The Detroit Free Press says that a woman

Creek and her business grew so rapidly that she has already been forced to add more chairs. The boys' beards grow

Last week, says the Adrian Press, Austin Buck and Lena Lamb were married at Hudson. It is a singularly suggestive combination of names, and we hardly know whether we should ask the young people for their views on the wool tariff or not.

The statement is made that a California girl grew six inches in height in two weeks.
Of course nobody doubts the good faith that prompts the allegation, but suspicion will naturally arise as to the probability of the tape-line that kept track of the accumulating inches.

Frederick Wunder, aged 17 years, died at the home of his mother, Mrs. Chas.
Wunder, on South Main street, last Friday March 17, 1893. The young man was well liked and highly esteemed. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon from the Congregational church, Rev. O. C. Bailey officiating.

The new crinoline craze, says the Livingston Democrat, is nothing more or less than a scheme of fakirs to get from $1 to $5 out of each of the 20,000,000 women of this once free and happy land. It is the duty now as well as the high privilege of every sensible woman to sit down on the hoop skirt.

The "collar button joke" would die a natural death, probably, if every man knew that by dampening the buttonholes of a new collar, he can insert the button without difficulty. This has an additional advantage in that the limp buttonhole conforms at once to the most convenient shape, and drying thus, it stiffens and holds the collar firmly.

The dog that runs out in the road and barks at teams should die, no matter whose dog he is or of what breed. He is one of the most dangerous animals in the community. A man who drives a high spirited colt past the door of a house infested with such a brute runs a greater risk of losing his life than he would in taking a trip across the Atlantic.

Not only have quail suffered severely from the cold weather and snow this winter, but fox squirrels as well. There was a scarcity of acorns and nuts last fall so that the squirrels were unable to lay up their usual supply of food for the winter, and a well known sportsman informs us that in his opinion many squirrels have so far this winter perished.

It may be some time before human beings are whisked from place to place through a pneumatic tube, but the day of freight carriage between contiguous cities by that method is at hand. It is the most expeditious and could apparently be made the cheapest method of sending small packages and eventually large ones. A hundred miles an hour by the proposed electric railroads would be rather slow compared with pneumatic possibilities.

Died, Saturday, March 18, 1893, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Sears, Miss Abbie C. Congdon, aged 47 years. Miss Congdon was formerly a resident of this village, but has lately resided at Omaha, Neb. Last Friday she arrived here accompanied by her sister, Mrs. J. M. Otis, of Nebraska City, and died Saturday morning. The funeral was held from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Sears on Monday and the remains were interred in Oak Grove Cemetery.

We clip the following from the Detroit Free Press:—By the term "loaf" is meant a person who has no aim in life, is too lazy to work, and is usually found lounging about some public place, where men do congregate, or where those actively engaged are to be found. He may be seen any day loitering about hotel corridors; braced against the wall of a barroom, waiting for a stray drink or a chance acquaintance; keeping the stove warm in a tobacco store, retailing his experience, or swapping yarns with customers and others whose time is their own, and find nothing to do with it; supporting a desk in an office, preventing them from attending to it; or strolling about a railway station, gazing at almost everyone who turns up, and being attracted to anything the least unusual.

Mr. O'NEIL makes the sixth attorney general selected from the state of Massachusetts since the formation of the government.

The pronunciation of the deceased Hawaiian queen's name is a simple matter if one remembers to give the "u" the value of "w." It then sounds like Leelee-waka-lanny.

The Philadelphia Record has discovered that Pennsylvania is the banner state in the union for "women postmistresses." Men postmistresses have always been very rare, not only in Pennsylvania, but everywhere else.

Archbishop Walsh is reported as quoting some remarkable statistics illustrating a great increase of habitual drunkards in Ireland. The convictions for drunkenness in 1867, he said, numbered 79,000; in 1885, 70,000; in 1889, 92,000; and in 1891, 100,358.

At Harvard the decree has gone forth that scholarship money will not hereafter be paid except to students who need it. Rich men's sons will have to be content with the honors conferred without having a check inclosed in their diplomas.

Myra Clark Gaines left an estate worth $920,000 when she died, in 1887. The lawyers have absorbed $800,000 of it in fighting over her will and hope to be able to get away with the remainder in the new trial which they have just commenced.

