MURDERED.

Jay E. Pulver, an Ypsilenti Watchman, Killed, Saturday Night — Clifton Hand arrested on Suspicion

The dead and mangled body of Jay E. Pulver, nightwatchman at the Hay & Todd Mnfg. Co.'s plant, at Ypsilanti, was discovered at an early hour Sunday morning. His head was pounded to a jelly and the features terribly mangled. A pair of pipe tongs seem to have been used in committing the crime.

Clifton Hand, a former employe of the company, who had been discharged, was arrested, charged with the crime. Spots having the appearance of blood and clots of something like brain were found on his clothing. It is said that he has made various threats that he would get even with the company for discharging him, and many believe that if he is the murderer, he was trying to injure the company's property Saturday night, and that

Hand is in charge of Sheriff Brenner ther developements.

Pruning Street Trees.

Street trees sometimes need pruning. If, however, they have been originally well selected a small knife will be all that is necessary for a few years to remove an occasional branch that starts out in the wrong place. There is rarely any necessity for cutting off a large limb. If this necessity ever does come the limb should be cut off close to the trunk and the place smoothed over and painted, so that the wound will be ultimately

We have often explained that wherever a stub is left this must inevitably die, and as the trunk grows about it there will be a pug of rotted wood where the branch orig inally grew, and the disease will eat inward and downward as the water soaks in from without.-Garden and

A Snake Story from Hope.

Hope is a quiet, out of the way place, but when it comes to snake stories some of her residents are artists. It is related by a veracious resident of a farm just outside the village that one of the hired men went out and cut a hole in the ice that covered a small pool and was amazed to see a snake pop its head up through the hole. He recovered from his surprise sufficiently to decapitate the snake, and when it was taken from the water it was found to measure nearly three feet in length .-- Providence Journal.

Baron Reinach.

What an astounding type Baron Reinach was! He was my neighbor, and I often met him. The baron kept a close eye on the bureaus of the war office and on the judges. Commissariat contracts were to be had at the one place, and immunity was to be secured by the friendship of the other. He understood business as being l'argent des autres. Outside of business he was a jovial sort of person, and his bluff manners hid his singular keenness. He was in many respects the counterpart of the late M. de Villemessant, who founded The Figaro, and who, too, had much real and false bonhommie.

The baron had a brain for big bust ness combinations and for music. His mistake was in hunting too many hares at a time. He filled his coffers, no doubt, out of Panama and recouped, by getting the De Lesseps to make him their great wirepuller, heavy losses that he had previously incurred. I believe that he died with full money safes. But I also suspect No. 12-Detroit Night Ex. 4:58 a.m. that he was often on the brink of No. 10-Atlantic Express. 7:28 a. m. ruin, and that nobody could say, not No. 14-Grand Rapids Ex. 10:13 a. m. even himself, what he was worth.-3:52 p. m. Full Text of the Customary Speech of the Incoming Executive-Says Tariff and Finances Should Receive Attention to Avert Dangers That Menace the Country.

Talked to Thousands.

Immediately after receiving the oath from Chief Justice Fuller, President Cleveland delivered his second inaugural address. It was as follows:

My fellow-citizens, in obedience to the mandate of my countrymen I am about to dedicate myself to their service under the sanction of a solemn oath. Deeply moved by the expression of confidence and personal attachment which has called me to this service I am sure my gratitude can make no better return than the pledge I now give before God and these witnesses of unreserved and complete devotion to the interests and welfare of those who have honored me. I deem it fitting on this occasion, while indicating the opinions I hold concerning public cating the opinions I hold concerning public cating the opinions I hold concerning public cating the opinions I hold concerning public questions of present importance, to also briefly refer to the existence of certain conditions and tendencies among our people which seem to menace the integrity and usefulness of their government. While every American citizen must contemplate with the utmost pride and enthusiasm the growth and expan-sion of our country, the sufficiency of our in-stitutions to stand against the rudest shocks of violence, the wonderful thrift and enterprise of our people, and the demonstrated superiority of our free government, it behooves us to constantly watch for every symptom of insidious infirmity that threatens our national vigor. The strong man who, in the confidence of sturdy health, courts the sternest activities of life and rejoices in the hardihood of constant labor, may still have lurking near his vitals the unheeded disease that dooms him to sudden collapse. It cannot that dooms him to sudden collapse. It cannot be doubted that our stupendous achievements as a people and our country's robust strength have given rise to a heedlessness of those laws governing our national health, which we can no more evade than human life can escape the laws of God and nature.

Tackles the Money Question.

Manifestly nothing is more vital to our su-premacy as a nation and to the beneficent purses of our government than a sound and stable currency. Its exposure to degradation should at once arouse to activity the most en-lightened statesmanship; and the danger of depreciation in the purchasing power of the wazes paid to toil should furnish the strongest incentive to prompt and conservative action. In dealing with our present embarrassing situation, as related to this subject, we will be wise if we temper our confidence and faith in our national strength and resources with the frank concession that even these will not permit us to defy with impunity the inexorable laws of finance and trade. At the same time, in our efforts to adjust differences of opinion, we should be free from intolerance or passion and our judgments should be unmoved by alluring phrases and unvexed by selfish interests. I am confident that such an approach to the subject will result in prudent and effective remedial legislation. In the meantime, so far as the executive branch of the government can intervene, none of the powers with which it is invested will be withheld when their exercise is deemed necessary to maintain our national credit or avert financial disaster.

