WORLD'S FAIR LETTER.

Our Special Correspondent.
Up to the present time the World's Fair has been comparatively a failure, and there has been no perceptible increase in the number of daily visitors. This is partly accounted for from the fact that the news had gone out that so much remains to be finished that those whose time and money are an object with them will delay their coming until some of the promises made early in the spring, that everything would be complete May 1, are liable to be fulfilled.

For many months past the World's Fair, and particularly the department of publicity and promotion, have had in the press outside of the city of Chicago loyal friends, who have furnished free advertising and notices and kind words.

Sometimes since the chief of this department sent to the press in general a blank form or application for passes, to be filled out and returned to him in exchange for said free advertising.

When the returns came in, these blanks were not filled out according to this chief's idea, and he called together a number of reporters of the city papers, showing these mistakes to them, and they in return made all manner of fun of the matter in their papers. It would seem that such action was beneath the dignity of the position the chief occupies, and to say the least, it was uncalled for, and ungracious, considering the services the press throughout the country had rendered to the fair. Perhaps many are wondering why they don't get their passes. This explains the nigger in the fence. It is not so many months since, that it was under serious consideration whether this department should not be entirely abolished.

Those of our friends who contemplate taking "snap shots" with their kodaks, within the grounds, are warned that they will not be allowed to do so, unless they pay two dollars per day for this privilege. There is a possibility of this decree being modified later on.

As one strolls through the different buildings, notably that of the Manufacturers and Liberal Arts, and sees the many packing cases in all shapes and sizes, the thought naturally arises, "what is done with them? are they destroyed?" No. In many instances they have cost much time and money, some have been made specially to order, a number in foreign lands. Come with me to the south end of Jackson park, and there you will see several large temporary storage houses, all divided into compartments, and where at the rate of 41 cents per cubic foot these outside coverings are stored during the continuance of the exposition, and so perfect is this system of storage that any box or crate can be found in a few moments.

Just to the north of manufacturers building, as if to warn us that we could not get along without his help, stands the structure erected by "Uncle Sam." 'Tis said by some that taken in its entirety, it is one of the best, if not the best exhibit in the grounds. Only a hasty visit was made herein, but we must briefly mention the showing of the postoffice department. It is highly interesting and instructive, as it portrays the workings of the postoffice displaying the improvements in the service from its earliest stages to its present state of seeming perfection. Here can be seen a real live postoffice and postal car, with all its ramifications in full operation.

The terminal facilities, as used by the different lines of railroads centering at the fair, would seem to leave nothing undesired. Arrangements have been made, so that passengers from a distance can be landed directly at the Fair, without the necessity of coming into the city first. This will no doubt become very popular with those who come on excursions, with the intention of only spending the day at the fair. The railroad station erected for the reception of visitors is large and commodious, with a department of information in charge of competent railroad men, where it has been said, that up to date, no one has failed to receive a correct answer to his question in respect to the movements of trains, rates, distance, etc. In fact these men are walking encyclopedias in their department.

In close proximity to this terminal depot is the transportation building, and at both the north and south entrances thereto, is a long, wide balcony the balustrade of which is surmounted by life sized statues of men who have long been identified in some way with transportation, among them being Scott, Stephenson, Carrett, Watt and Vanderbilt.

There are very many interesting and old-time relics in this building, such as old engines and cars both from England and America, many of them having quite a history, notably the engine used in the days of the late "unpleasantness" on the W. & A. railroad, between Atlanta, Ga, and Chatanooga, Tenn.

Appropos of transportation, there was seen being carried about the grounds a sedan chair, with a lady peeping from behind its silken curtains. It looked curious to see this means of locomotion especially as the power employed was two savage looking Turks, clad in Turkish garb, and harnessed both fore and aft, between the shafts of this peculiar carriage. The lady seemed to enjoy it, perhaps, though, it was because of the attention she was attracting, more than the comfort.

The grass in many parts of the grounds looks as if it had been growing for years, while in others the sod has not been laid, but by the time the June roses lead their fragrance to the beautiful scenes, so much will have been accomplished toward the ultimate completion that even we who are accustomed to watch its daily growth will be astonished. Don't borrow any trouble about getting lost, for you can't turn around without running against someone in uniform competent to direct you.

Then one fee of fifty cents admits you to the fair grounds proper, and also to the avenue which has been christened Midway Plaisance. Along this latter artery, the villages of the different nations are situate. The entrance fee these special village attractions or side shows varies from twenty-five to fifty cents each, and the reason for this extra charge is that they are concessions let by the board of directors to private individuals, who furnish their own capital to run them. Of course there is a charge in the grounds for the use of the boats, rolling chairs, etc., but the general admission of fifty cents gives you license to go where you will inside the grounds and buildings, and to remain from eight in the morning until eleven at night.

Next week we will try and give our readers an idea of the grounds and buildings as seen at night, when myriads of electric lights are endeavoring to turn darkness into day.

Uncas arose and again set the lamp on the table.

"Wait, worthy sachem, before you leave, a few questions more; but first sit down," said Graham, motioning him to the bench.

With a look of surprise the chief obeyed him.

"Did Fox say anything about—about Captain Denham?"

"He did," said Uncas, cautiously.

"What?"

"I cannot recall all that he said, but I'll tell you something wonderful that I know."

"What is that, Uncas?"

"Captain Ralph Denham is now sleeping with the dead."

"You are sure of this?"

"As sure as that I see you sitting up in that bed before me," replied Uncas.

Colonel Graham coughed to keep back the shout of joy that trembled on his lips, and then he pressed his long, white fingers to his eyes, and so remained for several moments.

"The news pains you," said the chief.

"It surprises me. It is so sudden. Denham was so young," gasped Graham.

"Death loves the young. Is that all you want to ask?"

"No; there was one question more, but, perhaps, as you are weary, and it is so late, I had better defer it."

"I am not weary; early and late is all the same to me. Ask me the question now."

"It is about your sister."

"What of her?"

"She is very beautiful."

"So I have heard white men say before. But what's the question you would ask?" said the chief, turning his strong black eyes on Graham's agitated face.

"Do you know of any man that she is going to marry?" asked the colonel, with a slight tremor in his voice.

"I do not. Why do you ask?"

"I am single, and in my own lands I have great wealth and large estates. I have seen none of my own countrywomen that I would care to marry, nor have I seen any other woman in any land, though it has been my fortune to see most lands under the sun. I shall leave your beautiful country as soon as my mission here is ended, and if your sister would go with me—"

"Stop, Colonel Graham," interrupted the chief. "You were about to say you would make Untilla of the Montauks your wife if she would promise to go with you?"

"I was."

"You should ask her."

"Oh, of course, I shall do that."

"But," continued Uncas, "I would advise you not to speak to Untilla of love or marriage."

"Why should I not? I am gray, but I am still a man in my prime. My troubles are over, and I can give my time to the happiness of a wife."

Uncas was about to reply, but before the first syllable passed his lips, a shrill, croaking voice called through the chinks in the logs.

"Ha, ha, ha! de troubles hez only begun! you keef for a wife? how did you keef for de brudder dat loved en trusted you? you kilt him! kilt him! kilt him! trouble never leaves de murderer."

"Curse the hag!" cried Graham, his eyes protruding from his head, and his sharp face ashy with fear.

Uncas was even more excited. The lamp fell from his hand, and was extinguished on the floor, so hiding his timidity.

"I will go. I shall see you again; this was all he could say. And the tall, strong man now as frightened as a child at an imagined bugaboo, dashed out of the house."

In the meantime Captain Fox drew the precious boxes up close to the fire, and arranging them into something like a couch, he lit a cigar, and stretched himself out on top of them.

Don sat down near by, with a weary look on his shrewd Scotch face, and his doubled-up hands under his chin.

"Tired, Don?" asked the Captain, anxious to talk to some one rather than from any interest he had in the poor lad's condition.

"I am, sir," replied Don.

"Let me see, Don; how long have you been with me?"

"A year next August, sir," said Don, still looking at the fire, but with a harder expression upon his young face.

"Ah, Don, I fear you will never be sufficiently grateful to me for saving you. You were the only one on that ship that did not perish."

"And I sometimes wish I had perished at the same time," said the lad, with a bitter ring in his voice.

"Then I would have had no cabin boy, eh?"

"You saved my life to make me your slave."

"Come, come, my lad, some day you will be a captain in command of a ship like the Wanderer; the ocean will be your home, and every land will pay you tribute."

"If I ever command a ship like yours," replied the boy, "I hope some man-of-war will catch me and my crew and swing us all up to the yardarm. I'm afraid that will be my fate if I stay with you long."

Instead of being angry at this remark, Captain Fox blew out a long puff of smoke, and laughed long and loud.

"Egad, Don, you are very hard on me, very hard, indeed; I have no doubt but you would hang me and all my crew in the morning if you had your way. Now, tell me the truth, wouldn't you?"

"Yes, I would," replied the boy, bluntly.

"Gad! I do like boyish candor. I was once a boy, just like you, but I had not the same hatred of pirates; indeed, I was in much trouble to decide whether, when I became a man, I should rob on horseback or on a ship. But you'll get used to this life after a bit. Now, lie down and go to sleep. Don't think of killing me as I lie here, for I shall be awake all night. Good night, lad."