The motto of the Arkansas Thomas Cat, published at Hot Springs, is: "God help the rich—the poor can beg." Its standing candidates for president and vice president are Dr. Mary Walker and Susan B. Anthony; on the platform: "Anything to beat the devil."

Some of the leading newspapers in this country and England are discussing the question: "Shall women propose?" What's the use of saying anything about it? If women want to propose they will do it, just as they will wear ermine if they finally so decide, notwithstanding their present opposition to the fashion.

Gov. McKinley's relations with Mr. Walker began when the former gentleman was a young and struggling lawyer. Mr. Walker at that time made advances of money to him to tide him over difficult places. The pecuniary debt was repaid, but Mr. McKinley always felt that he was still under an obligation to his friend for the kindness exhibited.

A correspondent asks if the "different denominations of silver coin are coined at different mints, or all of them at every mint." The Philadelphia mint is the only one making all denominations. All other mints coin only the dollar, excepting that at San Francisco, which, since 1885, has coined also the dime. Prior to 1879 the mints at Carson and San Francisco coined all denominations, as did that at New Orleans previous to 1861.

Nature is often a tender nurse for old age. She soothes and comforts by her delusions. Mme. de Lesseps overheard the old count talking to himself the other day. "Yes," said he, "we are honest people. I have toiled up to the last moment. I am a good workman. If all that I have done is not recognized here I shall go to Queen Victoria. She knows me. I shall approach her with my wife and children. I shall put on my grand cordon."

Even in conservative old Mexico, where woman's status is popularly supposed to be about the same as in Spain, the gentler sex is gradually encroaching upon man's domain. The other day two bellies of Monterey, enamored of the same young man, decided to settle the matter according to the code duello, and if some meddlesome person had not given the police a tip there had been a shooting match at thirty paces. The young gentleman who has to choose between two such peppery damsels is not to be envied.

Susan B. Anthony is of the opinion that we are on the verge of an era of unmarried women. Our civilization, she says, is changing. Daughters cannot be supported at home and there is nothing there to busy them. The women used to spin and weave, make carpets and soap, but now all that is done for them in the factories. Young men do not make enough money to support their wives, and there is such a craze for dissipation among them that the women would rather go into a store for almost nothing than to marry.

The Maine steamboat engineer was polite and attentive. It may be that he was flattered by the fact that a lady so impressive in her manner should come to him for information. At any rate he told her all about it, just where the steam went into the cylinder, where it escaped, and how it was that the piston rod attached to the crank turned the wheels that propelled the little vessel through the waves. She appeared to be all wrapped up in the information, and when he had finished she turned a beaming face upon him and said: "Now, what is the object of the boiler?"

An Omaha judge has introduced a new feature in divorce legislation. A man's wife sued him for divorce and, then, becoming reconciled to her husband, abandoned prosecution. Her attorney presented a bill of $500, which she refused to pay. He then sued the husband for the bill and recovered, the judge holding that divorces are a necessary of life. It is difficult to see how a divorce, which the wife herself declared that she did not want, could have been so considered. If husbands are to be liable for their wives' divorce bills, a responsibility of serious importance has been added to matrimony.

The county of Fresno, Cal., boasts of a fume 50 miles long, built of timber throughout and destined for conveying lumber from the place of felling in the Sierra Nevada mountains to the plains below. In section the fume is V-shaped. The V is 21 inches deep and for the most part 3 feet 7 inches across the top, this width being increased at various points where a decrease in the grade necessitates a larger volume of water to carry the timber, the lower terminus being 5 feet 4 inches wide by 81 inches deep. The main supply of water is received from a lake near its head, but four additional feeders are fed into it at different points.

U. S. SENATE IN EXTRA SESSION.

MUNDAY, March 13.—The senate discussed the resolution offered by Mr. Manderson intended to limit the action of the senate in the present extraordinary session to executive matters not requiring cooperation on the part of the house, but no decision was reached.

WEDNESDAY, March 15.—In the senate resolutions of the Massachusetts legislature favoring the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands were presented and laid on the table. The committee of the senate were reported and agreed to. The president sent in a long list of appointments, among them being that of William McAdoo, of New Jersey, to be assistant secretary of the navy, and Edward B. Whitney, of New York, to be assistant attorney general.