Concerning the Tariff. Closely related to the exaggerated confidence in our country's greatness, which tends to a disregard of the rules of national safety, another danger confronts us not less serious. I refer to the prevalence of a popular disposition to ex-pect from operation of the government especial and direct individual advantages. The verdict of our voters, which condemned the injustice of maintaining protection for protection's sake, enjoins upon the people's servants the duty of eventual transfer of the protection of the people of duty of exposing and destroying the brood of kindred evils which are the unwholesome prog-eny of paternalism. This is the bane of republican institutions and the constant peril of government by the people. It degrades to the purposes of wily craft the plan of rule our fathers established and bequeathed to us as an object of our love and veneration. It perverts the patriotic sentiment of our countrymen and tempts them to a pitul calcula-tion of the sordid gain to be derived from their government's maintenance. It undermines the self-reliance of our people and substitutes in its place dependence upon government favor-itism. It stifles the spirit of true Americanism and stupefies every ennobling trait of American citizenship. American citizenship.

The lessons of paternalism ought to be unliked and the better lesson taught that, we let the people should patriotically and cole of ully support their government, its function. do not include the support of the people.

Pension Expenditures.

The reptance of this principle leads to a f bounties and subsidies which bur-labor and thrift of a portion of our to aid ill-advised or languishing en-s in which they have no concern. It refus: citize leads so to a challenge of wild and reckless pension expenditure, which overleaps the bounds of grateful recognition of patriotic service and prostitutes to vicious uses the people's prompt and generous impulse to aid those disabled in their country's defense. Every thoughtful American must realize the importance of checking at its beginning any tendency in public or private station to regard frugality and economy as virtues which we may sarely outgrow. The toleration of this idea resiles in the waste of the people's money by their chosen servants and encourages prodigality and extravagance in the home life of our countrymen. Under our scheme of government the waste of public money is a crime against the citizen; and the contempt of our people for economy and frugality in their personal affairs deplorably saps the strength and sturdiness of our national character. It is a plain dictate of honesty and good government that public expenditures should be limited by public necessity, and that this should be measured by the rules of strict economy; and it is equally clear that frugality among the people is the best guaranty of a contented and strong support of free inof a contented and strong support of free in-

Stands by Civil Service Reform.

One mode of the misappropriation of public funds is avoided when appointments to office, instead of being the rewards of partisan activity, are awarded to those whose efficiency prom-ises a fair return of work for the compensation paid to them. To secure the fitness and competency of appointees to office, and to remove from political action the demoralizing madness for spoils, civil service reform has found a place in our public policy and laws. The benefits already gained through this instrumentality and the further usefulness it promises entitle it to the hearty support and encouragement of all who desire to see our public service well performed or who hope for the elevation of political sentiment and the purifica-

The existence of immense aggregations of kindred enterprises and combinations of business interests formed for the purpose of limitness interests formed for the purpose of limitness. ing production and fixing prices, is inconsistent ith the fair field which ought to be open to every independent activity. Legitimate strife in business should not be superseded by an enforced concession to the demands of combienforced concession to the demands of combi-nations that have the power to destroy; nor should the people to be served lose the benefit of cheapness, which usually results from whole-some competition. These aggregations and combinations frequently constitute conspir-acies against the interests of the people, and in all their phases they are unnatural and op-posed to our American sense of fairness. To the extent that they can be reached and re-strained by federal power, the general govern-ment should relieve our citizens from their ment should relieve our citizens from their interference and exactions.

Loyalty to the principles upon which our government rests positively demands that the equality before the law, which it guarantees to every citizen, should be justly and in good faith conceded in all parts of the land. The enjoyment of this right follows the badge of citizenship, wherear found and unimpaired citizenship wherever found, and, unimpaired by race or color, it appeals for recognition to America manliness and fairness.

Ferbearance with Indians.

Our relations with the Indians located with-in our borders impose upon us responsibilities we cannot escape. Humanity and consistency require us to treat them with all forbearance, and in our dealings with them to honestly and considerately regard their rights and interests.

Every effort should be made to lead them, advancement.

The people of the United States have decreed that on this day the control of their government in its legislative and executive branches shall be given to a political party pledged in the most positive terms to the accomplishment of tariff reform. They have thus determined in favor of a more just and equitable system of Federal taxation. The agents they have chosen to carry out their purposes are bound by their promises not less than by the command of their masters to devote themselves unremittingly to tals service.

While there should be no surrender of principle our task must be undertaken wisely and without vindictiveness. Our mission is not punishment, but the rectification of wrongs. If in lifting burdens from the daily life of our people we reduce inordinate and unequal advantages too long enjoyed this is but a necessary incident of our return to right and justice.

If we exact from unwilling minds acquiescence in the theory of an honest distribution of the fund of governmental beneficence treasured up for all, we cut insist upon a principle which underlies our free institutions. When we tear aside the delusions and misconceptions which have blinded our countrymen to their condition under vicious tariff laws, we but show them how far they have been led away from the paths of contentment and prosperity. When we proclaim that the necessity for revenue to support the Government furnishes the only justification for taxing the people we annue to support the Government furnishes the only justification for taxing the people we announce a truth so plain that its denial would seem to indicate the extent to which judgment may be influenced by familiarity with perversions of the taxing power; and when we seek to reinstate the self-confidence and business enterprise of our citizens by discrediting an abject dependence upon governmental favor we strive to stimulate those elements of American character which support the hope of American achievement.

Must Redeem Pledges.