"Good night," growled Don, and he stretched himself before the fire; and, being a very healthy boy, he was asleep in no time.

The first glimmer of daylight saw the Captain and Don up and about. By the aid of the map Frenaud left Captain Fox was enabled to find the cavern; it was only a few yards away.

After examining the place and taking fresh bearings, and comparing them with the map, the Captain called to Don to help him, and together they carried the boxes to the cave.

This done, they closed up the entrance with stones. They were nearly through their work when Uncas returned alone.

Instead of being startled, Fox said to the chief:

"I have just concealed in this place a great deal of treasure, consisting of diamonds and other jewels—"

"The Montauk women prefer flowers and shells," said the chief.

"So I have heard, though I have retained a present for your sister. I now ask you to consider this property as left in your charge, and that of your people, by me."

"We shall guard it sacredly, though my people have a superstitious dread of the cave."

"I wish all the white men in the world with the exception of myself had the same feeling. But let us go over to the fire; the sun is rising, and I am very hungry."

They went back to the fire, where Don set out the food, wine included, that had been brought from the ship.

Uncas accepted the invitation to help himself, saying, "I have given orders to have food ready when we reach my house."

"That was thoughtful; I am a great worker, but I am also a great eater," said Fox.

When the meal was over, the Captain asked if there was any man near whom he could get to carry his bag.

The chief said there was none; and as he made no offer to help, Fox threw the burden across his own broad shoulders, and said he was ready to start.

Don took up his own lighter load, and they went away.

On the road they halted for a few seconds while the chief, by means of his rifle, pointed out the hill and the vault in which Capt. Denham was guarded.

CHAPTER XIX.

RUMORS FROM THE GOVERNOR'S OFFICE.

With the morning sun behind her, the Wanderer came sailing proudly up the bay, where the Sea Hawk lay at anchor; and the Indians to the east and the dwellers in the cozy town of Sag Harbor watched her progress with much interest, though with a different feeling from that with which they greeted her arrival when she first appeared in company with Captain Denham's ship.

Valentine Dayton was on shore talking to his cousin Lea and his betrothed, when the report reached him that Captain Fox's ship was coming up the bay.

As a good officer, who felt implicit obedience to superiors was the first requisite in a sailor's character, Valentine was quite willing to do whatever Captain Fox ordered; but it must be confessed that, at heart, he felt the prospective duty to be anything but pleasant, and, without being able to account for the feeling, he silently blamed Ralph Denham for permitting any other man to assume even a temporary command of the Sea Hawk.

The sailors growled about this change among themselves, and the older ones shook their heads ominously.

The good people of the town, being untrammelled by naval rules, and entirely ignorant of the training that gives a blind obedience to superior officers, did not hesitate to give forcible expression to their feelings.

The Sea Hawk, if not altogether the property of the dwellers in Sag Harbor, at least was owned by the province of New York. Her home was in these waters. Because she volunteered to aid the motherland, that did not make her a queen's ship.

"If one of the provincial officers was to take command," said Squire Condit, who on all occasions was the oracle of the place, "why we'd submit, and say that was all right, so long as Ralph Denham was doing more good at headquarters, where he is now advising with the Governor, and no man can do it better. But for a stranger to come in, and be able to order our Sag Harbor boys about, and say to Lieu. Hedges, 'Come, and he'll have to come, or 'Go,' and he'll have to go, I must confess it rubs against the grain."

"And it goes against all our grains, Squire," said a sturdy old farmer in the crowd gathered about Squire Condit. "And if so be that George Hedges he don't want to obey, and this man Fox, who's a stranger, wants to make him, why, I guess there's plenty of men in Suffolk that knows how to handle matchlocks or flintlocks either, and we'll drive this fellow off bag and baggage in no time, if he need be."

This bold expression met with general approval, but, as a man of law, Squire Condit pretended to frown down what he at heart indorsed.

"It'll all come out right when Ralph

Denham comes back. Keep cool, neighbors, and depend on that," he said, as he turned away to avoid saying anything imprudent.

Valentine Dayton was going to take Lea and Ellen on board the Sea Hawk to spend the morning; but the unexpected appearance of the Wanderer caused them to change their plans.

"I am sorry to disappoint myself and you," said Valentine to the young ladies, "but as soon as the Wanderer comes to anchor, Lieutenant Hedges will want to go on board to report to Captain Fox for orders. We do not know what those orders may be; but it is best that he should find the Sea Hawk in good shape."

"But, surely, Valentine," said Ellen, her pretty face pale with anxiety, "Captain Fox will not order your ship away at once?"

"Hardly, as the Sea Hawk needs some more repairing; but if the necessities of the service demand it, we may have to leave just as we are," replied Valentine.

The young officer was about to step into the boat that had come for him, when Lea drew him to one side and said:

"Are you quite sure, Cousin Valentine, that it will be right to obey this man?"

"Do you mean, Lea, if it will be right to obey Captain Fox?"

She answered that that was what she meant.

"It would be treason to disobey him, and there is not a man on the Sea Hawk who could be guilty of that crime. Captain Denham has himself written that Mr. Hedges is to report to Captain Fox for orders, and it would be disloyalty to Ralph, as a man—to Ralph, who, himself, could be disloyal to no one—if we did not implicitly obey."

"You must be right, Cousin Val; but something tells me, it is a something for which I can't give a reason to myself, that all is not right, but that a great wrong has been done to Ralph Denham," said Lea, her beautiful face showing the mental anguish she was suffering.

Valentine, believing that her depression was due to the absence of her lover, and the fact that she had not heard from him directly since he left, tried to laugh away her tears; and believing he had succeeded, he kissed the young ladies, as he had a perfect right to do, and went on board the Sea Hawk.

He found Lieutenant Hedges in full uniform, nervously pacing the deck, and at every turn turning his eyes up aloft, as if the sails were set, and he had some doubts about the weather.

On shore, these men addressed each other as "Uncle George," and "Val, my lad," but once their feet touched the deck of their ship, they became officers, and all their intercourse was marked by the rigid formality and punctilious etiquette that is observed on board a man-of-war, as in no other place.

After saluting, Lieutenant Hedges said:

"Mr. Dayton, I have ordered the gig alongside, and I am going on board the Wanderer to report to Captain Fox."

To this Valentine responded with a "Yes, sir."

"I have ordered everything made ready for inspection," continued Lieutenant Hedges; "and as you will be in command during my absence, you will see that my orders are carried out promptly and properly."

"I shall see to that, sir."

"And I may invite Captain Fox on board to dine, though properly it is his place to invite me, so, on second consideration I shall not invite him."

"I think you are right, sir," replied Valentine, conscious that his uncle was not himself, and would not be, until the business now on hand was over.

Lieutenant Hedges, looking as if there was a great deal more he should like to say if he had the time, turned and went down to the boat.

Valentine went to work at once, and though the habitual cheerfulness of the Sea Hawk's crew seemed to have left them for a time, they worked with their accustomed energy to get the ship into inspection condition.

In a half hour Lieutenant Hedges came back, looking still more nervous and perplexed, and the moment he got on board he hastened to the cabin and sent for the second officer.

"Mr. Dayton, I did not report for orders," said the Lieutenant, as Valentine approached him.

"May I ask the reason, sir?"

"Because, sir, Captain Fox is not now in command of the Wanderer."

"You surprise me."

"The Wanderer, Mr. Dayton, is commanded by Lieutenant Frenaud, and Captain William Fox is now, sir, at this blessed moment, away among the Montauk Indians, whither I do not propose to go for orders."

How Careless We Are.

A passenger in an English train, near Windsor, had the misfortune to have his hat blown off. He instantly jumped out after it through the window. The train was stopped, and he was found sitting by the line, a little shaken, but brushing his hat with tender solicitude. Some unpleasant things have been written about this incident, reflecting upon this person's intelligence; but the fact is that the great majority of us every day show a similar lack of the sense of proportion. How often do we endanger our lives by hastening over a slippery crossing to anticipate an approaching car; we save by it half a second of time, for which we have no particular use and the risk being hurried into eternity.

Both Were Hogs.

Society of Huntingdon, Pa., was much interested in a pig's-foot-eating match which took place a few nights ago. The feet had been nicely boiled by a good housewife, and cash prizes were offered to those who should devour the largest number. First prize went to a man who ate ten of the feet and second to a boy who disposed of eight.

Against Barbed Wire.

The damage to farmers and the cruelty inflicted upon domestic animals has been so great that some of the Legislatures have had bills before them to prohibit its use. In favor of wire fences a writer says: The value of West has been very great, but its disadvantages on stock farms have been demonstrated in so costly a manner that where valuable animals are maintained it will, doubtless, be superseded in time by fencing less murderous. That the fencing of the future will be wire is now clearly indicated. Its cheapness and durability are the factors which will determine its general adoption, and the many handsome designs into which it is now worked are bringing it also into great use for ornamental fencing in cities and villages. It may be set down as probable that barb wire will presently be discarded on stock farms. Smooth wire in single strands has been thoroughly tried and found wanting; it is not stock proof. There remains then the various forms of woven-wire fencing, many of which are proving their worth in actual use, and it seems probable that those woven-wire fences which demonstrate their durability under all ordinary circumstances will eventually come into general use on stock farms. Various methods have been devised of making barb wire less dangerous, such as top-boarding, ditching and the like, all of which are more or less successful, but none of them absolutely efficacious. Despite all such precautions animals are occasionally rendered useless by barb mutilation, the value of which would go far toward equipping the farm with serviceable and safe woven-wire fencing. A little experimentation with the various forms of this fencing now before the public would be wise on the part of those who stand in danger of loss from barb wire.—Western Rural.