THURSDAY, March 16.—The only business transacted in the senate was the presentation of various memorials from the legislature of North Dakota and the reference of a resolution for the appointment of a clerk to the committee on national affairs at $1,400 per annum. Adjourned until the 20th.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The president has fully decided to send a commission to Hawaii to investigate the recent revolution and to report before the meeting of the next congress.

At the last session of congress $37,000 was appropriated to pay employees of the bureau of engraving and printing and to meet incidental expenses. It has just been discovered that the engraving bill signed by the president only carried the sum of $37. The clerical error cannot be rectified until congress again convenes.

The resignation of ex-Gov. W. M. Stone, of Iowa, as commissioner of the general land office, to take effect March 24 next, has been accepted by the president.

EX-CONGRESSMAN BLOUNT, of Georgia, left Washington on a mission to Hawaii to inquire into the desirability of annexing the island, and more particularly to determine whether the people of the island desire annexation.

The resignation of Green B. Baum as commissioner of pensions was sent to the president.

At the leading clearing houses in the United States the exchanges during the week ended on the 17th aggregated $1,331,454,029, against $1,301,530,716 the previous week. The increase as compared with the corresponding week of 1892 was $11.

DURING the seven days ended on the 17th the business failures in the United States numbered 220, against 223 the preceding week and 240 for the corresponding time last year.

The execution of Howard J. Schneider, who murdered his wife and Frank Hamlin, his brother-in-law, January 31, 1890, took place in Washington.

THE EAST.

FLAMES in the cotton mills at Exeter, N. H., caused a loss of $250,000.

An earthquake, L. I., a severe earthquake shock was felt, causing houses to rock and breaking windows and crockery.

The Stenington line steamer New Hampshire was struck by lightning on her trip from New York to Stenington. The electric wires carried the lightning all over the steamer and great damage was done, but none of the passengers were injured.

The capital stock of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad company has been increased to an even $100,000,000.

The governor of New Jersey has signed the bill making horse-racing for purses or prizes unlawful in the months of December, January and February.

The new military post to be established near Essex Junction, Vt., will be named Fort Ethan Allen, in honor of the revolutionary patriot.

MINISTERS and prohibitionists interested in the formation of a new national political organization held a conference in Pittsburgh, Pa. The platform recognizes God as the author of civil government; equal rights for all without respect to race, color or sex; abolition of suppression of the drink traffic; and such other moral, economic, financial and industrial reforms as are needed in the country.

In Boston Mrs. Frances Miller, the eccentric widow of Dr. Miller, who is the possessor of $50,000, married Peter Surret, her coachman.

On the Erie road trains collided at Lackawanna, N. Y., and a Pullman sleeper was demolished and ten passengers were injured, some of them seriously.

At her home in Old Westbury, L. I., Mrs. Sarah Rushmore Hicks died at the age of 103 years.

The 12-year-old wife of Henry Hinkley, of Bridgeport, Conn., gave birth to triplets, two girls and a boy.

Fire destroyed the Kingston block and the Jones block at Oswego, N. Y., the total loss being $175,000.

In the Massachusetts legislature a petition was presented which provides that intoxicating liquors shall be sold only by salaried appointees of the state.

SOMEWHERE between Akron, O., and Pittsburgh, Pa., a mail pouch containing over $25,000 in drafts mysteriously disappeared.

In Boston Lewis A. Wright, aged 17, has confessed to starting the recent large fires.

WEST AND SOUTH.

WALLS of a burning factory in Chicago fell upon a cottage and crushed to death S. J. Chatter and his wife and two girls, aged 10 and 12 years.

ALMOST one-half of the village of Polk City, Ia., was destroyed by fire. The annual convention of the National Republican league will be held at Louisville, Ky., May 10 next.

The court of appeals in Maryland has decided the single-tax system unconstitutional.

Fire ruined the Utah Loan and Trust company's building at Ogden, the loss being $135,000; insurance, $55,000.

In a mine at Anderson, I. T., an explosion killed nine men and injured eight others probably fatally.