Anxiety for the redemption of the pledges which my party has made and solicitude for the complete justification of the trust the people have reposed in us constrain me to remind those with whom I am to co-operate that we can succeed in doing the work which has been especially set before us only by the most sincere, harmonious and disinterested effort. Even if insuperable obstacles and opposition prevent the consummation of our task we shall hardly be excused, and if failure can be traced to our fault or neglect we may be sure the people will hold us to a swift and exacting accountability.

The sath I now take to preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States not only impressively defines the great responsibility I assume, but suggests obedience to constitutional commands as the rule by which my official conduct must be guided. I shall to the best of my ability and my official conduct must be guided. I shall to the best of my ability and within my sphere of duty preserve the constitution by loyally protecting every grant of federal power it contains by defending all its restraints when attacked by impatience and restlessness, and by enforcing its limitations and reservations in favor of the States and the people. Fully impressed with the gravity of the duties that confront me, mindful of my weakness, I should be appalled if it were my lot to bear unaided the responsibilities which await me. I am, however, saved from discouragement when I remember that I shall have the support and the counsel and co-operation of wise and patriotic men who will stand at my side in cabinet places or will represent the people in their legislative halls. I find also much comfort in remembering that my countrymen are just and generous, and in the assurance that they will not condemn those who by sincere devotion to their service deserve their forbearance and approval. Above all, I know there is a Supreme lieing who rules the affairs of men, and whose goodness and remember that I shall have the support and the affairs of men, and whose goodness and mercy have always followed the American people, and I know He will not turn from us now if we humbly seek His powerful aid.

MR. STEVENSON SPEAKS.

Makes a Brief Address to the Senate on Assuming His Office.

briefly addressed the Senate in the following language:

Senators, deeply impressed with a sense of its responsibilities and of its dignity. I now enter upon the discharge of the duties of the high office to which I have, been called. I am not unmindful of the fact that among the occupants of this chair during the 104 years of our constitutional history have been statesmen, eminent alike for their talents and their tireless devotion to public duty. Adams Jufferson and tion to public duty. Adams, Jefferson and Calhoun nonored its incumbency during the early days of the republic, while Arthur, Hendricks and Morton have, at a later period of our history, shed luster upon the office of president of the most august deliberative assembly known to men.

I assume the duties of the great trust confided to me with no feeling of self-confidence, but rather with that of grave distrust of my ability satisfactorily to meet its requirements. I may be pardoned for saying that it shall be my earnest endeavor to discharge the important du-ties which lie before me with no less of impartiality and courtesy than of firmness and fidelity. Earnestly invoking the co-operation, the forbearance, the charity of each of its members, I now enter upon my duties as pre-siding officer of the benate.

WHAT THE LEGISLATURE IS

An Impartial Record of the Work Accomplished by Those Who Make Our Laws -How the Time Has Been Occupied During the Past Week.

The Law-Makers.

A bill was reported to the Secate from committee Friday appropriating $77,000 for establishing a home for the feeble-minded on the cottage colony plan. The bill providing for the khones vote recorder was the subject of a long discussion in the House, but pending its that passage it went back to the Judiciary Committee.

In committee of the whole Monday night the House passed a joint resolution proposing amendments to the Constitution fixing the compensation of members of the Legislature at $750 per term; providing for utilizing the labor of convicts on highways, and reducing the time within which bills may be introduced in the Legislature from fifty to thirty-five days. The Senate passed bills appropriating $70,000 for the Industrial Home for Girls. and $102,000 for the State Normal School for 1892 and 1893.

The Senate in committee of the whole Tuesday agreed to a bill establishing a system of Appellate Courts for the relief of the Supremo Cour, and killed a bill providing for a uniform interest rate of 6 per cent. The House passed a bill authorizing the city of Detroit to expend $600,000 in an electr c lighting plant, and spent the remainder of the session on the Mckinley election bill which prohibits placing a candita'e's name in more than one column on the official ballot.

The House was busy Wednesday. Joint resolutions were chiefly considered. One was passed to limit the introduction of bills to the first thirty-five days of the session; another to authorize the employment of chain-gangs on the public roads and bridges of the State. The Senate resolution fixing the salaries of members of the Legislature at $750 for the session failed to pass the House, as did also one requiring persons to reside in the state ninety days before being qualified to vote. The House ways and means committee reported favorably the bill to provile for the raising of a one-sixth mill tax for the support of the State University. In the Senate a bill allowing railroad companies organized under the laws of this State to consolidate with roads organized under the statutes of an adjoining State passed the committee of the whole.

PLACES YET UNKNOWN.

One-fourth of the World's Land Surface Unexplored. It is very curious to consider that with all our knowledge there still remains about one-fourth of the world's land surface unexplored. To begin with but little is known of the polar regions, either north or south-so little, indeed, that we may safely set down 4,800,000 square miles as unexplored.

There is still a wide field for exploration in the interior of the Asiatic continent. The northern half of the Thibetan plateau, much of the Kuen Lun range, the valleys of Sulimani range, and the sources of the great rivers are Mr. Stevenson, on being sworn in as unknown, together with very extensive Vice President of the United States, tracts in Arabia, which no traveler has ever explored. We may estimate this at 1,200,000 square miles. Africa comes next as the great field for explorers. But for the countries round the coast, and the few journeys across the continent by Stanley and others, we may say that Africa has still a vast area unexplored, surely not less than 5,000,000 square miles. At the best the work done in the interior is little more than a reconnoissance. Much exploring work remains to be done in South America, especially in Patagonia, Colombia, and in the enormous basin of the Amazon. It would be below the mark to say that 2,500,000 square miles are yet unknown.

The interior of New Guinea, and many other islands in that part of the world, are almost entirely unexplored. by Europeans. This may be placed at 500,000 square miles.