Brightest Part of My Trip.

A New York fashion correspondent of a Southern paper gives out the following:

A lady writes: "I have read your letters for a long time, and have often envied you the opportunity you enjoy of seeing the beautiful things you describe. I used to think when I read of those charming dresses and parasols and hats at Lord & Taylor's, that theirs must be one of those stores where a timid, nervous woman like myself, having but a few dollars to spare for a season's outfit, would be of so little account that she would receive little attention; but when you said, in one of your letters a few months ago, that goods of the same quality were really cheaper there than elsewhere, because they sold more goods in their two stores than any other firm in New York, and that because they sold more they bought more, and consequently bought cheaper, I determined, if I ever went to New York, I would go to Lord & Taylor's."

"That long-waited-for time came in the early autumn, and I found myself standing before that great entrance, with those wonderful windows at either side. I summoned my courage and entered, as I suppose tens of thousands of just such timid women as I have done before. My fears were gone in an instant. The agreeable attention put me at my ease at once, and I felt as much at home as though I were in the little country store where my people have 'traded' for nearly a quarter of a century."

"And now, as I wear the pretty things I purchased, or see them every day and find them all so satisfactory, I think of my visit to this great store as the brightest part of my trip to New York."

An Offense, But No Penalty.

The law of Virginia requires citizens of that State who tong oysters in its waters to pay a license for the privilege but it provides no penalty for not doing so. This fact came out in a recent case, where a negro was arrested for taking oysters without a license, but, when he came to trial, the prosecuting attorney discovered that the law had no penal clause, and moved that the prisoner be discharged. There are now a great many people in Virginia who feel very sorry that their good money is gone for oyster licenses.

Strange Savings Bank.

When the lock was taken off the door of the old Episcopal Church at Rome, Ga., which has just been pulled down, it was found to contain a silver dime made in 1830. It is supposed the dime has been in the lock for many years, and a key was once broken in the lock on account of the dime closing its passage.

Danger!

If you have a feeling of oppression and uneasiness a little above the diaphragm, and just below the right ribs, aggravated by lying on your right side, look out! As sure as fate, your liver is disordered. Perhaps not seriously as yet, but fatal hepatic abscesses are not uncommon. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the precise remedy to regulate the liver, and prevent its congestion and inflammation, and to disperse such minor indications of its derangement as yellowness of the skin and ball of the eye, furred tongue, sourness of the breath, nausea on rising in the morning, dizziness, sick headache and constipation. By relaxing the bowels painlessly, it opens a channel of exit for the superfluous bile, checks a tendency to congestion and engorgement of the liver, at the same time giving a gentle impetus to its secretory action, and affords relief to the stomach, which is usually inactive, out of order and oppressed with wind when the bowels are constive. Use the Bitters also in fever and ague, rheumatism and kidney troubles.

Why Blood Is Red.

Human blood derives its red color from the myriads of red corpuscles it contains, yet these corpuscles are red only when collected in large numbers. When only a few are present they are of a very light straw color.

KEIR HARDY, M. P., still adheres to his little eccentricities. He comes to the house in dirty miner's clothes and greasy little cap.

BRECHAN'S PILLS will cure wind and pain in the stomach, giddiness, fullness, dizziness, drowsiness, chills, and loss of appetite.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement tends to personal enjoyment which rightly used. The many who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attend the value to health of the pure laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presence in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. KILLED IN A WRECK.

RUNAWAY TRAIN ON THE BIG FOUR ROAD.

Ten Are Dead, As Many Sustain Injuries, and Still Others Are Hurt in a Lesser Degree—Air Brakes Would Not Work.

Ten men were killed and six were seriously injured by a disastrous wreck on the Big Four Railroad at Lafayette, Ind., at 1:30 o'clock Monday morning. The dead are:

- E. D. Meyers, a mail clerk of Cincinnati.
 - A. R. Chadwick, mail clerk, Cincinnati.
 - Jesse H. Long, mail clerk, Lebanon, Ind.
 - Express Messenger McMahon, of Cincinnati.
 - C. S. Cahill, traveler, Indiana.
 - Otto Jesselson, Alhambra Hotel, Chicago, passenger going to train.
 - Mike Welsh, engineer, Indianapolis.
 - S. McInnis, fireman, Urbana, Ohio.
 - Charles Myers, bus driver, Lafayette.
 - John Lennon, driver mail wagon, Lafayette.
- The injured are:
- Lottas Burranhole, Milwaukee, Wis.
 - William Pace, Frankfort, Ind.
 - Jeff Reese, Kempton, Ind.
 - Richard Jones, Pontiac, Ill.
 - Lewis Leffer, Fowler, Ind.
 - Richard Jones, Logansport, Ind.

The accident occurred at the depot on a sharp curve and was caused, it is thought, by the failure of the air brakes to work while the train was entering the city on a sharp down grade. The engine and three cars, including two mail coaches, one express car, and a combination smoker and baggage car, left the track while running at a terrific rate. The ladies' coach and three through sleepers did not leave the track. All the trainmen were killed. None of the passengers was injured. As the engine left the track it struck and instantly killed three men standing on the platform. They were Otto Jesselson, who had purchased a ticket and was waiting to board the train; Charles Myers, a bus driver; and John Lennon, who was in charge of the United States mail wagon at the depot. The dead that lay under the immense pile of wreckage were not removed for three hours after the accident, a wrecking train being necessary to do the work.

High bluffs rise on the west bank of the Wabash just opposite the city, and there is a long and steep grade at that point. The ill-fated train must have been a mile up the grade from the river when the engineer discovered that there was something wrong with the air, for the vigorous whistling of the engine for brakes could be heard when the train was still a mile west of the city. The engineer's desperate efforts to stop the train was shown by the large amount of sand thrown by him on the bridge through which the train came just before the fatal crash. The speed by that time had increased so terrifically, however, that its control was beyond human agency. With almost lightning-like speed the monster engine dashed around the curves and across the long bridge, although the man at the throttle had reversed the machinery, and immense streams of fire were being dashed from the driving wheels running in opposite direction to that of the swiftly flying cars that followed. Just after leaving the east end of the long bridge over the Wabash the tracks describe a semicircle, at the midway point of which the Union station is located. When the engine struck that sharp curve it left the track, followed by the cars in an awful swirl, and they piled upon each other 100 feet away, after crashing through train sheds and bringing down tons of structural iron to add to the terrors of the situation.

EXTRA SESSION SURE.

Finance and Tariff Engage the Attention of Congress.

The recent flurry in financial circles has revived the talk of an extra session, says a Washington dispatch. Before leaving for the West a few weeks ago Vice President Stevenson intimated that Congress would convene in September, and Mr. Cleveland has since stated to a couple of members of Congress that the extra session would be called between the 1st and 15th of that month. This information was repeated to Mr. Outhwaite, of Ohio, who called upon the President on Friday, and Mr. Outhwaite now entertains the opinion that the Fifty-third Congress will be in session continuously from September until the following June, barring the usual holiday recess in December. It is deemed probable that financial and tariff legislation alone will be sufficient to engage the attention of Congress until long after the December recess. The two questions will doubtless be considered as part of the same general problem, and to that end several of the administration leaders are already at work upon them.

DON'T BOTHER THE PRESIDENT

Mr. Cleveland Finds It Necessary to Establish a Few Rules.

The following has been issued by President Cleveland for publication:

EXECUTIVE MANSION.

It has become apparent after two months' experience that the rules heretofore promulgated regulating interviews with the President have wholly failed in operation. The same rules were set apart for time which under those conditions and Representatives has been almost entirely spent in listening to applications for office, which have been bewildering in volume, perplexing and exhausting in their iteration, and impossible of remembrance. Their iteration and impossibility, which must be a due regard for public duty, which must be an observance of the limitations placed upon human endurance oblige me to decline, from and after this date, all personal interviews with those seeking appointments to office, except such as I, on my own initiative, may deem it expedient to receive. I earnestly request that you do not come to the Executive Mansion for the purpose of presenting petitions, or for the purpose of introducing their constituents and friends when visiting the Executive Mansion during the hours designated for their reception. Applicants for office will only prejudice their prospects by repeated importunities and by remaining at Washington to await results.

The authorities at the Washington gun foundry enjoyed the pleasure of a visit from a distinguished expert, Vice Admiral Sir John O. Hopkins, K. C. B., Commander-in-Chief of the British squadron which cruises up and down the eastern coast of the United States.

Housekeepers Should Remember.

The Government Chemists, after having analyzed all the principal brands of baking powder in the market, in their reports placed the "Royal" at the head of the list for strength, purity and wholesomeness; and thousands of tests all over the country have further demonstrated the fact that its qualities are, in every respect, unrivaled.

Avoid all baking powders sold with a gift or prize, or at a lower price than the Royal, as they invariably contain alum, lime or sulphuric acid, and render the food unwholesome.

No Place Like Home.

