ORIGIN OF A SLANG PHRASE.

A Politician Tells How "To Eat Crow" Passed Into the Language.

The origin of the expression "to eat crow" caused some dispute in an up town clubhouse one evening recently, and one white headed old politician accounted for it in this way:

"Years ago," he said, "a soldier stationed on Governor's island wandered up into the city and out upon the pasture lands just north of Chambers street to have some fun. There he spied a crow hopping about among the cows, and he instantly aimed his gun at it and shot it dead. As he did so a ragged little boy, who had been watching him dashed off with a wild yell in the direction of a distant house. The soldier laughed at what he thought to be the boy's terror at the report of the gun, and laying it down carefully at the foot of the tree he went to pick up the crow.

"After that something else attracted his attention, and he did not think of his gun again till he heard an angry voice behind him, and turning around he found himself gazing straight down the barrel. A furious Dutchman was at the other end of the gun. The soldier had shot the Dutchman's pet crow, the boy had borne testimony to the deed, and now for the penalty.

"Sparing you the recital of the heated conversation which followed, the result was that the Dutchman spared the soldier's life only on condition that he would straightway eat the crow he had shot. The soldier argued vehemently, but to no purpose. He finally secured permission to pluck the crow and cook it a little over a fire made with a few chips. Then he began to eat, but before he had eaten more than half of the carion bird he became so sick that he swore he would rather be shot than finish it.

"The Dutchman's wrath seemed to be appeased by this time, however, and he restored the soldier his gun and bade him begone. The soldier took the gun, but instead of beginning he instantly took aim at the Dutchman's head and vowed to blow his brains out if he did not at once eat the other half of the crow. The Dutchman was compelled by fear of death to swallow the rest of the loathsome flesh, and then the soldier departed, leaving the injured Dutchman ready to burst with rage and chagrin.

"The latter swore vengeance, and next day appeared on Governor's island and made complaint to the commandant that one of the soldiers had wantonly shot his tame crow. The commandant told the Dutchman to pick out the offender and he should be punished. The Dutchman pointed to a soldier not far away and identified him.

"Calling the soldier to him, the commandant said sternly, 'Did you ever see this man before?' pointing to the Dutchman.

"Yes, sir," replied the soldier, with a laugh in his eye, 'I dined with him yesterday.'

"This answer so amused the Dutchman, besides reminding him of how all his friends would laugh at him should the story get out, that he refused to push the complaint against the soldier, and 'to eat crow,' meaning to suffer anything mortifying or humiliating, passed into a proverb from that day."—New York Tribune.

The Literature of Old Shoes.

Miss Gray has collected some interesting literature on the subject of old shoes for the use of students. It includes some quaint advertisements clipped from old newspapers in the first part of the present century and toward the end of the last by Mr. Henry M. Brooks of Salem, the scholarly antiquarian and secretary of the Essex institute. Mr. Brooks has also made for the purpose a number of notes from "Felt's Annals."

Among the information thus given we find that the highest price of men's shoes in 1670 was 5 shillings, for those of women 3s. 8d. In 1672 a committee of Boston, considering that people in low circumstances "will wear no other boots or shoes generally but of the newest fashion and highest price," proposed that a law be passed that no shoemakers should sell to any inhabitants shoes of 11 or 12 sizes above 5 shillings a pair, and so in proportion as to other sizes.

LYNCHING IN KANSAS.

NEGRO STRUNG TO A TELEGRAPH POLE.

Fearful Cyclone in Mississippi—Fourteen Men Drowned at Milwaukee—Found a Miser's Gold—Death of Chicago's Famous Commodore—Poisoned Her Husband.

Drastic Kansas Methods.

SOME 500 citizens of Salina, Kan., went in a crowd to the Union Pacific east-bound train at 8:30 Thursday night, and taking Dan Adams, a colored man, from Sheriff Phillips, who had him in charge, took him to a telegraph pole on the principal street and hanged him. Adams committed his crime at 8 o'clock in the morning. At 2 o'clock he was convicted, and at 8:00 he was dead. The Sheriff was on his way to the State Prison at Lansing with his man when he was taken by the mob. He was under sentence for seven years, his crime being an assault on Night Agent Roy Short of the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

Tragic Horror Off Milwaukee.

FOURTEEN men drowned, one vessel ashore and a life-saving crew covered with glory are among the results of Wednesday night's terrible blow at Milwaukee. The men who were lost were employed on the new intake tunnel and lived on the crib, which is located 5,000 feet out in the lake off the pumping station at North Point. Though the house on the crib was built solidly and chained down so as to apparently make it secure against any attacks the waves might make, the sea in its fury tore it apart like an egg-shell, and of the fifteen men it sheltered but one was saved, and his recovery from the exposure is doubtful. Most of the men were from Milwaukee. For some reason Harry Barber, foreman for the contractors, would not give the names of the men at the crib.

Many Perish in the Storm.

A CYCLONE struck Midland City and destroyed a dozen residences, four stores and two warehouses. The cyclone lasted but a few minutes, and fortunately no one was killed, although a number of persons are seriously bruised. A frightful tornado crossed Jasper and Clarke counties, Mississippi. The cyclone originated in Jasper County, and traveled in a northeasterly direction. A settlement of negro cabins was destroyed and many of the inmates perished.

Food for Flames.

AT Seymour, Ind., the large three-story corn mill of Bruning & Acker was entirely destroyed by fire Wednesday night. Loss, $25,000. The business portion of the little town of Water Valley, a few miles from Fulton, N. Y., was destroyed by fire. Three hundred persons lived in the village and many of them are homeless. Twenty or thirty houses, including all the stores, are burned.

Prince Bismarck Is Seriously Ill.

PRINCE BISMARCK is seriously ill at his palace at Friedrichsruhe. The illness of the ex-Chancellor was only made known Thursday. When he was last seen in public, April 1, on the occasion of the celebration of his 78th birthday he appeared well and hearty. The nature of the malady from which he suffers is not announced.

MEN who have been pressing hay on the farm of the dead misers, Thomas and John Fagan, at Holly, Mich., discovered $7,000 in gold in a two-quart jug and an earthen quart bottle. This makes about $34,000 in money, aside from the real estate, valued at $8,000, already found, and still the family expect to find much more.

EASTERN.

HEAVY rains have quenched disastrous forest fires that have been raging in the mountains of Pennsylvania during the last week. In Somerset County the losses will be more than $100,000. In Blair the burned area is thirty-five square miles.

Brooks. The police arrested Brooks and found concealed in the two houses materials used in making watches valued at several hundred dollars.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., business circles are stirred by the report that H. H. Warner and Arthur G. Yates are unable to meet their obligations. The affairs of the two men are said to be inextricably involved, they having indorsed for each other for large sums. Some of their paper has gone to protest and both Yates and Warner Monday filed mortgages aggregating $100,000 each.

WITHIN a month five persons have been asphyxiated in different hotels in Boston. It is believed death has been caused by leaving the gas in the rooms turned down and burning; and during the night the removal of gas pressure at the reservoir has caused the lights to go out, and when the pressure has been resumed the gas escaped into the rooms, with the result that death has been caused.

AT Camden, N. J., John Hill, colored, aged 19, was hanged for murdering Jos. Dodson, aged 21 years, also colored, Oct. 16 last, in a quarrel over politics. Hill at first implicated two saloonkeepers, Albert Reed and Marwood Derricksen, alleging that they had hired him to commit the deed for a compensation of $2.50, but later confessed that he alone was responsible for Dodson's death. William Bond was hanged at Rockville, Md., for the murder of Margaret Cephas Nov. 23, 1891. The crime was a brutal one. Bond was convicted entirely on circumstantial evidence, and persistently asserted his innocence to the last.

WESTERN.

THE Straits of Mackinac are clear of ice.

By the recent storm Ypsilanti's loss now foots up $200,000.

An incendiary fire at Milwaukee damaged the Stadt Theater about $25,000.

The paper mills at Enor Station, eight miles west of Springfield, Ohio, were burned. Loss, 100,000.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, the novelist, who it was reported would arrive at San Francisco on the Mariposa, from Sidney, on his way to London, stopped off at Samoa on account of ill-health and has given up his proposed trip.

A CITIZEN of Burlington, Iowa, who is trying to regain possession of his children has introduced in court his certificate of cure at a Keely Institute to show that he is a sober man and competent to care for the children.

COUNTY TREASURER JAMES S. BROWN has created a sensation at Columbus, Ind., by searching the mortgage records and disclosing over $600,000 in unregistered property and placing it on the county and city tax duplicate.

SUIT has been begun against the Standard Oil Company by the city of Toledo for $1,000,000 damages. The city has been trying to construct a municipal gas pipe line and charges the defendants with conspiracy to prevent the issue of bonds, constructing plant, etc., by securing injunctions in the courts.

FIRE at Cincinnati burned out Glendon & Stern, pictures and moldings; Simpson & Miller, photographers' supplies; Ferd Wagner, optician; Mrs. W. H. Seigman, milliner; the Price Current Publishing Company; Schultz Printing Company; Bodemer's saloon, and the Home Steam Laundry. The loss will probably exceed $100,000.

THE grain dealers and millers in Eastern Indiana entered into an agreement not to furnish the farmers any more sacks in which to bring their grain to market. They claim that it is a loss to them by reason of so many of the sacks not being returned. The agreement goes into effect May 1. All the leading dealers in that part of the State signed the article.

AT Plymouth, Mich., fire started about midnight in George Vandecar's barber shop, and before it was under control, at 3 o'clock in the morning, the leading business block of the town was in ruins. It looked at one time as if the entire town would be wiped out and help was asked of Detroit. The engines from Detroit did not reach there in time to be of service. The losses aggregate between $50,000 and $60,000. The origin of the fire is believed to have been incendiary.