We have thus a total of unexplored regions of no less an area than 14,000,-00 square miles. As the total land surface of the earth is computed at 51,-600,000 square miles, it will be readily seen of how much we are still ignorant.

Nurses' Cruelty.

"It seems to me," said a woman lately, one whose sons and daugnters are grown and out in the world, "that if I had my children to bring up over again I would give up everything and devote myself to each till he was 5 years old. What I did was to employ nurses-what a travesty of the tenderly significant word-from infancy to about that time, when I looked after them myself. One of my children-he is a married man now-cherishes still a most unreasoning fear of the dark, even of passing an open door of an unlighted apartment, because, forsooth, years ago in his babyhood a nurse urged him to formerly President of France, died in | sleep lest a wolf should come out of the dark and get him.

"A second son will carry to his grave a nervous dread of laughing, born of a practice by another nurse of showing her large, white, glittering teeth in a mirthless grin when, as an infant, he fretted. I caught her at it one day and sent her away, but the mischief was dene, and I have been he pless to combat it. And my nurses were no worse than my neighbors'.

"A child's caretaker should be a childloyer, and who loves a child like his mother? I long to say to every young mother I know, 'Stay with your babies if you possibly can until they are big enough to know what is going on about them: let maids wait upon and assist you in supplying their needs, but let no nurse (?) have a chance to do them ignorant and life-lasting harm.'

Could Be Advantageously Copied.

In the city of Tacoma, Wash., there is a practice in connection with the public schools that festers patriotism and could be advantageously copied in other cities. Each school is named after some national celebrity-Washington, Emerson, Irving, Franklin, Bryant, Lowell, Lincoln, Longfellow, etc. On the birthdays of these patron saints exercises are held in the respective schools mine owned by the Loyalhanna Coal designed to promote a spirit of patriot. ism in the young scholars.

CONSIDERS it "a household necessity."
Mr. A. J. Whiting, Newton, Kun., accentuates his opinion thus: "I have used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in my family for the last eight years and consider it a household necessity."

Maxime Lisbonne, a Frenchman, drives through the streets of Paris in a conveyance propelled by electricity, selling "revolutionary fried potatoes" to the Parisians. the New Bread.

Attention is called to the new method of making bread of superior lightness, fineness and wholesomeness without yeast, a receipt for which is given elsewhere in this paper. Even the best breadmakers will be interested in this. To every reader who will try this and write the result to the Royal Baking Powder Co., 106 Wall street, New York, that company will send in return, free, a copy of the most practical and useful cook book, containing 1,000 receipts for all kinds of cooking, yet published. A CURIOUS LITERARY SHOP.

Where Unknown Authors Turn Out Cheap Stories Wholesale.

The origin of the very cheap-and doubtful stories called dime novels and of the matter in the very cheap family papers is more or less of a mystery to most people. The Deadwood Dick series and books of that character are usually without the names of publishing house, or bear the names of publishing houses not in existence. The authors of these stories are unknown to the world, and this kind of literature is printed with as much place of much of this kind of literamoney is returned. You pay only for ture. Up-stairs in an old-fashioned red brick building are the offices and machinery for creating and publishing a vellow-back and stereotyping the matter that goes into many of the story papers that find their way to every rural and hamlet postoffice in the country. Not only are stories printed here and male into pot metal for the cheap papers elsewhere, but the building contains offices for the authors of the new story and the "boilers down" or rehasher; of the old story.

in two or three small rooms are a dozen or so of men seated at desks, maintaining the semblance of authors and thinkers. Some of them wear glasses and hold the blue penlong manuscripts, while others are running through printed slips or the old story papers nunting for the base of a new plot. Many of these stories are condensed or rehashed from others that have already had a large circula-

The most of the stories, however, are bought-by this concern from the large publishing house near by and other cheap story publishing houses. Tons of cheap and trifling fiction annually accumulate at these large publish ng houses, and much of it is of no use to them. This shop or mill has been created to utilize it by putting it upon the market, and that accounts in a large measure why there is so much of this kind of literature. The demand has been largely created by the facilities for making the cheap and very doubtful story. A publisher, in speaking of this place, said: "Not one person in twenty who cheaper houses ever sees himself in print, and not one in fifty who aims higher. It seems to me, at times, that almost the whole population of the country is trying to write stories. Nine-tenths of these stories are bloodcurdling or are total nonsense, and this shop gets the choice of the rubbish that no reputable house could afford to put its name to.

"This shop is perhaps the only publishing house in the city absolutely indedendent of the author and writer. It is in literature the ragpicker and the ash-barrel sifter. Some of its stereotypes for family story papers are creditable, however, as those publications go.

"This shop is for obvious reasons unknown to the public. Being independent of the story writer, the concern desires to avoid his pressence and persistence. The story writer who has failed everywhere else would come here rather than have his tale never see light. I know that some story writers in New York, who have failed to do even creditable work, have drifted into writing cheap 'rot' for a living. Then, too, this sort of literature never advertised in places of intelligence. Intelligent prejudice is against it, even if its circulation does not violate the law."-New York Sun.

Sunrise Brought the Clew.

A characteristic story is told of the manner in which Worth arrives at his "creations." It is said that some years ago he received a commission for a new fancy dress from a transatiantic belle art blanche as to price, but it was to be absolutely unique. The great man passed a whole night dreaming vain dreams and consulting with one of his collaborateurs, but the inspired idea refused to come. Worn out and wears the two artists stepped out on to the balcony to smoke a cigarette. "Voila!" said his friend, "it is the dawn!" "Clel" crie ! Worth, "it is the dress!" And so it was. And "Dawn," with its subtle harmonies of gray and rose and shafts, of gold, was the success of the ball.