Among the sons of Maine who have recently returned from the scenes of some unwarranted boom and of unrealized hopes, is a young man in one of the towns of Cumberland County, now endeavoring to find aid in building up the prosperous business which he deserted when the Fort Payne (Ala.) boom was at its height. He opened a general supply store there, when the people were flocking into the places by hundreds, carried on a lively business and made a good deal of money in a short time. But when the tide turned his business diminished, till he couldn't pay his bills, and about six months ago he found himself in Fort Payne, without a cent in his pocket wherewith to support his family. His one wish was to get back to the land of the Pine Tree. He met another man, similarly situated, with the exception that he did possess something besides the longing for Maine. It was a soda fountain, which he was trying to sell in order to buy a ticket for Maine with the money. His friend succeeded in selling it for him and received a commission of $50. Then he met another man who was longing for Maine, and whose only possession was some rather unattractive stock in Western enterprises. The young man disposed of some of that and received another $50, and thus was finally able to reach his old home in Maine, and is almost on his feet again in his old business.—Lewiston Journal.

The ghost who has been prowling around our streets scaring children and timid people recently, ran against a snag the other night, in the shape of fist propelled by muscles that made the ghost think it had been struck by a cannon ball. A representative of one of the largest leather manufacturing concerns in the country, gives the following method of caring for the russet leather shoes now so popular: When they get dirty carefully brush them off. Then cut a lemon in two and rub the juice over the surface of the leather. When you have done that rub the shoes vigorously with a dry piece of flannel and the leather will shine like a mirror. The acid of the lemon will do no harm, and if the leather is well rubbed the color will not be made lighter.

The market on wheat the past week has been a constant decline. Good weather, light demand and lower cables did it. It now stands at 67c for red or white. Rye has advanced and would seem to be worth 56c per bu. If it stays where it is now. Oats 35c, potatoes 60c beans $1.70, eggs 13c, butter dull and lower. The best is not worth to exceed 12c and looks like being still lower soon. The farmers are getting in their corn this week and receipts have been very light. The receipts next week will be lighter than they would have been if last week's prices had been continued.

A student named Davis, while walking on 14th street, about 9 o'clock Tuesday evening, with a domestic, was struck in the face with a stone in the hands of a colored villain and knocked senseless. The colored man seized the girl and dragged her about forty feet. After a hard struggle she got away from him and the officers are now trying to find the colored man.—Ann Arbor Argus.

The Holly Advertiser publishes the following timely advice to married men, as well as those who intend to get married: "How common it is for a man to dictate what shall be used in the house, in the way of decorations, furniture, et. and yet how piggish. It is the lady that must live in the house, do the work and spend all of her time there, and she should have her say, but it is seldom that she does. A husband that will dictate just how things should be in the house is selfish to say the least. He should bear in mind that his wife is equally good as he and should be so recognized.

In the government building in the exposition grounds there has been established a branch of the Chicago post-office. From this branch there will be made regular collections and deliveries by a corps of letter-carriers appointed for service within the exposition grounds. A money order and registry business will be conducted at the branch. Mail matter intended for delivery in the grounds should be plainly addressed, "World's Fair Station, Chicago, Ill.," giving, if possible precise locality in the grounds to which the letter or parcel is to be delivered, so that prompt carrier delivery can be effected.

The world's fair is being used to cover a multitude of sins. Ask your grocer why butter is so high, and he will answer "world's fair". Complain of the cost of potatoes, and you will hear something about the world's fair. Talk to the ice man about the shrinking pieces he delivers and you will be reminded that there is to be a tremendous demand for that which will keep the Esquimaux cool at Chicago during the ensuing summer. If flour and meat go up in price it will not be because of the scarcity of wheat or cattle, but because of a world's fair. Poultry never was higher because there is to be a world's fair.—Ex.

"The Fire Patrol," which will be presented at the Town Hall, Friday May 19th, is by James W. Harkins, Jr., who is also the author of "The Midnight Alarm" which made a remarkably successful tour last season. This his latest play, seems likely to be equally, if not more successful, judging from the praise accorded to it by the critics of New York City where it was recently produced.

As indicated by its title, the play introduces a fire-patrol wagon, and much stress is laid on a scene showing the interior of an ore crushing mill in the gold mining region with the ponderous machinery in actual operation. Add to these a view of Union Square, New York, in a snow storm and we have enough of realism to satisfy the most ardent lover of realistic melodrama.

CHURCH NEWS.

A few things to be remembered:

Profanity marks a boy who cannot be trusted.

Both in buying and in selling, 16 ounces make a pound.

Children, if it is said, must be interested, before they can be taught. Is not the reverse of this statement equally true?

Slyly snipping off choice flowers in other people's gardens may soon locate a genuine sneak-thief. Barbed wire fences and watch-dogs are thought of as a necessary defence against the depredations of "our boys." Meantime, can't we coax them into the Sunday School?

What many would like to see in our Sunday Schools:

Fewer lessons helps and more bibles faithfully studied.

More conversions and less ado about more modes and methods of doing the desired work.

More parents with the children in the Sunday School.

Cheerfulness without levity—more work and less worry.

More children with their parents at the regular church service.

The Baptist Young Peoples' Union will entertain the young people, of the Baptist church, of Dexter this evening.

"Tarrying near Temptation" is the subject for the Christian Endeavor prayer-meeting next Sunday evening.

The subject for Epworth League prayer meeting for next Sunday evening is "The young Christian in Society"

The subject for the meeting of the B. Y. P. U. for next Sunday evening is "Love's Lasting Memorial,"—Mark 14:9.

The Girls' Mission Band, of the Baptist church, assisted by others, will give a special service, next Sunday evening.

Mr. Shepherd of Olivet, who was superintendent of the Congregational Sunday school twenty years ago was present last Sabbath and talked very interestingly to the school.

The new constitution for the Congregational Sunday school was adopted last Sabbath. W. J. Knapp, Mrs. Wines and Mrs. Judson were elected as members of the executive committee.

We are glad to learn that Judge D. M. Browning who was recently appointed by President Cleveland as Commissioner, of Indian Affairs, is an earnest Christian. He is a most honored and loved member of the First Baptist church of Benton, Ill. It is confidently hoped that he will conduct the affairs of the Bureau with that consummate skill and rigorous justice which so deservedly marked the services of his worthy predecessor, General Morgan.

Ideal weather last Sunday contributed in great part to the great success of the demonstrations by the Catholics of Chelsea, on the occasion of the advent of Bishop Foley. The Bishop arrived in Chelsea on Friday evening and became a welcome guest at St. Mary's rectory until his departure for Dexter on the Monday following.

Saturday morning Dr. Foley, accompanied by Dr. Reilly and Fr. Kessler, of Detroit and Fr. Considine, of Chelsea went to Pinckney, where a class received the sacrament of confirmation.

The bishop preached an impressive sermon on the "Love of God." Sunday morning, May 14th, was indeed a "glorious Sunday morning." The bishop celebrated mass at 8 a. m. and First Holy Communion to 90 boys and girls, to whom he made an affectionate address on the great sacrament they were about to receive. The juvenile choir sang some beautiful hymns most excellently during the bishop's mass.

At 10:30 a. m. solemn high mass coram episcopo was celebrated by Rev. A. J. Kessler, assisted by Rev. Dr. Reilly and Rev. Fr. Considine. The altars were beautifully decorated, and the handsome candelabra with their numerous wax tapers, made a splendid scene. Rev. Dr. Reilly preached a magnificent sermon of rare power and beauty of language, which was a masterly presentation of the claims of the Catholic church. After the sermon, the bishop administered the sacrament of confirmation, making an earnest address, full of wisdom, to those about to be confirmed. At 3 o'clock the bishop, accompanied by the Rev. clergy, repaired to Mt. Olivet cemetery, which was solemnly consecrated with many beautiful and impressive ceremonies. An immense number of people were present to witness the solemn ceremonies. Dr. Reilly delivered a most vigorous and eloquent sermon, in which he paid high tribute to the pastor and people of St. Mary's parish, of Chelsea, for the steady advances they were making. The Rt. Rev. Bishop followed by endorsing all that Dr. Reilly had said, and expressing his earnest wish that all the Catholics of the parish should make Mt. Olivet the resting place for their faithful dead. The bishop complimented both pastor and people on the work done in Chelsea, and on the steady progress of Catholicity in our prosperous village.

In the Circuit Court.

The jury in the case of Louis Wines vs. Sarah R. Cole, rendered a verdict of $150 for the plaintiff. This was a Chelsea appeal case, for the expense of caring for a little daughter of Mrs. Cole.

Another Chelsea case was put on trial, the case of Ahmiller vs. Frank Staffan. This was a suit for trespass brought to determine the ownership of fifteen acres of huckleberry marsh including the huckleberry crop of the year. The land in dispute is said to be worth about $75, and both parties claimed to have been in possession to be the rightful owners of the land. The jury on Monday brought in a verdict of six cents for the plaintiff. An aside it may be remarked that the marsh in dispute was the cause of the organization some years ago of a company to utilize the marsh for peat, but some way the peat didn't prove such a desirable commodity, and the company soon expired.

The case of Nancy Conklin vs. the Michigan Central was discontinued without costs.

