WASHINGTON LETTER.

An Interesting Budget from the Nation's Capital.

From Our Special Correspondent.

The new stand that Mrs. Cleveland will assume when she reaches Washington is calculated to interest everybody who holds the opinion that the President's wife is elected by the people at the same time the president is and who consequently feel that she belongs to the public in general and would attend their woes and desires with the same ready ear with which the President is supposed to listen. Mr. Cleveland has determined, however, that his wife shall be able to lead a private life
as well as other women, and Mrs. Cleveland is of the same mind. She is said to look on newspaper notoriety now with great distaste, a feeling that has been aggravated by her experience since Ruth's arrival.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland are both, as is well known, strongly opposed to trying to live in the White House and desire to take up a residence in a private house. Mrs. Cleveland has also provided herself with a private secretary
whose duty it will be to handle the correspondence of the President's wife.
She will also perform the same duties for Mrs. Cleveland that the President's secretary does for him. She is a very accomplished Southern lady, accustomed to the highest society, and will be a great aid in carrying out Mrs.
Cleveland's plans. Since Ruth's birth the Cleverlands have been compelled to stand so much from curious visitors that Mr. Cleveland has determined to protect her from insinuating people and the presidential family will take a square stand against the publicity given to details of private life that are so displeasing to a woman of refined sensibilities.

It is announced authoritatively that President Harrison will return to his home in Indianapolis as soon as Mr.
Cleveland is sworn in to succeed him,
and that soon thereafter he will resume his old law practice. In this he will follow in the footsteps of three of his illustrious predecessors in the executive office who did the same thing—Monroe, Arthur and Cleveland—all of whom were likewise lawyers before they were presidents. In contemplating his future, Harrison looks forward to a period of moderate activity more as a relief from care and sorrow than as a means of pecuniary gain. He is well off already, as the world goes and is not in need of employment on that score.
After a brief season of rest and recuperation, he means to plunge again into the engrossing practice of his profession.

The congressional committee has not been remarkably successful thus far in tracing out the expenditures of the Panama Canal Company in this country. It is discovered in a general way that about $40,000,000, over and above inci-dentals, were spent under the direction of the banking end of the American committees, but there is a sad lack of details, probably for the reason that the committee has made no call for a special accounting. As the matter now stands some $17,000,000 out of the $40-000,000, are explained in a vague sort of way. Perhaps the books of the three high salaried disbursing agents at New York would show with at least no greater vagueness what became of the remaining $23,000,000.

If the Illinois delegation know of what they talk—and they talk a great deal—Gen. McClelland, of Springfield, Ill., will be the next commissioner of pensions. They go so far as to say that the position has been promised him in the President's own middle register voice. Gen. McClelland, of Springfield was a Union soldier who served with distinction and is esteemed throughout the state.

J. Sterling Morton, Uncle Jerry's successor, is said to have raised 1,575 bushels of corn on a twenty acre lot in Nebraska last year. And yet he wears his name like a man with creases in his pantaloon.

Those statesmen who have greatness
thrust upon them generally loaf in the vicinity of the thrusting apparatus.
The aspiring Georgians are unable to account Hoke Smith's surprising attack
of civil service reform.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

The boat was now close alongside the Wanderer, and Captain Fox stood ready to receive his visitor.

Colonel Graham ascended to the deck with the light, active step of a much younger man, and he met Captain Fox with more heartiness than might be expected from one of his austere bearing.

He was evidently known to the other officers of the ship, for they raised their hats to him, and he bowed in his stately, condescending way as he accompanied Captain Fox to the cabin, followed by Othello, bearing the strange saddlebags.

Othello, with his load, was turned over to the care of Don, the cabin boy, and the Captain said when they were in his private cabin:

"You must be weary with your journey, and will need rest before we attempt to transact any business."

"I shall need to make some change in my dress," said the Colonel, glancing over his travel-stained attire. "And, I must confess I should, under the circumstances, feel that a short rest was necessary; but I am too eager for action to wait."

"A day more or less can make no difference," said Fox, with an interrogative inflection on the last word.

"An hour, sir, may be of vital importance to the success of our venture. It is quite convenient for you to provide me with some slight refreshment, after I have washed, I shall be grateful."

"As you will, sir," said Capt. Fox, with a manner that, to an observant eye, would have shown a strange mixture of acquiescence and contempt.

The Colonel was shown to the cabin set apart for him, and Othello was summoned to aid his master in making his toilet.

When Col. Graham again came into the cabin, he found it darkened, and the swinging lamps blazed on a repast such as no other ship in the service of Queen Anne could have provided on such short notice.

Accustomed as Col. Graham was to the luxury and display which distinguished the English court at this time, he looked about him with surprise and ventured to say:

"By the throne, sir, you must find no deprivation in living in such a ship."

"We take care of ourselves, Colonel; if we did not, I fear that, as in some of her majesty's ships, there would be a mutiny."

"But this is still one of her majesty's ships."

"Nominally, Colonel, I suppose it is. We fly the flag, as you have seen; but the colors at the peak when we go into action are a shade or two less sanguinary, and very many shades more somber."

The Captain was smiling and rubbing his hands as he said this, and there was so much horrible suggestiveness in his words and manner, that Colonel Graham looked quickly and anxiously about him to make sure that no other person was within hearing.

"We are quite alone, Colonel Graham. The food here is, I think, moderately good, but as to the wine—here are four kinds—I swear that better cannot be found in the cellars of St. James."

Colonel Fox sat down on the opposite side of the table to serve his guest, rather than with any desire for food.

"You have seen Denham," said Colonel Graham, after he had been eating for some minutes in silence.

"I have seen him repeatedly."

"And what do you think of him?"

"As a sailor I think he has, for his years, no superior. As a man he is well made, handsome and, so well as I—well, never had a taste for literature or philosophy could tell, he is a most scholarly person."

"He is well liked by the people here?"

"Liked by the men and loved by nearly all the women, I regret to say."

"Ah, have you already run counter to each other in the lists of love?" asked the Colonel, a glitter in his gray eyes that might have passed for merriment, if the hard, cruel mouth did not belie it.

"I cannot say that," laughed Captain Fox. "And yet, again, Colonel, I have not seen so many beautiful women in all my sailing as this little out-of-the-way place affords."

"You surprise me."

"Yet I do utter the solemn truth. By the trident of the Sea God, I should not mind prolonging my stay or the rest of the year."

"I regret to tell you that circumstances of greater importance to you than to me will compel your departure within the week, if you carry out my plans—you can return again, and remain as long as you please." The Colonel shot a glance at Captain Fox, and went on eating.

If the Captain was startled by this information, neither his face nor voice gave any indication thereof. As if he were trying to keep up an interest in the conversation, rather than seeking information on a matter to him of the greatest moment, he asked:

"Why do you think I should leave, if your affair is out of the question?"

"I saw the Governor of the province three days since, in the city of New York, and he read to me the report of Captain Ralph Denham, which he had received not an hour before. This told me that Denham had arrived, about the time we expected. But Denham inclosed a letter to the Governor of New York from the Governor of Jamaica.

Of this letter, I heard a part."

"Can you recall it?"

"Distinctly. It was almost verbatim, as follows: 'The fears that the Adventure Galley, which your honor assigned to the command of Captain William Kidd, has been lost in a storm, or destroyed by pirates, is, unfortunately, not well founded—'

"So-ho!" exclaimed the Captain. "By the powers of the storm! my friend, Captain William Kidd, would not feel grateful to his excellency, the Governor of Jamaica, if he heard that. But pardon the interruption. What reason did he give for thinking it unfortunate that the Adventure Galley was not swallowed up by the sea, or blown up by the buccaners of the Spanish Main?"