FOR several days it has been noised about that a crisis was imminent in the affairs of the Lansing Lumber Company and the Lansing Iron and Engine Works, at Lansing, Mich. Orlando F. Barnes is President of both institutions. The climax was reached Tuesday afternoon, when both companies gave Orlando M. Barnes, father of the above named, mortgages upon all their property, real and personal, to secure their paper, upon the greater portion of which he is the sole indorser. By this arrangement, which was effected with the consent of all the Lansing banks, which hold a large proportion of the paper, O. M. Barnes practically assumes the ownership of both properties involved, and will combine his personal fortune, which will reach $1,000,000, with the assets of the companies, which represent an additional $800,000, for the purpose of meeting liabilities which will not exceed $900,000. Mr. Barnes is entirely confident that he will be fully able to meet the emergencies, and says that every dollar of indebtedness will be paid. He will give the business of both concerns his personal attention. The fact that O. F. Barnes was President of the Central Michigan Savings Bank precipitated a run on that institution, and in a short time $29,000 in deposits was withdrawn. After consulting with Bank Commissioner Sherwood (ashier Bradley decided that it was unfair to the majority of the depositors to permit the run to continue, and so closed his doors with a large sum of money on hand. Commissioner Sherwood at once took possession and the bank will remain closed pending his examination of its affairs. He does not believe it will be necessary to ask for a receiver, and says the bank will undoubtedly resume business in a few days.

SOUTHERN.

F. C. HEATH, in charge of a tie and stave camp at Yorktown, Ark., has been missing several days. He left Pine Bluff on horseback with a large sum of money with which to pay off his hands.

JOHN SCHARDT, cashier of the Merchants' Savings and Trust Company at Nashville, Tenn., is short between $40,000 and $80,000 in his accounts and the company has made an assignment. There is a report that Schardt has committed suicide.

THE creditors of the town of Cumberland Gap, Tenn., have filed a petition in chancery asking that a receiver be appointed to wind up the affairs. The bill is what is known as a general creditors' bill. The proceedings are somewhat novel, being, perhaps, the first instance where a town has been compelled to assign.

JOHN W. CRISFIELD, of Princess Anne, Md., claims to be the only man in the country who has been married to his third wife for fifty years. Friday evening the aged couple celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage, and among the guests was an old friend who had been Mr. Crisfield's best man at his first wedding. Mr. Crisfield married his third wife March 12, 1843. He is 84 years old and in vigorous health.

THE original bill presented to the Mexican Congress, imposing export duties on coffee, hides, skin, ore and henquen, has met with such remonstrance and disapproval from the progressive element of Mexico, which is interested in building up trade with the United States and other countries, that the Ways and Means Committee of the Chamber of Deputies has withdrawn it for amendment. It is asserted it is possible to devise an import tariff which will materially increase the government's revenues and render the raising of revenue by export duties unnecessary.

POLITICAL.

TAMMANY HALL has re-elected all its old officers. Peter F. Meyer, Mr. Croker's business partner, was elected treasurer in the place of the late Arthur Leary.

Carter Henry Harrison took dinner Monday evening with the Mayor of Chicago. All his meals for the next two years will be eaten in the company of the same distinguished official, though hereafter he may dine alone. The ceremony which transferred the ex from his name to that of Hempstead Washburne took place Monday evening in the Council Chamber. Eight hundred men and half as many women paid a dear price for the privilege of seeing it. Their clothes were torn and their bodies bruised and battered in the struggle at the doors. Once within they looked down upon a marshaled army of floral designs between which the smiling faces of City Councilmen shone with a reflected luster. Red roses set the keynote of color in the room. They spoiled "Our Carter" on flowery wheels standing on either side the Mayor's desk. They rigged the white spars of half a dozen ships of state, and they looked down over all in the shape of high-perched floral roosters crowding for Aldermanic victories. The induction of the new mayor and councilmen into office was accompanied by most imposing ceremony.

FOREIGN.

RECENT disorders in Belgium culminated in an attack on the Mayor of Brussels by a mob. The Mayor was seriously hurt.

ATHENS advises say that the Island of Zante, one of the principal ones of the Ionian group, was visited by a most destructive earthquake Monday morning, resulting in great loss of life and property. The shock appears to have been most violent in the city of Zante, the greater part of which was destroyed. Thus far the bodies of twenty persons killed by falling walls have been removed from the debris, and it is feared that many more dead are still in the ruins. The number of persons injured runs up in the hundreds. Everything is in confusion and the work of searching for bodies and for the injured cannot be pursued systematically. The greater portion of the inhabitants have fled to the plains back of the city, where they wander about in a distracted manner bewailing the loss of their homes and property. The city presents a scene of desolation, and it is doubtful if it ever recovers from the series of misfortunes that have befallen it within the past three months. The shock occurred at 7:30 in the morning. Advice from the interior show that the whole island has been devastated. Many villages have been destroyed, and it is thought that the loss of life has been very great.

KING ALEXANDER has arrested the regents and the ministers of Serbia. He has declared that he has attained his majority and has assumed the government of his country. For many months the situation in Serbia has been critical, owing to the abuse of their power by the regents and state officials. Affairs had become so bad that the wing determined to take the reins in his own hands. In accordance with this determination plans were secretly laid by means of which the regents and ministry would be ousted without opportunity for opposition. A grand banquet was given at the palace to celebrate King Alexander's success in passing the examination prescribed for Serbian students. Unsuspectingly the regents and ministers attended the banquet, and while they were enjoying themselves at the palace detachments of soldiers and bodies of police took possession of the ministers' houses and occupied the government buildings. At midnight, while the festivities were still in progress, King Alexander proclaimed that he had attained his majority and that he had assumed, with the skuptshina, the government of the country. As a matter of fact he had not attained his majority, being about a year short of it. When the deposed regents and ministers heard the proclamation they were dumfounded.

IN GENERAL.

THE Earl of Aberdeen has been appointed Governor General of Canada. Although he will arrive in America in a few days he will only reach Ottawa to replace Lord Stanley in September, owing to his desire to allow Lady Aberdeen to prosecute her work for the Irish exhibit at the World's Fair.

A PARTY of immigrants were confined in a car for two days with a case of small-pox among them at Port Arthur, Que. The people would not let them come into the town and the railway company would not take the car back to Fort William, whence it started. Relief was finally brought to them and they were liberated.

R. G. DUN & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: The ruling fact in the business situation is the outage of gold, $3,500,000 Tuesday, $1,000,000 and possibly more Friday, with the prospect of a large amount next week. Treasury gold is again reduced below $2,000,000 in excess of the bullion fund, and there is more talk of bond issues, with the old doubt whether these would meet the real difficulty, which is the enormous excess of imports over excess of goods.

CRUSHED LIKE VERMIN.

FEARFUL LOSS OF LIFE ON AN EASTERN RAILROAD.

Probably Fatal Illness of Booth, the Tragedian—Kansas Crops Saved by a Soaking Rain—Three Killed by Dynamite at Tower, Minn.

A Jack Slips and Kills Five Men.

FIVE lives were lost Wednesday evening at Centuria, W. Va., on the line of the West Virginia and Pittsburgh Railroad. An engine and two cars were derailed by a broken switch in the yard, and while section hands were attempting to lift the tank of the engine from the track one of the jacks slipped and the tank fell on five men. United States Senator Camden, president of the road, was present, being on an inspection trip, and personally cared for the injured.

Edwin Booth Dying.

EDWIN BOOTH, the tragedian, has been stricken with paralysis and is lying at the point of death. He has made his home for the last few months at the Players' Club, New York, of which he was the founder. He has been in feeble health for a couple of years, and for the last twelve months has been almost a complete wreck. Lately, however, he has seemed to be slightly better. He has even attended the theater at times during the winter. Tuesday night Mr. Booth retired to his room alone. He has constantly refused to have an attendant near him during his sleeping hours. It was noticed in the morning that he did not arise at his usual hour, and the servants found Mr. Booth lying on the bed unconscious. The usual remedies failed to revive him. Mr. Booth remained unconscious all day. Little hope is entertained of prolonging his life.

Killed in a Boiler Explosion.

A BOILER in a sawmill at Roseville, Ohio, exploded and instantly killed two workmen. Harry Rex was blown 100 feet, his head separated from his body, and pieces of his skull and some brains were found 100 feet from him. Edward McClerg was blown fifty feet, lighting upon his head, breaking his neck.

FAIR WORK ON SUNDAY

THOUSANDS EMPLOYED AT JACKSON PARK.

More Visitors Paid Admission Fees Last Sunday than Upon Any Preceding Day—The White City Will Open Its Gates on Time.

Going On with a Rush.

Chicago correspondence: Sunday has ceased to be a day of rest at the World's Fair grounds. It is almost as busy as any other day. Last Sunday was, perhaps, the busiest one yet. The park has known since that gang of Italian laborers went in to level off the grounds and was promptly driven out by a bigger gang of native workmen. That was about two years ago. Last Sunday there were lively scenes all over the grounds. Long trains of exhibits came rumbling into the grounds, workmen were busy in all the buildings, and the park was thronged with visitors. The turnstiles showed a big attendance. When Captain Horace Elliott went around to all the gates just as the sun was dipping below

Midway Plaisance he learned that 11,904 people had paid to get into the park. But that was not all the crowd that came out. Six thousand more tramped through Midway Plaisance to see the Arabs in their voluminous robes of bright calico and the people from Java, who are putting up houses, woven like the baskets that Delaware peaches and Indiana cantaleups come in later in the season. No charge is made to get in Midway. The 6,000 people who strutted by the Columbian guard at Sixth and Cottage Grove avenue stopped when they got down at the other end, where the turnstiles were clicking a lively tune.