The entertainment was replete with taking features and kept the large audience convulsed by laughter. An impersonator and humorist Mr. Cope has a brilliant career.—Address Courier, May 13, '93. Mr. Cope will appear at the Town Hall next Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E.

A melodrama new to Boston is the week's attraction at the Grand Opera House, and a large gathering Monday night decided it to be a success in every way. In witnessing the piece the spectator is taken from Deadwood New York and back again to Colorado where the separated lovers are happily reunited. The climate of the various acts are thrilling and are of the sort that is sure to arouse the enthusiasm of the boys in the gallery. W. W. Bittell did well as the Samson-like miner who was strong enough to sustain the weight of an ore-crusher on his shoulder and whose nature was filled with sympathy for all in misfortune. The impersonation of Lushington Stagg, act, "an actor in hard luck," given by George Rose, succeeded in causing the audience to laugh heartily the greater part of the evening.—Boston Transcript, Dec. 15, 1891.

Last Thursday morning several of the young men of the High School appeared all decked with chunks of wood and willow twigs. On being asked the cause, they replied that they were the victims of a certain schemer whose object is unknown - or at least not publicly known.

RUINED BY DYNAMITE.

TEMPERANCE TROUBLE IN AN IOWA TOWN.

Rotten Banking Institutions Closed—New President of the National League—Fire Bugs Yet Busy at Milwaukee—Desertion of British Men-of-War's Men.

Muscatine Is Startled.
In the Chicago Tribune appears this dispatch from Muscatine, Iowa:

Three terrific explosions of dynamite at 1:30 Thursday morning awakened thousands of people here and wrecked the handsome homes of John Mahin, editor of the Muscatine Journal; E. M. Kessinger, a retired capitalist; and N. Rosenberger, an attorney. In every case the occupants of the houses, fifteen in number, slept on the second floor, and as the explosives were thrown into the basements or first floors the force of the explosion was below the occupants. The lower floors of all the houses were completely demolished and their contents dropped into the cellar and their contents dropped into the cellar. At Mr. Rosenberger's house, which was left a complete wreck from cellar to roof, some of the occupants fell from the upper floor into the cellar, but escaped injury. At Mr. Mahin's a heavy wardrobe was thrown upon a bed occupied by two young women but in such a manner that they escaped. Bookshelves, pianos, tables, chairs and costly furniture were thrown in a confused mass into the cellars, and windows, doors and walls were wrecked. The interior of the three houses presented a scene difficult to imagine. Losses aggregate $150,000. Messrs. Mahin, Kessinger and Rosenberger have been active in opposing saloons, and it is believed the motive for the wrecking was revenge.

Bank Doors Closed.

"BANK SUSPENDED." That was the legend affixed to the door of the Columbia National Bank in Chicago, Thursday morning, at 10 o'clock. Close by this announcement was another to the effect that, there having been a run on the concern for some time, it was deemed best to close the doors in order to protect the interested parties. A large crowd quickly gathered at the bank entrance of the building, but there was little surprise shown over the announcement. The fact is, according to a dispatch, banking circles have been expecting a suspension for some time past and even the patrons of the bank have not looked upon it as a safe place for the keeping their money.

Chose W. W. Tracey.

Tracey, Illinois, 392; General V. H. Hastings, Pennsylvania, 413. As soon as the vote was announced, Mr. Tracey's election was made unanimous.

WILLIAM MATTHEWS, the king and last of the cattle rustlers, who for a time in 1890 and 1891 defied the law successfully in Wyoming, Idaho, and Washington, was brought to Great Falls, Mont., heavily ironed by Deputy Sheriff Dwyer. He was captured in Choteau, where he was traveling under the name of Briggs.

JUDGE PRESTON, of Cedar Rapids, has rendered a decision largely curtailing the Iowa kangaroo ballot law. The Judge holds that it is not necessary that ballots shall be officially indorsed. Neither is it necessary for the voter to use the ballots furnished by the State. In effect, the decision says that the law may be disregarded so long as fraud is not resorted to.

At the conference of the Eastern Baptist Association of Minnesota held at Hastings, the Rev. G. L. Morrill, of Minneapolis, created a sensation by attacking Chicago, the World's Fair, and even Columbus himself, who, according to Mr. Morrill, deceived his wife, swindled his sovereigns, lied to his crew, and was not the original discoverer of this continent.

JUDGES COPENHAVER and Johnson, of St. Clair County, Missouri, have again been adjudged guilty of contempt by United States Judge Phillips for refusing to issue a levy to pay railroad bonds. These Judges have already been in jail for months for the same reason and were only recently released because they pleaded poverty. Now no fine will be asked, so they will remain in jail until they order the levy.

THE Whitecaps in jail at Brookhaven, Miss., were sentenced each to two years in the Penitentiary.

THE will of J. Henry Stickney, of Baltimore, bequeaths $500,000 to Congregational societies. The college at Beloit, Wis., also gets a share.

JOHN E. LEWIS, the agent of the Fort Wayne Road, who absconded from South Chicago with $4,000 of the company's cash, has been arrested in Texas.

WHITE CAPS have captured the town of Brookhaven, the county seat of Lincoln County, Mississippi, and the Sheriff telegraphed for Gov. Stone and Adj. Gen. Henry. They arrived with weapons and ammunition, which were at once turned over to a company of militia. The white caps, 100 strong and armed, raided the jail and court house and demanded the liberty of ten men under indictment. The Judge held his ground until the arrival of troops. This had the effect of temporarily subduing the mob, and they are now in hiding in the bush near the town. Merchants and citizens are armed for trouble.

WASHINGTON.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has issued a rule declining to receive office-seekers who wish for a personal interview.

MR. STEVENS has been removed as our minister to Hawaii and Mr. Blount, who acted as commissioner during the recent flurry, appointed in his place.

JUDGE WILLIAM LOCHREN has resigned from the bench in Minnesota and left for Washington to assume his duties as Commissioner of Pensions.

A WASHINGTON correspondent announces that the President is considering the advisability of calling an extra session of Congress at once, in view of the alarming condition of the financial affairs of the nation. In an interview on the Wall street situation Secretary Carlisle asks pointedly: "What have I to do with the situation in Wall street? I can't give the gentlemen in Wall street any money. Further than this I have nothing to say, as I consider it improper and also impossible to discuss the financial situation every day through the newspapers."

FOREIGN.

HERR VON BENNINGSEN, the National Liberal leader, made a clever speech in favor of the army bill.

THE German army bill, the Kaiser's pet measure, was defeated Saturday, and the Reichstag was immediately dissolved by imperial decree.

At the request of the United States the Belgian Government has sent out invitations for the reassembling of the monetary conference at Brussels, May 30.

MICHAEL DAVITT, anti-Parnellite member of the British House of Commons who was recently adjudged a bankrupt, has applied for the Chiltern Hundreds.

THERE is a large secession of branches from the British Woman's Temperance Association, since the re-election of Lady Henry Somerset as President determined the ascendancy of the so-called "Somerset party."

THE Jew-baiter and member of the late German Reichstag, Rector Ahlwardt, has been arrested and will be returned to prison to serve his sentence for having libeled the Loewes small arms manufacturers. The period of his immunity expired with the Reichstag.

IN the British House of Commons Thursday evening, attention being called to the presence of troops at Hull, Mr. Gladstone remarked that it was unwise and impolitic to parade troops before strikers, but the friends of labor ought to take his assurance that the Government had not designed to support the Shipping Federation.

WHILE reviewing the troops in the Tempel Hofferfeld Tuesday the German Emperor ordered the principal officers of the Imperial Guards to gather around him and addressed them as follows:

Since we last met the situation created by the army bill has shown peculiar changes. I could not look forward to the rejection of the bill. On the contrary, trusting to the patriotism of the Reichstag, I hoped for the unanimous acceptance of it. The result has caused me deep disappointment and sorrow. I regret that the patriotic men who were in the minority did not succeed in defeating those who were indulgent to the welfare of their country. During the last few days I have remained unaided among might better have been spoken. I was obliged to dissolve the Reichstag in the hope that the Reichstag would pass the bill. I am determined in case this hope also be disappointed, to stake all in my power to obtain the enactment of the measure. For I am too thoroughly convinced of its necessity as a guarantee of the peace of Europe to allow it to be finally defeated.

We are hearing much about the excitement of the masses just now. I do not think that the German people will allow themselves to be excited by irresponsible meddlers. On the contrary, I know that I am in sympathy with the Princes of the federal states, the people, and the army. I thank you, gentlemen, for your loyal interest. My desire was to express to you my views concerning the bill, as I did when the bill was introduced.

The speech is causing enormous excitement among the people. It appears in the North German Universal Gazette in double-headed prominence. The officers who heard the Emperor's words maintained absolute silence, although evidently in deep sympathy with his views. Leading men in German politics who have heard the Emperor's speech now consider that he has embarked on a policy of Prussian high toyism, and that the chances of the Freisinnige party to bring about a Moderate Liberal era have vanished.

IN GENERAL

THE Automatic and Electric Company of Canada, incorporated by the Dominion Parliament last month, proposes to run a copper metallic trunk line direct from Halifax to Vancouver, over 3,500 miles long. Local plants will also be established in towns and cities en route.