"The Governor's letter went on to say that he had evidence, nearly conclusive, but which he would make conclusive, and send on at once, going to show that the Adventure Galley had been changed materially, but not so as to destroy her identity; that she was now transformed into the most dangerous piratical cruiser on all the seas; that she had recently been plundering the rich ships in the Indian Ocean; that this vessel had suddenly appeared in the West Indies, and that a runaway sailor had arrived at St. Vincent and made oath that this cruiser was commanded by Captain Kidd, who still holds a commission in her majesty's service."

Colonel Graham filled a glass with wine, drank it down at one gulp, and, pushing back from the table, looked critically at Captain Fox.

But what ever of surprise the world might have given, had their information been more condensed, was prevented by the time it took the Colonel to tell his story.

"My friend Kidd has not been following his sailing orders, I must confess," said Captain Fox, covering his mouth with his hand as if to suppress a yawn. "I must get word to him at once, and have him keep his eyes open."

"He should remain at sea until he has destroyed some greater pirate than himself," said the Colonel, his strange gray eyes again gleaming as if with laughter, and his cruel mouth fastening as if it closed with a spring lock.

"I shall see that my friend is informed of his danger. And now as to your own matter?"

"I came to meet the Wanderer at this point, and have done so. Where is the original Wanderer?"

"At the bottom of the Indian Ocean, with all her officers and crew," replied Captain Fox, sinking his voice.

"No! I supposed. Now, it will be necessary to have this ship lost after she leaves this port."

"On paper?"

"You must arrange that, but a report of her loss must reach the admiralty in London. I leave the manner of doing it to yourself. You are much more able in such matters than I am."

"I beg your pardon, Colonel; from the time we first met, or rather first exchanged views, in Bermuda, where you were Governor, I felt that outside of practical seamanship there was not a thing, good, bad or indifferent, about which you did not know more than myself. But we will not play modest as to our merits. So far, I have kept my part of the contract, and you are now a member of the House of Lords—"

"Silence, man," said the Colonel, striking the table until the very glasses rang again, as if manifesting his own impatience and alarm.

"But, gad, sir, it is a matter of notoriety."

"Here, I assume the role of a man whom we know to be dead, and in England I am Lord Pallatin; but why speak of the facts? Why not treat me as I do you?"

"Because, sir," said the Captain, with a sarcastic laugh, "I do not want to lay myself open to a charge of rudeness. But henceforth I pledge myself to respect the incognito. Now as to Denham?"

"That is the point—Your own safety demands immediate action. Yes, it is imperative that this Ralph Denham should be at once missing, and—"

"And never to be found thereafter?"

"You have it, Captain."

"And I am to do the business?" asked Fox.

The Colonel compressed his thin lips and nodded.

"In the event of trouble befalling me, you pledge me in writing to use all your influence and fortune for my self-deliverance?"

"I am prepared to do that."

"You also come prepared to pay the $20,000 in gold, and an obligation for twice that amount when the work is done?"

"My black servant has brought the money here, and, I presume, as to the rest, that your ship is well provided with writing material?"

"It is."

"Very well. I am ready to do my part on one condition. When will you be ready to act?" asked the Colonel.

"Within forty-eight hours the Wanderer will prove her claim to her name, by being at sea without a flag."

"But Denham?"

"Well, Colonel, Denham will be on board my ship till I am a hundred leagues from land," replied the Captain.

CHAPTER IX.

A REFUGEE AND AN INTERRUPTED PROPOSAL.

The morning following the arrival of Colonel Graham, a "post-ride," as official messengers were then called, arrived at Sag Harbor with a dispatch for Captain Ralph Denham of the cruiser, Sea Hawk.

The courier found Ralph at Squire Condit's, talking to the old gentleman, while Valentine Dayton and Ellen could be seen in an embowered summer house, pretending to be interested in the make of a curious feather fan, which he had brought her from Tampico.

"Well, Ralph, my boy," said the

quire, when Denham had finished reading the message, "what is it?"

"I am ordered to New York," replied Ralph. "But as I have five days from now in which to report, I need not start for forty-eight hours."

"I declare," said the old gentleman, adjusting his wig, as if he feared the surprise would force it off, "this is decidedly startling and unexpected."

"Sailors and soldiers should never be surprised."

"But has the Governor given a hint as to why he wants you?"

"Yes; there is a rumor that one of the officers in command of a ship—the Adventure Galley—fitted out by this province, as you will remember, has turned pirate."

"And the captain?"

"Is one William Kidd, who came from London and took command of the vessel in Bermuda."

"What do you think of it?"

"I dislike," replied Ralph, "to think evil of a brother officer, unless the evidence is very strong, and in these days of false rumor I am not inclined to credit it. Yet, with the successful example of Morgan before him, who was knighted for some service done the crown while he commanded a pirate fleet, the defection of Kidd is possible, for to a man without principles the temptations to plunder in those rich seas must be very great indeed."

"Then you leave the ship here?"

"Yes; but I will at once give orders to get her ready for sea. It will be ten days before I return," said the Captain, rising and going to the edge of the piazza, where he shouted to Valentine Dayton the substance of his order.

Strangely enough, Captain Fox was passing at that very moment, and he must, as subsequent events proved, have heard what Ralph said. However, he said nothing, but politely raised his hat and kept on.

He went at once to the principal inn and asked if a post had just come from New York.

The landlord replied that there had, and that the messenger was then in his room, resting after dinner.

"It is important that I should see him. Do not call him. Show me where his room is, and I will go to him."

Capt. Fox had become a great man in the eyes of the villagers. The officers and crew of the Wanderer were good customers; and so reasonable a request from the principal officer could not be denied.

"How much money do you get for your journey here and back?" asked Capt. Fox, when he was alone with the courier.

"About ten dollars, sir," replied the man, rubbing his eyes, for he had been asleep.

"Did you bring a letter for Capt. Fox of the Wanderer?"

"No, sir; the only letter I brought was one to Capt. Ralph Denham of the Sea Hawk."

"It came from the governor of the province?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you know the contents of the letter?"

"Only, sir, that the captain—so I heard him say—is ordered to New York Bay," replied the messenger.

"Can you keep a secret?" Capt. Fox pulled out a purse, through whose silken meshes the yellow flash of many gold pieces could be seen.

"If any one made it worth my while to do so and it wasn't against the law," replied the man, his hungry eyes fastened on the purse, which the Captain was tossing from hand to hand, that the fellow might get some idea of its value.

"I wish you to give out—that is, to tell every one that you also brought the Captain of the Wanderer a letter from the Governor. Do you understand?" as Captain Fox asked the question he tossed the purse into the man's lap, for he was sitting up in bed.

"I do, sir," replied the man, feeling the purse, "but I'm feard the story being false 'll get me into trouble."

"There is no danger of that. Do this, and I will give you as much more gold and a free passage to New York on my ship. I sail inside of forty-eight hours. It is a joke I wish to play on Colonel Graham, who is now on board the Wanderer."

"La, sir, I see him at the Governor's in New York when I started. He overtook me at Hempstead."

"The same gentleman. Now, will you do as I say?"

"Why, sir, if so be it's only to help along a bit of a joke, which all nerts do like sometimes to play on each other, of course I'll do it."

That his employer might get an idea of his eagerness to earn the money, prospective and in possession, the messenger forgot his weariness, and, springing out of bed, began to dress.

Warning him to act in all seriousness, and promising to see him on the morrow, Capt. Fox went away, confident that he had scored another point in the game he was so dextrously playing.