At Fayette, Mo., George Winn, a vagrant negro, was sold for six months under the state vagrancy laws to Charles McCampbell, of Glen Eden Springs, for $20.

DAVE HUTCHINSON, William Bailey, Mrs. LeFevre, Albert Moore, A. McDonald and two unknown men perished in a prairie fire in Russell county, Kan.

HENRY JOHNSON and Augustus Stanley, two Pittsburgh hunters, were drowned in the Kanawha river near Riverside, Ind.

SERIOUS FACTS ABOUT BREAD

Which Housekeepers Should Earnestly Consider.

A serious danger menaces the health of the people of this country in the numerous alum baking powders that are now being urged upon the public. There is no question as to the detrimental effects of these powders upon the system. Every Board of Health, every physician, will tell you of the unwholesome qualities they add to the food. Some countries have absolutely prohibited the sale of bread containing alum. Even small doses of alum, given to children, have produced fatal results, while cases of heartburn, indigestion, griping constipation, dyspepsia, and various kindred gastric troubles from irritation of the mucous membrane, caused by the continuous use of food prepared with the alum or alum-phosphate powders, are familiar in the practice of every physician.

It is not possible that any prudent housewife, any loving mother, will knowingly use an article of food that will injure the health of her household, or perhaps cause the death of her children.

How shall the dangerous alum powders be distinguished? And how shall the danger to health from their use be avoided?

Generally, alum powders may be known from the price at which they are sold, or from the fact that they are accompanied by a gift, or are disposed of under some scheme. The alum powder costs but a few cents a pound to make, and is often sold at 20 or 25 cents a pound. If some present is given with it, the price may be 30, 40 or 50 cents a pound.

It is impossible to name all the alum powders in the market, but any baking powder sold at a low price, or advertised as costing only half as much as cream of tartar powders, or accompanied by a present, or disposed of under any scheme, is of this class, detrimental to health, and to be avoided.

But the easy, safe, and certain protection of our bread, biscuit and cake from all danger of unwholesomeness is in the use of the Royal Baking Powder only. This powder is mentioned because of the innumerable reports in its favor by high medical authorities, by the U. S. Government, and by the official chemists and Boards of Health, which leave no doubt as to its entire freedom from alum, lime and ammonia, its absolute purity and wholesomeness.

While its use is thus a safeguard against the poisonous alum powders, it is satisfactory at the same time to know that it makes the whitest, lightest, sweetest and most delicious food, which will keep moist and fresh longer, and that can be eaten with immunity hot or cold, stale or fresh, and also that owing to its greater strength it is more economical than others.

These facts should incline consumers to turn a deaf ear to all importunities to buy the inferior powders. If a grocer gives the sale of the cheap, impure, alum brands, it should be borne in mind that it is because he can make more profit on them. The wise housekeeper will decline in all cases to take them.

Take no chances through using a doubtful article where so important a matter as the health or life of dear ones is at stake.

A Chicken-Show Reflection.
The air was filled with cackling as I walked the garden through,
And gazed upon the roosters with their cocks doodled.

And listened to the Wyandottes and all the poultry crew.

I saw the bird the Frenchman loves as pate de foie gras.

I saw festive fighting cocks delighting in his scar.

And little birds that when they're broiled eat tremulously.

I had the bliss of gazing on the bantam small and proud;

Before a pointer-pigeon with the populace I bowed;

In smug praise to turkeys, too, I joined the maddening crowd.

I raved o'er many a bird that wore great spurs upon his legs;

I went in raptures over fluffy chicks in slatted barred cages;

I viewed with joy the Cocker and her Cocker China eggs;

But not a bird in all the show, of all there were no less,

Not one was quite so pleasing, or so useful unto me.

As is an eagle that I own, an eagle old and weel;

It is an eagle circular, no feathers has it got,
But it can fly with speed that's sure to distance all the lot.

It is an eagle made of gold fresh from the minting pot.

I Wonder Why!
I wonder why, when I pass her way,
The darkest night seems changed to brightest day?

And why her voice falls with a cadence sweet
Upon my ear—why moments are so fleet?

When I see to mine she shifts like a bird,
Eager seems to me like one vast paradise!

I wonder why!

I wonder why she trembles when with me,
And like some frightened bird would quickly flee?