There is no occasion whatever for worry about the World's Fair not being ready to open on May 1. A big conflagration or a severe earthquake might prevent, but nothing else that can be anticipated will be likely to interfere. There has been so much doubt on this point that it has been necessary to assure the public from time to time that everything was in the best possible condition under the circumstances, and that doubtless all would be in readiness on the appointed day. Now, after another careful examination of everything and interviews with all the heads of departments on whom the opening actually depends, it is possible to assert that when the Fair opens on May 1 it will be in a far better condition than any world's fair ever held.

"I declare," said Director General

Davis recently, "that if the exhibitors will keep up the hurry that is now going on May 1st will find the Exposition nearer a complete whole than its most sanguine friend expected. There never yet was a World's fair that was entirely ready on the day of its opening. I do not suppose any intelligent person expects that. But, in spite of unexpected hindrances, in spite of unforeseen opposition, we are ahead. I do not wish to overstate the situation."

And so it was with all others. Every man having control of any department that could in any way promote or impede the opening has staked his reputation for veracity and ability on the result, and nothing on the subject now remains to be said.

On the Manufactures Building men are working day and night, stopping only for their meals. The exhibits are rapidly being placed, and everything is very satisfactory. The same may be said of the Transportation and Electricity Buildings, the Liberal Arts, the Agricultural and Mines and Mining Buildings, and of the various State and foreign buildings. Nobody connected with any of them has any time to waste in worrying, and there certainly seems no need for it. Armies of men are at work everywhere, exhibits are being rapidly placed and everybody says things are satisfactory.

Machinery Hall presents the busiest scene on the grounds. It must be ready. A failure here would be disastrous, for without power to move the machinery in the other buildings the opening would not be at all successful. Men are at work day and night here, too, and when President Cleveland touches the button that starts things going on May 1 it is quite safe to predict that Machinery Hall will do the rest.

There are to be 500 gates at the hundred different entrances at the Fair grounds, and they will be very handsome affairs of wire netting, steel and iron. Each of them will be provided with a self-registering automatic turnstile that will require the attendance of but one man at each gate. This official will take the ticket, see that it is all right, drop it in an opening in the gatepost, and press a short lever that will at the same time "chop" the ticket and unlock the gate. Then the visitor presses against the turnstile and walks in, registering his own admission. It will be very difficult for either gatekeeper or visitor to cheat this contrivance, for if the number of mutilated tickets in the box does not correspond to the number of admissions registered by the turnstile the gatekeeper will be held responsible for the difference, and there is no possibility of any one's passing through without his knowledge, as by a simple motion of his hand he can lock the gate and hold the crowd back as long as he pleases.

It is going to cost a whole lot of money to make and print the tickets for the "choppers" of these stiles to destroy. A beautiful design has been selected, and the paper will be made especially for the purpose. At first thought this would seem to be money wasted, but a large amount can be realized by the sale of tickets that will never be used at gates.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

THOUGHTS WORTHY OF CALM REFLECTION.

A Pleasant, Interesting, and Instructive Lesson and Where It May Be found—A Learned and Concise Review of the Same.

Wisdom's Warning.

The lesson for Sunday, April 20, may be found in Prov. 1: 20-33.

INTRODUCTORY.

This week we vary our treatment a trifle so as to present a model Sunday-school session from our old friends of the "New Smyrna" church. Officers and teachers are on the alert for new and practical ideas in Sunday-school management, and we are assured that in this great department of the church at work studying the Bible, there is something additional and helpful to be learned all the time. These hints and suggestions will, therefore, not come amiss. We can all aid each other in the good work. Next week the lesson topic is "The Value of Wisdom." Prov. 3: 11-24.

POINTS IN THE LESSON.

Wisdom is "the principle of true religion." Its cry is, of course, never heard unless it itself be present in the soul.

Without means literally on the outside. Wisdom may be within, but unless it speak so it can be heard outside, of what use is it?

"She uttereth her voice" (Hebrew: giveth her cry). It is the way wisdom is to protect herself. She sends out her cry beyond herself. She gives the cry good carrying force. Has the wisdom that is in you found voice?

Find "the chief place of conscience." That is the spot where the truth of God should have utterance. At our watering places, at our centers of trade and commerce, in our halls of learning, there let wisdom declare herself. God never intended that this old world should be any resort shut the saving voice of wisdom. Let it be heard at "the opening of the gates."

Put it need not always be preaching. It is oftener right living; God's way exemplified in human walk and consideration. And what does wisdom say? Be rational, be reasonable; do the sensible thing. Godliness is wise, ungodliness is in the end foolish waste and grievous loss. Simple (Hebrew: open) is used here in the sense of being easily misled. The lesson puts it: "How long, simpletons, will ye love simplicity?"

And here again appears the sin against the Holy Spirit. It is to willfully and persistently disregard his great appeal, "Ye have set at naught (dismissed) all my counsel." A man may do that who has never been to church or Sunday-school and never heard a sermon in all his life. God's word of wisdom is abroad. The heavens declare it, its line goes out through all the earth. Every good impulse resisted is truth despised. Presently it is the Spirit quenched.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AT NEW SMYRNA.

It begins an hour before it commences. That is, the sexton, a converted man, and not demented, not one of the weaker brethren, opens all the windows, and the front door and the back door, lets a bit of God's breath of spring pass through. It drives out the dead and buried atmosphere and makes a kind of an Easter resurrection to start with. The janitor is, we say, an intelligent Christian man, and he has an idea that very often when the good people are languidly praying for the Spirit, what they want is fresh air. That, indeed, perhaps, just at the time, is God's spirit for them.

Promptly at the hour the superintendent comes in, accompanied by the pastor, who is regarded as, officially at least, at the head of the Sunday school, as indeed, of all departments of the church. The superintendent is simply his chief of staff for this portion of the work, its whole management, however, placed in his trusty hands. They have just now been holding a few moments of preliminary prayer in the pastor's study. Why should not the Bible study service, as well as the preaching service, be preceded by prayer to God? The superintendent steps to the bell and strikes it, and instantly all heads bow in silent prayer, broken presently by the pastor's voice, as he leads their supplications up to the Lord's prayer, when all recite in concert. Instantly at a prompt chord from the instrument all rise and sing the Coronation, and the Sunday school session has commenced.

"Has some one a selection?" says the superintendent. No. 21 is called for. They sing it. "Now let one of the Bible class suggest a hymn." No. 45 is called for. "Now one from the infant class." A little hand is up: "Jesus Bids Us Shine" is sung. "While the orchestra (there is a violin and a flute, besides the organ and piano) play the 122d number, a few pieces which we will presently sing, the secretaries will make their distributions and take up the offerings." Then they sing, a good, ringing voice leading from the front, "And now, the lesson." It is read in concert to-day. "A half hour for the study"—and the classes are at work.

The superintendent and his assistants quickly adjust the new-comers and the strangers. Several substitute teachers are placed, all being done very quietly, so as not to disturb the classes in the study. The infant class goes off to an adjoining room where their occasional singing will not be heard (they sing soft, quiet pieces). The pastor is not chained down to any one class or place. He is an "all round man" that can be placed where he is most needed at the time. Frequently when pressed with work he simply, as Dr. Anderson used to advise, looks in and smiles. He has the liberty of the school.

A ring at the bell, and then another a little later and the school is all attention again. A solo or duet is rendered; a recitation bearing on the subject is heard. Another song from the school, a three-minute blackboard exercise, announcements, hymn, scripture, benediction, and the school is dismissed. Time one hour, and a full, happy hour. We will go again.

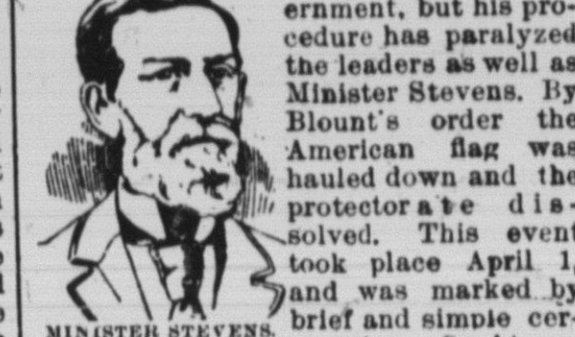

OUR FLAG GOES DOWN

MONARCHY'S COLORS FLOAT OVER HAWAII.

American Commissioner Blount Paralyzes the Annexationists by Ordering the Flag Hauled Down and the Seamen Back to Their Vessel.

The Protectorate Dissolved.

Honolulu advises by steamer to San Francisco say that Commissioner Blount's arrival was a wet blanket for the provisional government, but his procedure has paralyzed the leaders as well as Minister Stevens. By Blount's order the American flag was hauled down and the protectorate dissolved. This event took place April 1, and was marked by brief and simple ceremonies. On his arrival in Honolulu the United States Commissioner held two audiences with the provisional government, at the first of which Blount presented a letter from President Cleveland introducing the envoy and defining his duties. At the second audience, held alone with President Dole, Blount said that the following day he would lower the American flag, break up Camp Boston, send the American seamen back to the vessel, and declare the protectorate ended. His reason was that he wanted to put the provisional government on a plane of independence, so that in his dealings with it there should be no imputation of coercion.

MINISTER STEVENS.

The Provisional leaders were badly surprised, but they spent the night in drilling their troops and preparing for any uprising that might follow the withdrawal of the marines and blue jackets. The streets were full of rumors that Blount proposed to restore the Queen, and these wild tales created intense excitement among the natives. The Queen hastily summoned her followers, and the report was given out that the moment the American colors were lowered she would ask the Japanese to declare a protectorate. These rumors, however, proved unfounded. The morning of April 1 a great crowd assembled in front of the Government buildings. The full force of the Provisional army was gathered. At the command from Blount a bugler gave the signal and the American colors came down. The descent of the flag was watched in deep silence. Then the Hawaiian flag was hoisted. It received no cheers, for everyone knew it was not the flag the new Government desired.

Holds a Conference.