That a man carrying out such hazardous schemes should give a thought to love, which is generally supposed to be man's joyous way of spending delightful leisure, is not a little strange. But Capt. Fox was not an ordinary man. It may have been his all-sufficient confidence in himself or a spirit of sheer recklessness that led him, with a fixed purpose in view, directly from the inn to the residence of Doctor Hedges.

When he first met Lea Hedges he simply thought that she was a handsome, cashing girl, who would serve to make pleasant the time spent in this out-of-the-way harbor.

But after each meeting with the beautiful Lea he became more and more infatuated, until now he had to confess that he was deeply in love.

In view of the strange career on which this man had entered, and of which we shall learn more hereafter, it is not a little remarkable that he should ever give a thought to marriage. But love is the one impulse that proves that men of the greatest reasoning powers are, after all, common flesh and blood, and which places the intellect in abeyance to the emotions.

Proof From The Plains.

Story of a Government Scout

...less of what the other said, threw in a chest, where it remained for some time.

During this time Ranerius' only child was being carried out for burial he suddenly rose from his coffin and ordered the bearers to stop. Then calling to his father he told that individual a wonderful story of his trip to heaven and how sorrowful the Virgin Mary was because he (Ranerius) had allowed her precious jewel to lay neglected for ten long years. The resurrected boy had never heard of the ring before, but when the chest of trinkets was brought soon selected the holy relic.

After performing this miracle the child died again and was buried. But the ring became the relic of relics and was carried to the city of New York.

CAPT. FRANK D. YATES, GORDON, NEB.

His endorsement of it is still further proof of its effectiveness. Capt. Yates writes as follows:—

GORDON, Nebraska, July 25.

My personal experience with Sagwa—which in Indian tongue means "THE BEST"—has been considerable, but one of the most wonderful effects from personal knowledge is my own case was the curing of Chronic Catarrh with which I became afflicted, owing to the great altitude of the country in which I had been living.

It did not at first occur to me to take Kickapoo Indian Sagwa for this trouble, and it was not until I had visited the Hot Springs, and I failed to obtain relief, and the disease had become so very alarming that I was afraid it would get the best of me and develop into consumption that I concluded to take Sagwa. I got one bottle of it and a bottle of Indian Oil. The effect was so marked that I immediately ordered twelve bottles of each, and now I feel the day that the thought occurred to me, for I am entirely cured of that most disagreeable and distressing of all diseases.

I am satisfied I was cured owing to the perfect manner in which "Sagwa" purifies the blood; and I claim that Sagwa, taken in connection with Indian Oil, will positively cure the worst cases of Catarrh ever known; and so far as the use of Kickapoo Indian Remedies as general family medicines are concerned, there is nothing on earth which can equal them.

HIGH WALLS GO DOWN

COLLAPSE OF A CHICAGO BUILDING IN A GALE.

Many Persons Are Crushed Under a Mass of Brick Five Stories High—Fire Adds to the Horror of the Occasion.

Eight Killed Outright.

Eight people were crushed to death and four others seriously injured at 1:15 o'clock Tuesday morning by the falling of the stone ruins of John York's building at 781 South Halsted street, Chicago.

York's store was gutted by fire a few weeks ago and the blackened stone walls were left standing. It was not supposed that there was any danger of their falling. Shortly after 12 o'clock Monday night, however, a brisk gale of wind was blowing and a sudden gust caused the walls to topple and fall burying two frame houses which stood just north of the ruins. The first house was occupied on the first floor by one Kunz, a jeweler, and his wife and four children. On the second floor lived the family of John Smith with his wife and three children. Smith was a saloon-keeper and with him roomed his bartender, who recently came from Syracuse, N. Y. His first name was George, but the police were unable to learn his surname. Smith and his family and the bartender were all buried beneath the ruins.

The York building was five stories high and the walls were made of large stones. The force of the wind which toppled the walls must have been terrific, as many of the large stones were hurled clear across the street. Shortly after the crash the ruins took fire and the bodies of the mangled victims were badly burned. An alarm was turned in at 1:45 o'clock; this was quickly followed by a second and third alarm. The fire department promptly responded, and went to work extinguishing the flames and attempting to rescue the victims. A great crowd soon congregated, and it was with difficulty the police and firemen could keep back the citizens who seemed anxious to assist in the work of rescue. The front walls of the building were threatening to fall at any moment, and the crowd was repeatedly warned to keep at safe distance from the ruins.

The fallen building was one of the South Halsted street landmarks. A year ago last summer it was reconstructed and changed from the old style frame structure that had for years been known as a general store into a modern five-story brick and stone. It was then an imposing structure in that locality. The new store had been in operation but a few months, when last fall it was visited by a fire that was probably the direct cause of the calamity. The fire which wrecked the building was a fierce one, and after several hours the side walls of the large structure fell in. Within a short time work was begun upon the ruins. Two weeks ago a falling scaffold severely injured two men at work upon the walls, but the work of repair went forward, and a week later York obtained a building permit for a new five-story brick building to cost $50,000. This had been begun some time ago, and the side walls were already in place. One of these caused the catastrophe.

GO WITH THE REPUBLICANS.

Kansas Populists Decide to Give Up Their House Organization.

Topeka, Kas., special: After a heated caucus discussion, the Populist members of the Kansas Legislature decided to go into the Republican house, which the Supreme Court had declared to be the legal body. The Governor visited the members of the caucus and pledged himself to abide by the caucus decision. The appeal against the decision of the Supreme court will be made at the general election two years hence. In going into the house the Populists have asked no concessions and the Republicans have granted none. There is talk among the Republican members of the Legislature of filing articles of impeachment against Gov. Lewelling. Should the House prefer the charges it is not contemplated that the Senate would convict. The Governor will be charged with high crimes and misdemeanors in office by the usurpation of powers that be on the 1st to the peace officers of the county and with the unlawful use of troops.

But the Royal is correspondingly purer and higher in leavening strength, and of greater money value to the consumer. ## A Culinary Post-Mortem.

"Among the many stories of the late Sir Richard Owen," writes a correspondent of the Pall Mall Budget, "which since his death have found their way into print, I have not seen one doing justice to his skill in identifying the bones of animals. One was recently told me in which Lord John Russell also figures. The statesman and the professor were near neighbors at Sheen, and on one occasion a letter was sent to the latter inclosing Lord John's compliments and a bone as to which he was desirous of having Prof. Owen's opinion.

The professor quickly pronounced it to be the humerus of a pig. Lord John afterwards satisfied the professor's natural curiosity as to why it had been submitted to him. It seems that President Buchanan had sent from America to the English statesman the present of a choice bear's ham, and the family had breakfasted off it several times with much enjoyment.

The Fountain Head of Strength.

When we recollect that the stomach is the grand laboratory in which food is transformed into the secretions which furnish vigor to the system after entering and enriching the blood; that it is, in short, the fountain head of strength, it is essential to keep this important supplying machine in order, and to restore it to activity when it becomes inactive. This Hostetter's Stomach Bitters does most effectually, seasonably, regulating and re-enforcing digestion, promoting due action of the liver and bowels. Strength and quietude of the nerves depend in great measure upon thorough digestion. There is no nerve tonic more highly esteemed by the medical fraternity than the Bitters. Physicians also strongly commend it for chills and fever, rheumatism, kidney and bladder trouble, sick headache, and want of appetite and sleep. Take a wineglassful three times a day.

A PLEASANT EVENT.

The K. O. T. M. Banquet Wednesday Evening a Very Enjoyable Affair.

The Knights and Ladies of the Macabees have been busy, as bees always are, the past two weeks preparing for the banquet with which they were to dedicate their new hall.

