WORLD'S FAIR LETTER.

Special Correspondence.
Kaiser Wilhelm could not have picked out a prettier day for his subjects and friends to celebrate the anniversary of his birth, the 15th day of June, and if he had been present at the celebration in this city and the fair, his heart must have swelled with gratitude and joy to know that if his people so honor him while living how much they will revere his memory when he shall have passed away. It was meet that the Germans should set apart this day and keep it as they did. Many of the business places were closed, and flags and banners played an important part in the decorations. But such a parade! Streets were blocked and travel impeded, and all because everybody joined with the sons of the fatherland in making the day one long to be remembered. Singing societies, instrumental music, speech-making all were called in requisition, and at night the festivities were concluded with a magnificent display of fireworks.

The weather has been delightful, and large crowds have taken advantage of it. The turnstiles record the biggest weekly attendance yet.

We have long been accustomed to see Bunker Hill monument in granite, but when we beheld the same, as was the case Saturday night, as one obelisk of fire, words seem inadequate to describe it. Massachusetts is always to the front, even when it comes to brown bread and baked beans, but she fairly outshone herself at the celebration given in commemoration of that revolutionary battle. The governor of the Bay state and staff, arrayed in all the trappings of pomp and ceremony were on hand to keep things from getting dull.

Would that foreign lands, if they have any more people of royal lineage for our "40" to entertain, send us such amiable, agreeable, democratic, sensible princes and princesses as were Eulalia and her husband. She was here such a short time, and yet among all she made hosts of friends. The dedication ceremonies in the Spanish building were rendered more interesting because of her presence.

Ex-President Harrison, Gov. Matthews and many other other distinguished Indiana sons, were present at the dedication of Hoosier's state building. The structure is very comfortable looking, with its broad verandas and spacious halls, and is altogether one of the most inviting and home-like among the many state buildings.

Matters are gradually but surely shaping themselves in the installation of exhibits, and so much has been accomplished in the manufactures building that now Chief Allison can get his much needed rest. This, the largest building in the world, is now completely installed and it is a fair in itself. Italian section shows much from the land of the bandits and very dainty and pretty is the workmanship of the displays made. France seems to have set the pace for other nations to follow for surely it would seem that she had left nothing out. It is magnificent almost beyond description.

There is no need for many who did expect to come to the fair to stay home because of the false reports that have gone out concerning the cost of living here. When a good clean room can be had for $1.00 per day per person, and in some cases less, and meals from 2 cents up, there is no necessity for people remaining home because of those reports. They are absolutely groundless. So come and bring the children and have a good time for world's fairs don't occur every year.

The King's Daughters and Sons discussed the subject of social and moral reform last week in the art palace, and we don't know any better place to put their teachings into practice than right here in Chicago.

The women of Arkansas deserve great credit and praise, for the perseverance and pluck they have exhibited in the finishing of their home, without the aid of the legislature of their state. We Yankees who have never been south only know by tradition of the many beautiful women who reside south of Mason and Dixon's line. At the dedication of the Arkansas building this tradition was made real, for the presence of many beautiful southern women helped to make the exercises more interesting than they otherwise would have been.

"The King of Glory Shall Come In" So sang the chorus in rendering Handel's "Messiah" before an audience of thousands in festival hall. They were assisted by an orchestra of over one hundred instruments, under the able leadership of Prof. Tomlins, and the phrasing, execution and technique of the soloists, especially the tenor, Edward Lloyd, was a great pleasure to listen to.

All the big bugs connected with the fair and many other prominent people endeavored to make the leave taking of the British commissioners one long to be remembered and as pleasant as in the reception given in their honor.

The junketing trip of the Illinois Press association was a success in every way and the reception given in the Illinois state building was everything that could be desired.

While fakirs in all lines are numerous, there is an especial pestilential multitude of those selling pictures, maps and guide books of the grounds. They cry them in your ears at the railroad stations, boat landings, and at the gates outside the grounds, falsely shouting the "Official Guide." If the visitor will bear in mind that there is but one "Official Guide" that it is the only guide sold within the grounds, and await entering the grounds before purchasing, he will avoid a petty imposition. As the genuine "Official Guide" sells for 25 cents, there is not much at stake, but it is just as well to avoid even a small swindle by the outside fakir, if you care for a guide book at all. The genuine guide book is an especial aid for those who wish to make rapid work of seeing the fair.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Before calling on Doctor Hedges, Captain Fox had had a long and, to himself, satisfactory conversation with Uncas of the Montauks.

He had brought from the ship a brilliant uniform, part of the plunder of a Spanish galleon, with a fine sword, a rifle, jewel-bitted dagger, and several wonderful pistols, among them a revolver, as presents to the chief.

As the revolvers now in use were not invented for a century and a half after this, the last named present may seem out of place in the list, but the Portuguese had practical revolvers, very clumsy, of course, a century before the date of our story.

The chief and Fox parted with an understanding that they should meet on the morrow, when the day should be set for dispatching Ralph Denham.

Uncas was so delighted with his presents that he went at once to the inn, got a room, and changed his graceful native costume for the gorgeous dress of a Spanish Major General, sword and all.

As the fishing hut where Captain Denham was at this time was only a mile or so from Sag Harbor, and was the property of Uncas, and provided with sleeping accommodations for one, he always went there when belated or anxious to be in town in the morning, instead of stopping at the inn. He had an Indian's objection to sleeping in houses that were not ventilated by removing the windows and doors.

After surveying himself as well as he could in the little circular mirror with which the room was furnished, Uncas sallied out, his sword making a great clatter behind him, and he bent his steps in the direction of the before mentioned hut, as Squire Condit would put it.

The fire lit by Dinah and Untilla had nearly died out, though there was still a dull glow on the hearth that threw a pulsating, spectral light about the little apartment.

Through the open chinks and doorway Uncas saw this light, but it did not surprise him, for it was not unusual for one of the Montauks to stop there, on his way to or his return from Sag Harbor, to cook his food.

Uncas walked boldly on, his sword making a clatter which to him had all the exciting melody of martial music.

Ralph Denham heard the noise, and concealing himself behind the door, which opened inward, he looked out through the chinks.

The dull light flashed on the scarlet cloak and the gold cords, and it was not till Uncas came in to the open doorway that Ralph recognized him.

The chief on entering closed the door behind him by giving it a kick with his foot; then he walked up to the smoldering fire, placed the scattered brands together, and, by using his Major General's chapeau as a fan, he started up a flame that lit up his Major General's uniform till he looked to be on fire and breaking out in little tongues of flame all over.

Without turning round, Uncas, who now felt particularly important and warlike, said aloud:

"When I am the friend of a white man he knows it, and when I am a foe he knows it. Better for Ralph Denham he had never been born."

"Ralph Denham is dead!" said a deep, sepulchral voice, directly behind the chief.

Uncas was superstitious in his every fiber. Physically there lived no braver man, but in the presence of a danger he could not understand or believed to be supernatural, he was the veriest coward that ever lived.

On turning round, which he did with great rapidity, he saw standing with his back to the door, and the light falling on his pale face and blazing eyes, the erect and resolute form of Ralph Denham.

The chief gasped and staggered back, as far as the contracted walls of the hut permitted. His eyes and every feature denoted the most craven fear, for with the best of reasons he supposed that Ralph Denham was dead, and that this was his specter.

Ralph saw his advantage, and with that promptness and presence of mind for which he was distinguished, he called out, without changing his position, one hand in his breast, holding a pistol, the other behind him similarly employed.

"The dress you wear is the price of my blood; lay down that sword."

With trembling hands the chief unbuckled the belt, and threw the sword on the floor.

"Take off that uniform, it is stained with my blood," said Ralph with the same blood-curdling manner.

Wishing in his heart that he had remained back at the inn, the frightened chief promptly obeyed what he firmly believed was the ghost of his victim, and stood in very scant attire indeed.

"Now, lie down on that bed, and turn your face away," commanded Ralph.

The chief with some evidences of reluctance obeyed, for he now felt convinced that the specter was going to pick up the sword and slay him therewith, or he might prefer to punish him with the jewel-bitted dagger.

This impression was made a certainty in the chief's mind when he heard the ghost picking up the belt.

"I do not fear to die," said the chief. "The Montauks do not turn their backs on death, but you are a spirit and can kill me at any time. Before I die let me get word to my sister and my people."

"My doing that depends on the answers you give me. Will you reply to me truthfully?" asked Ralph.

"If I reply, I can do it in no other way."

"I can tell if you deceive me."

"That power is given only to spirits."

"Will Uncas, chief of the Mohawks, answer me?"

"I will."

"Do not look at me. Close your eyes that you may the better hear my words."

The chief obeyed him.

Ralph's object was to get the chief to confirm the seemingly improbable story of Untilla and Dinah, and at the same time to learn all that Uncas knew about the motives and conduct of Captain Fox.

With a skill that would have excited the admiration of Squire Condit, and which he would have been certain to attribute to his own example, Ralph Denham plied his questions and the chief answered without hesitation, corroborating Untilla and Dinah, and proving to the Captain, beyond all doubt, that the commander of the Wanderer was indeed the infamous Captain Kidd.

So far all had gone well; but it was not in Ralph Denham's nature to continue a deceit after it had assured the good purpose for which he had employed it.

Confident that in any event he had the advantage of this man—he little knew how the terrible ordeal through which he had just passed had weakened him—he determined to reveal the fact that he was in the flesh.

Advancing to the side of the wooden cot on which the chief lay, he said, with much solemnity:

"Uncas of the Montauks, you have answered me truthfully as I know. You planned for my murder, though I never did you a wrong, but, on the contrary, have been ever your friend."

"You won Lea Hedges, the woman I loved," groaned the chief.

"If she preferred me to you, was that my fault?"

Uncas did not answer.

"You have become the partner of a bad man, the worst man that lives today, and in the world where brave spirits dwell the soul of your ancestor, the mighty Wyandach, cannot rest for the misdeeds of his descendant."

"Did he so tell you?"