Winter the Best Time.

The New York boy is not precisely a child of the devil, but for malicious mischief he is hard to beat. One of them was overheard initiating a strange boy from the lawless South into the mysteries of New York life. "Winter is the best-time to throw stones at windows," said the New York boy. "Why is the winter the Lest time" asked the unsophisticated youth from the South. "Because, you see, the houses have double windows and you can break two panes with one throw, and you only get one to give a shoer tip on horses.

A Kind-Hearted Giant.

A number of anecdotes have been told of late of the famous old Kennebec lumberman, Bodfish, whose stentorian number in one State, 463, is in Pennvoice resembled reverberating thunder, cil behind their ears and labor with and could be heard distinctly "from Kendall's Mills bridge to Ticonic Falls," a distance of two miles. An old-timer says that Bodfish, who lived at Kendall's Mills, though a rough man in his ways, had a kind heart and gave aid to many poor people he thought deserving. Once a river driver was drowned at Kendall's Mills, and Bodfish, having subscribed a handsome sum himself to aid his family, mounted a barrel beside the street, from which he harangued the people in aid of the sufferers. He laid down the rule that no man should pass that day until he had contributed, and in that way held up travelers all day long, securing a considerable amount by nightfall, when the odd embargo was raised. - Lewiston Journal.

This May Undeceive You. A popular impression prevails that an employer is forced by law to give a written character or testimonial to a domestic servant on the termination of the latter's services. This idea has been dispelled, at any rate so far as just rendered by the high court of juswrites stories for pulication for the tice in London, which declares that the employer is under no such obligation whatsoever.

Still Bright and Booming.

Many bright and useful publications come round to us annually, and the sight of them is as refreshing and welcome as the faces of friends on New Year's Day. Friends' faces are kept in remembrance; good books for reference, inasmuch as they lead and teach us what is to be done in many painful straits. One such publica-tion, always foremost, is before us, brimful of sound advice and the raciest bits of fun, original and copyrighted, from the pens of such noted humorists as Bill Nye, Opie P. Read, Danbury-News-Man, and others. It is a free gift of the season at the druggists' counter, and will be sought for as the highly popular St. Jacobs Oil Family Almanac and Book of Health and Humor, 1893. The work differs somewhat from its former editions, but is none the less attractive, and in many of its features is the superior of former numbers. One special feature is the "Offer of One Hundred Dollars." open to all contestants, the details of which a perusal of the book will more fully give. The almanac is sent forth by The Charles A. May Attack the Gold Reserve.

A SPECIAL to the New York Herald from Washing'on says: "There is no longer any danger of a financial panic. The new administration will not issue any bonds. It has been decided that the $100,000,000 reserve fund can be used to meet any demands upon the United States Treasury. This is in direct conflict to the opinion so often expressed by former secretaries, and is rather startling. The basis of this action is a decision of Solicitor General Aldrich, who declares there is nothing in existing law to prevent the use of the gold reserve.'

Wants to Study the Treaty.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND sent to the Senate Thursday a polite message requesting the return of the Hawaiian treaty which had been sent to President Harrison. The message was received in executive session and the treaty was returned forthwith. There is no quesat any time to withdraw the treaty. The action of the administration is variously construed. The President by his promptness undoubtedly saved himself some embarrassment, for it was the intention of the Senate to go ahead with the discussion of the treaty with a view to ratification. Those connected with the administration say that, since whatever is done must be carried out under his agency, the President wanted further time pefore committing, himself formally to annexation. If he is satisfied the treaty may be sent back again without change. If he is not satisfied he may indicate to the Senate wherein he thinks there ought to be modifica-

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

The great feature for the last fortnight has been the unusual demand for money from the West and South. which has drawn large sums from New York. Telegraphed reports show that while money is tight at only one or two small points, there is a strong demand at Boston and Detroit, at Chicago, where the drain from the West is heavy, and at Milwaukee. There is a fair demand at St. Joseph. Money is fairly easy at (leveland, in light demand at Phila-delphia and Kansas City, and also easy with light demand at Mobile and New Orleans. The large withdrawals from New York City under these circumstances are by many attributed to the distrust of speculative operations. The situation is to a large extent waiting on the action of the new administration. but it is evident that a better feeling has prevailed during the last few days, and rates in New York, after rising from 3 to 6, have fallen to 5 per cent. General trade is brisk.

Exports of wheat and flour from both coasts of the United States this week equal 3,059,341 bushels of wheat, about the weekly average since Jan. 1, as compared with 2,596,000 bushels last week, and 2,908,000 bushels in the week a year ago, 1,831,000 bushels two years James Gill were found in the public ago, and 2,481,000 bushels in the like week of 1890. Stocks of available wheat in the United States, Canada, Europe, and afloat for Europe (according to Bradstreet's) equaled 178,181,000 bushels March 1, against 178,088,030 on Feb. 1. Like stocks decreased 10,000, 000 bushels in February, in 1892, in 1890, and in 1889, and 6,000,000 bushels in February, 1891. Stocks of available wheat are 43,000,000 bushels larger than a year ago, and decreased only 3,019,-000 bushels in February against a February decrease in 1892 of 4.767,000 bushels. For two months the decrease is only 3,343,000 bushels, or one-third of the shrinkage in two months of 1892. Consumption and seed to June 30 will eall for 120,000,000 bushels, to meet which we have 110,000,000 bushels in sight and nearly as much more, probably 100,000,000 bushels, still in farmers' hands. At present rate of export we should therefore carry over 50,000,-000 bushels on July 1 next. No special activity is noted in Canadian commercial circles. At Halifax sales of staples are moderate and collections slow.