Blount on April 3 had a conference with the provisional leaders, at which he assured them that neither Japan nor any other power would be permitted to land troops to menace the government. Since that there has been considerable excitement, but nothing has occurred to disturb the peace. The provisional troops are amply sufficient to guard against any attempts of the Hawaiians to upset the government. It was remarked by many with surprise that no demonstration of any kind had been made when the Hawaiian flag was raised. It was afterward ascertained that the queen had requested some of her people to instruct the natives to make no demonstration on the occasion. That the royalists, in view of Mr. Blount's first official act, which was unaccompanied by any word of explanation are greatly encouraged cannot be denied. It is known that Minister Stevens was not informed of the Commissioner's intention to lower the flag and the provisional government had less than twenty-four hours' notice. The chief danger apprehended is that of Japanese interference, either on behalf or at the application of Japanese subjects, or the Hawaiians themselves. Honolulu, always a town of rumors, was startled on the same night on which the proposed hauling down of the stars and stripes became known by a report that the Queen anticipated such action and would apply to the captain of the Japanese cruiser Nanila for protection against the provisional government and assistance to restore her to the throne. Minister Stevens, Commissioner Blount and Admiral Skerrett, consulted over the matter and, it is stated, agreed that Japanese interference would be an act of hostility to the United States and that American interests demanded that such be repelled. No hostile demonstration, however, has been made.

THE WEEK AT LANSING

WHAT THE LEGISLATURE IS DOING.

An Impartial Record of the Work Accomplished by Those Who Make Our Laws—How the Time Has Been Occupied During the Past Week.

The Law-Makers.

When the bill incorporating Orange lodges in Michigan came up on third reading in the Senate Friday, an amendment was offered providing that the organization should in its ritual disclaim all loyalty to the British Government and not permit anything to be taught by the order tending to incite its members against any citizen of this State on account of his or her religious beliefs. This amendment precipitated a fierce discussion and was finally defeated, and the bill likewise failed of passage. The vote was reconsidered and another attempt will be made to pass it. The Committee on Taxation reported favorably on a bill providing for the return to state system of taxation and the treatment of real estate mortgages as personal property for the purposes of assessment. The Insurance Committee recommended the passage of the bill prohibiting unauthorized companies from soliciting business in the State. The House bill making an appropriation for the mining school was amended by reducing the appropriation for current expenses $5,000 and increasing for new buildings $10,000. The House killed the bill substituting a tax of 2 per cent. on the net premiums of life insurance for the present rate of 3 per cent. on gross premiums.

In the House, on Tuesday, the Linderman bill, providing for the appointment of three commissioners to determine the best method of making the pine barrens productive and to appraise the value of titles of actual settlers, was favorably reported on. Bills were passed appropriating an additional $2,000 for the Michigan educational exhibit at the World's Fair, fixing a penalty of $50 for using of four-wheel carriages or jumpers on railway trains after Sept. 1, and authorizing mutual fire insurance companies now licensed to do business in certain counties to extend their operations throughout the State. The Senate in committee of the whole passed bills prohibiting the employment of free labor at the Detroit House of Correction; requiring employers to provide seats for female employees when not actually at work; appropriating $110,000 for the State Mining School. The bill providing for the branding of all convicted made goods was killed, and the Baum bill establishing a home for feeble-minded children which passed the House last week was reported without recommendation.

Over the free pass question the House had a very animated discussion Wednesday afternoon, which resulted in the defeat of the bill making it a crime for a railroad company to offer a legislator or State officer a pass over its lines. The House passed the bill requiring blowers to be placed over every wheel, on and after Jan. 1, 1894. The Senate passed bills making telegraph companies common carriers; to prevent the introduction and spread of cholera in the State; preventing foreign insurance companies authorized to do business in this State from placing insurance on Michigan property in offices outside of the State. Governor Rich approved the bill prohibiting the imprisonment of federal prisoners in this State.

The House Thursday passed a bill amending the law relating to cruelty to animals which provides that English sparrows may be killed by sportsmen in connection with trap-shooting contests. In committee of the whole, a bill was passed providing a separate board of control for the Iowa prison and prohibiting a larger number than 100 convicts being employed in any one industry. The Senate passed bills making an appropriation of $110,000 for the support of the State Mining School at Houghton; amending the law relative to the prevention of soliciting or issuing of an unauthorized insurance policy, and appropriating $8,000 to increase the efficacy of the State Board of Health in restraining dangerous diseases. The Judiciary Committee reported favorably upon a bill providing two additional judges of the supreme court, making the number seven. The Committee on Labor interests recommended the passage of a bill providing for factory inspection under the direction of the Labor Bureau and prohibiting the employment of girls under 14 years of age.

A Wonderful Tree.

The cocoa-nut palm supplies nearly all the wants of man. Its wood is used for building purposes—both houses and boats—for ornamental purposes, when polished, it makes elaborate furniture; the leaves thatch roofs and feed cattle; its fibers make rope, brooms, brushes, mats and even paper. The kernel of the nut forms the staple food of the natives in many parts of India and the liquid portion, known as cocoa-nut milk, serves them for drink. It also yields wine, sugar, oil, wax, resin, astrigent matters and food for cattle. The shell is converted into cups and many other useful domestic utensils; the outside husk is converted into clothing, coir ropes, cables, and matting. The oil is largely used in cookery, as well as for making candles, and marine soap, which will produce a lather in salt water. In the course of purification it also produces glycerine, and it is in general use throughout India for burning in lamps. Even its roots are chewed in the summer, as is the areca nut. Indeed, it would be difficult to mention a single thing necessary for man's well-being that the cocoa-nut tree does not provide. It has been estimated that there are 280,000,000 of these trees in full bearing in the world. The bamboo is not considered a tree, but it is a plant which is put to a very great number of uses by the Chinese, who look upon it almost as a universal provider.

Where "Vanity Fair" Was Written.

In 1847 Thackeray went to live in Young street, and once pointing out the bow-windowed cottage to an inquiring friend, is said to have remarked: "Go down on your knees, you rogue, for here 'Vanity Fair' was penned, and I will go down with you, for I have a high opinion of that little production myself." Here he also wrote "Esmond," and one of the houses close by in Kensington Square has been chosen as the home of Lady Castlewood and Beatrice. In 1862 Thackeray removed from Onslow Square, where "The New-comers" and "The Virginians" had been composed, to the house he had built himself in Palace Green, still remaining in the old court suburb to which he was so much attached. Here it was the completion of "Denis Duval" was cut short by his lamentable death in the following year.—Chambers' Journal.

Still, if the dog is already out, perhaps you had better let him use his own judgment.

Monday last the people of Chelsea were favored with a glimpse of Geo. Jacob Schweinfurth, of "Heaven" near Rockford, Ill., who has gained much notoriety in this country from the peculiar religion that he advocates. In a conversation with him, he made the remark that the newspapers of the country had not reported him correctly. We had hoped to publish some of his ideas of religion, but his manuscript has failed to reach us.

The good roads amendments to the state constitution, voted on at the spring election, was carried by a majority of over 20,000, the largest given any of the amendments. This amendment provides that the improvement of the highways shall be placed in charge of a county board of commissioners, instead of the townships as at present, but takes effect only in such counties as may vote for it. Strange as it may seem, this very worthy question met its greatest opposition in the agricultural districts, that will be most benefited.

The market continues dull and more inclined to go down than up. The wheat market braced up some last week and 67c were paid for some, but since that large receipts and favorable weather have depressed the market and now 65c is the top for red or white. Receipts are free and will be for two months because room must be made for the coming crop and money must be had in many cases for current expenses. Rye brings 52c, oats 35c, barley nominal at $1.20, beans, $1.75, clover seed $6.50, potatoes 70c, eggs 14c, butter 23c, fat sheep and cattle 3 1/2 to 4c per pound on foot.

A Moline correspondent of the Allegan Gazette sends to his paper quite a story. It seems that a young man of that place called on his girl and sat with his arm around her. The situation was evidently so comfortable to him that he went to sleep, but the young lady, not relishing that kind of a tete-a-tete, gently disengaged herself and brought in a stone churn, placed it in a chair by his side and retired to her room, leaving him embracing the churn. You can't even mention cow to that young man now.

Pulpit power is too often measured by the emotions excited, but the real test lies in the conscience! Genuine eloquence leads to consecration service, the eloquence of truth!

Some people are too proud to dig or beg, had they brilliant talents they would astonish the world—they would soar! The christian needs working faith, not genius to dazzle and discourage the natives next-door, but the ability to continue in well-doing. The immortal Carlyle once said, "My secret is, I am plod."

Mr. A. D. Bowsky a student at Ann Arbor, and a Bulgarian, will speak at the Congregational church next Sunday evening. South Carolina's new liquor-law which goes into effect July 1st, will throw out of business every saloon keeper in the state. It is said that there are 5,000 men employed in the 887 retail liquor saloons and 14 wholesale establishments of the state. According to the provisions of this law, total abstinence only (appointed by a State Commission) can serve as "dispensaries." These are to receive a stated salary and no "dispensary" is to be located in any county seat unless it is petitioned for by a majority of the freeholders. This experiment is at least unique, the only persons permitted to sell liquor for the state being total abstainers. How would such a law would such a law work in Michigan? How deliciously euphonic—state dispensaries! Next.

Peter Schweinfurth.

Peter Schweinfurth was born in Germany, on the 24th day of December, 1844, and died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Lena Notten, near Francisco, Friday, April 21, 1893. About fifty years ago he came to America and settled in Marion county, Ohio, at which place the most of his family of children were born, thirteen in number, eight of whom are still living.

In 1860 he moved to Allen county, same state, where he became a farmer, having worked as a cooper formerly. He had resided at that place about seven years when his wife died, and in 1868 he came to Francisco, Jackson county, Michigan, at which place he resided until about six years ago, when his health becoming poor, he took up his residence with his daughter, Mrs. Lena Notten.