This was asked with the utmost solemnity; but the sense of honor was so strong in Ralph Denham that he was impressed with the oddity and grotesqueness of the question, to the momentary forgetfulness of the many important things pressing on his attention.

He laughed, but checked himself so suddenly as to increase the specter-like effect of his talk.

"Now, Uncas, you can live to a ripe old age if you promise to do as I say. Will you agree?"

After a few seconds' hesitation, the chief replied:

"I will."

"Good; then you must promise never to see this Capt. Fox again."

"I so promise."

"You must pledge yourself and the warriors of your tribe to help the officers of the Sea Hawk should they call on you?"

"I also promise that."

"And lastly you must give up all thoughts of Lea Hedges, and wish in your heart Ralph Denham was alive."

"I will never speak to Lea Hedges again; but don't ask me the other thing," said the chief, still consistent in his hate.

Ralph now felt that the time had come to discover himself; he imagined that the chief would be delighted to find that this was not a ghost, so he leaned over the cot and said:

"Open your eyes, Uncas, and I look at me."

The chief promptly obeyed.

"Do I look like a dead man?"

"I know you are dead."

"I am not. To-day your sister and here I am in the flesh."

Ralph Denham erring on the side of his own generosity made a mistake. So far Uncas was certain that he had been talking to a specter, but the moment he felt the hot breath on his cheek, realized that his hated rival was before him in the flesh; that his sister and his people had betrayed him; that all his murderous purposes were known, the frightened, fainting devil in his heart leaped into life and heated his blood like molten lava.

Missing out an oath which he had learned from the whites, he bounded like a tiger from the cot, threw his long, strong arms about Ralph Denham, who, unprepared for the furious onset, was borne to the floor.

"You came to me dead, and I'll make you dead!" cried the chief, the foam flying from his lips as if he were a wild animal.

If Ralph Denham in his usual health was matched in strength against the Montauk, the contest would be long in doubt, but would finally be decided in favor of the white man, who had the distinguishing race quality of endurance. Both were young, strong, active and resolute; the one, acted under the destroying influence of passion, the other under the guidance of that reason which generally conquers where the contest is prolonged.

But this contest did not promise to be prolonged. Ralph's weakness alarmed himself. By a fierce effort and superior skill, he threw the Indian back, and fastening his left hand in the red swollen throat he succeeded in getting on his feet.

Expert in the use of his fists about which the Indian knew no more than a woman, Ralph tried hard to fell his opponent by a strong blow, when he would have time to draw one of his pistols, and to use it if need be.

But the Indian eluded him, caught him in his mighty arms and again bore him to the earthen floor.

With a quick clutch the Indian snatched the jewel-bitted dagger from the belt at his side, and he was in the act of raising it above his victim, when a tongue of flame darted from one of the chinks between the logs; the crack of a pistol rang out, and, from the shadowed hand, the dagger dropped to the floor.

With a cry of rage and pain, such as a wounded tiger gives when it turns to the jungle from which the shot came, the chief leaped to his feet and glared about him.

The door was thrown open and with a smoking pistol in her hand, which she had obtained from Dinah, Untilla entered the hut.

Seeing his sister and the old negress the maddened chief would have rushed upon them, so blind was his fury, had not Ralph rose straight before him with a pistol in each hand.

"You hag!" roared Uncas, "and you, you falsest of sisters; this is your work," and he held up his bleeding hand.

"It is my work," replied Untilla, with form erect and eyes blazing with a steadier and more resolute light than his own. "When the chief of the Montauks disgraces his name and the great name of Wyandach, then should I by right of my birth save the honor of my tribe. We have no time for words, Uncas; obey or die. Better you were dead than this disgrace should continue."

"Out, out!" he shouted. "I am still chief of the Montauks, and I stand on the hunting ground of my fathers!"

"A madman cannot be chief of the Montauks. When to-morrow's sun has risen, our people will have disowned you and proclaimed me queen. Already I feel the power that their voices will give, and in advance I shall begin the exercise of my authority." Untilla turned to Ralph Denham and said quickly: "Do not hesitate to shoot that madman down if he does not obey me."

Ralph again raised his pistols and asked:

"What is the order of Untilla?"

"I command that Uncas, no longer chief of the Montauks, lie down on the floor."

"You hear the order; obey or I fire," said Ralph.

A glance told the chief that this was no idle threat, so he shot out another oath and obeyed.

"Now, dot's moah like sinse," croaked Dinah, who, divining Untilla's purpose, groped under the bed and drew therefrom a bundle of rope and an old net, the ruin of a fishing seine.

Ralph Denham watched, while the two women, with wonderful skill and rapidity, fastened the ropes about this unrighteous Samson.

With the captain's assistance they lifted the chief to the cot and arranged the scarlet uniform under his head and shoulders.

Not knowing when she might be called on to exercise her skill, Dinah always went provided with herbs and rude surgical appliances. With much skill she dressed the chief's wounded hand, whispered in an ironical way that he mustn't move about much, and then telling him that she would call professionally in the morning, she wished him refreshing sleep and pleasant dreams, and turning to Untilla and Ralph asked them if they were ready to leave.

While Dinah was dressing the wounded man's hand, Untilla gave Ralph the disguise which the Squire had sent, helped him to assume it, and, at the same time gave a careful report of what had happened at Squire Condit's.

They were about to leave the hut, when Dinah stopped suddenly and said: "Them ez loss blood hez a unger foh watah."

From under the cot she drew an earthen pot and went out. She soon came back with the vessel full of water, and raising the chief's head she made him drink, then she laid the pot within reach.

They covered the fire with ashes, closed the door behind them, and started for Squire Condit's.

Mrs. Condit and Ellen though quite prepared for Ralph's return, could not keep back their surprise at seeing him. They kissed him many times, and in accordance with the Squire's strict orders, they insisted on taking him to his own room.

He wanted a light, but as Squire Condit had given orders to have no light burning there, they refused.

"Where is my father?" asked Ralph—he had always called him by that name.

"He has gone for Valentine and Mr. Hedges," replied Ellen.

At that moment the Squire's step and the Squire's voice were heard without in the garden.

Hard Cider a Fiendish Tiptle.

The man who sells cider doesn't have to get a government license or purchase revenue stamps; all he needs is a keg of the fluid and a dipper and he is ready to scatter destruction and pave the avenues to drunkards' graves at the rate of 5 cents a drink.

The cider that is sold is sometimes sweet and innocent, but generally it is "hard" as a door-knob and a small quantity of it will cause a man to imagine himself a lion tamer in a striped uniform and lead him to elope with his gran'mother. There is no liquor in the entire category which will compare with hard cider; it occupies a sphere peculiarly its own; its lasting qualities are wonderful. If you get intoxicated on it in early manhood you may sober up in old age, but the chances are that you won't. The headache that follows its use is enough to make the heathen rage and the wicken imagine vain things. Something should be done to contract the powers of the dealer in hard cider. In his cheerful, offhand way he is setting traps for the feet of the young and pitfalls for the unwary. It might be possible to urge him to soften his cider without hurting his feelings.—Washington News.

THE PARKS OF CHICAGO

PRIDE AND BOAST OF THE GARDEN CITY.

World's Fair Visitors Will Find Unequaled Pleasure in the Many Charming Acres of Artistic Greenness—Few Cities So Famed—The Cemeteries.

Delightful Breathing Spots.

Chicago correspondence: The "stranger within the gates" who inspects the great park system of Chicago will cease to wonder thereafter why the Garden City is so famed. Few places of its extent have so many delightful breathing spots, and the girle of natural woods that almost shuts in the metropolis seems to be continued along the boulevards and the chain of parks that are the pride and boast of its inhabitants.

Miles of magnificently paved roads devoted exclusively to driving, patrolled by special officers, shaded by leafy trees, and supplied with splendid drinking fountains, link acres of well-kept, artistically laid out areas of greenness, and the World's Fair visitor will find a source of unequalled pleasure and satisfaction in these charming spots, which combine art with the picturesque, and the grandeur of the primeval forest with the refinements of the model villa. The opulent tourist may view these places by following the boulevards through them in a dashing phaeton, but, as a five cent fare will reach any one of them, the less favored or more economical may share the pleasure, and see many things not accessible save to the pedestrian of leisure.

Lincoln Park.

Lincoln Park is the most popular in the city. It is one-half a mile by one and a half miles in extent, and may be reached by the North Division cable cars. It commands a grand panoramic view of the lake, and has within its boundaries scenic beauties that vie with those of the finest parks in the world. Charming lawns and expansive pleasure fields, magnificent groves, winding drives, flower beds of the most unique and elaborate patterns, and fine shrubbery line an artificial river and lake well supplied with pleasure boats. In addition to these, there is an attractive zoological collection, including bears, seals, deer, buffaloes and innumerable smaller representatives of the animal kingdom. Summer evenings free musical concerts are provided, and on set occasions the prismatic electric fountain is put in operation which include a cactus conservatory and other structures filled with an interesting collection of tropical plants. The various boulevards leading from stretch 'of sward, and the breadth of treatment of the landscape artist is further shown in a meandering sheet of water thirteen acres in extent. This park has a fine collection of animals, including 130 full-blooded Norman horses. Over 170,000 plants are set out annually from the nine propagating houses, Washington Park are well worthy a ramble. The Drexel fountain at Thirty-fifth street, one of the costliest in the city, is a prominent feature of the driveways, which abut on some of the finest private residences in the State.

The South Parks cost over $7,000,000. Washington has 371 acres, Jackson 583.

On the West Side.

The west division of the city has three notable parks—Garfield, Douglas and Humboldt. The first named is reached by the Madison street cable cars in about thirty minutes' ride from the center of the city, Douglas by the Ogden avenue cars, and Humboldt by the Milwaukee avenue line. In all these charming spots of verdure every accessory to comfort and entertainment is to be found. All have lakes, breezy pavilions, ample resting benches, rustic seats and arbors, cool nooks and open grass plots. Through the elaborate shrubbery, woods, flower beds, lawns and shady borders wind in and out miles of pleasant walks and driveways, while wood, stone and iron bridges of tasteful designs, drinking fountains and artesian mineral-water wells are scattered about here and there. Garfield has 185 acres, Douglas five acres less, and Humboldt 200. These parks are connected by boulevards, paved smooth as a floor, and lined with stately elms.