I wonder to her: "Love, we ne'er shall part!"
And feel the wild pulsation of her heart.

And feel the wild pulsation of her heart,
And feel the wild pulsation of her heart.

She tries to hide the blushes on her face!

I wonder why!

OUTLIVED.

Behind the walls of the past
Is a country of sun and shade,
Where the roses bloomed too fast,
And the children laughed and played.

And a thousand joys were planned,
And a thousand songs were sung;
Oh, that was a lovely land,
Where we lived when we were young!

Behind the walls of the past
Is a country of sun and shade,
Where the roses bloomed too fast,
And the children laughed and played.

And a thousand joys were planned,
And a thousand songs were sung;
Oh, that was a lovely land,
Where we lived when we were young!

Full of thorns that pierced the hand,
And gifts to the thankless thing;
Oh, that was a bitter land,
Where we lived when we were young!

Yet when we think of it all—
Of the passionate grief long spent,
The years that have passed away—
We know that the life God wills
Is the life we live to-day.

HIS MOTHER'S COOKING.

How Mr. Smith Was Cured of a Bad Habit.

"I suppose you call these things doughnuts?" said Mr. Smith, picking up a curly, brown edible on the extreme end of his fork, and eyeing it with an untranslatable expression of countenance.

"Yes, of course I do," said Mrs. Smith, a little timidly. "Aren't they nice? I made them myself."

Mr. Smith laid the curly, brown edible down again, and pushed the plate back.

"Nice?" he repeated. "I don't say they're not nice. I presume they're nice enough in their way. But I wish you could have eaten my mother's doughnuts."

"How were they different from these, John?" Mrs. Smith ventured deferentially to inquire.

Mr. Smith moved fretfully in his chair.

"In every way," said he. "Women nowadays don't know how to cook."

"Thank you eat one, John?"

"Thank you, my dear, one mouthful is enough," sarcastically answered her lord and master. "I've no lingering respect left for my digestion."

Joanna, make me a piece of toast. State bread, mind, and brown it but very little. I don't care to load my stomach with charcoal."

It was perhaps a good thing for Mr. Smith that he was too much occupied with the columns of the morning paper to observe the expression of Joanna's face as she whisked off into the kitchen to execute her order.

"I'd like to shake some of that nonsense out of him," muttered Joanna to herself, as she shut two slices of bread into the toaster and held it over the fire. "Of all fools, give me a man! And she, as patient and sweet as new milk over it!"

Joanna Johnson was no ordinary "hired help." She was a grim, straight-backed, lantern-jawed New England woman, who had taken care of Allice Alston as a child, and who, sooner than desert her nursing when she married, joined her establishment in the humble capacity of general houseworker.

She did twice what any Celt or Teuton would have accomplished, and for half the wages, although no earthly power would have induced her to call herself a "servant," or wear a frilled cap like the other housemaids in the block.

Mrs. Alston was very quiet all that day. Joanna watched her with wistful eyes as a dog watches his master.

"She ain't happy," pondered Joanna, "and it's because he's pickin' at her all the time. Women don't know how to cook, don't they? Well, if I was to write down in a book all that men don't know, I'd have to build a house to keep the volumes in, I guess."

"Joanna!" said Mrs. Alston, in the afternoon.

"Ma'am!" responded Joanna.

Joanna was particular to accord Mrs. Alston all the honorary attributes of mistresshood, as a general thing. It was only when they were quite by themselves that she indulged in the sweet usages of the past and called her "pet" and "sweetheart," and "her own little Allice," as if they were nurse and baby again.

"I wish you'd get me Mr. Smith's little brown valise. I want to pack it."

"Eh?" said Joanna. "Mr. Smith going away again?"

"Yes," the young wife answered, with something of defiance in her manner. "It's nearly three months since he went away before, and business is business, you know."

"Yes," Joanna laconically answered, "I know."

Mr. Smith was to take the night train. He came home to an early supper, but he would not eat much of the nice fried oysters and apple fritters which Allice had prepared for him.

"Joanna," sighed the young wife, when her husband had gone, "I'm not much of a cook."

"Them oysters was beautiful, deary," said Joanna, "an' the fritters was as light as a feather."