Mr. Schweinfurth was a devout Methodist, and his home in early days was a sort of gathering place for preachers of that faith. For twenty years he was a class leader.

The funeral was held in the Syrian German M. E. church, Sunday last, the services being conducted by Rev. Millitzer. Mr. Schweinfurth's son, Geo. Jacob, of Rockford, Ill., was present and made a few remarks. The remains were interred in the church cemetery.

A. PARTISAN.

Who wrote about the English oak,
Wrote sturdy verse and true;
And we have sung the poet folk
Of willow and of yew;
But what they said were words of love,
But theirs last praise not mine,
I rather sing the praises of
The "quakin asp" and pine.

When in the morn the edge of day
Peers over the great peaks,
And down along the valley way
To where the torrent shrieks,
It hunts from out the haunts of shade
Full many a friend of mine,
And clear the hemlock are displayed
Of "quakin asp" and pine.

Oh, deep within the mountain heart
Are yonder treasures stored!
And suddenly the giants part
With riches from their hoard,
But fairer than the bits of gold
That in the shivers shine
Is that sweet memory I hold
Of "quakin asp" and pine.

And lo! her beauty never was seen,
As, climbing crag and stone,
They carpet with a royal green
The stairway to God's throne,
More fitting stair from heaven to earth
Than this could none divine,
When the pure east dawn has its birth
On "quakin asp" and pine.

Bottling Lightning.

Andrew Crosse, the English electrician, had odd encounters with people who did not understand his art, it being a time when it was far less a matter of everyday experience than it is now.

One day a party of strangers visited him to see his electrical arrangements, and looked with some anxiety at two Leyden jars which their host mentioned that, in certain states of the atmosphere, he could charge them with electricity from the clouds.

"But, Mr. Crosse," said one old gentleman gravely, "don't you think it is rather impious to bottle the lightning?"

"And don't you think, sir," was the prompt reply, "that it is rather impious to bottle rainwater?"—Youth's Companion.

Cleaning in Fruit Culture.

Professor J. E. Humphrey insists that the treatment of fungus diseases in plants shall be preventive rather than remedial. Giving the plant abundant nourishment is not sufficient; the usual careless practice of leaving in the vineyard or orchard, lying on the ground or hanging from the branches, the dead fruits of the season, which have been destroyed by fungi may work infinite mischief, as the dead fruits furnish to the fungi which attack them the most favorable possible soil for further and complete development. In the next spring the air is full of the spores of these fungi, which find lodgment in the new leaves and fruits, and so the trouble is continued.—New York Telegram.

How to Make a Scrapbook.

A man who has had much experience with scrapbooks says: "I have found out, as no doubt many others have done, that a regularly bound book of any kind is the poorest foundation for a scrapbook. This I did not know until I began to examine manuscripts in libraries and public archives. Now, however, my separate sheets of paper can be added to at pleasure and bound when I choose. If any professional scrapbook maker who may read this still purchases those rather fanciful bound volumes prepared for the purpose, let him once try using stout folio sheets, such as dry goods dealers use, and I think he will never adopt any other method."—New York Tribune.

The Power of the Ideal.

It is a truth which has not yet come to be fully realized that much of the character of an individual depends upon his ideas of heroism. What he admires and honors is a good test of what he is, or rather what he longs to be, and his heroes will always have a strong attractive force, which will draw him as far as possible into their sphere.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Answers to Two Questions.

One scholar was asked to explain the words fort and fortress. A fort is a place to put men in, and a fortress a place to put women in. To the question, What is a republican? A republican is a sinner mentioned in the Bible.—Miss A. C. Graham in University Correspondent.

In one respect Jay Gould was said to resemble Renan, who, when he uttered disapproved of an opponent, said, "You are right a thousand times," and having disarmed him proceeded to efface all that he put forth.

Sealskin seems to be in greater favor than ever, and it apparently becomes more and more beautiful as the time goes on, probably because the manipulation of the skins unceasingly grows toward perfection.

In walking the lungs should be expanded and the whole muscular system brought into play as far as possible. A buoyancy is obtained by this means which makes the exercise especially beneficial.

The only vote the late Lord Tennyson gave in the house of lords is said to have been in support of the county franchise bill. He paired in favor of the deceased wife's sister bill.

Cowper loved pets, and had at one time five rabbits three hares, two guinea pigs, a magpie, a jay, a starling, two canary birds, two dogs, a "retired cat" and a squirrel.

Looking at Thermometers.

There is a morbid desire in the breast of mankind to look upon scenes of suffering and horror.

We instinctively turn to that page of the daily paper whereon are recounted the sickening accidents of the day. With a feeling of mingled dismay and curiosity we approach the scene of some accident and elbow our way within view of the sufferer.

We know a certain sight will shock our sensibilities, and yet, shuddering, we draw near and view it.

If you want a practical illustration of this, just watch the crowds about the thermometers on a cold, freezing day.

Here comes a man, wrapped up in an ulster, slapping his hands together and trying his best to keep warm. He sees the thermometer at a distance and shivers. At that very moment there creeps into his mind an abnormal, gloomy desire to look at it. He knows the sight of the mercury at zero will freeze his blood to the marrow, and yet he cannot resist.

He creeps stealthily up, takes one furtive glance and slinks away, his teeth chattering and his blood curdled.—New York Herald.

Climbing a Coconut Tree.

Coconuts when ripe fall to the ground, and when necessary are plucked by men who climb up. It sometimes makes one's blood run cold to see them run up the trees like monkeys.

Two ways are practiced for mounting the trunk. In the case of a small tree, or at an odd moment, the man walks up the trunk, keeping his feet flat against it and throwing his weight back from it as much as possible, retaining his position at the same time by the tension of his arms.

The other and safer plan is to pass a loop of cord around the feet, which are thus kept close together, and grasp the trunk of the tree, the arms in the meantime assisting the climber, who moves upward in a series of jumps.—Frank Leslie's Monthly.

A Difference.

A little hotel on Market street has a sign, "Beds, 25 and 50 cents." A guest walked in the other day and asked to be shown a specimen of each kind of bed. He found that they were exactly the same size, in the same room, and both were covered with woolen comforts that looked just alike.

Guest—Why do you charge more for one bed than the other? They are as much alike as two leghorn hens.

Landlord (condescendingly)—We change the sheets, sir, on the 50-cent beds once a week, and on the 25-cent beds once a month.

Guest—Guess I'll take a 10-cent seat by the stove and nod.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Kings Are Not Very Well Known.

The king of Italy is generally regarded as an able officer, with much knowledge of foreign politics and some firmness, but that description does not constitute a character, and of his remaining qualities, except that he is a good manager of finance and has in him somewhere the Savoyard tendency to plot, nothing seems to be clearly discerned. Even of the emperor of Germany, with his fondness for being visible, for rushing about and for making speeches, little is known, or rather much is known, but the knowledge produces nothing but perplexity.—London Spectator.

Our Religious Antipodes.

In the census of New Zealand taken in 1891 an attempt was made to classify the religious beliefs of the people. In a population of 626,638 only 32,000 were found outside the pale of Christian belief, and only 322 of this number were professed agnostics.—San Francisco Chronicle.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

Is superior to all other preparations claiming to be blood-purifiers. First of all, because the principal ingredient used in it is the extract of genuine Honduras sarsaparilla root, the variety richest in medicinal properties. Also, because the yellow dock, being raised expressly for the Company, is always fresh and of the very best kind. With equal discrimination and care, each of the other ingredients are selected and compounded. It is because it is always the same in appearance, flavor, and effect, and, being highly concentrated, only small doses are needed. It is, therefore, the most economical blood-purifier in existence. It makes food nourishing, work pleasant, sleep refreshing, and life enjoyable. It searches out all impurities in the system and expels them harmlessly by the natural channels. AYER'S Sarsaparilla gives elasticity to the step, and imparts to the aged and infirm, renewed health, strength, and vitality.

THE Superior Medicine

Thrasher took in the situation, and, flushing his currant wine, he drew his leather sleeve across his very large mouth, and, flinging his saddle bags over his shoulder, he said:

"I am going to the inn."

"That is all right, my man," said Mr. Hedges, handing him a coin; "I'll see you again."

"Will you send back an answer, sir?" "Yes; to-morrow all the Captain's friends will give you letters to hand to him."

"But, sir, I must leave to-night."

"To-night?" in chorus from the people about Thrasher.

"Yes; I must go to Gardner's Island, where a boat will take me to New York," replied the fellow, with a self-possession that proved him no novice in this business.

"How long will you remain?" asked Valentine Dayton.

"About two hours."

"Very well; we shall try to have the letters by that time," said Mr. Hedges. Thrasher bowed humbly and left. He had but just gone out of hearing when the Squire, bursting with impatience, called out:

"Well, George, what is the trouble?" "Trouble!" repeated Mr. Hedges. "Why, the trouble is that Fox is to be back in a few days, and I am to report to him for orders!"

"Report to Fox for orders?" "Fox to have command of the Sea Hawk!"

"What does Ralph mean?" These were a few of the exclamations that broke from the lips of the people on the veranda when Mr. Hedges uttered the sentence given above.

Mr. Hedges ran the fingers of his left hand nervously through his ruffled hair, his right hand clutching the letter.

He was debating the propriety of reading it, and on such an important question, for he had the old-time regard for official etiquette. He could not afford to come to a hasty conclusion.

"Sit down, sit down," he said at length; "I can't see any harm in letting you all know now what every one ashore and ashore must know in a few hours."

"Squire Condit and his wife sat down on the lieutenant's right hand, and Valentine Dayton and Ellen just in front of him."

He was noticeably deliberate in his speaking, and painfully so in his reading. He hesitated over some of the words, and his soundless lips spelt them to himself before pronouncing them.