Lill's Last Effort.

A CONSPIRACY that boded ill for the preservation of peace in the Hawaiian Islands has just been nipped in the bud. It was a conspiracy to bring about a conflict between English and Americans in Honolulu in the hope that an international issue might arise, and that during a possible subsequent clash between Great Britain and the United States the question that is now prominent in every one's mind there might be forgotten and the islands left to themselves and Liliuokalani might seize her throne. The movement was checked, and checked effectively, Monday, Feb. 27, two days before this dispatch left Honolulu. It was at noon of that day that orders were issued by President Dole that the guards of the ex-Queen be immediately disbanded. These guards, sixteen in number, took the oath of allegiance in order that they might carry arms and were in fact connected with the provisional government forces, though in reality they were a distinct organization. They are now under surveillance and reduced to the rank of citizens. The arrival of the news of the submission of the annexation message. to the late congress has stimulated to a. high point all deals in realty.

Ralph confirmed the report of his departure, said he hope 1 to be back very soon, and then asked Lea if she would take a walk with him along the shore. It was not us usual for the Captain to ask the same question, to which she invariably gave an affirmative reply; but as he asked it now there was that in his manner which she had never noticed before. And, though Ralph Denham was so entirely different a man fron Captain Fox, there was something about him at the moment that reminded her of the latter when he was about to make his startling, unexpected proposal.

She put on her hat and light cloak, and, taking his arm, they went down the road and through the woods, where, as a little girl, she had often gathered nuts, while Ralph, then a sturly boy, sent them to the earth from his giddy perches high up in the trees.

She did not hesitate to tell him then that she thought him the bravest, strongest and handsomest boy in all the world. He would give a great deal to know what she thought of him now.

It was with something of a feeling of desperation that he resolved to learn her feelings to-night. The courier's letter had decided him.

He forgot the barrier that sprung up in his mind, every time he thought of offering him-elf in the past.

Ralph knew who he was-rather he consoled himself with the belief that neither could be bad, he realized that in this community, there was a strong, even a bitter, prejudice against these of illegitimate birth, and that maidens far beneath Lea Hedges in the social scale would he sitate before giving him their hands in marriage.

Usually, Ralph was the soul of cheerfulness; to-night, he was gloomy, and, in her futile efforts to rally him, Lea herself became taciturn.

At length they reached a promontory, that commanded a magnificent view of the bay, and of the islands to the east, now a cloud of green and gold, in the distance. Here they sat down on the sunworthy the esteem of any true man trunk of a fallen tree and, turning to her, Ralph asked:

"How long hase you known me, Lea?" "I have known you Ralph, she replied, "ever since I can temember."

"I shall receive your reply when she is not with you," said Uneas, throwing his long rifle across his shoulder, and striding into the forest from which he had come.

CHAPTER X.

THEY SAILED AWAY IN A GALLANT BARK. "Well, with t'e love of such a girl as Cousin Lea assured," said Valentine Dayton, the morning following the events narrated in the preceding chapfer, "the tattle is more than half won. I am sure Uncle Nehemiah Hedges will come round in time.

"I do not blame Doctor Hedges for refusing me the hand of his daughter; in his position I think I might do the same," said the captain. "I ask your pardon, Ralph, but I don't , for without Capt. Denham think you would. Genealogies may be right in the old world, but in this land men don't win through their grandfathers," said Valentine, with much

"You are right, perhaps; but before I ask Lea to join me at the attar, I shall convince her father that there is nothdelight of the Doctor and ing in my origin for which I, at least, oth of whom loved Ralph should blush. For the first time in my l'ie I feel that I have reached the fullest stature of s man—which can only be attained when he is confident that he possesses the love of a noble woman."

Captain Denham looked as he felt; there was an expression of peace and strength in the handsome bronzed face that was noticeable to his friend.

And Valentine Dayton was himself in a state bordering in icstasy; for had not Ellen Condit, with the consent of her parents, pledged him her hand, on their way back from Doctor Hedges' the night before?

The young officers, during this conversation, were on their way to the Sen Hawk, where the Captain was to make his arrangements and issue his orders before turning over the command of the ship to Lieutenant Hedges.

On reaching the deck they found Lieutenant Frenauld on board, talking carnestly with the officers of the Sea

With the offic al manner which sailors and soldiers can so readily assume or lay aside, Frenauld touched his hat, and, approaching Captain Denham,

"I am the bearer of a letter, sir, from Captain Fox, who desires me to take back your answer.'

Captain Denham was inclined to like Frenauld, and his dislike of Fox-he imagined-was caused by the feeling that he was or mi ht become a rival. All fear of this being dissipated by Lea, he felt, as is ever the case with generous natures, of going to the other ex-

Frenauld remained back, smoking and did not know who he was, in regard to Hawk, who were gathered under an awning on the quarter deck.

Before opening the lett-r, Ralph Denham, followed by Valentine Dayton, went down to the cabin.

After glancing over the note to make sure that he could communicate its contents to his subordinate, without any breach of etiquette, he read as follows: ON BOARD H. M. S. CRUISER WANDERER, OFFEAG HARBOR, June 13, 1696. MY DEAR CAPTAIN DENHAM: I have been informed by some of our friends asho e that you are ordered to New York at once, without your ship. Strangely enough, the same post brought me an order, commanding me to New York Bay with my ship, on or before the 19th inst.