"John couldn't eat them."

"That's all his cantankerousness, deary."

"Joanna, you shouldn't speak of my husband in that way!" cried Allice, frowning.

"I won't again, deary," said the New Englander, covered with confusion. "It kind of slipped out. But, she persisted in a low tone to herself, "it's true, all the same."

"And," added Allice, "John thinks so much of nice things to eat and drink. All men do."

Joanna muttered a grunt which might be translated "yes" or "no," according to pleasure.

"I've almost a mind to write to his mother," observed Allice, "and ask her advice. Don't you think it would be a good plan, Joanna?"

"It mightn't be a bad one," said the noncommittal daughter of Cape Ann.

She went back to the morning's buckwheats, her face full of a new resolve.

"I ain't much of a hand at pen and ink," said Joanna to herself. "But if there's any letter-writin' done to his mother, I guess I'll take a hand in it, too!"

And so effectual was the work of her gray goose quill—for Joanna never could accommodate herself to any of the new steel and oreide abominations—that within the week, and before Allice had quite decided what to say when she should get ready to write to her mother-in-law, there came a pleasant letter from Mrs. John Smith the elder, saying how long a time it was since she had had a visit from Allice.

"Don't you come now," she wrote, "while John is away traveling? I should not at all wonder if he stopped here on his way home, and what a pleasant surprise it will be to him to find you here!"

Allice's face brightened. She ran to show the letter to Joanna.

"Won't it be nice?" said she, like a delighted child.

"It just will!" said Joanna.

Mrs. John Smith, the elder, was not in the least like the conventional idea of a mother-in-law. She was a comfortable, pillowy old lady, with twinkling gold spectacles, a frill of real lace around her neck and a black silk dress that rustled softly as she walked. Just the kind of a woman to confide in, and in less than twenty-four hours she and Allice had talked the whole matter over, and Allice had prepared sundry test dishes in the kitchen.

"My dear," said the old lady, "you are a better cook than ever I was."

"But, mother, John doesn't think so."

"John must be made to appreciate his blessings, my dear," said Mrs. Smith, the elder.

Of course Mr. Smith was pleased to find Allice there when he stopped for a flying visit on the way home. It was just at dinner-time when he arrived, and he ate like a starved wolf.

"Ah-h-h!" said he, helping himself a second time to the flaky chicken pie and sending his coffee cup for a replenishment. "This is something like! The people out west don't know what cooking means. I see, mother, you haven't forgotten your old skill. Another croquette, please. And pass the doughnuts. Now, look here, Allice—eat these, if you want to know what doughnuts really are. Why, I used to take these to school in my lunch box when I was ten years old! I haven't eaten since a dinner as this since I was at home before. I do wish, mother, you could give Allice a few points in these matters."

Mrs. John Smith, the elder, looked across the table to where Allice's fair head drooped over her plate.

"Don't mind him, Allice," she said, encouragingly. "You may show him to-morrow what you can do."

At breakfast the fishballs were pronounced too dry.

"Don't you like them?" fluttered Allice, with an apprehensive glance at her mother-in-law.

"Do I like sawdust? What's that you're got there? Broiled chickens! How came you to sear them so? And half raw in the middle! Call these rolls? Why, they're heavy as lead! Boil me an egg, can't you? Luckily nobody can spoil a boiled egg."

Dinner was no better. The roast grouse was overdone, the oyster pie was pronounced "soggy," the pudding like lead.

"No wonder," groaned Mr. Smith, "that dyspepsia is the great American disease!"

"Why, John," chirped the cheery old lady, "what ails you? You never used to grumble so at what you ate and drank."

"It's Allice's vile cooking!" groaned the young man.

"No, it isn't," said Mrs. John Smith, the elder. "It's mine."

"What!" shouted her son, dropping his knife.

"I've done all the cooking to-day," said Mrs. John Smith, the elder. "Exactly as I used to do it when you lived at home, and suited you to a T."

"And—and who cooked the dinner yesterday?" stammered John.

"Allice! Everything on the table I always told her that she was a better cook than I was. And you will believe it now."

John sat for a moment or two in silence; then he whistled a low, long whistle.