Besides these parks, which are under the charge of State Commissioners, there are numerous small city parks, occupying one or two squares of ground, set mainly in the residence portions of the city. The most notable of these is the Lake Park, situated on the lake front. While its improvements are few, its site being made or filled-in ground, it is a pleasant place for a stroll, for a whiff of fresh sea air, or a view of the fashionable equipages to be seen any fine afternoon on Michigan avenue boulevard, which lines the park on the west.

tion for several hours. The art features of this park are quite notable, including a fine reliquary tomb of the cemetery from which the park was transformed, a striking bronze Indian group of life-size figures mounted on a massive granite pedestal, a statue of Schiller, the German poet, a Lincoln monument, the Bates drinking fountain, the La Salle memorial, and the celebrated equestrian monument of General Grant.

The south parks embrace Washington and Jackson, a portion of the latter being the site of the World's Fair. Washington Park is a little north and west of the Exposition, and may be reached by the various lines of transportation leading to that place. It has 100 acres of meadow, a famous

SWAMP-ROOT CURED ME.

La Grippe! Grip! Grip! After Effects Cured.

Mr. Digger writes—"I had a bad attack of the Grippe; after a time caught cold and had a second attack, it settled in my kidneys and liver, and Oh! such pain and misery in my back and legs. The physicians' medicine and other things that I used made no impression, and I continually grew worse until I was a physical wreck, and given up to die. Father bought me a bottle of Dr. Kilmer's SWAMP-ROOT, and before I had used all of the second bottle I felt better, and to-day I am just as well as ever. A year has passed and not a trace of the Grippe is left. SWAMP-ROOT saved my life!"

D. H. BIGLER, Hulmeville, Pa. Jan. 10th, 1893.

DROPSY! DROPSY! DROPSY!

Suffered Three Years.

"Respected Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. My wife had suffered for three years with Dropsy, during that time she was attended by five different physicians, none of whom helped her for longer than a few days. We also used besides, more than twenty different remedies, but nothing would help.

Then we used your SWAMP-ROOT, and after she had used three bottles relief was apparent, hence she continued to take it until she had used twenty-five One dollar bottles. Now she is healthy and strong, as she never was before.

She will be forty-one years old on the 9th of next March and next to God she owes her life to SWAMP-ROOT. I send you this testimony and enclose herewith a Photograph of my wife. Your true friend, HERMAN BROERING, Feb. 22, 1893. Loraines, Shelby Co., Ohio.

SCORES MEET DEATH.

AWFUL DISASTER AT THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Ford's Old Theater Collapses—Over Five Hundred Government Employees in the Ruins—Hardly a Man Escaped Injury—Intense Excitement and Confusion.

Awful Scene of Death.

Death visited the national capital Friday in its most terrible form and reaped a mighty harvest. Ford's Theater, where a little over a quarter of a century ago a tragedy startled the nation, was the scene of the black angel's visit. Without a moment's warning the building collapsed, and 500 Government clerks and a cellar full of laborers were buried in the awful mass of wreckage which was piled in the cellar. The front half of all three floors fell, carrying everything to the bottom.

For a moment all was still. Then the air was split by the shrieks and groans of the frightened, wounded, and dying hundreds who, like a mass of worms, struggled, twisted, and fought to free themselves from one another and from heavy iron beams and timbers and furniture and government records which pinned them to their places. The people in the neighborhood were for the moment stunned. The horror of it all had robbed them of their senses. Then in a few moments, but what to the wretches pinioned in death's embrace seemed ages, the truth burst upon their befuddled brains, and they joined their cries with the unfortunates within the collapsed building. Then, dividing, some rushed for help, some ran to the sink-hole of death itself to lend their hands, while others, with selfish regard for their own safety and curiosity, stood where they were to look upon the scene.

With the speed of the electric messenger the news seemed to fly from man to man throughout the city, and by the time the first ambulance reached the street that fronted the theater the thoroughfare was choked with people. It was like breaking into a mob to get through the crowd to the building, for many there had fathers, husbands, brothers, sons and sweethearts in the wreck, and they fought to retain the places they had gained and fought to get nearer. Meanwhile the cries of the wretches within the trap—for it was but little else—were becoming weaker. Many whose voices had blended with the rest at first had died a miserable death, others had fainted from fatigue. Some in their terror jumped from the third story windows and were crushed into a mass of lifeless pulp on the concrete below.

At the time this dispatch was sent out it was impossible to tell how many had been killed outright, but the number was conservatively placed at seventy-five. Many others will die.

Awful Tangle of Debris.

The tangle of stuff inside of the building that had to be cleared away in getting at bodies was terrible. Girders, bricks, beams, desks, furniture, all were inextricably piled together. Several hundred men were at work clearing away, heedless of the danger that menaced them from the possibility of falling walls. It was a difficult as well as dangerous task, but there was far less confusion than one would have expected. Men turned pale and sick at the horrible spectacle presented by the injured. General Schofield promptly ordered two troops of cavalry from Fort Meyer, just across the river, and two companies of infantry from the Arsenal to the scene of the disaster. The Secretary of the Navy also ordered out all the naval medical officers stationed there, and opened the naval hospital to receive the injured. The Commandant of the navy yard was ordered to render all assistance in his power, and every hospital in the city was called into requisition to care for the wounded.

Cause of the Accident. An investigation of the cause of the accident discovered that it was apparently due to criminal carelessness. A number of laborers were at work beneath the first floor excavating for an electric plant. The building rested on underpinning and the earth, and as the earth was dug away the pressure of the building rested on the unsupported beams of the first floor. The weight beams of the first floor, and the floors collapsed, and fell into the excavation, burying the laborers and clerks beneath them.

The building was acquired by the Government some years ago because of its historical associations, and, although it had been condemned as unsafe and it had been condemned for which it was unsuitable for the purpose for which it was occupied, sentiment kept it unoccupied. The floors were heavily changed. The records of the pension loaded with the records of the War Department. The clerks employed there were all men.

Irresistible.

A simple argument, stated in simple language, with sincere feeling behind it, is often more effective than anything which orators practice under the name of eloquence. A good example is furnished in the memoirs of Jefferson Davis. A young woman wrote to him: "Dear Mr. President, I want you to let Jeems C., of company one, fifth South Carolina Regiment, come home and get married. Jeems is willin', I is willin', his mammy she is willin', but Jeems' Captain he ain't willin'. Now when we are all willin' 'ceptin' Jeems' Captain, I think you might let up and let Jeems come. I'll make him go straight back when he's got married and fight just as hard as ever."

Mr. Davis wrote on the letter, "Let Jeems go."

The Extinct Northern "Sea Cow."

In the year 1754 the Bering explorers discovered gigantic species of rytime, or "North-rn sea cow." These enormous manatees were similar in general habits to those of the South American coast and were from twenty to thirty feet in length and from ten to twenty feet in girth. They were very stupid, harmless beasts, and lived by browsing on seaweeds and other marine growths near the land. The sailors were not slow in finding out that a sea cow steak beat seal meat "all hollow." From 1754 until 1768 they were the principal food of the sailors and explorers on our Western coast. This being the case, it is not at all surprising that the Northern sea cow never a very numerous species, should become extinct in the short space of fourteen years. The last of the giant manatees was killed in September, 1768, a few months less than fourteen years after the discovery of the first one.—St. Louis Republic.

That Terrible Scourge.

Fever and ague, and its congener, bilious remittent, besides affections of the stomach, liver and bowels, produced by miasmatic air and water, are both eradicated and prevented by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a purely vegetable elixir, indorsed by physicians, and more extensively used as a remedy for the above class of disorders, as well as for many others, than any medicine of the age. A languid circulation, a torpid state of the liver, a want of vital stamina, are conditions peculiarly favorable to malarial diseases. They are, however, surely remedied by the great preventive, which, by invigorating the system and endowing it with regularity as well as vigor, provides it with a resisting power which enables it to withstand disorders, not only of a malarial type, but a host of others to which feeble and ill-regulated systems are subject. The Bitters are a safe as well as searching eradicator, and have widely superseded that dangerous drug, quinine, which palliates but does not eradicate malaria.

Beer in Bavaria.

Bavaria beats the rest of Germany in the production of beer, its breweries turning out a supply equal to 260 quarts per inhabitant per annum. And there is less drunkenness in Bavaria than in prohibition Maine.

HELP IS WANTED

by the women who are ailing and suffering, or weak and exhausted. And, to every such woman, help is guaranteed by Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For young girls just entering womanhood; women at the critical "change of life"; women approaching confinement; nursing mothers; and every woman who is "run-down" or overworked, it is a medicine that builds up, strengthens, and regulates, no matter what the condition of the system.

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and bracing nerve, and the only guaranteed remedy for "female complaints" and weaknesses. In bearing-down sensations, periodical pains, ulceration, inflammation, and every kindred ailment, if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

A Legend About Cholera.

Here is an Eastern legend that is timely.

One day the angel of death visited a country in Asia. The king of the country asked him what plague he brought under his sable wings.

"The cholera," answered the messenger.

"And how many victims will the plague claim?"

"Six thousand."

Cholera raged throughout the king's domains. Twenty-five thousand people died.

Some time after the king saw the angel of death again.

"You did not keep your word," he said; "you promised me the cholera would take but six thousand of my subjects. I have lost twenty-five thousand."

"I did keep my word," answered the somber enemy. "Cholera killed but six thousand in your kingdom."

"And the other 19,000, of what did they die?"

"Of fear."—New York World.

A Boom for Jerusalem.

A real-estate boom has struck Jerusalem. It seems almost sacrilegious that "tracts" of "Holy Land" are to be dressed up in the expletives of real-estate advertising. "Keep your eye on Bethlehem!" for instance. But money conquers all things, including sentiment.—Cincinnati Post.

Chelsea High School Commencement Exercises Held Last Night.

