaving it to the discretion of the world's fair managers. They would seem to be the best of all judges concerning a matter about which there is wide disagreement on the part of the general public, and it is not reasonable to suppose that in doing so they will altogether defy the widespread sentiment in favor of Sunday observance or ignore altogether the claims of those to whom the opening of the gates on Sunday would be a memorable and manifold blessing.

Senator Carlisle's letter of resignation is not calculated to encourage those individuals who always read between the lines.

Hon. Carl Schurz appears to have been too busily engaged in his effort to secure an office to attend the funeral of the man who gave him a cabinet portfolio.

Secretary Rusk can well afford to turn on the steam and give us an early spring.

The Cosmopolitan.

Admirers and enemies of Mr. Blaine will alike be interested in the very full article which appears in the February Cosmopolitan, reviewing his characteristics as a man and statesman. A number of fine portraits are printed with the article. Julian Hawthorne never more showed himself to be the son of his distinguished father than in the very bright bit of fancy which appears in the February Cosmopolitan. "June, 1893," ninety years after the invention of successful aerial machinery, is sketched in a witty and philosophical way that will be found interesting by all classes of readers. There are besides these a vast number of interesting articles in this magnificent number.

"Robbing Peter to Pay Paul."

"Robbing Peter to pay Paul" was first used when Westminster abbey was called St. Peter's cathedral. Money being needed to settle the accounts of St. Paul's cathedral it was taken by those in authority from St. Peter's, quite to the dissatisfaction of the people, who asked, "Why rob St. Peter to pay St. Paul?" Over 200 years afterward the saying was again used in regard to the same churches at the death of the Earl of Chatham, the city of London declaring that so great a statesman should be buried in St. Paul's, while parliament insisted that one so noble in every way would be more properly placed amid the dust of kings in Westminster abbey, and that not to bury him there would be for the second time "robbing St. Peter to pay St. Paul." The abbey carried the day.—Harper's Young People.