"I give up beat!" said he. "Allice, we shall have to hand over the first prize to you. Come around here, my girl, and kiss me."

And Allice obeyed, stopping on the way to give her mother-in-law a loving little hug.

Joanna Johnson was on the alert to catch every word and look when the young couple returned home, and apparently the result of her observations was satisfactory.

"I kind of thought it would work," said she to herself, with a grim smile. "Them doughnuts she fried last night, he said he had never tasted no better. They was like tumbledowns."

Just then Allice came in all radiant. "Joanna," said she, "did you hear what Mr. Smith said about my cooking?"

"Yes, dear, I did," smiled Joanna. "He likes my cooking now."

"He'd be a strange person if he didn't," observed the "help."

But Allice kept the story of the little stratagem to herself. She was too loyal a wife to betray John's discomfiture even to faithful Joanna; and on her side the link New England never let Allice know of the letter she had surreptitiously written to Mrs. John Smith, the elder, suggesting this very plan.

"It takes a good deal of machinery to get ahead of a man," said Joanna to herself, "but I guess we did it this time."—Saturday Night.

Only One Mistake.
"Are you the editor of the Biltzard?" The caller was a stranger, with his hat on the back of his head and a broad smile on his face.

"I am, sir," answered the man at the desk.

"Then it was you, I presume—hal hal—who wrote that notice of my daughter's wedding—hal hal—that was in the paper this morning?"

"Certainly not."

"It was all right," said the stranger, jerking him out of the chair in the excess of his hand-skingaling neck. "It was all right," he added, slamming him against the wall. "There wasn't anything wrong with it at all," continued the affable caller, grabbing the editor by the collar, pushing him backward over the chair, catching him by the heels, hauling him around the room, upsetting the furniture with him, and finishing by jamming him in the wastebasket. "There was nothing the matter with it, sir, except that my daughter wasn't married at all, sir! Good morning!"—Chicago Tribune.

The last one we had here owned the whole place before he had been with us sixty days.'"

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.
LANSING, Mich., March 14.—Gov. Rich sent to the senate yesterday afternoon the nomination of Theron F. Giddings, of Kalamazoo, to be commissioner of insurance for the full term of two years from July 1 and Horace W. Davis, of Grand Rapids, to be member of the state fish commission for six years. A committee of six was appointed to escort the remains of the late Representative Charles W. Leavitt to Hart, where the funeral will take place Wednesday morning.

HOUSE.
LANSING, Mich., March 15.—The senate yesterday passed a bill making the hour of opening the polls at elections 7 o'clock instead of 6 o'clock, as at present, and another providing for granting leave of absence to inmates of the industrial house for girls under certain conditions and providing a penalty for aiding in the escape of inmates.

COMMITTEES.
LANSING, Mich., March 15.—The senate yesterday killed the Champion bill, modeled after the laws of California and Indiana, providing for a uniformity of text-books in the public schools of the state, and reported favorably on the Sabia bill repealing the present illuminating oil law and fixing the legal test at 120 degrees Fahrenheit.

REVENUE.
LANSING, Mich., March 15.—In the senate yesterday a bill was favorably reported for reestablishing the state weather service, which was cut off by the legislature of two years ago. The house joint resolution for the employment of convicts upon the public highways was reported without recommendation. The bill authorizing the city of Detroit to expend $100,000 for the purchase of a clearing lighting plant, which passed the house last week, encountered opposition, and an amendment was made to the bill prohibiting the city from purchasing a clearing lighting plant, and providing that the question of buying the plant be submitted to a vote of the people. The amendments made by the house to the bill providing for a one-sixth mill tax for the support of the university were concurred in.

UNIVERSITY.
LANSING, Mich., March 15.—The woman suffrage received a grain of comfort yesterday by the passing of the senate upon a bill, similar to that which went down to defeat in the house Thursday. The measure was taken from the table and a motion to indefinitely postpone its consideration was tabled on a yeas and nays vote of 11 to 8. The concurrent resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution which would admit of the employment of convicts on the public highways was killed by a vote of 14 to 7. The Detroit municipal lighting bill, as amended, was passed, and the citizens of Detroit will vote on the proposition to purchase a plant at the close of the month. A bill consolidating the city of Port Huron and the village of Fort Gratiot was passed. A concurrent resolution for final adjournment May 25 was tabled.