Last evening at the Town Hall occurred the graduating exercises of the Chelsea High School. The class numbered seven, composed of the following young people: Misses Ella L. Morton, Luella C. Townsend, Katy M. Staffan, Anna Beissel, Matie Conaty, Nora Miller and Mr. Julius Schmid.

After their years of hard and diligent research after knowledge it was indeed, a proud moment for them when they marched onto the beautifully decorated stage.

The exercises opened with a march, "Templeton" by the orchestra, after came the invocation by Rev. L. N. Moon.

The literary part of the program was opened by the salutatory by Miss Ella Morton. She spoke of the night of long ago, of the glad salutation, "Peace on earth, good will toward men," God's way of breaking the good news to men, and how, since that hallowed night, men of all nations had given salutation to brother men. She asks the mighty world if there is room and welcome for all the young lives that are about to cross her threshold; and that they may be made to feel that they are wanted. They will make no rash vows for they are sure to make many grievous mistakes, but only ask for kindly judgment. They expect so much from the world. Surely from all her hoarded store there is enough to give freely to suit each taste, to satisfy each heart. And of the future they ask what is in store for them; if all their days will be bright, cloudless days, and all their nights, peaceful, moonlight, starlight? They would have it so. Or will there be dark days and starless nights, when not one ray of hope shall burst forth to view. But they cannot have it thus. Their hearts are so full of youth, their eyes so blinded with joy.

The oration, "National Progress Due to Education" given by Julius Schmid, was a masterly effort and was well delivered. He spoke of the present age being resplendent in works of nature, science and art, then showing that it was not always so in the past centuries, he proved that this condition was only reached through perseverance and trials. He thinks the true foundation of our government was laid when our forefathers saw fit to insert the clause providing for a free educational system. He illustrated the truth of this by comparing our nation with others; India, with her castes, superstitions and Buddhism; China, with the light of twenty-three centuries, still remaining the dark abode of heathenism and idolatry, thus proving that the progress of our nation is due to the education of her people.

Miss Anna M. Beissel read a pretty little rhyme, a parody on "We are Seven." It ran as follows: One, a blue eyed senior girl, upon being asked her number of classmates, answered "Seven in all," and in a bright and winsome way prophesied the future of each one, but still clung to the idea that, though separated, they were seven in number.

Miss Matie Conaty read an essay entitled "Ambition." It began by supposing that if every one was of equal wealth, so that none could be envious of others good fortunes, then perhaps, there would be time for more kindnesses, more tenderesses; but as it is, everyone is ambitious to surpass everyone else, and so there are continual strivings. Ambition leads people on—not the higher ambition—but the desire to have more than other people. There are few but who are ambitious of distinguishing themselves. Even the beggar takes delight in his superiority over someone else, who may be in some respects beneath him. Even the conquests of the heroes of Oriental nations were prompted by ambition. Ambition crushes many noble emotions and the simple folk who live for home and heaven, grow fewer every day.

The orchestra then played a waltz entitled "Redwing."

Miss Katy M. Staffan told a quaint story entitled "Which?" The story told of the souls standing before the god of destiny, each receiving his allotted place on earth. All turned away satisfied, but one, not liking the position he was to fill, seemed downcast. The god, knowing he would learn the bitterness of the lesson, consented to let him have his own way. Consequently from a little child he had everything which heart could wish, and grew into a selfish man, loved by none, and at last, in despair, threw away his life. Again the soul stood before the god saying there was more honor in woman's sphere, and again it was given its own way. The beautiful child, surrounded by every luxury grew into a haughty and selfish woman, who found no pleasure in life, and once more the soul stood before the god, willing to abide by its judgment. This time the ragged child stood by its mother's knee receiving lessons of lasting value, and when that mother passed away, the child, by its own exertions, grew into a great and influential man, beloved by all who knew him.

The next was an essay read by Miss Nora Miller, on the class motto, "Rowing, not Drifting." She said that the moment we entered upon the scene of life, making for ourselves a character which will render us universally esteemed, or on the other hand will degrade ourselves by filling one of the low places, we enter into a rough and dangerous stream, and only by skillful rowing can we keep ourselves from drifting where we would not wish to go. We cannot stay where we are, for "Onward" is the language of creation. If we are content to drift, we should not complain if we are carried into the whirlpool of Destruction. To have a name that is of any worth, we must make it ourselves, and this can be done only by rowing patiently, with a firm hand and a clear conscience.

Miss Louella Townsend, in well chosen words, gave the valedictory. She spoke of her class-mates soon having to separate, after having toiled together for so many years. She reminded them that their education was not finished, but about to begin; that this school had only laid the foundation of the temple of knowledge, and whether the structure ever became higher, remained for the future to tell. She spoke a few encouraging words to her schoolmates, and expressed sadness at having to part with the teachers and being forced to lose their wise counsel and guidance. She thought the saddest parting of all would be of the class-mates, who had been together for so many years, but who had met as one for the last time.

The class song was sung by the members of the class. This was followed by the presentation of diplomas by Prof. A. A. Hall. The orchestra then rendered another selection, and the audience was dismissed with the benediction by Rev. W. Whitcomb.

Chauncey, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Staphis, died Sunday, June 18th. Some three weeks ago he was taken sick with diphtheria, but he got along so well that his recovery was never doubted, in fact he was so well that last week he went for a ride nearly every day, but on Saturday a change was noticed. Medical aid was at once called but it was of no avail. He was a boy of a mechanical turn of mind, and though only fourteen years of age his work displayed skill. His was a sunny disposition and he had many friends among both old and young. On account of the original disease a private funeral was held Monday afternoon, and his remains were laid at rest in Mt. Olivet cemetery. The sorrowing parents have the sympathy of the entire community.

Tom McNamara, of Chelsea, passed through here Monday evening with a covered wagon, band of horses and everything smacking of genuine gypsy style. Tom was bound eastward, selling and trading horses and making things lively wherever he goes.—Dexter News.

We copy the following from the Scientific American, in regard to freckles: Some people are born with freckles and others have freckles thrust upon them. The former class might as well accept their freckles as a dispensation of Providence, for nothing can be done for them. The latter can always get rid of their affliction by using a couple of drachms of sal ammoniac with an ounce of German cologne, the solution mixed with a pint of distilled water. Applied two or three times a day, states one of our contemporaries, it will cure the worst case of acquired freckles on record. Freckles are caused by the action of sunlight on the coloring matter in the skin,

WHAT

Zinc? What is Lead?
Zinc is a very hard metal.
Lead is a soft metal.
The oxide of zinc makes a paint that is too hard for outside work,
The carbonate of lead makes a paint that is too soft and that will chalk and rub off.
We combine the two metals and strike a happy medium which we call Peninsular Ready-mixed Paint.
It will not chalk or rub off, will not crack or peel off.
It is the paint that wears the best. Guaranteed in old strictly pure lead, zinc and linseed oil. Mnf'd by Peninsular White Lead and Color Works, Detroit.

Why Dexter Mourns.

The following comes to us from an unknown source, but we are constrained to suspend the rules and give it place, because of its noble sentiment and tender pathos, no less than for its literary merit. Except as to the name, it is a faithful copy:

Dexter June 4 1893.

The Handsome Laidy in Dexter.
All Dexter is mourning the Loss of Butefull Mrs Mikel Muggs as she had to Leave her Husband on accounts of his Drinking is not enough my Dear friends for Dexter to mourn for such a Butefull creatures Life to Be wrecked By a Drunkard Husband Mrs Muggs was Loved By every one who knew her for her gentle Modest ways and very much refined manner the Dexter Boys would Like to give Mikel Muggs a good Lynching for macking his Butefull wife so much trouble any Man that could go home Drunk to such a Butefull creature ought to be Lynched

Yes, talk up your town and work it up. It has good schools, good churches good business houses, managed by good business men. Talk it up. Don't grumble if everything is not up to your ideas especially if you do nothing yourself to help make the town. Don't tell strangers that it is the worst place you know of to bring up a child in. Give liberal encouragement to every useful and creditable enterprise in your midst, for as effect follows cause, so sure will such a course repay every citizen. You cannot live entirely to yourself. If you see a needed improvement demand it, talk it up vigorously, until a storm of public sentiment completes the work; but if you cannot have all that is needed remember that in such respect it is like a thousand other places in the land and be content. Keep talking, keep encouraging, but don't grumble, don't stop because some mummy, out of whom has withered all spirit and love of advancement, moans out of sepulchral "it won't pay you." Show to your live men that it will pay, and leave to the mummy his embalmed and swaddled dust and stupidity, and by and by you will see the results, and pluck the ripe fruit of your labor.—Livingston Herald.

Unadilla.

The roads are being improved about here.

A. G. Watson is serving on jury at Howell this week.

Mrs. S. G. Ives, of Chelsea, is stopping with her sister Mrs. W. S. Livermore.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Marshall, of Stockbridge, spent Monday and Tuesday with friends and relatives here.

Mr. John Dunning, his daughter Flora and baby visited relatives at Decatur and Sturgis last week.

Several young ladies went bathing in the deep hole at the mill pond last Monday, and one reports a narrow escape from drowning; she probably got the top of her head a little wet.

Children's Day was observed here last Sunday. Rev. S. T. Morris, of Dexter, delivered a short address.

"It has cured others and will cure you" is true only of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The motto suits the medicine and the medicine the motto. What better assurance could you have that a remedy will cure you, than the fact that it has cured multitudes of others?

A Literary Sensation.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" has certainly "broke loose!" The copyright on this most famous of American novels, by Mrs. Stowe, has recently expired, which frees its publication from the monopoly of the high priced publishers, and though in anticipation of this fact they have within a few months greatly reduced its price, now that it is really "unchained" the consequences are something surprising. John B. Alden, publisher, of New York, issues several editions, selling them only direct (not through agents or book sellers); one in good type, paper covers, for 5 cents, sent post-paid, or the same bound in cloth for 10 cents with postage 7 cents extra; also an excellent large-type edition, on fine paper, handsomely bound in cloth, for the price of 25 cents postage 10 cents. Surely a copy of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will soon be in every home where it is not already. Mr. Alden sends a 32-page pamphlet describing many of his publications free, or a catalogue of 123 pages of choice books, a veritable "literary gold mine" for book-lovers, for 2 cents. Address JOHN B. ALDEN, Publisher, 57 Rose st., New York.