Of course you will not say mon prudence would forbid my the strings as if she had a spite against 'no' to such an offer? It is a most fortunate think to have a ship like the "I was then a youth and you a little Wanderer to bear one to New York, ingirl. We have both changed. It was reported that Col. Graham would return to New York on the Wanderer, but the people expressed no surprise when the vessel sailed away with-

The night before the morning when the ship sailed away, col. Graham, who still made his headquarters at the inn, was taken alarmingly ill, and Dr. Heiges, who was called in to attend to the case, bled him freely.

The illness was a trick to give an excuse for remaining behind, but there was no trick about the doctor's lancet. Bleeding was then thought to be a panaces for every ill, from a toothache to Asiatic cholera, and the doctor left his patient so weak that he could not move if he would.

It was decidedly dangerous to "fool' with doctors in those days, when bleeding and blistering killed the weak, and tested the powers of the strongest.

TIVE LESSON.

Reflections of an Elevating Character-Wholesome Food for Thought - Studying the Scriptural Lesson Intelligently and Profitably.

Timely Admonitions.

The lesson for Sunday, March 19, may be found in Proverbs xxiii. 15-23. INTRODUCTORY.

A temperance lesson is certainly timely lesson; and, without doubt, in the Sunday-school series, a well-placed lesson. The way to prevent evil is to pre-empt the ground. The difference has been cutting wood all winter in an between a strawberry bed and a rag Alpena County camp. weed patch is that one was seeded for good things and the other left to grow just what it would. To displace is to conquer, and the way to displace is to preoccupy. The golden text says, literally, "Be not filled with wine, but be filled with the Spirit" (same word in Greek rendered by two different words in the English). That is to say, instead of being given over to the spirit from below, give yourself over to the Spirit from above. Be not a wine-intoxicated, but a "God-intoxicated man." Preoccupy for good.

POINTS IN THE LESSON. Do not say that the Old Testament has no temperance advocacy. The book of Proverbs is just thirty-one ringing temperance addresses.

"Surely there is an end," or, as we would say, a hereafter, in the sense of a reckoning time. But that reckoning time is a part of one's future in this life as well as in the life to come. God gives awards even; here. 'As some one has well said, we have our "judgment day" here and now. The inebriate asylum is a department of it; the insane ward of the hospital; the police court. On the other hand the good fruits show the good planting.

As we sow so shall we reap In the tide of coming years, Whether it be joy or soriow, weal or wee, Then this word in view still keep, While the days are going by, We shall gather in the harvest what we

"The drunkard and the glutton"these two are classed together in Scripture. They are so associated because go together in nature, in society. High living is responsible for much of the inebriety of to-day. The women of the W. C. T. U. are rational and reasonable in their insistance that the kitchen and the table be guarded. Highly spiced food provokes unnatural appetite. That appetite goes out in many evil directions! Let mothers be careful what kind of taste, in a literal sense, they cultivate among the young. It will tell in the coming years. The Germans have a motto; mann ist was er isst: man is what he eats. Do you get the thought?

"Buy the truth and sell it not." Why did the translater put in that intrusive dittle word also; as if "wisdom," and "instruction," and "understanding" were something else than the "truth." Buy the truth, namely, wisdom, correction (i. e., discipline), discernment. These are worth all you pay for them. They cost self-denial, self-sacrifice, self-restraint; but be sure of this, you will count it good expenditure in the reading days. Young man, how are you using your capital, your patrimony? What are you buying with it? Tears and terrors for to-morrow, or hope and happiness, partly realized here, more fully in the eternity that stretches beyond? "Wherefore do you spend your money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth

HINTS AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

Now, dear brother teachers, do not haggle or whimper about this matter of strong drink. Be plain and outspoken. Make a clean sweep of the deadly thing. Out with it from the cellar, from the kitchen, from the club-room, from the church. If you say anything about this accursed stuff, full of the fires of hell, be clear and cogent. Say it straight and strong, or, in God's name, bold your tongue. The Chriet is being daily wounded here in the house of his friends, so-called. It is your lame and halting speech on the drink question that is hindering more than anything |ion of the property. Soon after Sidney else the cause of temperance, or, better, teetotalism (anything else is an anachronism). Moderation, custom, expediency, "post-canteen," high 11cense, away with them! Yours to talk clean, clear righteousness, nothing less.

Call things by their right names. Call slavery a theft of men's bodies, and gambling a theft of men's purses, and liquor vending a theft of men's souls. The Chicago Inter Ocean is taking an advanced stand and has denounced a certain-race track, which, it is said, has gone so far with the gambling mania as to have no "redeeming feature" whatever. But why not take a broader stand? As between the gambling institution with redeeming features and that without, give us the odious, open-faced, and brazen-faced sort in preference to the other. Your high-license saloon, run with an eye to so-called decency, is the worst saloon in its effects. Let things be consistent with themseives. If anything is satanic let it be openly and plainly satanic, \not half Satan and half priest. Said Dr. Corwin. before the Chicago ministers: "If two devils offer themselves for Chicago's mayoralty, one with a neat cloak and the other with horns, I choose the horned and hoofed devil every time, for then I know what I am dealing with.' A poor witless youth came up to one of the city race-tracks, and, thinking to become a "plunger," staked his all on a certain nag. One Thompson pocketed, the next moment, the young fool's $300. He burst into tears and begged of the successful winner enough to get home on. "What is the matter with walking?" was the brutal rejoinder. Brutal, but honest. It was the best word he could have spoken to the young simpleton.