Tables for 175 guests had been provided, and they were beautiful to look upon—as tables always are that are prepared by Chelsea ladies—and every seat was occupied.

The program opened with music by a chorus after which came the address by Hon. D. P. Markey, of Port Huron. Mr. Markey is a plain forcible speaker, and has a way that carries conviction with every word he utters. The audience listened intently to every word from first to last, and learned a great deal about the workings of the Macabees as a fraternal beneficiary organization.

Miss Annie Bacon then sang a solo, and was encored to the echo.

The banquet was the next on the program, and such a banquet. The following is the

There was more music, after which G. W. Turnbull responded to the toast "Chelsea Tent" and gave a history of the ups and downs of that organization. The toast "Columbian Hive" was responded to in well chosen words by Mrs. M. Boyd.

P. J. Lehman told of the qualifications of the officers of the Tent.

"The New Hall" was well handled by Mrs. F. Wedemeyer.

A. E. Powell rendered Will Carleton's "Lightning Rod Dispenser" in a credible manner.

Jacob Hammel told of his wrestle with the Macabee goat.

Mrs. L. Stephens responded to the toast, "Mixed Swarms."

D. P. Markey was down on the program to respond to the toast, "The Macabees," and thought that two speeches on the same subject in one evening was almost too much, but he responded nobly.

The last number on the program was a solo by A. A. Hall.

The Macabees have every reason to feel proud of this, their first banquet, and the ladies deserve great praise for the manner in which they did their work.

...ST'S MOTHER'S WEDDING RING.
...Account of How Its Gen-
...ness Was Proved to All.
...of the famous "Myths of the ...Ages," the account of which,
...by the way, Baring-Gould neglected
...to incorporate into his valuable work
...the above quoted title, was the ...story of the "Miraculous Ring," sup...posed and believed to have been the
...identical circlet used in the marriage
...ceremonies which made the Virgin
...Mary and Joseph, the carpenter,
...man and wife. This wonder worker
...was a homely little onyx or ame-
...tyst jewel, having a carved repre...sentation of the budding rod on the ...signet.
...It was discovered in the year 996 in
...this manner: Judith, the wife of Hu-
...go, marquis of Etruria, being a great
...lover of jewels, employed one Rane-
...rius, a skilled lapidary of Clusium, to ...go to Rome and make some purchases
...for her. While there he became ac...quainted with a jeweler who had just
...arrived from Jerusalem.
...This man soon became greatly at...tracted to our friend Raneirius, and
...when the latter was on the eve of
...departure presented him with a very
...common looking finger ring. Rane-
...rius at first declined such a valueless
...gift, but upon being pressed to take
...it only consented after listening to a
...marvelous story of the ring's history,
...which wound up with the declara...tion that it was the wedding ring of ...Joseph and Mary. Raneirius, still
...careless of what the other said, threw
...it in a chest, where it remained ten
...years.
...During this time Raneirius' only
...son, ten years of age, died. While
...the child was being carried out for
...burial he suddenly rose from his cof-
...fin and ordered the bearers to stop.
...Then calling to his father he told
...that individual a wonderful story of
...his trip to heaven and how sorrow-
...ful the Virgin Mary was because he
...Raneirius had allowed her precious
...jewel to lay neglected for ten long
...years. The resurrected boy had ...never heard of the ring before, but
...when the chest of trinkets was
...brought soon selected the holy relic.
...After performing this miracle the ...child died again and was buried. But
...the ring became the relic of relics and
...was constantly surrounded by de-
...vots and those who desired to have
...applied to blind eyes, crippled
...limbs, etc. It was the greatest mir...acle worker of the times. Besides
...curing leprosy, curing blindness,
...paralysis and other ills, it reconciled
...estranged married people, drove out
...devils and performed many minor
...services.
...For many years it was at Clusium,
...but was finally stolen by one Win-
...thems and carried to Perugia. A ...long dispute arose over this, which
...which was at last decided by Car-
...dinal Piccolomini, who adjudged
...it to the last named place.—St. Louis

...James Whitcomb Riley.
...James Whitcomb Riley owns up
...to being thirty-eight years old. He ...says he was a painter by trade and
...worked at sign writing a long time.
...He served an apprenticeship also as ...a house painter, but was never
...strong enough to follow the occupa...tion steadily. The greatest drawback
...in life as a writer he has found to be
...the lack of an education, for he did
...not even have a common school
...training. He says, "There is not a ...rule of grammar that is familiar to
...me, and I wouldn't know a nomi-
...native if I was to meet it on the ...street."
...He likes his serious better than his
...humorous verse, and looks upon
..."Bereaved" as his most satisfactory
...work. He derives his best profits

...Why General Butler Erased the Prayer.
...I was sitting in the state house
...near the governor when he took the ...oath of office. He not only has to ...take it, but to sign his name in a lit...tle leather bound book, where lots of
...his predecessors have put their auto-
...graphs. He called my attention to
...one page. It was where the solitary
...signature of "Benj. F. Butler" ap...pears.
...In the oath the words "So help me,
...God," were stricken out. B. F. did it
...himself. I asked the reason why.
...One of the officials standing by told
...me that Governor Butler remarked
...as he crossed out the words, "The ...constitution of this state has no refer...ence to God."

...The mountaineers of our southern

fire under control by scraping the leaves away all around their homesteads. In fir woods, however, especially during the prevalence of a stiff gale, such precautions often become unavailing, and in 1891, when the hills around the tributaries of the Susquehanna presented the appearance of blazing volcanoes, the flames
in several instances were known to overleap treeless spaces of more than a hundred yards.—San Francis-

A Surprised Informant.
What woman has not suffered beneath the well meant information
volunteered by strangers in regard to her hair, her hair, her shoestring or her skirt braid? How often, when some kindly disposed intruder has told her for the twelfth time in one morning that some absolutely unmendable break has occurred in her costume, has she stifled her natural rage and murmured, "Thank you!"
There was a woman on Broadway
the other morning who had grown
weary of this and who had revolted.
In the first place, some man of heavy foot and unseeing eye had trodden upon her skirt and ripped it from its band so that it trailed and flopped in anything but a fashionable manner.
Then shopping had further worn upon her and she was very cross indeed. Finally, as she stood in front of a stationer's window, a man
stepped up and said in the cheerful
tones of a person who loves to communicate interesting facts just what the woman had heard nine or ten times before:
"Madam, I beg your pardon, but your skirt is dragging in the back."
He almost dropped in a lifeless heap of astonishment when the long suffering woman turned and said in tones of concentrated hatred:
"Will you please mind your own business!"—New York World.
Mongolian Camels.
The popular idea regarding "the ship of the desert" is completely at fault if applied to the camels of Mongolia and Pechili. Juvenile natural histories talk of the soft padded
foot for which the animal is so distinguished, as if a "sandy bottom"
were the only surface upon which he could walk with comfort. But the greater part of all mercantile transport in north China is performed by camels, and except in the immediate neighborhood of Peking sand is an unknown luxury to this much enduring beast. How vast is the number of camels thus employed
may be guessed from the fact that during our day's journey we passed
more than 800 wending their dilatory way from the Tatar steppes to the plains of Chi-Li.
They chiefly carried soda soap, a kind of animal alkali or lye found on the borders of Mongolia, and cut into blocks each weighing about 200 pounds. At no time is the camel a prepossessing object, but here nature provides him with so shaggy a covering that his ungainly form becomes even more hideous.—N. B.
Dennys in Century.
Street Car Etiquette.
The etiquette of elevated railway
travel is elusive. Some gentlemen still punctiliously rise to give their seats to women. Others incline to the view that they can still merit the title of gentleman and hold on to their seats into the bargain. Whether this is the result of the general attempt of women to elbow their way into the callings of men or the outcome of some more subtle deterioration on the part of men themselves
offers a pretty field for speculation.
Whatever the cause, the fact of this changed attitude remains. So far as elevated railway travel is concerned
the resulting rule of polite conduct seems to resolve itself into some such shape as this: If you have a seat you are justified in keeping it regardless of the number of women that may happen to stand in consequence, but if you are standing when a seat happens to be vacated it is not good form
to engage in a contest with a woman
for it.—New York Times.
Some Witty Replies.
Lord Henry Bentinck, though he was shortsighted and had to wear
glasses, was an admirable rider and a most popular master of hounds. It was he who inquired from a rash cavalier who was overriding his hounds, "May I ask, sir, do you smell
the fox?" and who said to a large landed proprietor suspected of vulpi-cidal acts, on his remarking that he regarded a particular wood as quite a seminary for foxes, "I think, general, you mean cemetery."
Spending Christmas with a friend,
Lord Henry was asked at luncheon
by the rector after service in a church
which had been profusely adorned with evergreens, but in which the congregation had been small, what he thought of the decorations. "I
he thought of the decorations," "I thought," he replied, "that there was plenty of cover, but very little game."