Homes for World's Fair Visitors.

In view of the crowded condition of Chicago and its hotels during the World's Fair period, Poole Bros. have done a public service in issuing a very carefully prepared list of the homes in Chicago that are thrown open to the public upon this occasion. The list is complete and gives the name, location number of rooms, etc. so that correspondence may be had and arrangements made before the visitor comes to Chicago. This list is accompanied by splendid sectional maps of the city on a large scale, by which the location of every house can be accurately found. Copies can be obtained at the Michigan Central Ticket office at the publishers price. 50 cents—less really than the value of the maps themselves.

ARMY BILL IS BEATEN.

GERMAN ELECTION THWARTS EMPEROR WILLIAM.

Alarm in France Over Crop Failure—Bandit Starr in a Tight Place—Tried to Cut Her Witch Vein—Minister Changes Faith.

Against the Kaiser.
A BERLIN dispatch says: Returns from seventy districts indicate that thirty-six have been carried by parties opposed to the army bill, fifteen have been carried for the parties favoring the bill, and nineteen are in doubt between the Government and the opposition parties, with the chances in favor of the majority of them strongly in favor of the Government. The Government parties have lost three of their former seats. In Berlin not a single candidate pledged to support the army bill has gained even the barren honor of a re-ballot. The prospect of a Government majority appears to be vanishing. Roughly speaking, the Socialist vote shows a great increase everywhere. The Radical vote has diminished greatly, chiefly, it would seem, because the better class of the Radical party voted for the anti-Semitic candidates. Not 10 per cent. of the votes cast in Berlin were given in favor of the army bill. Seldom has the city spoken in such emphatic tones. The provincial returns appear to be equally emphatic in the same direction. The great success of the Social Democrats has caused a profound sensation.

Fodder Famine Is Threatened.
THE failure of the green crops in many districts in France, owing to the intense heat, promises to cause a fodder famine during the winter and prices are rapidly rising. The Minister of Husbandry has ordered the Prefects of the different departments to report to the ministry with the utmost dispatch the sources of grain and fodder in their respective districts, and whether any supplies are available for the relief of the districts more sorely tried by the long drought. Great numbers of cattle are being slaughtered, and the cattle market there is glutted. The opinion is that American fodder would find a splendid market if sent quickly.

BREVITIES.

PRESIDENT CARNOT, of France, is ill with liver complaint.

FREDERICK TILLMAN, a wealthy merchant of La Crosse, Wis., died from sunstroke.

THE Detroit gas war culminated in the City Council revoking all the franchises under which the Detroit Gas Company is operating.

THE United States steamers Ragner, Mohican and Corwin, and the British man-of-war Petrel, are at Sitka awaiting orders before proceeding to Behring Sea.

THE action of the New York clearing-house in arranging to issue certificates in case of emergency is well received at Omaha, Cleveland and Philadelphia.

WILLIAM Z. McDONALD, State Inspector of workshops and factories in Ohio, has been suspended by Gov. McKinley because of a shortage said to be $4,061.31.

SONTAG, the California bandit, is, by his true name, John Contant, 32 years old, and was born in Mankato, Minn., where his stepfather keeps the Sontag Hotel.

IRA W. ATKINS, a youth of 19 years, who committed suicide at Dubuque, Iowa, had been suffering from injuries received by being hit on the head with an icy snow ball last winter.

CASHER JOSEPH W. WORK and Col. Jonas H. French, directors of the defunct Maverick Bank, of Boston, Mass., will be arraigned on the indictments found against them by the Grand Jury.

THE members of Old Farnham Post, at New York, recently expelled from the G. A. R., have decided to appeal to the National Encampment of the Grand Army, which meets at Indianapolis in September.

BESSIE HANSON, the 6-year-old daughter of Lewis Hanson, at Racine, died of brain trouble. It is alleged that the child had been locked in a dark room by her school teacher and frightened half to death recently.

WESLEY SHAW, at Buchanan, Ga., ordered an old woman, believed by the negroes to be a witch, off his land. She followed him to "pick up his tracks." He, to prevent being bewitched, attempted to cut her "witch vein." Instead, he struck her jugular vein and she is dying, and he is in jail.

THE Rev. W. D. Morgan, pastor of Guilford Avenue M. E. Church, and one of the leading ministers in the Baltimore Methodist Conference, has left the ministry and the Methodist Church, and applied to Bishop Paret for orders as a priest in the Protestant Episcopal Church. He was quietly confirmed by Bishop Paret.

HENRY STARR, the notorious Indian Indian Territory train robber, is surrounded by deputy marshals and a sheriff's posse at a point on Hog Creek, about twenty miles from Nowata, the bandit's home. Unless the bandit weakens, Starr will be taken either dead or alive. The reward of $15,000 is the cause of the active movement against the bandits.

EASTERN.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER is reported to have purchased the St. Luke's Hospital property opposite his residence on Fifth avenue, New York City, for $2,400,000.

H. E. HOLMES, of the Pittsburg, Pa., Fuel Company, wrote a note Friday saying he would end his life by jumping into Niagara River. He has not been seen since.

EX-LABOR COMMISSIONER PECK, of New York, indicted for destroying public papers on which his report on wages and labor was compiled, is reported to have forfeited his bail bond and sailed for Europe.

JOSIAH B. KENDALL, a Boston real estate dealer, has failed. His liabilities are $270,446, while the assets are valued at $33,000 and a disputed claim against the Boston Water Power Company for $11,000.

TEN animals of a herd of blooded Jersey cattle belonging to Senator Redfield Proctor, of Vermont, were found dead in their pasture, and a valuable bull from the herd of ex-Vice President Morton was found nearly dead; and the belief is that the cattle were poisoned.

THE immense coal trestles and iron storing sheds of the Philadelphia and Reading, at Buffalo, were almost destroyed by fire. The iron shed contained about 60,000 tons of anthracite coal which continued to burn fiercely. Nearly 100 car-loads were destroyed. The fire was started by a spark from a locomotive. Loss, $500,000; insurance unknown. The stables of the Winnipeg, Man., Street Railway Company were destroyed by fire. Sixty-one horses perished. Loss, $20,000.

THE six-story brick building at 10 and 12 Montgomery street, New York, proved a death-trap at 8:30 Tuesday morning, when a fire broke out, precipitating a panic among the 200 men and women employed in the "sweater" shops on five of the six floors. Five persons are known to have been killed and a number injured. The bodies of the killed were so horribly mangled that it was a difficult matter to identify them. One body was that of a woman about 30 years old, another that of a man 40 years old and a third that of a man 45 years old. All of the occupants of the building were Polish Hebrews. The fire started on the first floor of the building, it is supposed from a stove used for heating irons. The stove was near the stairway, and in a few seconds the flames shot up as far as the second and third floors, cutting off the escape of many of the unfortunate inmates of the building. When the alarm of fire was sounded in the building there was a wild rush of the men, women and children who worked in the different sweater shops. All got out safely except those reported killed and half a dozen who were injured. One woman jumped from the first-story window and fractured her legs and a man received a severe scalp wound by jumping. Many people suffered slight injuries in scrambling down the fire escape.

WESTERN.

FOUR armed and masked men stopped a Missouri Pacific express train in the suburbs of Omaha, but were scared off before they had secured anything.

ANNIE E. MURPHY, or Doolittle, the notorious woman forger, has been convicted at St. Cloud, Minn. The prisoner fainted when the verdict was announced.

AMELIA C. EDWARDS, who is said to have been a female lobbyist of the Minnesota Legislature, has sued Senator Henry Keller, of Sauk Center, for $100,000 damages for assault.

GOV. BOIES has appointed a large delegation to represent Iowa in the convention to be held at Lincoln, Neb., to discuss the plan for building a line of railroad from the Dakotas to a proposed deep water harbor on the Gulf of Mexico.

A MOTOR car of the White Line Street Railway, Dayton, O., was struck and demolished at a railroad crossing. Martin Rudolph, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, was killed, and William Harkrider, the motorman, was seriously injured.

PETER ZAUER, Joseph Maul, Mrs. Durn and Mrs. Martin went out to the two-mile crib at Chicago in a row-boat. While at the pier, after the others had returned to the boat, Mrs. Martin attempted to step in and capsized it. The men succeeded in righting the boat, but in the meantime the two women drowned.

AFTER ten months of lawlessness, with a record of killing three men and wounding several, John Sontag, the California bandit, has been mortally wounded and jailed at Visalia, and hundreds of men are in pursuit of his partner, Evans, who abandoned his gun and took to flight, after being severely wounded.

SIX Australian boomerang throwers who are en route to the World's Fair and gave an exhibition at St. Louis, were all brought up in the police court the other morning. A negro gave them two bottles of whiskey. Two of the men quarreled over it and to settle the dispute began beating the two women in the troupe.

FARGO in its hour of need appeals to the American people, for aid for its hundreds of destitute citizens. So widespread and keen is the distress that the contributions from North and South Dakota are only a drop in the bucket. People who owned homes have no shelter except that hastily provided them by the people of Fargo. Their donations cannot last more than a day or two. Clothing, food, building material, and carpenters are earnestly desired. The total loss is now placed at $3,500,000, with $1,200,000 insurance.

CAR NO. 693 of the Ashland avenue line, Chicago, in charge of Driver Nicholas Janowski and Conductor John Olsen, left the track on the viaduct at Sangamon and Kinzie streets Monday evening and crashed into the stone curbing. The car ran 200 feet down the thirty-eight-degree descent from the viaduct and was traveling at the rate of twenty miles an hour when it was shivered against the stone curbing. Half a hundred people were on the car at the time of the accident, and of these one was perhaps fatally and a score more maimed and bruised.