A. A. HOPKINS, of Lake Forest University, won the first prize in the interstate oratorical contest at Columbus, Ohio. The second prize was captured by J. H. Kimball, of Beloit College; the third by Myron J. Jones, of Wooster College; and the fourth by Hugh H. Havley, of Depauw University.

A CONVENTION of Liberals will be held in Ottawa, Ont. It will hold sessions four days and will be attended by 1,200 delegates, representing every county in Canada. Chief debate is expected on the propositions to adopt as a party platform unrestricted reciprocity with the United States, or a more general policy of free trade with the world.

R. G. DUN & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Had business in Wall street been unsound or unhealthy the collapse of prices might have caused a panic. Nearly all stocks fell, but the industrials were most severely depressed, and while the average share decline in all stocks was about 26 per cent for the week, cordage fell 43 points, sugar 40, and Manhattan 26. Several failures occurred without general disturbance, and the appointment of receivers for the Cordage Company was in some sense a relief. Other speculative markets are on the whole rather stronger than a week ago. At nearly all points the backward season and bad weather, with slow collections, give cause of complaint.

THE projectors of the Christian centennial at Jerusalem in 1900, the chief mover of which is Col. Jesse E. Peyton, met in historic Carpenter's Hall, Philadelphia, Thursday. The Rev. Dr. H. C. McCook presided. Col. Peyton stated the object of the centennial to be a congress of all nations and to mark the 1900th anniversary of the birth of Christ. A committee would prepare resolutions and present them for adoption at a public meeting to be held in Independence Hall July 4. The resolutions will then be sent to Chicago for consideration by the parliament of religions at the World's Fair. Chairman McCook said a union of Mohammedans, Israelites, and Christians would be a remarkable thing to accomplish.

BOOTH PASSING AWAY.

HIS PHYSICIANS' DESPAIRING BULLETIN.

Louisville Entertains the National Republican League—Mad Deed of an Iowa Horrible Accident at Fallman, Ill.—Lin's Pretty Scheme Fulfilled.

Hope of Booth's Recovery Dashed.
NEARLY all hope for Edwin Booth's recovery was dashed to earth Wednesday night by the bulletin issued at 10 o'clock. This bulletin was signed by Drs. M. Allen Starr, St. Clair Smith, F. Fremont Smith. They said that the acute inflammation of the kidney which at one time threatened a fatal termination, had now subsided and while there was no prospect of immediate danger to Mr. Booth from this source, the condition of partial paralysis, with loss of the power of speech which had been present for the last three weeks, had not changed materially. Mr. Booth's mental condition was still obscured somewhat, and there was little probability of any rapid complete recovery. This is generally interpreted as meaning the worst.

Republicans in Session.
THE National Republican League in convention at Louisville, Ky., its opera house was tastefully decorated with flags and banners and from the stage was banked up with flowers and tropical foliage plants. When delegations had all been seated, President J. S. Clarkson of the League called the convention to order, and the Rev. Dr. Wood, pastor of the United Church of Louisville, invoked the blessings of the Deity upon the semblance of Republicans. At the close of the prayer Mrs. J. Ellen Foster ushered on the stage, and her presence was greeted with a storm of applause. Col. Andrew Cowan, a member of local Republican league, then introduced Mayor Henry S. Tyler, who came the delegates. "In the name of the city," he said, "I extend to you freedom of the city. We welcome you and you will find the latch-string ways out, and that you will be welcomed wherever you may go while you remain our guests." The Mayor was heartily applauded both when he came on stage and when he finished speaking.

Killed by an Engine.
THREE men were instantly killed, Sarah R. Cole, rendered a vegetable, $150 for the plaintiff. This was a Chelsea appeal case, for the expense of hiring for a little daughter of Mrs. Cole.

Another Chelsea case was put on trial, the case of Ahnemiller vs. Frank Allan. This was a suit for trespass sought to determine the ownership of fifteen acres of huckleberry marsh, including the huckleberry crop of the year. The land in dispute is said to be worth about $75, and both parties claimed to have been in possession of the land since the death of the late Mrs. Ahnemiller on Monday brought in a verdict of six cents for the plaintiff. Aside it may be remarked that the marsh in dispute was the cause of the organization some years ago of a company to utilize the marsh for peat, but the way the peat didn't prove such a valuable commodity, and the company soon expired.

The case of Nancy Conklin vs. the Michigan Central was discontinued without costs.

The entertainment was replete with singing features and kept the large audience convulsed by laughter. A impersonator and humorist who has a brilliant career—Adolpho Currier, May 13, '93. Mr. Currier appeared at the Town Hall next evening under the auspices of the P. S. C. E.

DAN STUART, a horse trainer at Leones, Iowa, killed himself after being assaulted and probably wounded Mrs. Webb Moon, a married woman in whose household he resided, and for whom he had contracted an insane infatuation.

SECRETARY HOKE SMITH has appointed a commission consisting of Capt. Anderson, U. S. A., the superintendent of the Yellowstone National Park; Assistant Land Bowers of the General Land Office; and W. If one nibble of cheese costs $1 each? If one cracker can sell for 35 cents retail at 30, how long will it take a man with a big appetite and a moderate salary to go hungry? If staff beef on the grounds is worth 50 cents a pound and a skinny pie is sold at 25 cents an eighth, what will the average person take for his eating habit? These are some of the perplexing questions which now bother the patrons of the Fair restaurants. Once within the fair grounds there is no chance to slip out for a snack and the only alternative for a person with a stomach that needs attention is to choose in which restaurant he desires to be regaled. There are French restaurants where it costs to sit down, and fish taverns where the barmaids read and guess at the bill; Polish restaurants with strange and deadly concoctions of benzine, absinthe, and vitriol; man victual houses with the fragrance of luscious dinners, and the lake winds and sit in amazement at rates per plate.

One of the many devices for extracting money from a man that is a little and a little is a neat little appendix to the fare which announces that coffee costs per cup and in the opposite corner the brief announcement that coffee is asked as to whether he is taking cream when he is at the down on the farm. Certainly he looks back and thinks of the Jersey cows and the cream that he has neighbors at 15 cents a quart. As he comes to settle his bill, by reckoning by latitude and longitude by logarithms, he is generally sent to 4 bits behind the official. "I thought that 'Cream, 15 cents,' was a glass of cream," he means cream for coffee. 35 cents without a sprig of parsley to garnish the dish. Then, too, the beans furnished are of a small and inconsequential growth, resembling BB shot rather than a vegetable product. It can be easily figured up just what a good, comfortable meal will cost the average man who has no secondary appetite or who has not burdened himself with a false one by the use of liquors, which one of the bills calmly declares are 35 cents a gulp. Julienne, 25 cents; roast of beef or gigot de presale, 75 cents; fagolets pois, tomato a l'Americain, 50 cents; coffee, demi-tasse, 10 cents; total, $1.60. True, this is not the average price, but it's near it, and the moral is, don't eat. Bring your appetite back with you. Save it as a curiosity to show your friends, as a relic that was saved intact from the forty thieves. You may grow thin if you attend the Fair often or for an extended period, but either forget your digestive apparatus or take a lunch and crawl off by some lagoon when you eat it.

Complaints concerning the extortion practiced were so long and loud that President Higginbotham disguised himself and made a personal investigation. He found these restaurants to be regular robbers' roosts, and the officials have now decreed that the extortion must cease.

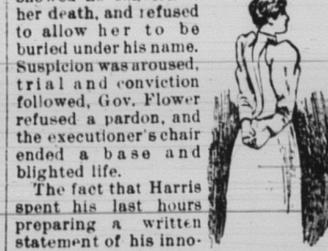

In a previous letter I said you could see the fair for 50 cents. So you can, but you can't monkey with a World's Fair restaurant for anything like that amount.

SHOCKED TO DEATH.

The Infamous Murderer of His Child Wife Dies in the Electric Chair.

Carlyle W. Harris, convicted of administering poison to his child wife, was electrocuted in Sing Sing prison at 12:40 o'clock Monday afternoon. Thus the last act in one of the most noted and intricate murder trials on record is closed. Young Harris had been a medical student and played the role of a fast youth at Ocean Grove

CARLYLE HARRIS, when he was first introduced to Mary Helen Potts. The rest of the story is easily summed up: clandestine meetings, a secret marriage, an illegal operation twice performed to hide the fact of their union, discovery by the girl's mother and a demand for a public marriage, prostration by Harris, and finally the preparation of some headache pills for his young wife which caused her death by morphine poisoning. Harris showed no concern at her death, and refused to allow her to be buried under his name. Suspicion was aroused, trial and conviction followed, Gov. Flower refused a pardon, and the executioner's chair ended a base and blighted life.

HELEN P. HARRIS. The fact that Harris spent his last hours preparing a written statement of his innocence is in keeping with his character, and only shows his remarkable powers of secretiveness and self-control. It was natural that he should wish to preserve the name of his family from utter obloquy and to sustain his mother's unwavering faith in the innocence of her boy. The saddest scene in this remarkable drama—more tragic far than that which ended all in the death-room Monday—was that in which the mother, after having fought off death for a year with all the intensity of a mother's love, stood before her son's prison cell to say a last farewell. Few mortals come to know the anguish of such an hour. The Harris tragedy is only one of a class which must continue as long as there are men who look upon women as flowers to be plucked and flung away, and as long as there are women left to be deceived.