Drawing a Jury in Washington.
In drawing a jury W. H. Fisher, a druggist, and W. S. Sigourney, an undertaker, were excused on account of their avocation, while E. P. Cohen, a clothing dealer, who also pleaded pressing business engagements as a reason for not serving, was not excused. "Your business," remarked Judge Miller, "is not so pressing as that of the other gentlemen. Mr.
Fisher has to dose the patient and then Mr. Sigourney has to take him out and bury him, but your customers can wait. I think you are competent."—Washington Post.
A Blessing.
A youth recently gone over went down on his knees in a Protestant drawing room and asked a cardinal who entered for his blessing. The magnificent old man looked ruffled,
and said in impatient tones and without any punctuation, "God bless you get up sir," and passed away.—

HELD FOR MURDER.

SUPT. LAW INDICTED FOR A GRADE CROSSING HORROR.

A Flagman, a Gateman, and an Engineer
Also Blamed with the Superintendent for the Accident in Chicago at Forty-seventh Street.

Murder Is Charged.

GRADE-CROSSING slaughter was stamped as legal murder by a Chicago grand jury and Chas. D. Law, an important officer of one of the greatest railways in America, will be forced into court to defend himself against the charge of criminal destruction of human life. With him will be arraigned the flagman and gateman whose negligence was responsible for leaving open the gates through which a street car dragged four people to death, and the locomotive engineer whose recklessness gave the touch necessary to complete the death trap. The case upon which the indictments were based was the accident on the Pittsburg and Fort Wayne Road at the 47th street crossing on Dec. 29. A crowded horsecar was permitted to pass through the gates, and before it was half across the tracks a locomotive drawing a construction train at a furious rate of speed struck it. The car was smashed and in the wreck four persons lost their lives and many were injured. The accident was so clearly chargeable to the carelessness of the railway employees and to the absolute recklessness of public safety countenanced by the management in the running of trains, that the State's Attorney determined to make the case a matter of grand jury investigation. The jury heard the testimony and came to the conclusion that the matter should be carried further. The grounds upon which the indictment was found are that conclusive evidence was presented to show that Mr. Law had general supervision of the railroad lines and that he was responsible for the speed at which the trains were run.

Gover's Gold Policy.

A STATEMENT concerning the new administration's financial policy has been published in a Wall street newspaper. It was asserted that, above all things, the new policy will be to make every dollar of United States money as good as gold. Just how this is to be done was not explained, but the following plan was said to have the approval of Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Carlisle: First—Retire all paper money. Second—Coin silver to take its place; issue coin certificates as receipts for deposits of coin. Third—Establish an equivalent fund to hold and maintain the difference in gold between the bullion value and the face value of silver coins. To do this, purchase the gold required by an appropriation from the revenues of the Treasury from year to year, or sell United States bonds and apply the proceeds to said purchase. When the plan is carried out the money of the United States will be gold coin and silver coin equivalent with gold—the money of the Constitution.

Harrison Decides to Lecture.

EARLY Thursday afternoon President Harrison sent a note to Senator Stanford informing him that he had decided to accept the chair at Palo Alto University. There has been considerable doubt as to whether Mr. Harrison would go to California, as he had set his heart on resuming his practice of law in Indianapolis. He would probably have adhered to this intention had not domestic afflictions changed his plans. The annual trip to California will be a welcome diversion for him, and as his time there will not be spent in idleness, the place he has accepted will be particularly pleasing. He will go to California in October to deliver his course and it is expected that he will spend some time in sight-seeing. His salary has not been made public, but it will be large enough to save him from working if he is not so disposed. Senator Stanford was greatly pleased when he received the President's acceptance.

A COMMISSION has reported that W. T. Adams, formerly of Cincinnati, Ohio, who killed a man in the City of Mexico in a quarrel some time ago, is insane. The Prosecutor of Justice has declared that he must be tried, notwithstanding.

EASTERN.

BOSTON and New York sole leather firms, representing a capital of $45,000,000, have combined with the view of controlling the output of the tanneries under their control and the price of sole leather. The head and front of the movement is Thomas E. Proctor of Boston. It is said there are ninety firms in the agreement.

A BALTIMORE special says: "Blood may be shed in Virginia waters this week. The Maryland oyster men insist on despoiling the oyster beds on the Virginia boundary, and the Virginia oyster police now threaten to shoot to kill. Two Maryland vessels have already been captured, and the Virginia police fleet has been ordered to the scene."

AT Syracuse, N. Y., in the Court of Sessions Orrin A. Skinner, formerly of the law firm of Goudy, Chandler & Skinner of Chicago, was sentenced to five years at hard labor in State Prison. He was captured in Syracuse for forging an acceptance of a draft for $125 drawn on a resident of Chicago named Cowan. Skinner tried to victimize the Commercial Bank as well as the Robert Gero Bank that prosecuted him.

ANARCHIST JOHANN MOST delivered the third of a series of lectures at Newark, N. J., Friday night, and only by a good use of his legs did he escape from the police. There was a motley crowd of 100 men of different nationalities present. There were no police in the hall and after satisfying himself of this Most mounted the speaker's platform. He at once began a personal attack upon the reporter of a German newspaper, who was present, and wrought up his ignorant listeners to such a pitch that he could not control them, and they sprang from their seats and rushed at the reporter, crying, "Kill him! Kill him!" Just as the crowd reached the terrified newspaper man, an alarm was given and several policemen rushed in from the street and rescued him. Most fled.

AMID a storm of hail like a rain of bullets befitting the christening of a formidable battle-ship destined to uphold the supremacy of the nation upon the high seas the great seagoing war vessel Indiana was given worthy baptism shortly after noon Tuesday in the waters of the Delaware from the cramp company's shipyard at Philadelphia. Proud of the honor bestowed upon his native State in the baptismal title President Benjamin Harrison stood at the elbow of the ship's fair young godmother as she christened the monster. Hail, rain, and sleet did not deter 10,000 people from crowding the wharves and the Cramps' ship-yard to view the ceremony and catch a glimpse of the distinguished guests. President Harrison was roundly cheered as he stepped from his car and met Charles H. Cramp, who escorted him to the stand in front of the bow of the battleship. Miss Jessie Miller, the daughter of the Attorney General, was escorted by Henry W. Cramp. Just as the bow moved Miss Miller ejaculated: "I christen thee Indiana." The last word was loud and clear, and the bottle of champagne was splintered against the craft. The salute the Indiana received as it slid into the water was great. Everything in the city that could make a noise did so. Whistles screamed everywhere, and despite the bad weather the launch was a great success.