NEAR Lemont, Ill., in a conflict Friday between strikers and employees of the drainage canal six or more men were killed and a score wounded. There were two battles, both being caused by the colored workmen, armed and led by the contractors, firing into crowds of strikers from Lemont and Lockport who were marching unarmed to Romeo to hold a conference. A warrant has been issued for the arrest of J. Locker, a contractor, who was one of the leaders. At midnight, as a result of the critical situation, and in response to telegrams from the sheriffs of Cook, Will and DuPage counties, Gov. Altgeld ordered the Second and Third Regiments of the Illinois National Guard to the scene of the trouble. Four of those who were wounded will probably die.

THE "BLACK CROOK" continues to be the attraction at McVicker's Theater, in Chicago, and though it has just closed the eleventh week of its engagement, the popular interest remains undiminished. A clergyman recently remarked in regard to the present presentation: "I am no longer a young man, and I have seen much of the world on both sides of the water, yet I can say frankly that it is one of the most magnificent spectacles I have ever witnessed. There is nothing in the play that does not appeal directly to our love of the beautiful, and the individual who finds evil in it looks first into his own heart." "The Black Crook" will conclude its engagement at McVicker's Theater July 1. Seats can now be secured for any of the remaining performances by addressing H. G. Sommers, treasurer. New scenery is being painted by Manager McVicker for the forthcoming production of "The Old Homestead," which will commence its engagement at McVicker's July 3.

HOBBS & TUCKER, private bankers at Albany, Ga., have failed. Their deposits aggregated $80,000.

IN the City of Mexico the report is again current that the government is negotiating for a loan of $2,500,000 sterling.

WILLIAM SHORTER, a negro, was taken from a train near Winchester, Va., and lynched. He was on his way to his trial for assault.

VIN and Elbert Longley, aged 11 and 17 years, respectively, sons of E. W. Longley, a prominent citizen of Little Rock, Ark., were accidentally drowned.

COL. LOUIS OCHOA was arrested by the authorities of Brownsville, Tex., upon the charge of robbery and desertion from the Mexican army. When arrested about $16,500 belonging to the army was found upon him.

WASHINGTON.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND turned the wheel again Monday morning and ground out another batch of appointments. The full list follows: James E. North, Collector of Nebraska; Harry Alyan Hall, Attorney of the United States for the Western District of Pennsylvania. Postmasters: Illinois—Willis L. Grimes, Batavia; Samuel P. Tufts, Centralia; Isaac Fielding, Champaign; James S. Wilson, Mount Carmel; John W. Potter, Rock Island, Indiana—Joseph T. Dilley, Mitchell, Kansas—Louis Sarbach, Holton; George Van Cleave, Phillipsburg, Missouri—Jacob D. Allen, Benton; S. W. Hurst, Tipton, Montana—John N. Harder, Castle; F. W. Bucksen, Kallspeil, South Dakota—George C. Kasler, Hill City.

THE President has made the following appointments:

William G. Crawford of Louisiana, to be Deputy Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-office Department; Rodolphus O. Randall of Alabama, to be Collector of Internal Revenue for the District of Alabama; Charles E. Gorman of Rhode Island, to be Attorney of the United States for the District of Rhode Island; Norborne T. N. Robinson of Louisiana, to be Assistant Solicitor of the Treasury.

Peter H. Penot of Indianapolis, Ind.; Joshua Hutchins, of Athens, Ga., and Clem V. Rogers of Indian Territory to be appraisers of the value of houses, lands, or improvements occupied by intruders or unauthorized persons within the Cherokee outlet, under the provisions of the act of Congress, approved March 3, 1893.

To be consuls of the United States: Warner S. Kinkead of Kentucky, at South Hampton, Fla.; Norbert Harris of Alabama, at Leeds, E. I.; Lucien J. Walker of Alabama, at Corral, E. I.; Marcelina L. Paris of Arkansas, at Trinidad, West Indies; Lars S. Regna of Iowa, at Rotterdam, The Netherlands; Edward Downes of Connecticut, at Amsterdam, The Netherlands.

Daniel W. Maratta of North Dakota to be Consul-General of the United States at Melbourne, Australia.

A THRILLING sequel to the Ford Theater calamity was enacted late Monday afternoon, when, for a time, it looked as though an indignant and angry mob would seize Col. Frederick C. Ainsworth, of the United States army and hang him to the nearest lamp-post. The brothers, fathers, sons, and other relatives and friends of those recently sacrificed in the Government death-trap were the ones who clamored for Ainsworth's life. If it had not been for the self-possession and daring of one of the jurors, Mr. B. H. Warner, one of the most substantial citizens of Washington, there is little doubt that the relatives of the dead clerks would have lynched him. The clerks consider that, in his capacity of officer in charge of the building, Col. Ainsworth is responsible for the calamity, and that by his presence at the inquest he sought to intimidate witnesses whose testimony would be inimical to him.

FOREIGN.

DR. EDWARD MCGLYNN, on his way to Rome, was the guest in London of Cardinal Vaughan.

THOMAS SEXTON has reconsidered his intention to withdraw from the British House of Commons, the Irish members having rescinded the resolutions retiring him from the Freeman's Journal Board of Control.

JAMES GORDON BENNETT, proprietor of the New York Herald, was dangerously injured on Wednesday in Paris, when he fell from a coach on which he was riding and was so severely hurt that medical attention was at once required. His condition growing worse, Doctors Robin and Ledentu performed an operation, with a view of relieving him, but his condition is now dangerous and the doctors declare that it is critical.

IN GENERAL.

A FISHERMAN at Canso, N. S., claims to have found a bottle containing a note saying that the steamer Hugga sank June 12 with 217 passengers on board. The story is discredited at Halifax.

CARDINAL GIBBONS, in an interview, declares himself in favor of opening the World's Fair on Sunday. He says Catholics believe the Sabbath to be not only a day of rest and religious observance, but also a day on which innocent recreation is allowable.

CANADIAN Presbyterians have a heresy case, charges having been preferred against Rev. Dr. John Campbell, Professor of Church History in the Montreal Presbyterian College. Dr. Campbell recently delivered a lecture in which he attacked the infallibility of the Old Testament.

R. G. DUN & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

The severe depression of a week ago, which culminated in tight money and numerous failures, has been followed by some recovery. Reports that definite action by Congress on the money question has been assured have done much to cause the better feeling. But the stringency at Chicago and elsewhere has forced realization on the unprecedented stocks of wheat, so that the lowest prices ever known have been made here and at the West. This has helped exports and in other respects monetary conditions are distinctly more favorable. Though no radical change in underlying conditions has occurred there is more hopefulness and some recovery from the extreme condition of credit.

THE Pennsylvania, Michigan Central, and the Big Four Railroad companies have at last decided to run excursions to Jackson Park, landing passengers in the terminal station in the southwestern portion of the grounds. This arrangement is on now, and has been brought about after correspondence and conferences between the managers of the roads and Mr. Holcomb, Master of Transportation at Jackson Park. It is hoped that the action of these roads will bring about like arrangements on the part of Western railways. The rate to be charged is one fare for the round trip, something the Exposition Company has been asking for months. The Pennsylvania lines will bring excursionists at the one fare rate from points east of Dayton, Ohio. The Michigan Central will, for the time being, carry excursionists from Michigan City and intermediate points. The Big Four will take visitors at the half-fare rate from Cincinnati and intermediate points. These excursions are in the nature of experiments and it is announced that they would be run daily until it was ascertained whether or not the public would take advantage of them in such numbers as to make it advisable to continue the daily excursion trains.

IS FOUND IN THE LAKE.

BODY OF A MISSING BANKER RECOVERED.

Dedication of the German Building at the Fair—Man Killed on the Sliding Railway—Viking Ship Arrives Safely—To Prevent Another Horror.

No Longer in Doubt.

THE body of Herman Schaffner, the banker whose mysterious disappearance has been the talk of Chicago financial circles since June 3, was found floating in the lake off Graceland avenue on Wednesday afternoon. This discovery disposes of the suspicions of some persons who have been inclined to think the suicide theory of Mr. Schaffner's disappearance somewhat of a hoax. The black suit, the white shirt with initials H. S., the business and identification cards, the blank books, gold spectacles with name, gold watch with F. C. G. on case, all pointed at once to the belief that the body was that of the missing banker. This belief was strengthened into certainty when relatives looked at the remains. The watch did not belong to Mr. Schaffner, but was one which had been loaned to him while his watch was in the repairer's hands. The identification card was one from the International Identification Company, issued Sept. 9, 1892, and numbered 1,234. The card was found in morocco and set forth the identity of the bearer in full, stating where he lived and what his business was. It also called attention to a picture of Mr. Schaffner on another page of the little book.

Germany's Great Day.

GERMANY reigned at the World's Fair Thursday. Thousands of the sons of the fatherland gathered under the imperial tricolor and marched to the cadences of "Watch on the Rhine." It was German day, and "hochs" resounded from the lake front "Columbus" to the golden "Republic" in the court of honor. By a coincidence not premeditated the celebration fell on the anniversary of the coronation of the Emperor, William II. That was only incidental, however. The primary object was to celebrate Columbus in true Teutonic fashion. Germans took possession of the World's Fair grounds and signaled the day, the year, and the century. The grand parade of German societies, it is believed, was the most impressive pageant ever given by Germans in America. Carl Schurz was one of the speakers, and Germany's Minister at Washington, Baron von Holleben, Commissioner Wermuth, and Harry Rubens also spoke in German, while Gov. Altgeld and Mayor Carter H. Harrison made addresses in English.

A DEFICIENCY of $70,000 has been discovered in the funds of the Irving Savings Institution at New York. President Clarence D. Heaton and Secretary William H. Buxton had made overdrafts of $845 and $25,000 respectively, and after making the amounts good were forced to resign. The paying teller, D. D. Tompkins, is said to have stolen $18,000.

THE accident of last week in Washington having emphasized the need of greater precaution in several of the Government buildings, the Interior Department officials are taking prompt action, under an order of Secretary Hoke Smith that henceforth such weighty books and papers as constitute the permanent records of the department be kept in the basements of the buildings. At present the most of them are stored away on the top floor.