LAND COMMISSIONER LAMOREUX is making a clean sweep in his department. The resignations include Edward A. Kreidler, Montana; Andrew F. Dinsmore, Michigan; Perry G. Michener, Indiana, and Daniel A. Ray, Illinois. The salaries of these places vary from $1,800 to $2,000 annually.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

AN INTERESTING AND INSTRUCTIVE LESSON.

Reflections of an Elevating Character—Wholesome Food for Thought—Studying the Scriptural Lesson Intelligently and Profitably.

Against Intemperance.

The lesson for Sunday, May 21, may be found in Prov. 23: 29-35.

The international committee are wise, wide-awake men. They have given us here another lesson on temperance. Certainly it is timely. Until we are right on this subject, until we have banished liquor from Christ and tables and Christian kitchens, until we have crossed off the Government's sanction, until we have declared the saloon an outlaw, until we have put dram-drinking wholly on the other side of the line of Christian morality and of common decency in a Christian land, until all this is accomplished there is room for the temperance lesson. But the lesson is to be read in the light of the New Testament and of the new and better Christian civilization. Get at the underlying principle. If it does not make us better men than they were then, if it does not name to-day a higher morality than was then exemplified, then we have missed the real core and kernel of truth involved. Temperance through ages is a progressive virtue.

POINTS IN THE LESSON.

"Who hath woe?" Literally, to whom belongs woe? Verily, it is the drunkard's rightful possession and inheritance—woe. If you want that sort, take the cup; and it is yours.

The moderate drinker (so called) will seek to make much of this thirtieth verse, especially the part about tarrying long at the wine. It is all right, forsooth, if one will only use judgment and not linger over the cup. Such language might apply with referen e to the light wines of ancient times, but a different interpretation is needful to-day. We make bold to say of the times that now are: There can be no moderate drinking. Two reasons: 1. The liquor of to-day, fiery, swiftly intoxicating, alluring, is different. 2. The spirit of man, quick, volatile, his nature keenly, nervously susceptible, his passions swiftly inflammable, all, all are different. We are coming readily to see that the only way to be temperate is to let strong drink alone. The only temperance, worthy of the name, to-day, is teetotalism.

At last, at last! O that men would stop to consider what comes "at the last." Like them as to the poison and murder they carry, like them as regards treachery and deceit. There is surely something suggestive in this word, "at the last," in its present connections. It literally signifies behind, at your back. A sudden, darting pain at your heel, and there, gliding away behind you, a venomous snake perhaps. Fit emblem of the drink that lies so smooth and quiet in the glass. Behind your back it will smite you, and to the death. Let it alone. Keep away from it. Satan's own dart is there.

HINTS AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

Here is a lesson that ought to stir up a lively and profitable discussion. Do not render it the occasion for a lecture on temperance; the people have had enough of lecturing per se. What we want in connection with this lesson is to draw forth their personal testimony on the manifest evil of strong drink and link it with a determination, full and strong, to have naught to do with the unclean thing. Once we all come to one mind in the Christian church on this subject of liquor as a beverage, we shall be able to deal with it effectively. What do you think about it? Ask each one to state his mind on the matter. Does drinking seem to you an evil? Does it seem to you a sin? What do you think of intoxicating liquor at the New Year call, on the sidewalk, in the cellar? What do you think of it in the church? And what do you think we ought to do about it? Agitate, agitate! Some time we shall all be in line and in step. Then down to the pit with it—this devil's drink!

There in the middle of the street a shouting, jeering throng; two hatless men thrusting at each other with their fists, missing fire, falling, running, half brave, half coward, police nowhere in sight. Such was the instantaneous photograph our eyes caught, as the car stopped at the intersection of the streets the other day. The next moment the car had pulled on, and the man opposite, glancing at the startled faces of the women, muttered sotto voce, "Drunk!" and went on reading his paper. We have gotten so used to it. Is some one making a fool of himself? "He's drunk; that's all." Is that all? Well, it is enough to disgrace him and all of his kind—every one of us.

Where did we see the picture? A poor wight waking up in the morning, eyes bleared, face cut, head bruised, a piece of generally dilapidated humanity. Underneath the words, along with others, nameless here, "What a glorious time I must have had last night!" Wounds without cause. Each year more bruises and broken bones, more wounds; some serious, some fatal, some mortal—all painful—than you would see in a whole campaign of pitched battles. And all for nothing. When shall we learn good sense? "Battle-scarred veteran," the editor wrote it, and the compositor set it up battle-scarred, and we smiled. The next one printed it bottle-scarred, and we smiled again—and sighed, too.

The wise man will let drink alone. But, alas, we are none of us as wise as we should be. What shall save us from the curse of drunkenness? The religion of Jesus Christ will do it. Take Christ, and all these things that degrade and destroy will be put away. It is a significant legend. They handed the king a poisoned cup—how should he know? But the treacherous courtiers, with consternation, saw the monarch hold it aloft, and, dipping his finger in the liquid, make the sign of the cross on the glass, and instantly it was shattered to fragments.

WHILE the religiously inclined people of Deenville were attending a revival meeting a couple of kids stretched a rope across the sidewalk, a few feet from the door. There was one big pile of humanity a few minutes later.

LAST fall half a dozen Swedes started from Alpena for Drummond's Island. They were never heard from afterwards nor was their boat ever found. Last week the body of one of them was found on the beach near Sheboygan.

CARLETON wants a factory and general store. MAYBEE'S stone quarry is employing fifty men to start with. L. ROSENCRANS, of Elva, had his right ear bitten off by a vicious horse.

A HEAVY land deal has been consummated at Dundee in the shape of E. M. Lewis selling his stock farm of 325 acres to a gentleman from Battle Creek.

ALL Michigan people en route to the World's Fair are advised to keep a close watch on their hand baggage and not to check it, as the railroads in Chicago are swamped.

J. H. YERDEN'S store at Silverwood was entered. Some $20 in cash and $200 in notes were taken.

WHILE fishing from the railroad bridge at Grand Rapids Willie Kry fell into the river and was drowned.

THE Cheboygan lighthouse was wrecked by the tug Parker. When leaving port the Parker ran into the outer range light crib, cutting eleven large timbers in two, displacing the tower light, breaking lenses, and knocking over the stove. The boat was apparently uninjured.

THE WEEK AT LANSING.

WHAT THE LEGISLATURE IS DOING.

An Impartial Record of the Work Accomplished by Those Who Make Our Laws—How the Time Has Been Occupied During the Past Week.

The Law-Makers.

The House in committee of the whole Friday agreed to bills providing that employers of females in stores provide seats for them when not actively engaged; to prohibit unauthorized fire insurance companies from soliciting, writing, or issuing policies in the State, and re-enacting the law in force prior to the passage of the Miner law for election of Presidential electors; also to joint resolutions requiring naturalized citizens to have full naturalization papers to enable them to vote, and amending the law so as to require a residence of twenty instead of ten days in the township or ward, and authorizing inmates of soldiers' homes to vote where the homes are located. Hereafter both houses of the Legislature will work Saturdays and Mondays, with occasional night sessions, to adjourn the 29th.

The House Tuesday refused to pass a bill providing for the incorporation of companies for the establishing of homes for the care of children whose parents may release all right to said children in favor of such corporation. It was the intention of the Adventists if the bill had passed to establish such a home at Battle Creek. The reading of the general tax bill was concluded in the Senate Tuesday, but no action was taken on it, the measure being informally passed by the committee of the whole. The committee killed the bill reducing the legal rate of interest to 6 per cent, and prohibiting the making of contracts at a greater rate, and passed the anti-Pinkerton bill and the Baum bill establishing a Saturday half-holiday for banks. On third reading there were passed bills appropriating $74,000 for the support of the state public schools and $55,000 for the erection of two cottages and a barn and the purchase of additional land at the Northern Asylum for the Insane at Traverse City. The Judiciary Committee reported without recommendation the indeterminate sentence bill. In the House the Committee on Ways and Means made a majority report favoring the bill providing a woman's gymnasium at the university.

The Senate committee which has been investigating the affairs of the State prison submitted a voluminous report Wednesday, recommending a general revision of the prison rules. Bills were passed making Labor Day a legal holiday; requiring trolley wires to be strung at a height of at least twenty feet; requiring persons to have resided in their respective counties before being eligible to appointment as deputy sheriffs, thus prohibiting the importation of Pinkerton men; and establishing a Saturday half-holiday for banks. The Elections Committee reported favorably on a bill allowing the use of any voting machine in municipal elections, and the Committee on State Affairs reported without recommendation the House bill establishing an asylum for the insane in the Upper Peninsula. The House passed the bill abolishing days of grace on commercial paper and making paper falling due on Sunday or a legal holiday payable the succeeding day. This bill is to take effect Jan. 1, 1894. The House also passed Senate bills providing for the incorporation of home protector fraternity associations, which embody both building and loan and life-insurance features, and also authorizing the incorporation of gold cure organizations, known as happy home clubs. This bill was amended by limiting the capital stock of such corporations to $25,000.

Thursday the Kline capital punishment bill was made a special order in the House for Wednesday evening. Bills were passed prohibiting the caring for United States prisoners at the Detroit House of Correction; amending the franchise tax law, making it apply to corporations organized outside the State; joint resolution for the submission of a constitutional amendment to allow inmates of the Soldiers' Home to vote where the institution is located. Mr. Chamberlain's bill providing for the organization of companies for the agricultural development of lands in the upper peninsula failed of passage.