The New Administration.

They will undoubtedly present many new and original policies, and have already declared themselves concerning

"Second Terms,"

But there is one policy that will remain unchanged. After so many years of practical trial people would not know how to get along without it. And it more directly affects them than either the Tariff or "Unlimited Coinage."

People who have been buying their goods 20% below the usual price can guess what this is, but for the benefit of those who are Another cloud has exposed to view its silver lining. A Delaware woman had been black-listed and her credit destroyed because she would not pay for a ton of coal. She sued for $10,000 damages, got $2,500, and can now buy for cash.

James Gildart, of Brookfield, and Wm. B. Gildart, of the Stockbridge Sun, died at his home near Niles, Kan., March 6, aged 89 years. He came to Michigan from England in 1841, settled first in Waterford, and from 1855 to '73 resided in Brookfield township.

The case of Dorothy Blake against the township of Waterloo for injuries sustained by being thrown out of a buggy by the horse shying at some bridge timber several years ago, and in which case a jury gave Miss Blake a verdict of $1750, has been settled by the town paying her an even $1000. Each party pays its own cost.—Stockbridge Sun.

And now what was wont to be termed "cramps," which many a boy who has resorted to bathing in an early "spring morning" has felt, is to be rechristened: A Jersey City doctor has decided to place that peculiar twinge in a young fellow's knees or arms which makes them feel as if they were tied in a double bow-knot, under that terribly overworked head, "heart failure." Henceforth when a youngster goes to a water cure he goes there not by "cramps," not by drowning, but by heart failure.

An exchange tells of an economical farmer who had no money to waste on "them d— agricultural papers" and who "knew how to farm without reading about it," who had a load of pork to sell during the recent boom. He brought it in and was offered $6 per hundred for it and promptly accepted. After he had loaded and got his check he learned he might just as well have had $3.25 as $6, if he had been posted. The difference on the load amounted to exactly $42, lost because he couldn't afford to take a paper.

A man nearly 70 years old, living in York, Pa., has lately studied law and has been admitted to practice at the bar. Some criticism has been made on this unusual action, as if at his age the man should be thinking of another world. But he perhaps believes that in that other world the first duty he will have to be to plead before a court that makes no mistakes, and he thinks it best to have some practice in pleading. He should remember the law maxim that "whoever acts as his own lawyer has a fool for a client." That maxim quite likely will prove hereafter as true as it is here and now.

An exchange says a Wisconsin preacher saw one of his flock, a moulder in clay, making a figure somewhat short on drapery for the world's fair. His holy hands shot up as if he had met a road angel, while in tremulous voice he exclaimed against the wickedness. So the moulder instead of hitting his victim with a wad of mud, of course clearly his duty, destroyed the objectionable figure and others of value. The people of the community, however, had not reached the lofty plane of the "moulder," for they chased the preacher across the county line, the promptness of his going preventing him from giving a realistic imitation of a good man riding a rail.

A fellow has been going about the city during the week working a cute dodge on owners of sewing machines. He will ask to look at the machine and immediately find something the matter, which he will claim to be a broken spring. The owner offers to clean the machine for 50 cents and to put in the spring for whatever he thinks it safe to strike them for, in some instances $1.85, and so on. At most places he tells that he is the son of the man who owns the factory and has been sent out by his father to sell the machines. The owner in good repair. Our home agents are the ones to apply to if your sewing machine are out of order.—Ann Arbor Argus.

If the dear girls succeed in inducing Crane Fashion to accept or revise the doctrine, the sweet creatures will not have much the best of the boys says the Jackson Citizen. Gentlemen who hail from Chicago are dressed in overcoats which begin to bulge at the hips and continue to expand until the bell shape is assumed. The garment reaches below the knees and is every reason to believe that "Gawwag" and "Chawley" are endeavoring to rush the antiquity before its time. In another respect the boys will be compelled to raise a warfare similar to that stirred up by the girls. An effort is being made to revive the "fried-egg" derby, so much the rage ten years ago. History repeats itself. There are several men in Jackson who have clung to the "pancake" hat an entire decade. Hold on a little while longer, boys, and you will be right in line.