THE Viking ship was met by hundreds of persons in row and sail boats on her arrival at New London, Conn. Captain Anderson said he shaped his course to pass Cape Race, the southeast point of Newfoundland. His papers read "from Christiania, Norway, to Chicago, via New London and New York." He said he encountered south-west winds and some heavy gales, but the vessel behaved well and the Captain had every confidence in her ability to weather the gales safely. The Viking carries a master and crew of thirty men, is seventy-eight feet long, four feet draught and carries 200 yards of canvas.

HOME AND THE FARM.

A DEPARTMENT MADE UP FOR OUR RURAL FRIENDS.

When to Break Colts—Weed Out Interior Milk Producers—Cellars Are Kept too Close—Value of Ashes—To Keep Ice for the Sick.

Breaking Colts.

Colts should be broken to harness when about a year and a half old. Begin by biting thoroughly. Do not slight this part of the work. A well-bitted colt is half broke. One half-bitted or not bitted at all can never be as easily, and seldom as well, broke. It is too much like slighting the early education of a child—almost impossible to overcome it in after life. When the colt has become thoroughly accustomed to the bits and reins, and to being handled thereby, he may be harnessed and hitched up by the side of a gentle horse and driven in that manner until he becomes familiar with the harness and drives well; then, and not till then, he may be hitched up with another colt and the two driven together. After a colt has been once broken to drive he should be driven a little every few months—often enough at least not to permit him to forget what he has learned until old enough to put into regular work.

In biting and breaking colts never use a jointed or iron bit. A straight rubber or leather-covered bit is far better. Bear in mind that a colt's mouth is always tender; that in biting the reins must be drawn tight; that an iron or any harsh bit will hurt, and that a colt yields more readily to a bit that does not hurt than to one that does. By using a bit that hurts you will teach a colt to dread the bit and shrink from it. This should never be. He should be taught to drive well up on the bit and yield a quick obedience to it. Besides there is danger of injuring colts with a harsh bit. I have seen them so hurt by iron bits that they would not eat, or eat but a very little, for a long time and fall away materially in flesh.

Care of Cellars.

Most cellars in winter are kept too close for healthfulness, and necessarily so, perhaps, to exclude injury by freezing. It is well known that apples and other fruit in cellars are apt to show mould when brought up. This mould is believed by many physicians to be the inciting cause of diphtheria and other scourges which often destroy many lives late in winter and early spring. In the country the warmth of upper rooms compels housewives to keep milk in cellars to prevent souring before the cream has risen. But before this is done every particle of decaying vegetation should be removed from the cellar, and its walls and floor and ceiling be thoroughly whitewashed. Lime is one of the best absorbents of moisture, and if the cellar windows are kept open will make the air delightfully fresh and pure. Milk kept in cellars not thus cared for becomes quickly and absolute poison, as it absorbs foul odors, and besides furnishes the best breeding places for the most dangerous bacilli. For health's sake it is always best to have the milk cellar by itself, and on no account to allow fruit or vegetables to be kept in it. Yet we have known farm cellars in which not merely potatoes but the more pungent turnip and rutabaga, and even a bushel or two of onions, are kept in the same cellar with the milk. Of the three vegetables the onion was perhaps the one that was the least offensive.—American Cultivator.

Weeding Out.

The most careful attention should be given to weeding out inferior milk producers. In this work the eye should not pity. The folly of keeping on a poor or even indifferent performer in the dairy from year to year is only equalled by that of trying to make beef at a profit from a scrub. Why in the name of reason should a man be content with a herd averaging but 3,500 pounds of milk per animal in a year when it is easily possible to secure one that will average 6,000 pounds a year, or even more? The most successful dairyman will in all probability be the man who keeps scales in his stable and who weighs daily the milk of each cow, or who does so at least once a week. The actual performance of each animal can then be obtained with great accuracy, and consequently their real value absolutely and relatively to the dairyman. Cows that fail to breed regularly should at once be discarded after a reasonable trial, and without much preparation for the shambles. The same course should be adopted with old cows which have outlived their usefulness. Usually the best return can be obtained for them when they are sent to the block by the most direct road, but at some seasons of the year, when pastures are plentiful, it may be well to give them something of a finish on the grass. These remarks, it should be remembered, apply to cows of the purely dairy type.—Ohio Farmer.

Size of Farm Horses.

At most agricultural shows it is the largest horses which attract most attention from those who pride themselves on appreciating utility rather than "fancy" points. "See how large he is, and of course he must be strong in proportion to his size." This does not follow. The coarse-built animal has less compact bone and less highly developed muscle. There are places where such over-weighted animals have their value, but merely to carry their excess of fat and weight consumes far too much of their strength. Besides, these extra heavy horses cannot bear service on hard roads even at slow paces. For all-around work on the farm, including cultivating and road work, there has never been a better horse on this continent than the old Morgan strain. They are compact, and both muscle and bone are developed, so that their bulk is only a slight indication of possible strength. Merely to make efficient workhorses a strain of the best trotting horse blood is no detriment.

Sugar Beets for Sugar.

Although the great bulk of sugar in this country is made from cane, either of the sorghum or old-fashioned sugar cane of the South, it is not so in other parts of the world. More sugar is now made in temperate climates than in those near the equator, and the beet is the staple basis of its manufacture. The sugar beet has been greatly improved in its saccharine qualities since the first Napoleon forced its introduction into France. It was long called the French sugar beet, as the best varieties originated in that country. At present, however, the Germans make more sugar from beets than any other people in the world, and their product is said to have doubled the past year.

Cut Worm and Muskmelon.

One of the worst enemies of the muskmelon is the cut worm. He is very fond of wheat middlings, and advantage can be taken of this to destroy him by poisoning. Mix a very little Paris green with the middlings, and then strew the poisoned mixture in a circle around the hill, and as close to the plants as possible. Numbers of dead cut worms will be found every morning. So long as they can get the middlings they care for nothing else. Of course care should be taken to keep fowls or chickens from getting at the meal. When cultivation begins a little earth is drawn over what middlings is not consumed, and it makes an excellent fertilizer.

Value of Ashes.

When a farmer sells the ashes made upon a farm to soap men instead of spreading them upon mowing or pasture lands, or applying them to growing crops, it may be inferred that he does not yet fully appreciate their real value. Ashes are supposed to contain in a natural form all of the mineral or inorganic elements of fertility that enter into the composition of plants, and hence are valuable when applied to the soil either as a top dressing to meadow and pasture lands or to growing crops of all kinds.

Composting Corn Stalks.

In the spring, corn stalks are of little value for feeding. They dry out by freezing in winter, and devoid of sap become tasteless and nearly worthless. They are not worth much either for composting. In a dry summer they will come out dryer and more worthless than ever in the fall. If cut up and piled in a pit with manure below ground they will rot down; but the manure value the corn stalk contributes to the heap is very small.

To Keep Ice for the Sick.

Cut a piece of clean flannel (white is best) about ten inches or more square. Place this over the top of a glass pitcher or even a tumbler, pressing the flannel down half way or more into the vessel. Then bind the flannel fast to the top of the glass with a string or piece of tape. Now put the ice into the flannel cup and lay another piece of flannel, five or six inches square, upon the ice. Arranged thus, ice will keep many hours.

She Always Contradicted.

An elderly man had for a wife one of those trying persons who, according to their own ideas are always in the right, and who make it a point of conscience to prove everyone else in the wrong. The poor man was never allowed to make any statement without having it instantly disputed by his accurate but irritating spouse. She had acquired such a habit of correcting and contradicting him, that she one day made a mistake which gave her suffering husband a chance to laugh at her. "Do you remember, my dear," he said in a retrospective mood, "the letter-case embroidered with pearl beads that you made for me with your own hands when we became engaged? It was worn out years ago, but I can still see it very plainly. On one side there was embroidered a beautiful butterfly, and—" "The butterfly was on the other side," interrupted his wife, in her most decided tone. And she always complained that Mr. Underfield "was fond of telling stories without any point," whenever he referred to this conversation afterwards.

FLOWERS AT THE FAIR.

WOODED ISLAND NOW IN FULL BLOOM.

Roses, Sunflowers, Pansies, and Other Flowers Form a Collection of Beauty and Variety Never Before Equalled in the World—Notes of the Fair.

Acres of Blossoms.

World's Fair correspondence:

THE wooded island at the Columbian Exposition is now in full bloom. Acres and acres of blossoms throw their fragrant perfume in the face of the tired visitor who seeks in this shady nook what little seclusion there is to be found in this rushing, roaring city of celestial brilliancy. Flowers are blossoming everywhere. Sunflowers, big, jolly faced fellows, shake their yellow heads in rapturous welcome to eyes that have been dazzled by the splendor of the surrounding whiteness. There are little ones and big ones, and the flowers are open-faced, exactly what they profess to be, hardy and persistent, and, besides, are always productive of good nature and smiles. They are like the shamrock in Ireland.

THE DONLAN CASCADE.

of the thistle in Scotland, or the fleur-de-lis in France, in that they are not confined to any section and do not need greenhouse propagation. The prairies are filled with them, the fence corners are incomplete without them, and there is not a farm yard from Maine to Texas but is adorned with them. At any rate, they occupy the highest spot in the island garden, and form a mass of yellow that vies with the administration dome in prominence. The seed was selected with care, in order that all previous big sunflowers may be considered hereafter as dwarfed specimens. Then there is the rose bed, which is the most bewildering mess of blossoms that any eye ever saw. The lists show more than 60,000 separate bushes in a patch of an acre and a quarter. They have come from every country on the globe, until experts claim the collection is positively complete as far as the knowledge of man goes. The borders of each bed are sweet-scented honeysuckles twisted to form an endless cord. The chains of the fence are festooned from the corner posts to the center of each side, the irons being used simply as supports for trailing vines, while ors in foreign sections on the island. In the center is a classic pagoda, also flower-covered. Six hundred and eighty varieties of pansies, represented by 150,000 plants, make a collection entirely beyond anybody's comprehension. It means as much or little as the five-mile depth of the ocean or the endless stretch of the polar snow.