This was the letter:

"NEW AMSTERDAM INN, BOWLING GREEN, CITY OF NEW YORK AND THE PROVINCE OF SAME."

"To 1st Officer, George Hedges, Commanding ye Provincial Cruiser, Sea Hawk, Per M's Service, Off Saz Harbor, County of Suffolk, Long Island."

"Sir: The Governor of ye Province of New York, to whom I have made due report of ye addition and state of ye provincial cruiser, Sea Hawk, hath ordered and commanded me to remain in attendance on his worshipful honor, until such time or times as ye great council meet, to whom I shall make such explanation of ye condition of ye said ship as shall be fitting ye occasion."

"I therefore command, instruct and order that you, George Hedges, 1st officer, command ye aforesaid cruiser Sea Hawk, shall on ye arrival of Captain William Fox, of P. M. Ship Wanderer, report to him for such instructions as it shall please him to give, and to be unto him obedient in all things relating to the conduct of ye ship and crew."

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto affixed my signature, and the seal of ye aforesaid cruiser, Sea Hawk."

"I have the honor to be, Most truly, Your humble, OBEDIENT SERVANT, RALPH DENHAM, Captain of ye Provincial Cruiser, Sea Hawk."

"There," said Lieutenant Hedges, "that's the letter, Val. What do you think of it?"

"I am very sorry," replied Valentine Dayton, "but, of course, you can do nothing but obey orders."

"Of course," echoed the Lieutenant. "I wish that fellow Fox never showed his red head in this town," said the Squire, angrily.

"Oh, he is not to blame; he must obey orders like ourselves," said the bluff old Lieutenant.

"My dear," said Mrs. Condit, inclining her pretty head to her husband, and turning her mild eyes to the others to induce them to note what he was about to say, "I do not think that Ralph wrote that letter."

"I'm sorry to say," said the lawyer, to whom a bit of wax with a seal on it was the badge of law and authority, "that there can't be any doubt about it."

"Still," she persisted, "I feel that he did not write it."

"Have you any other reason than your own feelings, dear wife?" asked the Squire.

"Yes; I cannot think that Ralph Denham, who, man and boy has known George Hedges for one and twenty years, would write a cold, stiff, heartless letter like that."

"Nor can I believe that Ralph wrote it," added Ellen.

"Ralph didn't write the letter," said Valentine Dayton. "It was written by the Captain of the Sea Hawk in his official capacity. If he had written to Uncle George, or to me, or to any of us, as Ralph Denham, our true old friend, he'd put as much heart into his words as any man that ever handled a pen."

"Yes," explained Mr. Hedges, who saw and appreciated the mistake of the ladies, "official communications, even between father and son, as I've seen time and time again in the service, has all got to be written that way. Why, they wouldn't be official if they wasn't stiff, and cold, and lofty, and all that."

Neither Ellen nor her mother attempted comment, for, with the exception of the Squire, there was not to them a greater authority than Lieut. George Hedges in all the country round about.

"There is but little satisfaction in a man trying to do his duty," said Valentine, with some bitterness. "Why couldn't the Governor have left Uncle George in charge of the ship?"

As no one attempted to answer this question, the Squire asked Mr. Hedges if he had any objections to letting him see the letter.

"Not at all," replied Mr. Hedges; "read it for yourself."

The Squire took the letter, adjusted his spectacles, and coughed with great solemnity, while his face took on that expression of judicial gravity which was the terror of all evil-doers in that country.

He was about to read the letter when Lea Hedges came up the path and joined the party. She has seen the post-rider going to Squire Condit's, and her heart told her that he carried news from Ralph Denham.

After Ellen and her mother had explained the situation, and Lea had expressed her sorrow in her face rather than by words, the Squire read the letter aloud, and then, spreading it out on his knee he took off his spectacles, and after wiping them, again adjusted them with great nicety to his nose; he concluded these preparations by taking a vigorous pinch of snuff, after he had passed round the box with no takers.

"Let me ask you a question, Lieutenant Hedges," he began, with a severity of mien that startled his wife and perplexed Ellen not a little.

"Aye, aye, sir. Fire away," said Mr. Hedges.

"Captain Denham left you in command of the Sea Hawk?"

"Yes, sir."

"To hold till he returned?"

"Yes, sir, or till I am relieved by some properly commissioned officer."

"Just so; that is the way I see it. Now this letter does not say that you are to turn over the command of the ship to Captain Fox; on the contrary, it is expressly stated that you shall obey him as a superior officer, so far as the movements of the vessel under your command are concerned."

"I think you are right there, squire," said Mr. Hedges, his face brightening up.

"I know I am. When Fox comes he will have orders from the Governor, and you'll see that they accord with my opinion as justice of the peace." And satisfied that all the judges in the world could not differ from this opinion, the Squire handed back the letter.

When Lea learned that Thrasher, the post-rider was about to return in about an hour or two, she got a quill and paper from Ellen and sat down then and there to write her lover a letter.

All wrote, Mr. Hedges' being the only letter that had an official tone, and the only one in which love or friendship was not sent to Ralph, with strong injunctions to answer as soon as possible, and give them all the particulars, particularly the particulars of his return.

When all the letters were ready, Mr. Hedges and Valentine Dayton took them down to the inn, where they found Thrasher smoking his pipe with an air of great enjoyment, and looking like anything but a man exhausted by a long ride.

"These letters," said Valentine Dayton, taking a gold coin from his pocket and handing it with the letters to Thrasher, "are all private, so I will pay you now, and when you hand them to Capt. Denham, I am sure he will give you an additional reward."

"I like Cap'n Denham as much as any man I ever came across, except, perhaps, mebbe, Cap'n Fox; he comes up about to him; and you'll see I won't forget myself," replied Thrasher, whose flushed face showed that he had been taking advantage of his unexpected prosperity to treat himself to wine.

Soon after this the post-rider left for Greenport, from which point he said he was going to Gardner's Island, then and still in the possession of the family that first purchased it from the Indians.

"I don't like that man, Thrasher," said Mr. Hedges, as he and Valentine stood on the beach signaling the Sea Hawk to send a boat for them.

"Nor do I, but of course the fellow has nothing to do with the nature of the messages he carries. I almost wish the Sea Hawk was out of commission, and we were settled down on shore again," said Valentine.

"Oh, it's all very well for you, Val, who have a pretty girl ready to become your wife, to talk about settling down; but here I am—five-and-forty, with no wife and the prospect of none."

"That is your own fault, Uncle George."

"Perhaps it is; I could have married in my time, and when I was your age, if any one had told me I should live to be as old as I am now, without getting married, I would call him crazy. Yet, here I am, with no wife but the ship and no home but the sea."

"Oh, come, Uncle George, don't talk in that way. Every house on the island is your home and every man is your friend; and as to getting married, why a man of forty-five should be in his prime. If you doubt this start out at once with the object of getting a wife, and my word for it, you can win a girl nearly as sweet as Ellen Condit, and that is saying a great deal for the powers of fascination of any man, young or old."

The lieutenant's ironed face and clear, brave eyes took on a softer expression, and his usually strong, bold voice had in it a sub-tone of music, as he said:

"Perhaps you are right; Val, I know I feel as strong, and my head is as clear, and my heart as stout as it ever was; and talking 'bout being too old to love, I'll tell you something if it wasn't I'm afraid you'd laugh at me."

"You do me an injustice," Uncle George, if you think I could entertain any other feeling than respect for what I think to be the noblest emotion that can stir the human heart. A man himself in love, is not apt to ridicule the feeling in another."

"I think you are right, my lad, and more particularly when that other is one's uncle. But I don't see why I shouldn't tell you, though you may think strange of my taste, that I have had my eye on a certain girl for two years and more."

"May I ask if I know her?"

"You do, Val," said the lieutenant, blushing through his tan.

"Well, Uncle George, who is she?"

"She is not of our race," said the lieutenant, with a solemn shake of the head.

"Not of our race! What do you mean?"

"I mean, Val, she ain't white—"

"But she ain't black!" cried Val.

"Mercy preserve us! No, she's red. She's an Indian, Val, a princess in her tribe, and a prettier or nobler woman never trod the shores of Long Island. I don't care what color the next is—"

"Do you mean Untilla?"

"I do, Val."

"And have you said anything to her about it?"

"Of course I haven't. But I say, Val, my boy, you must do it for me."

"But why not make the proposal yourself, uncle?"

"Hang it, lad; I'd rather attack a war frigate. You must do it for me," said Mr. Hedges, appealingly.

By this time the boat from the Sea Hawk reached the shore near by, and so brought an end to what the old lieutenant afterwards declared was "the most trying conversation he had ever tackled during the five-and-forty years of his life."

Lea Hedges parted with Ellen at the gate, and under an impulse that she could not resist, she made her way to the place where she and Ralph Denham had for the first time come to an understanding.

She felt hurt that he had not sent one word to her by the messenger. "It would have taken so little of his time," she said, as she sat down on the fallen trunk of the same tree, "so little of his time, yet it would have fed my hungry heart, if he had only repeated what I so well know 'Lea, I love you.'"

She saw Valentine and her uncle in earnest conversation, as they waited for the boat that hastened to them from the Sea Hawk; and she envied them, for she supposed they were discussing naval matters, and that love could only engross men when they had nothing else to do, while with her own sex, love absorbed all their thoughts, if it did not control all the acts of their lives.

She regretted that Captain Fox was coming back, and she made up her mind to hold him at arm's length if he continued his coarse attentions. She could not even think kindly of her father while this man plagued her thoughts.

She was not aware that another person was near her till she heard her name called in accents low, musical and thrilling, and looking up with a start, she saw Untilla before her. The Indian maiden had attended the same school with Lea, Ellen and the young ladies of the better families in the place, and in many respects she was the intellectual equal of the brightest.

She was particularly distinguished for the frankness of her manners—a frankness that was as far removed from rudeness as the clear waters of a willow-shaded spring differ from the tinged stream to which it gives rise.