The other day the warden of the prison received a letter from the boy's mother at Lansing, together with a photo of the prisoner, asking whether it was true that he had been sent to the penitentiary for a long term. The prisoner denied all knowledge of his mother, saying that she had died long ago. When the warden, however, real the letter aloud, and reached a paragraph in which the mother stated that she was on her death-bed, dying of a broken heart on account of her son's conduct, the latter broke down. He fell upon his knees and offered up a fervent rayer that his mother might live until he had been given a chance to make amends for the past and could once more see her.

An Interesting Budget from the Nation's Capital.

Had the atmosmorable by the attendance, The govenors of eleven great states participated in the national ceremonies and this incident emphasized the complete restoration of national unity. More interesting and significant than even this, perhaps in the eyes of other nations and the tous change in the government of 65,-000,000 people was accomplished according to a cut and dried formula and without noticeable disturbance of public interests and the creation of any excitement except that naturally accompanying a great National pageant and the influx of nearly 200,000 sight-seers into the National capital.

With the applause to which no man can be insensible, ringing in his ears, the president-elect journeyed to the Capitol and there, for the second time in his remarkable life, took the oath prescribed for the Executive office. Then he proceeded to the White House and took formal possession of the mansion in which for four years he had previously made his home. It was a great triumph. On the fourth day of March, 1889. Crover Cleveland accompanied Gen. Harrison to the historic east front of the Capitol and listened without apparent perturbation to the yells of delighted republicans; a few days ago he rode once more, but not as the vanquished one, and the cheers that rent don Tit-Bits.

the atmosphere were, he knew, for him. It was a great occasion for the democratic party, yet all the welcome noise was not made by democrats; along the sidewalks and in the stands were people of other political beliefs whose good sound American sense told them that Cleveland had been chosen chief magistrate of the entire nation and was, therefore, their President.

But gorgeous decoration, martial music, prancing steeds and the plaudits of half a millon people cannot obscure the fact that the new President stands face to face with great duties and heavy responsibilities. Financial and industrial problems demand immediate attention. And the problems will not become fewer as time moves on. The country grows marvelously, and its changing moods are in danger of becoming more frequent and less patriotic. Unless capital and labor speedily develop more millenial influences there are grave possibilities contained within the immediate future. The office seeker will clamorously annoy for some time, but that the president will devote himself to "turning the rascals out" is not entirely probable, for victorious Cleveland apparently resembles Sir Philip Sidney's here who "seeks the glory, not the prey."

While the crowd was cheering itself hoarse at the appearance of Cleveland in the grand reviewing stand, ex-president Harrison and party left the Executive mansion almost unobserved and proceeded quietly to the residence of Ex-postmaster General Wanamaker. Here they were joined by all the members of the late cabinet, with the ladies of their families. Mr. Wanamaker entertained them with a dinner, which was concluded just in time to enable Gen. Harrison and his immediate family to take the special train for his departure for his home in Indianapolis.

A touching little scene took place at the Arlington hotel just before Clevethe oath of office. The President-elect had waved a general au revoir to the party of official and personal friends gathered about him, and was about to called him back, and with utter disregard for the assembled company, threw her arms about her husband and kissed him several times. Those who saw this little spark of private domesticity M illumine the practical atmosphere of a public event endeavored to look unconscious of what was going on, but the act of the young wife was done so simply and with such womanly grace that it seemed to be a most natural and appropriate occurrence, and endeared her to all present in the apartment.

A comparison of the condition of the public debt and of the national treasury at the close of the Cleveland administration in 1889 and the close of the Harrison administration shows that the interest bearing debt has decreased from $853.106,220 to $585,034,266: that the cash in the treasury has increased from $723,666,555 to $764,322,266; that the de-Grover Cleveland, thrice nominated mand liabilities have increased from 996, s28 to $24,158,087. Hard to Believe.

It is not altogether pleasant to know that excellence of flavor in butter or cheese depends wholly upon the pure culture of the proper bacteria. It has always been pleasanter to think that good butter depended upon sweet grass and clover for its delicious fragrance and flavor. Alas! no, it depends only upon microscopic second cousins to the cholera germ. It has been calculated that a quart of milk will sometimes contain as many as a thousand millions of them. -Philadelphia Times.

"You wouldn't believe that fishat least spouting fish-are influenced by the moon?" said an old sea captain. "Well, they are. I've seen it time and again, and I've called other people's attention to it, too, but I never found any one else who had noticed it. Sometimes when you are at sea and whales are to be seen frequently-it may be at the full moon or at a new moon-well, all at once they will disappear and you won't see one for two weeks. Then just as suddenly the water will be full of them. I've compared notes with other vessels. Maybe they were sixty miles or more away at the time and the whales there would be numerous just at the same time they appeared near our vessel. Oh, you fellows needn't laugh. There is something

"And then I've noticed another thing about this same class of fish. When you catch them you will always find that they have the pupil of the eye the same shape as the moon at that time. If the moon is full the pupil will be round, and if it is a half or a quarter the sight will be like a crescent."-San Francisco Examiner.

How Cards Will Run.

"How cards will run" is well illustrated in a series of games of cribbage during six years played between a gentleman and his wife of Belfast. In the last six years they have played 12,800 games together, and Monday evening they were two games apart -that is, one had a lead of two games in the series-and last week they were even games.

At no time during these years has either one had a lead of over seventy games, and on one evening the lady won thirteen straight games. Now, after six years of straight playing, one is two games ahead. It all shows that luck or chance at cards evens things up in the long run.-Belfast