THE Kansas Supreme Court has decided that the Republican House is the legal House of Representatives; that the Populist Assembly is not a House of Representatives, and has no standing as a law-making body, that all his acts are illegal, and that it has never been nor could be a legal body.

AN aluminum violin has been constructed by a musician of Cincinnati and has been tried in concert as well as in private. It cannot be distinguished by its tone from the wooden instrument. It is claimed that it is superior to wood in durability, freedom from accident, and susceptibility to moisture. It is too early in the history of the new industry to tell of its comparative cost.

THE Spring Wheat Millers' Association is now in operation. It has at present a membership of several hundred millers, representing a daily output of flour reaching into the hundreds of thousands of barrels. The States covered are Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Northern Illinois, and the spring wheat mills of New York State at Buffalo, Rochester and Niagara Falls. The conception of a combine dates from the organization of the Southern Minnesota Millers' Association three or four years ago. The principal object of that Association was to fix the minimum price at which flour should be sold. The headquarters of the Association is in the Corn Exchange Building, Minneapolis. Should the spring wheat dealers' combine prove a success there is little doubt that the winter wheat dealers, who constitute an equally powerful branch of milling, would organize in like manner.

JOHN W. MACKAY, the mining millionaire and President of the Postal Telegraph company, lies in bed in his room at the Palace Hotel at San Francisco with a bullet hole in his back just below the shoulder-blade. W. C. Rippey, the man who shot him, is at the Receiving Hospital with a bullet wound in his chest, self-inflicted and probably mortal. It was a case of attempted assassination. The intended victim will surely recover, and the shooter will almost as surely die. There is only one conclusion as to the motive, and that is that Rippey was practically insane through losses in mines and mining stocks, and that his mania, assuming the homicidal form, was directed against John Mackay as the author of his misfortunes. As far as can now be learned Mackay did not know Rippey, and, in fact, the two men had never met. It was simply a bit of marvelous luck that saved the millionaire from death or injury that would have made him a cripple for life.

AT Nashville, Tenn., in the Criminal Court, Harvey Weakly, on trial for murder, fell dead in the witness stand. When asked if he had killed the victim, Weakly said he hoped God would strike him dead if he had. Hardly had he spoken when he fell dead to the floor.

WASHINGTON.

BOTH houses of Congress have passed the pension bill, which appropriates $165,500,000.

STATE DEPARTMENT officials are not inclined to place any reliance upon the report that a clerk in the office of Consul General New, at London, is a defaulter to the extent of $30,000. They say that the abstraction of fees belonging to the United States to that amount is practically impossible.

WASHINGTON dispatches say that an issue of bonds to meet the demand for gold will likely take place soon. Secretary Foster has entered into a contract with Drexel, Morgan & Co. to exchange bonds for $25,000,000 in gold at the moment the emergency arises. The bonds have been printed and are ready for delivery when the Government finds it necessary to demand gold of the firm named. If there should be an unexpected demand for $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 of gold at any time now there would be forced a bond issue. The bonds, which will draw 4 per cent., are to be sold at a premium, which will make the net interest 3 per cent., anticipating the interest till maturity. The gold is to be delivered in London or at the sub-treasury in New York at the pleasure of the Government. Bonds are to issue only to cover gold delivered. This contract will bind the Cleveland administration should it desire gold and the emergency continue. It was deemed best, a few days ago, to anticipate the worst condition of affairs in order to protect the $100,000,000 of reserve gold and make the listing of gold an impossibility. Under these arrangements the Government has access to $25,000,000 of gold at any time, the option on it, as it were, and yet it will not be compelled to take it unless the free gold in the treasury is exhausted. The interest which the Government will have to pay on these bonds is as low—3 per cent.—as it can be made for an exchange of gold. The contract binds the Cleveland administration to issue the bonds as stated, and take the gold from Drexel, Morgan & Co. when our free gold is exhausted.

INDUSTRIAL.

CONVICT-MADE clothing, imported from New York, is handled by Chicago wholesalers. Chicago manufacturers cannot compete with it, and its presence in the market is in some measure responsible for the "sweaters." These admissions were made by a witness while being examined by Representative O'Donnell during the session of the joint committee of the State Legislature at the Sherman Hotel. The witness was Charles H. Lobenstein, designer and foreman for C. P. Kellogg & Co. His evidence was corroborated by T. F. Vaughn, of the firm of E. Rothschild & Bro., who said that every clothing house in the city handled more or less of the goods manufactured at Sing Sing by Cane, McCaffery & Co., of New York City. "This is the milk of the cocaine," said Mr. O'Donnell. "I regard it as the most important information that the committee has yet found. These prison-made goods lower prices, and to compete with them the manufacturer must oppress the contractor, and to this is largely due the evil of the 'sweater.'"

FOREIGN.

KING GEORGE TUBOU, of the Tonga Islands, is dead.

THE bill to disestablish the Welsh Church has passed its first reading in the British House of Commons.

GLADSTONE secured precedence for his Irish home rule bill in the House of Commons by a vote of 270 to 228.

THE Brussels office of affairs of the Congo State has received dispatches to the effect that Arab slave-traders under Tippoo Tib's son had been defeated and 600 prisoners and 600 rifles taken by Commander d'Hanis.

THE referendum instituted by the liberal societies of Belgium to learn the sentiment of the people on the suffrage question was taken throughout the kingdom. In Brussels, where some 25,000 votes were cast, a large majority favored M. Janssen's proposal of universal manhood suffrage. The Socialists voted for it to a man. Catholics and the more moderate liberals abstained from voting.

A TERRIBLE calamity has overtaken the village of Gergely, near the town of Pako, in Hungary, situated on the River Danube, about sixty miles south of Buda. Owing to a sudden rise of the Danube the 1,600 inhabitants of Gergely found the mud huts in which they lived surrounded by water. They fled as fast as they could in the direction of Pako. One mother with five children sank in the waters and perished. Many others, the number of whom is as yet unknown, were drowned in the flood and the survivors reached Pako in a most deplorable condition.

BRITISH COLUMBIA banks after March 1 will only accept American silver at 20 per cent. discount.

PETER JACKSON made his first appearance as an actor in San Francisco at Stockwell's Theater in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." There was a big, good-natured crowd to welcome the dusky pugilist. He is the biggest Uncle Tom on the stage, his massive shoulders looming up even in the dress of the old slave. Peter has overcome much of his nervousness and tries to do something more than merely talk his lines. The imitative faculty of the African enables him to do much more on the stage than Sullivan ever could; still, Peter is not a howling success as an actor.

R. G. DUN & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

While $3,000,000 gold went abroad during the week and $500,000 more is expected to go, there is no increase of apprehension about the monetary future, and the business world pays little attention to the action or inaction of Congress, though the increasing probabilities of an extra session are regarded with some interest. The Treasury has not materially changed its balances of gold and silver, and exports of specie from New York are a little more satisfactory, closely approximating last year's thus far. Imports continue extraordinarily large, and the outflow of gold must be expected to remain heavy as long as present trade conditions last, unless foreign purchases of American securities should come to balance the account. The business failures occurring throughout the country number 230, as compared with totals of 233 the prior week. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 270.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAW-MAKERS.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—Gist of the Business.

The National Senate.