Untilla had all the dignity of character that distinguished the rulers of her race, but there blended with it a gentleness and a freshness of disposition, which some call natural, and all know to be loving.

In proof of this it may be said, here as well as hereafter, that Untilla well knew that she loved Ralph Denham.

In the days when they were laughing school girls, Lea made no secret to her friends of the feeling then being warmed into a life that should only die out with her own. And the Indian maiden, with the dignified reticence of her people, kept her own counsel; but as she could not act a lie, her manner to Ralph Denham told her feeling for him as plainly as if she had announced it in a meeting of the tribe.

Untilla, since the return of the Sea Hawk from the last cruise, saw where the young Captain's affections lay, and while her heart rebelled for a moment against the inevitable, she made up her mind to submit, and for his sake continue loving what he loved.

"Why, Untilla!" exclaimed Lea, as she took the Indian girl's hands, and drew her to a seat on the fallen tree. "I supposed you were miles and miles away."

"I would be back at my home, I should be there, for my brother has the white man, Colonel Graham, for a guest, were it not for you," replied Untilla, still holding one of Lea's hands.

"Then, my dear Untilla, if you come to see me, you must do it at my father's house," said Lea, preparing to rise.

IN 1842 Dr. C. W. Long, of Georgia, first removed a tumor from a patient under the influence of an anæsthetic, and two years later a Dr. Wells had a tooth drawn while insensible under the influence of nitrous oxide gas.

In 1846 Dr. J. C. Warren, under the direction of Dr. Jackson, anesthetized a patient and removed a tumor from his neck, and from that time anæsthetics rapidly came into use, and few, if any, operations are now undertaken without first placing the patient under the influence of an anæsthetic.

MISERABLE DEATH OF FOUR-TEEN LABORERS.

Housed in an Air Shaft at Milwaukee's Crib, They Perish by Suffocation and Drowning—Tale of a Fearful Night by the Single Survivor.

Engulfed by Waves.

In the fearful gale which swept over Lake Michigan Wednesday night fourteen men who were at work on the crib on the outer end of the intake tunnel at Milwaukee, 5,000 feet from the shore, met their death. One of them escaped in a manner almost miraculous and lives to tell the tale of terror and suffering.

The dead are:

Jack McBride, engineer.
Michael Dwyer, fireman.
George Grez, miner.
Charles Johnson, miner, Chicago.
Jus Lerkowit, miner.
William Preussner, miner, Chicago.
John Piseau, miner.
Jack McConnell, miner.
Eben Allen (colored) cook.
Jim Murphy, miner.
Tom Healey, miner.
Jim Mast (one eye blown), miner.
Joe McCarthy, miner.
Filo Spencer, miner.

The dreadful storm raging throughout the night had lashed the lake into a seething mass of foam. Immense waves were rolled toward the shore by a furious east wind and carried away the house built on top of the crib at the mouth of the tunnel about three-quarters of a mile from the pumping works at the foot of North street. The house on the crib contained two stationary engines and the tools used by the men. It was built of heavy timbers fastened with iron bands, yet it was swept into the roaring waters like an eggshell and washed ashore. For a mile or two the shore of the lake was strewn with timbers, boards, tools and articles of clothing worn by the men in the ill-fated crib. At daybreak the men at the pumping station noticed that the house on the crib had disappeared, and the tug Welcome took a lifeboat with a crew of five in tow and headed for the tunnel.

The progress of the Welcome was watched by thousands of people. When Capt. Petersen succeeded in reaching the crib he was met by a horrible sight. One man, James Miller, was still alive and clinging to a post. About him were the bodies of two or three of his comrades.

Miller was safely brought ashore, and told a story of peril and suffering which has rarely been equaled on the lakes.

Fifteen men were on the crib. The lake had been very rough, the men on land had not been able to get out to them, the provision gave out, and the doomed men ate their last meal thinking that certainly before midnight the boat would be able to reach them.

In the evening the storm increased and the men became alarmed. They had confidence in the strength of their house, however, and continued their work. It was not until about 8 o'clock that the men fully appreciated their position. Work was stopped and the men, one and all, determined to seek safety in the air shaft. The big cast-iron cover was raised and the fifteen men descended into the tub, clinging as best they could to the ladder.

There out in the lake in the midst of the furious gale they listened to the storm outside and heard the waves beat against their refuge and literally tear their shelter apart. But they knew they were safe. The water could not get into the shaft, and under the circumstances they could live there for many hours. The steady click of the automatic pump for ing air and life into their subterranean prison cheered them to further efforts to save their lives.

So the hours sped on. All through that fearful night the men hung to the ladder and heard the waves which every second were smashing and pounding and tearing at the little house on top. Piece by piece and part by part the cribhouse was washed away, and at six o'clock the air pump, the mainstay of the imprisoned men, was washed away. They did not hear it go, but its loss was plainly made known to them by the slow but steady rise of the water in the tube and the increasing foulness of the atmosphere. Slowly but surely the water climbed up on the men, and they knew that the time had come for action. A consultation was held and for over two hours the men hesitated. Some were in favor of waiting in the shaft until the last moment, others thought a break for the top of the crib at once their best chance. It was at best a choice of two evils and almost certain death in either case.

It was decided to leave. Only five succeeded in reaching the outside. The nine men who were not strong enough to get out were drowned by the water coming into the shaft, and four out of the five who got out were mangled or drowned by the tremendous floods which were lashed over the crib.

Brieflets.

The schooner City of Sheboygan, with 17,000 bushels of corn, and the schooner Danforth, with 48,000 bushels, are at the bottom of Lake Michigan, sent there by the frightful storms which prevailed for three days.

The Eskimos at Jackson park have rebelled against their condition of partial slavery, and succeeded, leaving the managers of the village with no inhabitants. It is said the whole colony was in feeble health, and all would have died before next winter.

At Johnsonburg, Pa., Harry Hutchinson, finding a gas leak under his new house, which was set up on blocks, crawled under to investigate. His wife started under the house to deliver a wrench to her husband. A gale struck the house and threw it off its pins, crushing Hutchinson and his wife to death.

A mad dog ran amuck at Sioux City, Iowa, and was only killed after a four hours' chase by the police. He bit sixteen other dogs during the chase, some of them severely. A few of them have been killed, but the others are at large. The Mayor has issued a proclamation ordering all dogs killed or locked up. It is said one or two persons were bitten, but the police deny this.

Hood's Cures

Even When Called Incurable

Terrible Siege, Sciatic Rheumatism

Mr. Arthur Simon, of Galata, Ohio.

"They said I was incurable, the doctors did, but the result has proven that Hood's Sarsaparilla was able to cure. I had Sciatic Rheumatism and was confined to my bed six months. Three physicians did not help me at all."

I Was Given Up to Die.

When I was in this terrible condition, unable to move hand or foot, I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. The first bottle had a little effect, and while taking the second I crawled rapidly that I could sit up in my chair. My system had been so run down by other medicines that it took me quite a while to recuperate. By the time I had taken four bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I could walk around, and now, all have taken six bottles, I am cured and can do a good day's work—I do not feel I can praise enough."

TROUBLE FOR DIAZ.

TOWNS SACKED, AND TROOPS JOIN WITH REBELS.

Bloody Battle in Which Government Forces Are Repulsed with Great Loss—Guerrero Threatened—Crop Prospects in Middle, Central and Northwestern States.

Rebellion in Mexico.

A dispatch from Chihuahua, Mexico, says: A fugitive from justice in New Mexico named Amalia recently returned to his native mountains and stirred up a large force of ignorant malcontents, outlaws and religious fanatics, and, arming them, captured the town of Temachich, near Guerrero, an important mining town beyond the summit of the Sierra Madre. Little resistance was offered, but three men were wounded and the town was sacked. Amalia then went southward towards Tomachich, and had a skirmish with General Santa Anna and 300 men, who surrendered and afterwards joined him. The combined forces under the leadership of Amalia then marched on the town of Santa Tomas and captured it without resistance.

The rebels then took the town of Guerrero, which was garrisoned by volunteer troops, who surrendered without fighting. At this point the Federal troops came up, and the rebels fled to Santa Tomas, pursued by the troops. The Federal troops were surprised at the latter place, and in the battle that ensued 150 of them were killed or wounded. The rebels suffered little loss, but the troops were completely routed. Several officers were among the number killed.

Re-enforcements of the Government troops arrived after the battle and will attempt to defend Guerrero. Great excitement prevails, as further fighting is soon expected. Business is at a standstill.

RAIN DID SOME DAMAGE.

Showing Made by the Weather Crop Bulletin for the Last Week.

According to the weather crop bulletin issued at Washington, the past week has been cooler than usual, except in the South Atlantic States and in the vicinity of the lower lakes, where a slight excess in temperature was reported. The greater portion of the wheat belt, which was deficient in moisture at the last report, received during the week from one to two inches more than the usual amount of rainfall. The spring wheat region also received about one inch more than the normal rainfall, but in this section the moisture was already in excess. Generally the week was cold and not favorable for farm work throughout the principal agricultural States, except in the east portion of the cotton region, where the weather was generally favorable for farm work, but where rain is needed. Special telegraphic reports are:

Arkansas—Weather not so favorable; severe local storms of wind, rain and hail did considerable damage, chiefly in eastern portion; corn doing well; cotton planting general; small grains fine.

Tennessee—All crops looking well; low lands badly washed by floods on 13th and 14th; some damage to corn by cut worm; tobacco plants improving since rain.

Kentucky—Excessive rains retarded farm work; grass and meadows improved.

Missouri—Fields generally look fair, but work retarded and ground too wet and cold for germinating.

Illinois—Oat seeding complete, some up and looking fine; fruit injured by frosts, especially in southern counties; wheat improving; meadows and pastures good in southern portions.