Curious Causes of Fire.

Moistened tin turnings and chips have been known to take fire. A rat gnawing at a box of greased-dipped friction matches ignited the lot. A running belt which sagged into a mass of greasy waste set fire to the heap by friction.

A flood burned one factory by causing a pile of iron filings to oxidize so rapidly as to become intensely heated. A match carelessly dropped beneath a lace curtain was stepped upon, ignited, and instantly the drapery was ablaze.

A lens exposed to the sun's rays in an optician's window frequently acts as a burning glass before being noticed. A cockchafer crawled from an oil receptacle to a gas jet, where the creature's oily body took fire, and, falling, spread the flames.

A stream from a fireman's hose started a second fire while putting out the first, the water having penetrated an adjoining building containing quicklime.

A nail glanced from a carpenter's hammer into the conveyor of raw material in a jute factory, rubbed against the drum and produced a spark, which set fire to the place.

Advantages of Good Roads.

A country without roads will remain undeveloped, its hidden treasures stored away. Where poor roads prevail everything else is very apt to be poor, the horse, farmer, and merchant.

If two horses haul the load of four, one wagon haul the load of two, one set of harness haul the load of two, one driver serve for two, and six miles instead of three be made per hour, the aggregate saving would double the net income of the average farmer. This desideratum can only be accomplished by the means of good public roads.

The effect of good public roads upon land value is to increase the value of such lands. Experience has shown that the value of ground is in direct ratio to the good condition of the streets or roads which traverse them.

A road system is the means of facilitating intercourse. Intercommunication is the backbone of business. Good public roads are the primary necessities of civilized life and national prosperity.

Swift.

An earthquake wave once crossed the Pacific in twelve hours, or over six miles a minute.

NAPOLEON ON BOARD SHIP.

A Glimpse of the Emperor as He Was on His Way to Exile at Elba.

The wind was increasing to a gale. Napoleon asked me, laughing, if there was any danger, which was evidently meant to annoy Baron Koller, who was near him and who had no great faith in the safety of ships, and whom he constantly joked on his bad sailorship, as the baron suffered dreadfully from seasickness. He made some observations to me as to our men's allowance of provisions and seemed surprised that they had cocoa and sugar, and asked how long they had had that indulgence.

This evening a small Genoese trading vessel passed near us. I ordered her to be examined, and, as Napoleon was anxious to know the news, I desired the captain to be sent on board. Napoleon was on the quarter deck. He wore a great coat and round hat. As he expressed a wish to question the captain, I sent him to the emperor or on the after part of the quarter deck and afterward ordered him down to my cabin. "Your captain," said he, "is the most extraordinary man I ever met. He put all sorts of questions to me, and without giving me time to reply repeated the same questions to me rapidly a second time."

When I told him to whom he had been speaking, he appeared all astonishment and instantly ran on deck, hoping to see him again, but Napoleon, to his great disappointment, had already gone below. When I told Napoleon the man had remarked the rapidity with which he put questions to him twice over, he said it was the only way to get at the truth from such fellows.

One morning when Napoleon was on deck I ordered the ship to be tacked, and we stood toward the Ligurian coast. The weather was very clear as we approached the land. We had a fine view of the Alps. He leaned on my arm and gazed at them with great earnestness for nearly half an hour; his eye appeared quite fixed. I remarked that he had passed those mountains on a former occasion under very different circumstances. He merely said that it was very true.—Thomas Usher, R. N., in Century.

The Most Beautiful of All Cats.

The Persian cat is born to the happiest fate of any of his family, for, according to the tales of travelers, he is, in his native land, not only loved and cherished, not only well treated and admired, but thoroughly respected, and he has an acknowledged position and rights. In form the bewitching Persian does not greatly differ from the Angora, but the tail is much more effective, for the longest and the thickest set hairs being at the tip, they form a magnificent plume, which the dignified owner carries proudly erect, waving in the air as he moves. In his splendid silken coat is not a trace of wooliness, and it clothes the graceful creature from the tips of his ears to the well "feathered" toes.

Unless some undreamed of feline marvel shall yet be unearthed, this animal must forever be regarded as the perfect flower of the domestic cat family. Not only does he easily surpass all his competitors in beauty and grace, but he possesses charms of disposition and manner and dignity of bearing, and while most affectionate and loving is still self-respecting and independent.—Olive Thorne Miller in Harper's Bazar.

Fraud of Their Professions.

I do not know in recent times a more stirring answer than that of Lacordaire, the famous Dominican, to the court of peers in France, who asked him what his profession was, when he replied simply, "A schoolmaster," unless it be the answer of his friend, the Comte de Montalembert, the noblest specimen, I sometimes think, of the modern French laity, to the same question, "A schoolmaster and a peer of France." Nay, it was but the other day that a learned and humble man of science, who will live in moral history as having declared that he had "no time to make money," began his will with the modest words, so great in their modesty, "I, Louis Agassiz, teacher."—Contemporary Review.

Deceit in Animals.

Swindling and deceit are known among animals. In military stables horses are known to have pretended to be lame in order to avoid going to military exercise. A chimpanzee had been fed on cake when sick. After his recovery he often feigned coughing in order to procure dainties. The cuckoo sometimes lays its eggs in the sparrow's nest, and to make the deception surer it takes away one of the sparrow's eggs.—Current Literature.

The Wearing of Rails.

The latest practice in the economy of rolling stock on railways is to turn the cars at the end of each trip whereby a large percentage of extra wear and tear is saved. Some years ago a portion of the Wabash railroad was laid with old English iron rails and a small part with steel rails from the Carnegie mills. It became necessary after a time to remove some of the main line rails to another part of the road, and it was observed that after relaying them many gave out immediately, while others manifested no signs of wear.

To determine the reason of this apparently unaccountable condition an investigation was ordered, which showed that the road from which the rails had been removed was built in a northwest southeast direction, and in relaying a large number had been turned end for end. Those that had not been so placed exhibited no additional loss by attrition, while the turned rails succumbed in from 50 to 90 days. The conclusion arrived at was that the metal had become polarized from long use when first laid, and that the fiber was broken up by the traffic in the opposite direction.

It was further proved that cast iron wheels generally yielded twice the mileage when the cars were turned at each end of the journey than when they were run backward and forward without reversing. Notwithstanding the value of this discovery, it was not universally utilized, and it is only recently that some of the American railroads have begun to recognize its importance.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Amputation Well Distributed.

"I never see a man ride a bicycle without mentally raising my hat to him," said Luke Cross, who is at the Lacledo. "It looks so easy and seems to come to a man so naturally that when I was advised to ride to get rid of dyspepsia I purchased a machine and had it sent home. Every evening for a month I tried to learn to ride it, and the advice I had tendered me from neighbors on the other side of the fence was sufficient to have educated a man in almost any art or science under the sun. But it failed to teach me how to ride the machine, as did the salesman who had guaranteed that I could ride anywhere in a week. By the time I had cut my face twice and skinned the backs of my hands and the fronts of my shins, I gave it up and sold the machine at half price to my next door neighbor. He had about learned the trick by watching my failures, and his graceful riding is a constant reproach to me. But I still affirm the feat is not so easy as it looks."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Marvelous London.

London is center—aye, soul—of the British empire, and England without the metropolis is "Hamlet" minus the Prince of Denmark.

The traveler who whirls into this vastest of human hives, with its 6,000,000 of inhabitants, cannot be anything but a profoundly impressed spectator.

London contains one-eighth of Great Britain's population, has a larger daily delivery of letters than all Scotland, a birth every four minutes, a death every six, and the lord mayor, "prince of parvenus," holds passing sway over a greater number of his fellow mortals than the king of Holland.

Though this miniature world numbers more Jews than Palestine, more Italians than Rome, more Germans than Hanover, it remains an Anglo-Saxon city.—S. P. Cadman in Goodey's.

SILURIAN SPRING WATER.

NATURE'S OWN. Sarah R. Cole, rendered a verdict of $150 for the plaintiff. This was a Chelsea appeal case, for the expense of bringing for a little daughter of Maine.

Another Chelsea case was put on trial, the case of Ahnemiller vs. Frank Allan. This was a suit for trespass sought to determine the ownership of fifteen acres of huckleberry marsh, including the huckleberry crop of the year. The land in dispute is said to be worth about $75, and both parties claimed to have been in possession since the rightful owners of the land were put on Monday brought in a verdict of six cents for the plaintiff. Aside it may be remarked that the case in dispute was the cause of the organization some years ago of a company to utilize the marsh for peat, because the way the peat didn't prove such a valuable commodity, and the company soon expired.

The case of Nancy Conklin vs. Michigan Central was discontinued without costs.

The entertainment was replete with singing features and kept the large audience convulsed by laughter. A impersonator and humorist who has a brilliant career.—Advertiser, May 13, '93. Mr. Cope will appear at the Town Hall next Tuesday evening under the auspices of the S. C. E.

A melodrama new to Boston is the attraction at the Grand Opera House, and a large gathering Monday decided it to be a success in every particular. In witnessing the piece the actor is taken from Deadwood to New York and back again to Colorado, by way of Chicago.