Mr. Hatch received another reverse Friday in his efforts to secure consideration of the anti-option bill. It was his third reverse within twenty-four hours, and it caused much alarm in the anti-option ranks. There was a disposition to criticize Mr. Hatch for lack of judgment in bringing the bill forward in antagonism to the appropriation bill. Mr. Hatch, who was presiding over the committee of the whole, left the chair and addressing his successor said that for three legislative days the Indian bill had been under consideration. There was not, he continued, an intelligent member of the House who did not absolutely know that at this hour of the session the appropriation bill was being used as a means of obstructing the consideration of the anti-option bill, and that the opponents of the latter measure, the friends of the democratization of silver and the friends of the Senate rider to an appropriation bill were in an absolute agreement and conspiracy, and no gentleman from this time until 12 o'clock March 1 could shield himself under any sort of subterfuge unless he was willing to go on record not only as opposed to the anti-option bill, but as the opponent of silver and the friend of the 3 per cent. amendment. The House was brought face to face with this issue, and he gave notice that he would continue this struggle in the interest of the people as against the interest of Lombard street and Wall street until the people's rights were preserved. The House then took a recess until the evening session, which was to be devoted to the consideration of private pension bills. The debate in the Senate was over the question presented in the legislative appropriation bill, whether the Utah Commission, which has been in existence for the last ten years, should be continued, as proposed by the House, or continued in office, as recommended by the Senate Committee on Appropriations. The question was decided in favor of continuing the commission.

A fight was inaugurated in the House Saturday. It was over the sundry civil appropriation bill which contains the Sherman bond amendment. There are in all 237 amendments to the bill. Mr. Holman desired that all—except the Sherman amendment, upon which there was to be debate—be nonconcurrent in. Mr. Bland, as leader of the opposition to the Sherman amendment, objected unless it was agreed that that amendment should be, after debate, also nonconcurrent in. This suggestion of Mr. Bland's raised the antagonism of Mr. Cockran, and no agreement was arrived at. The liver men then resorted to filibustering tactics, which were effectual, and after a speech by Mr. Bland the bill went over without action. After four hours passed in discussing various amendments (of little importance) to the legislative appropriation bill the Senate passed the bill, insisted on its amendments, and requested a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes.

The pension appropriation bill was passed by the Senate Monday without any amendments. It appropriates for army and navy pensions (including widows and minor children) $165,000,000 and about $1,500,000 in addition for fees of examining surgeons, clerk hire at pension agencies and some small items. Mr. Gorman commented upon the magnitude of pension appropriations, and gave it as his opinion that it would be necessary to appropriate $200,000,000 for pensions next session. There was a general expression in the discussion which took place that no material reduction could be effected except through a repeal or modification of some of the laws on the subject, and that there was no probability of such a thing. One of the most important bills affecting railroads ever passed by Congress was that which went through the House Monday afternoon, providing for a uniform system of brakes and car-couplers. The bill has already passed the Senate, so that the action of the House insures a comprehensive American system of safeguards for railway travel. The bill passed in spite of the most bitter opposition from the railroads, which contended that it would bankrupt some of the Southern roads, and would cost the railroads of the country from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000.

The important features of Tuesday's session of the Senate were the passage of the naval and agricultural appropriation bills and of the bills regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors in the District of Columbia. House bill extending for one year the time for filing petitions in the Court of Private Land Claims was reported and passed; also Senate joint resolutions authorizing the loan of the portraits of the Chief Justices of the United States for exhibition at the World's Columbian Exposition. The greater part of the day in the House was consumed in the consideration of an election case, in which there was no interest manifested. After three hours' debate Turpin (Dem.), from the Fourth District of Alabama, was declared entitled to retain the seat which he had occupied since the opening of the present Congress, and his contestant, McDuffie, was declared to have been not duly elected. On motion of Mr. Springer a bill was passed, without opposition, providing that after July 1, 1893, pig iron shall be exempt from duty.

The postoffice appropriation bill came before the Senate Wednesday and was discussed to some extent on the question as to the route of the Southern fast mail. That question was not disposed of when the conference report on the sundry civil appropriation bill was presented. The report led to a long financial discussion on the Sherman bill, but the amendment was rejected from the Senate. The time of the House was consumed principally in considering a motion made by Mr. Hatch to suspend the rules and pass the anti-option bill. The debate was limited to half an hour and the time doled out in two or three minute portions. Mr. Hatch made the longest speech, and that did not exceed eight minutes. He then, stating that he had done his best to promote the interests of the farmers, left the subject to the House, and the House decided by a vote of 172 to 124 not to agree to Mr. Hatch's motion—a two-thirds vote being necessary under a suspension of the rules.

WITH POMP AND ECLAT

THE NEW ADMINISTRATION IS USHERED IN.

Cleveland and Stevenson Placed at the Head of the Nation Amid Great Democratic Enthusiasm—Nearly Half a Million Visitors in Washington—Chief Justice Fuller Administers the Oath—Military Demonstration—Gorgeous Fireworks Display—The Inaugural Ball—Gen. Harrison's Welcome Home.

Democracy's Great Day.

GROVER CLEVELAND has for the second time been inaugurated President of the United States, and the ceremonies attending his re-accession to the office were noted for more than usual pomp and splendor. These inauguration affairs are pretty big things, and this second inauguration of Mr. Cleveland was a little the biggest thing of the sort ever seen in this country, and that means, of course, the biggest affair of the kind ever seen anywhere, for no other country than ours, and no other city than Washington, can boast among its attractions a quadrennial coronation by an outpouring of the masses and an outcropping of intense partisan joy.

The capital city for this occasion was decked out as it never had been decked out before. The decorations were superbly brilliant. All preparations for the event were on a great scale, and the strangers who availed themselves of the accommodations provided were estimated at over 200,000. More would have attended had the railroads been more liberal.

These great inaugurals have three principal popular features. One is the grand parade from the Capitol down the avenue past the Treasury and the White House. This occurs in the afternoon. A second popular feature is the fireworks and illumination in the evening, and the third is the inaugural ball. These are the features in which the great crowds of visitors are interested. The inauguration itself is not much to them, because so few are able to see the new President and Vice President take the oath of office. Only 1,700 people can be crowded into the Senate Chamber, where Vice President Stevenson was sworn in, and after the Diplomatic Corps, the House of Representatives, the Supreme Court, the Army and Navy, the press, and families of high officials, and a few favored or influential persons have been accommodated there isn't any room left. As a matter of fact this year not one in a hundred of the people who thought their importance entitled them to admission as cabinet officers before he descended to the blue room to greet the incoming President and party. The house was filled with tributes in the shape of floral pieces, sent from all parts of the country.

Drive to the Capitol.

Shortly before 11 o'clock the president and President-elect entered the carriage to drive to the capitol. They

States" was announced and entered,
leaning on the arm of the Senator who
had been attending him all the morning.
He sat just in front of the Vice President's desk, and at once the President-
elect appeared through the large swinging doors and took his seat beside Mr.
Harrison.

Inaugural Ceremonies.

Mr. Stevenson's great moment had

THE PRESIDENT AND THE VICE PRESIDENT.

were seated in an open landau, drawn by four black horses wearing white harness. The President occupied the right-hand seat, with the President-elect on his left, while facing them, with their backs to the horses, rode the dignified Senator Ransom, of North Carolina, who was a member of the committee before at Mr. Cleveland's inauguration, with another Senator on his left. Behind them was another open landau, in which rode Vice President-elect Stevenson with a third member of the inauguration committee.

This coach was drawn by four white horses with black harness.

The march up Pennsylvania avenue
took about half an hour, during which the crowds from one end of the line to the other rent the air with cheers upon cheers. When the procession reached the Peace Monument at the rear of the Capitol, the Chief of the Capitol police force, with his men, cleared the way to the Senate approach at the east, while the procession wound its way through the south portion of the beautiful grounds, up by the House and along the east front of the Capitol to the Senate,
where the President and President-elect left their carriages, and, each leaning on the arm of a member of the Senate escort committee, disappeared
within the Capitol.