Indiana—Rainfall excessive; temperature and sunshine deficient, favorable to crops but not to plowing and seeding; wheat improved.

Ohio—Wheat, oats, clover, and grass made splendid growth; farm work, plowing and seeding stopped by heavy rains.

Michigan—Crops have advanced slowly owing to high winds and cool nights; plowing for oats general; some potatoes and early vegetables planted; meadows and pastures in fine condition; fruit prospects excellent.

Wisconsin—But little farm work done during the last week, owing to freezing weather; the season is, however, ten days early; all crops and conditions are very favorable; cranberry vines wintered well.

Minnesota—Snow on ground in northwest; nothing done and little progress made elsewhere; soil too wet and cold; potatoes being planted in southern counties; weather during the week very unfavorable for seeding.

Iowa—In southwest districts dry, cold winds have retarded winter wheat; seeding practically completed; plowing in progress; corn planting begun in southeast district.

North Dakota—Excessive precipitation and low temperature has stopped all work since Tuesday; seeding, of which but little has been done, will be resumed this week should weather be favorable.

South Dakota—Seeding and other farm work retarded by wet, stormy, and freezing weather; bottom land wet.

Nebraska—Small grain mostly sown, but germinating slowly and unevenly when at all; much seed blown out of the ground by high winds; full-sown grain killed in southeast portion, and below average elsewhere.

Kansas—Cold, rainless week except in southeast counties, where from two to four inches of rain fell; wheat, oats, and pastures making no progress; corn growing well.

Terrible Disaster on Lake St. Clair.

A disaster, resulting in the death of two men, the probably fatal injury of a third, and the severe scalding of a fourth, occurred on Lake St. Clair Wednesday morning. The steamer Choctaw, Capt. W. W. Smith, coal-laden from Cleveland to Milwaukee, was entering the lake when the cylinder head blew out. Nelson Chambers, the cook, who was standing nearest the engine at the time, was so badly scalded that he died within ten minutes. C. Jones, fireman, died after being taken to the hospital. F. P. Thompson, oiler, was badly burned about the hands and head and in the mouth and throat from inhaling steam. His recovery is doubtful. The engineer, F. Smith, was badly but not dangerously scalded about the hands.

Many Hurt by a Cyclone in Arkansas.

At noon Wednesday a terrific cyclone passed through the valley just south of Fayetteville, Ark. Its path was about 300 yards wide, and it left a barren waste. Many houses were utterly demolished. Out of one family, whose name is Wright, consisting of eight persons, not one escaped serious injury; but it is probable that all except one child will recover. Parts of their house were carried miles away. A number of others were reported injured, but how many and to what extent cannot be determined. The citizens are doing everything possible for the distressed.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Pure grape cream of tartar forms the acid principle of the Royal exclusively. The Royal imparts that peculiar sweetness, flavor and delicacy noticed in the finest cake, biscuit, rolls, etc., which expert pastry cooks declare is unobtainable by the use of any other leavening agent.

Absolutely Pure

Spain Throwing Up the Sponge.

The Chicago Herald prints an interview with Signor Triolo, of that city, who lately made a tour of the fruit-producing centers bordering the Mediterranean, in which he says:

"I find that the orange-growing industry of Spain is being abandoned, as the fruit cannot be raised in competition with Sicily. In my sixty days' sojourn in Sicily I was engaged in securing information regarding the yield, quality, etc. I found that the orange crop is about the same as last year, while the lemon crop is 25 per cent. short. Most of the oranges will go to Russian and Austrian cities, Constantinople, and to England. Very few oranges will be shipped to America, and none of them can be shipped west of the Alleghenies with profit. America has made such rapid strides in orange culture that it has not only wrested the American market from the Mediterranean grower, but the Florida orange is actually fighting him for a place in the English markets. The quality of the Sicilian orange is not equal to Florida or choice California fruit. I would put it alongside of the California seedlings. The duty of 27 and 28 cents per box and freight of 30 cents more make the cost laid down in New York about the same as if carried overland from California. The cheaper and better Florida fruit thus has a big advantage."

What Is Money

Weighed against that health it so often fails to buy? Dross indeed. While we can none of us claim a total exemption from that greatest of all ills to which flesh is heir—ill-health—we may do much to lessen the chances of incurring it, and this not alone by the adoption of such sanitary measures as are to be found in daily exercise, regular hours, prudence in eating and drinking, and a wholesome diet, but also by resorting to judicious preventive medication when the system is threatened by unhealthful influences. For instance, residents or sojourners in malarial localities should use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a defense against chills and fever, and persons who incur much out-of-door exposure should employ it as a safeguard against rheumatism. Travelers in the tropics find it invaluable also as a means of arresting liver complaint and constipation, and counteracting the debilitating influence of a torrid climate.

Most women are ambitious; they want to be men.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless this inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

it will probably be prepared to get down to the real business of legislation.

Attorney General Olney is getting himself disliked in certain quarters. I do not refer to the bleacherskite gabble current as to his identification with trusts, etc. People who are both rational and honest take no stock in this noisy twaddle. But is about that Mr.
Olney is cold. When he enters his office of mornings, they say the clerks shiver, the waiting callers crowd together for warmth, and the colored gentleman who guards the outer gate and incidentally looks after the government bric-a-brac, backs up against the heater to restore his circulation. Stories without number are flying about. The gossips recall the earlier days of Secretary Endicott, and especially the occasion upon which he froze Henry Watterson.
Mr. Endicott, they admit, was extra dry frappe, but Mr. Olney is glacial. It is a snow ball to an iceberg. Mr. Endicott used to decorate applicants and visiting statesmen with a beautiful tracery of hoar frost, but Mr. Olney congeals representatives, senators, and anybody who comes within his zone. So runs the story. It may or may not be true, but it is in active circulation and is not confined to republican vehicles of diffusion either.

Secretary Carlisle has directed the sub-treasurers to issue no more gold certificates at present. In explaining his action Carlisle says that the $100,- 000,000 gold reserve has not yet been reached, he is so close to it that prudence dictates that no more gold certificates should be issued. The announcement that, for the first time since specie payments was resumed, it was necessary to stop the issue of gold certificates was followed by a rumor at the capitol that the president has decided to issue $6,- 000,000 of 4 per cent bonds to protect the gold reserve in case it became necessary, and Secretary Carlisle does not state explicitly that no bonds will be issued. The statement of the condition of the treasury made daily to the secretary shows that the net balance is gradually crawling up, it being $25,937,139 at the end of last week.

According to one view of the hauling down of the American flag at Honolulu
the republic has momentarily loosened its hold in order to take a tighter and more tenable grip. Uncle Sam might, however, to take note of the fate of the Irishman, who, climbing a rope hand over hand, was dissatisfied with his hold of the rope and who let go unanimously and all at once in order "to spit on his hands"—with disastrous results.
The meaning and effect of the withdrawal of the United States is not yet Many politicians believe that the withdrawal is the first step in a fixed policy of abandoning all intervention in Hawaii and of leaving American interests there to look out for themselves. But public opinion in the United States demands the full protection of American interests in Hawaii and the prohibition of control by any other foreign power.

The smallest amount of political intervention which will accomplish these ends seem to be what is desired.
The adverse turn of the balance of trade against the United States is shown by the figures of the bureau of statistics.
For the nine months ending March 1893
the exports of breadstuffs were $145,- 032,000; for the corresponding nine months of the fiscal year they were $233,159,000, a falling off in nine months of $88,127,000. The decrease in the exportation of hog, beef and dairy products has been almost equally marked.
After mature deliberation the senate came to the conclusion that if there was anything to investigate, it didn't care to investigate.

Coloring Food Products.

Sausages—both meat and skin—are dyed with aniline colors for the purpose of hiding the color of unhealthy or stale meat which may have been used. Jams, especially plum jams, are generally dyed with aniline colors, and sugar confectionery is hardly ever without such artificial dye. Ale is darkened with burned sugar, as also are brandies and whiskies.

It must be admitted that in by far the majority of these cases the color used is entirely harmless and has no influence on the health of the consumer. Yet there are a number of aniline colors which are positively poisonous even when pure. Such colors are picric acid and its salts, muriatic yellow, safranine, methvien blue, dinitrocresol and aurantia.

Others, unobjectionable in themselves, become poisonous owing to their mode of manufacture, which leaves in the products poisonous impurities, such as arsenic (rarely), salts of copper, tin or zinc. The manufacturer of sausages or jams has not the least idea whether the color he uses may not belong to one or other of the above, to which doubtless many others could be added, and

Condition of Indian Pariahs.

The condition of the unfortunate pariahs in India continues to occupy the attention of philanthropic persons. Apart from a series of careful investigations undertaken by the missionaries, Mr. Tremenhoe, the collector of Chingleput, has been personally inquiring into the subject, and he has embodied the result in a report to the government. While the missionaries, however, have been met with a peremptory official denial of their allegations, Mr. Tremenhoe has been severely rebuked by the government, who pronounce his statements "sensational," and declare his proposals to be "utterly impracticable."

Yet those who have a personal knowledge of the unhappy victims of caste prejudice declare that they are oppressed by a system which can only be described as slavery. The pariah, it is said, finds it difficult, if not impossible, however hard he may struggle for an independent existence, to hold a plot of land, and even the humble cot which shelters him is no longer his own if it should unfortunately have to take the fancy of some covetous and scornful village

A Test of Culture.

A distinguished man remarked not long ago that there is no surer test of culture than the way in which one handles a book. "All those who have any experience of the deeper life," he said, "think of books almost as human beings. Even a book which is not worth much in itself is still treated by them with respect, since it wears the outward guise of what they have learned to consider their best friends." He went on to condemn the senseless and offensive manner in which choir singers often abuse their hymnbooks, bending them backward until the covers meet and holding them thus throughout an entire hymn. This vandalism is not, alas! confined to the class mentioned.—New York Times.