The Japanese end of the island is full of surprises, since the whole plot about the Ho-o-den palace has been given to this remarkable empire of the Orient. Shrubs whose names are seldom met outside the dictionaries are planted in most lavish profusion, diminutive bushes whose flowers have made their debut in the western world on this great occasion. Holland and Belgium have many hundred rhododendrons. These two countries make these flowers specialties, together with azaleas and the others in this class. They occupy ground near the big red rose bed, with a numberless lot of buds almost ready to burst. Austria is just beyond, with a display of lilies occupying a tremendous stretch. England adjoins this, with costly holly trees and churchyard greens, while near at hand sixty sorts of yew peas will burden the air with perfume, and Japanese creeping roses make the ground a carpet of delicate colors.

Old folks admire a section devoted entirely to their grandfathers' flowers. There are larkspurs and sweet rockets and columbines and Canterbury bells and all the old-fashioned things that ever grew. Just beyond this is a spot where the freaks of nature are shown. There are lilacs with yellow leaves, box elders with chrome foliage and willows whose boughs look strange purple shades. Here are all the striking freaks which cultivation has been able to make in the garb of trees. The edge of the island has been planted thickly with water plants, which are now trying to grow under the tread of the pelicans with valise jaws, the graceful swans and the other monarchs of the isle. Song birds have taken possession of the wildernesses of bushes. The gulls have flocked in droves from the lakes and quarrel with the ducks for the sunny spots.

Beauties of the Donlan Cascade.

The Donlan cascade, which chatters and sparkles like a mountain brook, is the most charming feature in the Horticulture Building. The water bursts from a rock in the side of the palm-covered hill and, leaping from crag to crag, finally plunges into a lake at the bottom. Thence it flows under a bridge made of logs and mossy stones out to form a pool in front of the entrance to the crystal cave. Orchids grow from the side of the cliffs, great blossoms that have taken on deeper hues because they mistake the surroundings for their own native jungles. Ferns have grown rank and lank, and meet poplar trees hide the posts, so that the fence appears to have grown where it stands.

Flowers from Everywhere.

While this will be the piece de resistance in roses, there are scores of other beds containing from 10,000 to 20,000 plants, made by foreign exhibit-above the winding path that leads to a log cabin, up toward the beams of the great roof. Long-stemmed water plants come up from the bottoms of the pools, and water lilies blossom and toads sit about on the big leaves.

OCCURRENCES DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Bad News of the Crops—Monroe Loses Judge Critchett—Fire at Lansing—Contagious Diseases on the Increase—Pioneer Society Statistics.

From Far and Near.

CHEBOYGAN voted to bond herself for $16,000 to build a new central school.

EDWARD WOODWARD, of Alpena, aged 22, was drowned in the bay while bathing.

THE residence of Andrew J. Hart, of Chesterfield Township, Macomb County, was burned with all its contents; loss about $1,500.

FRED BONE, of Coe Ridge, Ohio, a freshman at the Agricultural College at Lansing, was drowned while swimming in the Cedar River.

JOHN O'BRIEN, of Whitedale, stepped on a rusty nail, which went clear through his foot. Blood poisoning set in, and he died shortly after.

A NEW postoffice has been established at Channing, Dickinson County, midway between Sagola and Floodwood. Thomas E. Timlin has been appointed postmaster.

MARFUS M. SHAFER, Wm. A. Jackson, and John Spiedel, the three boys who formed a conspiracy to escape from the industrial school at Lansing, were each sentenced to the Detroit house of correction for one year.

REPORTS to the State Board of Health show rheumatism, neuralgia, bronchitis, tonsillitis, and consumption, in the order named, as causing the most sickness during the week. Diphtheria was reported at 48 places, scarlet fever at 40, measles at 28, and typhoid fever at 11.

MRS. DONIGAN, of Elmira, was stopped from cleaning house in a rather unpleasant manner. She took a revolver out of a bureau and laid it on a table. Her young son began to play with the weapon, and when the mother tried to take it away from him it went off. The ball whizzed through the woman's hand.

AN old skating rink at Lansing, owned and used by Harley Ingersoll as a plant for manufacturing the Capitol oil stoves, was entirely consumed by fire. Ingersoll's loss is $3,000, with no insurance. Rev. W. S. Sly, founder of the Rocky Beach Orphans' Home, lost all of his household furniture, which was stored in the buildings.

WHEN Frank Bailey, of Algonac, went out to feed his hogs the other morning, he saw that one of the porkers had his head through a fence. The hog didn't budge when Frank kicked him in the snout. Finally he went to the other side of the fence, and all he found was the head of the hog. The rest some one had cut off and carried away during the night.

AT Monroe, Judge Otis A. Critchett died. Born in London township in 1838, he had lived in the county all his life. He was a graduate of the U. of M. Literary and Law Departments, being admitted to the bar in 1865. He served as Prosecuting Attorney in 1866, Probate Judge in 1872, and for four years was postmaster at Monroe, being appointed by President Garfield.

SECRETARY G. H. GREEN'S report, which was presented at the meeting of the Michigan Pioneer and Historical Society at Lansing, shows that there are now 529 members. Forty-one were added during the past year and there were twenty-four deaths. Treasurer M. L. Coleman has a balance of $225 on hand. Two volumes of pioneer collections have been published and one is in type. Many valuable data concerning the counties of the State have thus been preserved.

THE Michigan crop report for June gives the average condition of wheat in the State at 79 per cent. The average condition has been lower but once in eight years, 1888, when it was 93. In the southern counties, where 85 per cent of the wheat is grown, the average condition, 77 per cent, has been reported lower but twice in eight years. Here there was a gain of four points during May. In the central counties no gain was reported, and in the northern three points. The total marketed by farmers in May was 667,871, and the total number of bushels in, ten months, August-May, was 13,069,498, or 1,885,968 bushels less than in same months last year.

PURSES to the amount of $4,000 will be hung up for the races at the Sault.

ISAAC VERBRIDGE, a farmer living near Romeo, was thrown from a horse and fatally injured.

WORK in pumping the water out of the Ludington-Hamilton mines at Iron Mountain has advanced so far that there are now good prospects that the mines can be entirely "unwatered."

THE State Military Board at Lansing decided to hold the encampment of the National Guard at Chicago, from Aug. 8 to 17 inclusive, providing satisfactory accommodations and transportation can be secured.

THE club-house of Charles Vernier, three miles east of St. Clemens, was struck by lightning on Saturday night and destroyed, with its contents. Vernier was alone and asleep when the lightning struck, and saved his life by jumping from the window. His dog was burned. The house was insured for $2,300.

COMMISSIONER SHERWOOD issued a consolidated statement showing the condition of the 149 State banks and three trust companies of Michigan at the close of business, May 4. The resources and liabilities were $84,276,584.44, or $1,627,050.85 greater than Dec. 9, when the last report was made. The aggregate capital was $11,465,780.47; loans and discounts, $68,234,306.83; surplus and undivided profits, $4,686,189.26; and deposits, $67,431,251.94. The latter item has increased $937,898.01 since December.

John Schulte was drowned in the Scio mill pond Sunday. He could not swim but jumped from a boat and landed in about seven feet of water and never came up. He leaves a wife and two small children.

Three toughs, following in the tracks of a circus, attempted to rob the Eaton Rapids postoffice in broad daylight.
The postmaster, however, had watched them and when they were about to rake in cash, he stepped forward. They left town and have not been seen since.

Mrs. Chadwick fearing that a lamp which was acting somewhat peculiar, would explode, threw it down the front stairs, last evening. It was quite a blaze, and created quite an excitement for a few minutes, but the fire was soon put out and no serious damage done.—
Stockbridge Sun.

During choir meeting at the Baptist church last Saturday evening, the lamp which is suspended over the organ fell ker-chug! on the key board. The instrument was so disabled that the smaller one in the lecture room had to come to the front for Sunday's service —Grass Lake News.

A hail-storm visited Ann Arbor Thursday of last week. The hailstones were as large as walnuts, and it was several hours before it all melted. A large number of windows were broken.
Considerable damage was done to peach trees orchards and gardens. A number of motors were burned out by lightning.

I hear that since the mayor has given notice that the saloons must close promptly at the specified hour, and the curtains are to be drawn, that a number of saloonists are having rooms fitted up in the buildings they occupy where they can accommodate their patrons after hours, on legal holidays and Sundays.—Ann Arbor Democrat.

John K. Robinson, of Detroit, and a grandson of Hon. John J. Robinson, of Sharon, who graduated at the head of his class at the United States naval academy at Annapolis, Md., stands an excellent chance of being one of the two graduates to be selected for the naval construction corps. Only two graduates are selected in any period of four years for the corps. While taking the 10 years course of study members of the corps rank as lieutenants and receive $2,200 a year for the first five years, and $2,500 for each of the next five.—Ann Arbor Democrat.

County Treasurer Suekey reports that all the liquor tax of the county has been paid in with the exception of two dealers in Ann Arbor and one leaves very rapidly. They are a small dark red bug, with black and yellow stripes extending only about one-half the length of the back, in size are not larger than a kernel of buckwheat, have a hard coating or shell, many legs and keen eyes. In their nature they are not logy but are very active, are easily frightened, will often run when you appear in sight, a slight shake will jar

The annual meeting of the old settlers of this county, was held in the opera house at Saline, on the 14th inst., and proved to be one of the largest and most enjoyable of the many held by the society. The president, S. R. Crittenden, of Pittsfield, presided. The total deaths for the past year was 151; their average age was 74; one was over 100 years old; eleven between 90 and 100; thirty from between 80 and 90; forty-nine between 70 and 80; twenty one between 60 and 70; fifteen under 60. The new Methodist church in Ypsilanti was selected for the next annual meeting of the society. Of those present, seven came to this county previous to 1830; fifty previous to 1840; and sixty previous to 1845. The following officers were elected: President, Erastus Sampson, of Ypsilanti;
Secretary, J. Q. A. Sessions, of Ann Arbor; Treasurer, Edward Treadwell, of Ann Arbor; Necrologist, Wm. H.
Lay, of Ypsilanti.