Meanwhile in the Senate chamber the scene had been converted into an example setting for the historic scene which was to take place. The most distinguished men and women in this country
had gathered in the Senate for the first acts in the inauguration. The Senators themselves were seated on the right of the Senate, with the Democratic side
left clear for the distinguished people who were to adorn the occasion. Then came the arrival of the diplomatic corps,
which was one of the very interesting features, as every diplomat who had a uniform of national costume wore it.
Many ladies of the legations occupied the diplomatic galleries also. The next to arrive were the Justices of the Supreme Court and then came the families of the incoming President and Vice President. Then after a moment of waiting "the President of the United States" was announced and entered,

leaning on the arm of the Senator who
had been attending him all the morning.
He sat just in front of the Vice President's desk, and at once the President-
elect appeared through the large swinging doors and took his seat beside Mr.
Harrison.

great platform, the demonstration was so prolonged that it was some time before Mr. Cleveland could begin his inaugural address which he then delivered.

When it was finished amid renewed cheers, which seemed to grow more excited each time, Mr. Cleveland turned to the Chief Justice of his own creation, and said: "I am now prepared to take the oath prescribed by law."

The scene that followed awed the multitude into stillness. It was the scene for the right of which many a man in the crowd had fought. It is the crowning scene in the life of any American citizen, and no doubt the significance flashed over many a man and woman there. There was the true illustration of the great American rallying cry: "Of the people, for the people, and by the people."

As the President stood there and looked out on the people he was to govern, he saw representatives of every branch that makes this great nation.
People of every degree and condition,
and for the peace and prosperity of all these, and many more, he is responsible. There were brilliant uniforms, and up the street was a detachment of artillery, whose cannons thundered
forth as he bent to kiss the Bible and for the second time bound himself to be the father of the nation. Then the crowd on the platform and the crowd below broke loose. There was no restraint to Democratic ardor. The cheers almost awoke the dead on Arlington, where many a man sleeps who, only four years ago, stood on that very same platform and listened to Benjamin Harrison take the same oath. The people crowded about the newly made President, and it was with difficulty that he escaped their congratulations and reached the shelter of the capitol, where he prepared to join the procession already forming.

The Great Parade.
Now came the great military demonstration of the day. During the forenoon the military companies at their

Fourteen Governors, accompanied by their staffs, participated in the parade
and marched at the head of the troops
and political clubs from their respective States. The Governors wore the black clothes of the civilian, but the members of their staffs were in full uniform. Including them there were nearly 50,000 men in line.

Fireworks at Night.

Shortly after sunset occurred one of the most dazzling and extensive illuminations ever attempted. It was nothing less than a simultaneous lighting of that great thoroughfare, Pennsylvania avenue, from the Capitol to Washington Circle, a distance of two miles,

by means of eighty mammoth chemical illuminators, each containing fifteen pounds of composition. This illumination continued half an hour. Meanwhile the Treasury building was especially lighted up with two huge revolving suns.

These were only a part of the fireworks, which cost nearly $5,000. The devices and set pieces were: 1. Equestrian statue of Washington, copied
from the statue in Washington Circle. 2. Equestrian statue of Jackson, copied from the statue in Lafayette
Park, opposite the White House. 3.
Allegorical figure of Columbia. 4.
Pictures of President Harrison and Vice President Morton. 5. Pictures of President Cleveland and Vice President Stevenson, surmounted by the sentence "Public office is a public trust." 6. The national colors, surmounted by the words "Good night."

Ball and Banquet.

The inaugural ball was a great affair.
The enormous hall in the Pension
Building will accommodate about 15,000
persons, but the number of tickets sold to the ball this year was limited to 12,000 at $5 per ticket. There were one hundred musicians in the main orchestra and sixty in the promenade orchestra. The floor manager had 600 assistants, to each of whom was assigned a section of the hall. They were all in communication with their chief by electric wire. Every one pressed his button when the sets in his part of the hall were filled, and when all had signaled, the floor manager started the music. The President and Vice President, accompanied by the Presidential
party, arrived shortly after nine o'clock,
and were received in a manner in keeping with the occasion. There was such an enormous crush that dancing was almost as vigorous an exercise as playing foot-ball, but all had a good time.

Gen. Harrison, escorted by a committee of distinguished admirers, left Washington by special train for his home, in Indianapolis, where a monstrous reception befitted the return of Indiana's honored son had been ar-

there. As soon as the oath was admin-

range. A band was present at the dis-embarking, and escorted the party to the Harrison home, on North Delaware street. At night a popular meeting of a strictly non-partisan chara-ter was held at the State House, members of all parties joining in extending a hearty welcome home. Mayor Sullivan presided and Gov. Matthews delivered the welcome address.

His Funny Story.

"I want to tell you something funny that happened to me this morning," said Spatts cheerfully.
"All right," replied Hunker. "Go ahead."
"I started down street after my laundry, and"—
"You mean you went after your washing, I suppose," Hunker interrupted. "I imagine you do not really own a laundry."
"Of course that's what I mean," said Spatts, a trifle less cheerily.
"Well, I had went"— Hunker interrupted him again.
"Perhaps you mean had gone."
"Certainly, I had gone but a little ways when I"—
"I presume you mean a little way, not a little ways," corrected Hunker.
"I presume so," admitted Spatts, but the cheerfulness was all gone out of his manner. "As I was going to say, I had gone but a little way when it happened. It tickled me so I thought I'd just have to lay down and die."

"Lie down and die, not lay down, is the correct form of the verb."
"Oh, yes, I know; but those kind of errors seem to come natural"—
"Not those kind of errors, my dear boy. Say that kind of errors. But go on with your funny story. I'm getting interested."
"Are you? Well, I've lost my interest in it. I don't believe there was anything funny in it after all. Good day."
"Good day."
"Now, I wonder if I've offended him?" Hunker thought as Spatts strode off.—W. H. Siviter in Harper's Bazar.

The Kindergarten in America.

Of the sixteen American cities with a population of over 200,000, only four—Philadelphia, Boston, Milwaukee and St. Louis—have incorporated the kindergarten on any large scale in their public school systems. Four more—New York, Chicago, Brooklyn and Buffalo—have kindergarten associations organized to introduce the new method as a part of free public education. In San Francisco kindergartens are maintained with no apparent expectation of uniting them to the free school system.

Only Baltimore, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Detroit among the seven cities left—the other three being Pittsburgh, Washington and New Orleans—are returned as having charitable or religious associations supporting kindergartens. In 1887-8 forty-six lesser places were named as having "one or more kindergartens, mostly experimental," connected with public schools.—Talcott Williams in Century.

Signal Mounds on St. John's River.

A ship's officer who has spent much time on the St. John's river, Florida, thinks that he has solved the problem as to the origin of the shell mounds that occur along that stream. The river twists about in an extraordinary way, so that in many places the view along the water extends for only a few rods, but he finds that a tall object or the smoke of a fire shown from the top of one of these mounds could be seen from those next below and above, and he believes that these eminences were Indian signal stations, by means of which the natives were able to announce the approach of a hostile

Where the Romans Excelled.

The Romans were not in want of teachers or of models, for they had the Egyptians and the Greeks, but they never succeeded in creating an art characteristic of themselves. No people perhaps ever betrayed less originality in their productions in this field, but they raised the other elements of civilization to the highest point.

Their military organization assured them the domination of the world; their political and judicial institutions are still patterns for us, and their literature inspired the centuries that followed them.
